VOL. XXVI. THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, JUNE 3, 1909 NUMBER 23

ATTENDANCE WAS LARGE

About 300 School Officers Attended Meeting Held Here Last Friday.

Interesting Addresses Were Delivered by a Number of Prominent Persons.

The meeting of school officers held in Thief River Falls last Friday was attended by about 300 of the school trustees and a very interesting session was held. C. A. Ballard, of Moorhead, gave a general talk upon educational matters that proved to be very interesting and entertaining. Supt. Robertson, of the State Experimental Farm at Crookston, talked about agriculture in the rural schools and asked all of the farmers' institute to be held in this city on June 15. Supt. Hay told how to improve the rural school and what a great and rich county we live in. Hon. J. Adam Bede delivered one of his charcteristic addresses. County Supt. Anderson talked upon the relations of the county superintendent to school officers.

The meeting was in every way a success and these school officers who attended were well paid for the time they spent here.

More Pheasants.

The Polk County Game and Fish Protective Association have received 250 pheasant's eggs and they will be placed for hatching at Maple Lake and at the Munch home in Sampson's addition. The number of eggs that have been brought into the county by the association during the past two years will undoubtedly result in greatly improving the shooting conditions of the section in the future and will solve the problem as to what will eventually take the place of the prairie chicken,

At the Munch home they have a number of pheasants which have been hatched from eggs furnished by the association and six hens have laid within a few weeks fifty eggs. All the birds are thriving and it appears that this section is especially apropriate for the rearing of this kind of game.—Crookston Journal.

Lindblom—Injured.

Red Lake Falls Gazette: It has been reported that Peter Lindblom, who resides in Bray township, has been very seriously injured. Mr. Lindblom was in town last Friday and purchased a manure spreader. He started for home with a three-horse team hitched to the spreader. The horses became frightened when he was on the road near Wylie and commenced to run. Mr. Lindblom was thrown from his seat and the spreader passed over his body. It is reported that his chest was badly crushed and that he is in a serious condition.

A Profitable Crop.

The following are extracts taken from a letter to the Parkers' Prairie Independent.

"Our next stop was at Sabin, the home of Henry Schroeder, the potato king. I learned that he was in Fargo and would not return for a day or so, but there was enough to keep me thinking and I kept my eyes and ears open and my mouth too—most of the time. I dropped into the State Bank of Sabin and was told that Sabin boasted of a population of 165 inhabitants, all told, I, like you, wondered what use a bank was, so I asked a few questions, and soon saw it was needed. The young man behind the cashier's desk told me that they had shipped out something like 500 cars or more of potatoes since last fall and that there were more to be shipped. After looking at his accounts he informed me that there had passed through his bank since October 1 of last year $202,500 for potatoes alone.

"I met Mr. Schroeder in Fargo and he said:

" 'I began raising potatoes 15 or 16 years ago by planting two acres. I peddled them out in Fargo and Moorhead and made good money, then planted three or four acres and sold them with the same results. I then tried 12 to 15 acres, then 35 and 45, and a man came up from Minneapolis and paid me $4,000 for this 45 acre crop. I can tell you I felt pretty good over the $4,000. It was the beginning of a new life for me and my family. We thought the question out along this line, if there was money in potatoes where three or four acres were raised, also money in 12 to 15 acres, and still more money in 35 to 45 acres, why not money in 100 to 200 acres and we have planted 250 to 300 acres every year since. This season we expect to plant 400 acres and will have to enlarge the ware house accordingly.' When asked if there had been one year in the sixteen that he had raised potatoes that he had not made good he quickly said, 'no, not one,' and when pressed to know the profits for the season Mr. S. hesitated and he said he did not care to make a statement for the newspapers but told me confidentially and I can tell you the balance was on the right side of the ledger so much so that he could have drawn a check that would have represented the value of the best 240 acre farm around Parkers Prairie and have money left. When asked if there was any danger of overloading the potato raising he said: 'No, we will have to raise enough to supply the people of the United States before we can overstock the market. There are thousands of bushels landed in New York every week from Europe and I cannot furnish one fourth the potatoes I am asked to furnish. I am sold out now and requests come in every day.' "

Cause of the Shock.

The Red Lake Falls Gazette reports a slight earthquake shock down there last week. It must have been Pennington county that gave them the shock.

INJUNCTION PROCEEDINGS

Matter Up Before Court Commissioner S. T. Johnson Last Saturday.

Case Is Now on Its Way to the State Supreme Court.

The injunction proceedings brought by the Thief River Falls attorneys to restrain the county commissioners from selling the $35,000 worth of bonds with which to build a court house at Red Lake Falls was up before Court Commissioner Samuel T. Johnson at his office in this city last Saturday afternoon.

Attorney Charles E. Boughton, who had been hired by the county commissioners to defend them and given the opportunity of naming his own fee, appeared and demurred to the complaint, admitting that all of the facts and allegations were true, but that there was not sufficient grounds for a cause of action. The demurrer was over-ruled by Judge Johnson and now upon notice from either side the case can be taken before Judge Watts. After he has decided the case it will be appealed to the state supreme court at its October term.

Attorneys Stanton, Halvorson and Mabey looked after the interests of Thief River Falls in the case.

Mr. Tandberg Very Ill.

A telegram was received this morning from Minneapolis stating that County Treasurer O. T. Tandberg is dangerously ill. The news of his unfavorable condition comes as a surprise to all. Mr. Tandberg had been receiving medical treatment in Minneapolis and had been getting along so well that it was thought that he would be able to return to Red Lake Falls soon. Mrs. Tandberg left for Dugdale at once and took the first train from that place to Minneapolis.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

The latest reports from Minneapolis are to the effect that Mr. Tandberg is getting along nicely and that his chances of recovery are very good.

To Hold Auction Sales.

Ole C. Brenna, the auctioneer, has rented the Crocker building at the corner of LaBree avenue and Second street and will hereafter hold auction sales every Saturday afternoon and evening. Farmers and others having goods that they desire to sell are requested to bring them in to Mr. Brenna and he will sell the same, charging a small commission for his work. He already has a large number of goods in the building which will be sold at the sale on Saturday of this week.

Destroyed by Fire.

A barn on the O. Tessum farm, just west of the Great Northern turn table was struck by lightning last Saturday evening about eleven o'clock and the building together with the contents burned to the ground. Mr. Tessum estimates his loss about $500 and he had no insurance. Some goods belonging to Mrs. Erickson were also stored in the barn.

Whether in love or out of it, married, single or wishing to be, "The Power of Love" at the Opera House tonight offers some good suggestions.

LOCALS WIN FIRST GAME

White Earth Indians Defeated by Thief River Falls on Sunday.

Game Marred by an Unfortunate Accident in the the First Inning.

The first ball game of the season was played in Thief River Falls Sunday and the local team succeed in defeating the team from the White Earth Indian reservation by a score of 6 to 5. Owing to the wet grounds, good ball playing could not be expected, but the game was interesting throughout and showed that with a little more practice the Thief River Falls nine is going to be one of the best in this section of the state this year.

A bad accident happened in the first inning of the game which disabled two of the Thief River Falls players, and one of them will not be able to play ball again this season. While running from opposite directions to catch a fly, Tom Crowe and Art Holmes collided, with the result that Mr. Crowe sustained a broken leg and Mr. Holmes a badly bruised knee. Mr. Crowe was at once taken to his home where the injured leg was set and he is now getting along as nicely as could be expected.

Owing to the inclement weather, the attendance was not as large as it otherwise would have been, but the gate receipts amounted to over $75.

Plummer Mill Running.

The S-P-K Lumber Company's mill started for the season Monday morning and is now cutting between 8000 and 10,000 feet daily. About twenty men are employed at present, but more will be added to the force later. The engine installed last week by Supt. Everritt proved too light for the work and on this account the daily cut is not as large as desired. The trouble about the Clearwater-Lake dam, which has been in court for several months, has been settled and no more inconveniences are to be experienced from that source. The S P-K people now have the privilege of using the dam to float their logs down the river, and as soon as rains come to raise the water, the second log drive will be brought down. — Plummer Pioneer.

Industrial School.

The Second Industrial School for Teachers will be open at University Farm, St. Anthony Park, St. Paul, June 21st to July 10th, 1909.

The great interest awakened in industrial education everywhere makes it imperative that teachers prepare themselves in agriculture, home economics and kindred subjects. This school is designed to meet the needs of superintendents, principals, teachers, and others interested.

For further information address J. R. Drew, Register, or J. W. Olson, Dean, University Farm, St. Paul Minn.

Partnership Dissolved.

This week the law partnership of Attorneys Thos. Germo and Fred L. Farley, doing business under the firm name of Germo & Farley, was dissolved. By the terms of agreement entered into by them, Attorney Farley is to continue the business of the firm and Attorney Germo ceases to be a local practitioner. Mr. Farley is to have the office rooms in the Soterdahl building that were occupied by the firm. Mr. Germo has not made a definite decision as to where he will locate.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

A New Pitcher Hired.

Manager Bird has decided not to hire Charley Roy, who pitched the game Sunday, but instead has engaged Frank McKeig who was the pitcher for the White Earth Indians. McKeig is only 19 years of age and is looked upon as a wonder. Bob Hallet and Bennie Holstein have also been engaged for the season.

Every smoker should be patriotic to his home town and call for Fred's Guarantee Cigars. They are made here in Thief River Falls.

E. Pennington, president and general manager of the Soo line, was in Thief River Falls last week, being en route to Minneapolis from a trip of inspection on the Wheatline.

While driving across the Red Lake river bridge last Thursday evening, a horse drived by Ole Haroldson, became unmanageable and and Mr. Haroldson was thrown out. He sustained a broken leg and was taken to the hospital for treatment.

"The Power of Love" To-Night.

David Belasco in his great success, "The Girl of the Golden West", in speaking of The Power of Love said, "there is no accounting for anything when that feeling they call love gets in the game. It is like strong liquor, when once you get the craze for it, running thru the veins, burning the blood and firing the brain with a frenzy of hope without a reason and despair without a cause. It strengthens the weak and weakens the strong, making heroes of cowards and robbing brave men of their courage. I've got it' you've got it and the whole world has it, sometimes visiting one only for an hour but laying bare one's whole future life in that one hour." This saying is doubtless true and Raymond Bell in presenting his great moral play, entitled "The Power of Love" endeavors to prove the above to the public. Some are in doubt but after seeing this play are more easily convinced. While the play is intended as an uplifting moral study it is by no means dry and tiresome. Comedy situations are continually creeping in relieving the strain of pathetic scenes and producing alternate laughter and tears at the will of the playwright. In producing a play of this class a competent cast is the first consideration and Mr. Bell has surrounded himself with a company of high class artists. The play requires neat artistic costuming and novel scenery and there has been no expense spared in the effort to give the public the real article. Mr. Bell and his original company can be seen in "The Power of Love" at the Opera House tonight. Prices 25c, 50c, 75c. Seats now selling.

Eclipse Tomorrow.

There will be a total eclipse of the moon tomorrow evening ~~June 3.~~ The moon will rise in total eclipse in the evening at 7:40:33 and will begin to emerge from the shadow at 7:59:12 and will be entirely clear of the shadow at 9:14:18.

While the orb of the night is in the shadow it will not be entirely invisible for its dim and coppery outline may be seen.

Comparative Figures.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture, Dairy Division, under date of May 12, 1909, have forwarded to the St. Hilaire Co-operative creamery the following comparative figures:

Average number of pounds of butter made by local creameries in your state is 108,303. Number of pounds made by your creamery is 257,503.

Average price paid to patrons per pound of butterfat in your state is 57.71 cents. Average price paid by your creamery is 27.6 cents.

Average cost per pound of butter maufactured in your state is 2.14 cents. Average cost per pound of butter manufactured by your creamery is 1.99c.

Average overrun of creameries in your state is 18.75 per cent.

An interesting dramatic story true to life and liberally sprinkled with bright breezy comedy is "The Power of Love" at the Opera House tonight.

WILL BE AN AIR LINE

Route of New Thief River Falls Duluth Line is Given.

Work to Be Let Out to the Sub-contractors in a Short Time.

The St. Paul Pioneer Press of last Friday published the following item which gives a general idea as to the route of the proposed new Thief River Falls Duluth line. The route indicated is almost an air line and it is quite likely that it will connect with the Winnipeg line not many miles south of Thief River Falls. The pioneer Press article is as follows:

The Soo railway has placed in the hands of Foley Bros., general contractors, Gilfillan block, a contract for 220 miles of railway to be constructed between Moose Lake on the company's Duluth line and Thief River Falls on its Winnipeg line. The construction will take two years.

The line as laid out will run from Moose Lake to Tamarack on the Northern Pacific's Duluth line, thence to Bena at the foot of the Winnibigoshish lake on the Crookston-Duluth line of the Great Northern, thence run across the Minnesota & International near Tenstrike, going a little north of due west along the Great Northern line until past Bemidji, then going northwest to Thief River Falls.

The work has been in the hands of the general contractors for several days and has not yet been let out to sub-contractors. It is understood, however, that the contractors will have their apparatus bound for different points along the line within a few days.

Troubles Up River.

The R. L. R. Transportation Co.'s steamboat is hung up on a sand bar this side of Thief River Falls, and Martin Swanson will try to run the Dan Patch up over the Brunkeberg wagon road, where there is more water than there is in the river.—Sunbeam.

The town man thinks that all a farmer has to do is to sit in the shade and watch things grow. The farmer thinks that all we have to do in town is to sit behind a counter and rake in the money. This is the reason that every farmer wants to move to town and every townsman wants to be a farmer.—Ex.

Some overclean and particular mothers seem to forget that it is better to have a little dirt and disorder in sitting room and parlor than to have their boys spending most of their spare hours in the haymow and back alley.

When a fellow gets hold of a type of religion that loosens up his pocketbook, makes him pay his honest debts and provide as his means allow comforts and advantages for those dependent on him, it goes without saying that it is practical and of the right kind.

Butter records, like some other laurels, don't seem to stay long in one place. To illustrate, the blue ribbon for the largest butter production for seven days was captured a short time ago by Grace Fayne II.'s Homestead, owned by H. A. Moyer of Syracuse, N. Y., her performance being 28.44 pounds of butter fat, equivalent to 35.5 pounds of butter.

It is a matter of observation that residents in sections where prairie wolves abound are not so concerned over the depredations which they may commit, but that they almost invariably spare the old wolves so that they may raise a batch of little ones next season for the bounty they will fetch. If the bounty was done away with entirely the spirit of the law would be better observed.

Life on the average farm would be a good deal lighter for those engaged in household and field work if a really serious attempt were made to limit the working day to ten hours. In rush seasons, with help scarce, it is well nigh impossible to do this, but whenever it can be done it should be. Folks who work hard ten hours a day get old and rich fast enough without stretching the treadmill operations to fifteen or sixteen hours.

The agricultural stand patter may be defined as the fellow who persists in following old methods when a newer method will give better results with the same or a less expenditure of time and money. The scandalous soil robbery which is still going on in many sections, the failure to grow on the farm the crops which will give best returns and the failure to get the maximum value out of the crops that are raised may be accepted as indisputable evidence that the class of agriculture stand patters is all too large.

America is not only carrying moral light into the dark places of the earth, but agriculturally is doing a similar beneficent work. Among other evidences of this may be cited the fact that within the past few weeks the czar of Russia has offered L. B. Clore of Franklin, Ind., the boss corn raiser of the country, $4,000 a year for three years and all expenses to go to that country and show the peasant farmers how to raise American corn. If the czar only knew what this corn raising business does in making a people economically and politically independent he might well have some misgivings about the wisdom of this his latest innovation.

Investigations which have recently been made by Uncle Sam's biological survey as to the bill of fare of the kingbird have brought out the interesting and remarkable fact that, while he does now and then eat bees, it is the drones and not the workers which are his victims. When this announcement was first made beekeepers were wont to consider it as a pretty good joke, but their curiosity led them to make some investigations for themselves, and they found the department specialists were correct. Not only did the kingbird not attack workers, but he devoured many varieties of injurious winged insects, while his hostility to marauding crows and hawks is a point to his credit, which is a matter of everyday observation.

No longer are corncobs doomed to perform a menial service as penny pipes and kindling wood only, as a firm at Council Bluffs, Ia., has by accident discovered that when crushed and properly prepared corncobs are an invaluable aid in the purification of gas in city gas plants. Heretofore in this process iron filings mixed with shavings from the planing mills have been used in the "washers," in which the sulphur in the gas is held and converted into sulphates and sulphuret of iron. With the light pine chip the mass sinks into compact form, making the passage of the gas through it difficult. When the chipped corncobs were substituted it was found that the gas passed through very readily, being entirely freed from sulphur even when heavily charged. With cob chips the washers keep in working order for months where in the old way they had to be renewed in a few weeks. Cobs that were worth but $1.50 per wagon load a short time ago are now fetching $10 a ton, and the firm which crushes them cannot begin to fill orders which are being received.

GRADUATING EXERCISES

Largest Class in the History of Thief River Falls to Graduate.

Interesting Excercises Held at the Roller Rink Last Friday Evening.

The graduating exercises of the local high school were marked by every feature that tends to make such an event of more than passing importance. Not a detail of the formal program was omitted and the public felt convinced that all those participating in the same acquited themselves with the highest degree of credit. The class day exercises were carried out last Thursday evening at the Evenson Hall and all of the fourteen graduates were given an opportunity to appear on the program. The class history and phrophecy and poem, as well as the other numbers on the program, were of an exceedingly high degree of merit. This entertainment was closed by a laughable farce, in which well known members of the class exhibited not a little histrionic ability.

The graduation exercises were held in the roller rink on Friday evening. A temporary platform was erected on the north side of the building and seats for 800 people had been provided, but a conservative estimate of those present placed the attendance at 1200. The graduates, board of education and the speaker occupied the platform. After an invocation by Rev. Laurie of the Presbyterian church and music by the orchestra, the salutatory was read by a member of the class for Miss Volga Evenson, the salutatorian, who, by reason of a bad cold, was unable to present it herself. Hon J. Adam Bede's address dealt with "Progress and Its Problems", and was a masterly oratorical effort. Not many in the audience had ever listened to this well known speaker before, and, it goes without saying, that this large audience was satisfied by the wit and wisdom of the orator, as hundreds of other gatherings have been in the past. Following the address, Miss Avis Akre presented the valedictory and after the presentation of the class by J. H. Hay, the diplomas were handed each of the fourteen graduates by Lars Backe, president of the board of education. The benediction closed the exercises.

This is the largest class ever graduated from the Thief River Falls high school and, in all probability, will be followed by still larger classes, as the class of 1910 now contains 26 members, all of whom will complete the course next year. The 1909 class consists of Avis Akre, valedictorian; Volga Evenson, salutatorian; Ralph Douglas, class president; Inga Hallan, Blanche Chittick, Charles Erickson, Marie Gilbertson, Henry Chittick, Harry Prichard, James Curran, Frank Kratka, Stafford Curran, Odin Brudie, Leslie Brady.

Andrew Stenseth's Father Dead.

Thiman Stenseth, father of Andrew Stenseth, of this city, died at his home near Anton postoffice on the 27th of May. The deceased was 71 years and four month old. The funeral services were held from the residence of Andrew Stenseth in this city, the Rev. I. T. Aastad officiating and the body was buried in Greenwood cemetery.

Wedding at Red Lake Falls.

Yesterday morning at 8 o'clock at the home of the bride's father in Red Lake Falls occured the marraige of Harry B. Healy and Miss Lillian A. Buse, both well known in Thief River Falls. The words were spoken that made them man and wife by Field Missionary D. K. Laurie, of this city and after the ceremony the guests were entertained at breakfast at the home of Ed L. Healy, the grooms father. Mr. and Mrs. Healy, left for the twin cities to spend a week after which they will be at home to their friends at Detroit, where the groom is engaged in business.

City Council.

A regular meeting of the city council was held Tuesday evening, the most important business to be transacted being the passage of the ordinance which repeals the franchise of the Tri State Telephone company. The company now has no right to use the streets of the city or to conduct a local telephone exchange here. On the 12th of July the citizens will vote upon the proposition of the city installing a telephone system here.

A resolution was also passed asking that the state public examiner send a deputy here to make an examination of the city books.

The Ladies Aid of the Synod church will serve a supper in the basement of the Synod church on June 8th, at 6 p. m.

PROVIDES MORE TIME

Steenerson and Nelson Introduce Bill on Behalf of Eleven Towns Settlers.

Provides That Payments Be Extended for a Period of Two Years.

Washington, June 1.—Senator Nelson today introduced a bill providing that two years additional time for paying installments due, or to become due be given the purchases of homesteads on the Red Lake Indian reservation, under the act of Feb. 20 1904.

The bill provides further that no homestead entries under the act referred to shall be cancelled for nonpayment of installments, or the purchase price, until the expiration of the two additional years.

Representative Steenerson introduced a simalar bill in the house.

An Exciting Runaway.

An exciting runaway took place on Second street last Saturday afternoon, and very fortunately without serious results. The delivery team of Rolland Bros., driven by Marius Rolland, frightened and ran up the street at fast rate of speed. When at the corner of Main avenue and Second street the wagon was overturned and Marius was thrown to the ground, but sustained no serious injury. The delivery wagon was badly demolished, but the horses were not injured.

Special at the Bijou.

A joyous and delectable vaudeville delicacy heads the list of sparkling attractions all next week just to make the better there will be the special engagement of the "Newman Sisters" ages 13 and 16 respt. Song and dance artists. "The Girls That Can" In fact the two little sisters are a whole show in themselves and come here highly commended as artists of merit.

Sciatic rheumatism is about the only excuse that the right kind of father will offer for not playing one old cat with those boys of his.

It is about all a grass widower of sixty can do to keep his head level with a dashing young spouse of twenty-two, but when on top of this he buys a $2,100 automobile he is in for grief a-plenty.

The squad of sitting hens should be provided with toilet facilities in the shape of a bath of wood ashes, sulphur and fine road dust in a good sized box. It will be a great aid to them in keeping rid of lice and mites.

Location near a body of water we should not deem essential for either ducks or geese, provided they had abundant pasture and all the clean water they wanted to drink. We believe our friend would do just as well if he confined himself exclusively to chickens. Ducks might be raised in connection, but he would do just as well with one line. In the matter of securing enough land so that he could raise the grain for his poultry it would probably do just as well to get less land and devote a part of it to the cultivation of some intensive crop like strawberries, raspberries, tomatoes or onions, crops he could tend in spare hours and from which he would realize enough to buy chicken feed and have a surplus besides. To succeed he would need to plan well and be painstaking and industrious. With population increasing at a rapid rate there is bound to be an ever increasing demand for poultry products carefully prepared for particular and well to do customers, with whom a few cents a dozen for eggs or per pound for dressed poultry is a small matter if only the product is strictly first class. The writer doesn't need to be told that there is a whole lot about the poultry business that isn't romance or poetry, but this doesn't obscure the fact that there is a competence in the business for those who will devote the brains and energy to it that would be requisite for success in any other business.

The Very Worst.

Clara (with emotion)—George, are you sure you will always love me?

George (fervently)—While life lasts, my own.

Clara (suppressing a tear)—George, if trials and tribulations should come.

George (amazed)—My heart is yours alone, my love, and always will be.

Clara (sobbing)—George, are you sure, perfectly sure, that nothing—nothing at all—could cool your affection?

George (thoroughly alarmed)—My gracious! What's happened? Has your father failed?

Clara (hysterically) — Worse, far worse!

George (much relieved)—Tell me all, my angel. I can bear it.

Clara (with a heroic effort)—George, I've—I've got a—a boil coming—coming on my nose.—London Tit-Bits.

TAFT CAN SAVE THEM

Old Indian Agreement Provides Against Selling Liquor in This Section.

Government to Take Auction in the Near Future It Is Said.

United States Bureau of Indian Affairs, W. E. Johnson, Salt Lake City, chief of service, will issue an order within a short time which will stop the sale of liquor on a large territory contiguous to, but not included in reservations within the state. The order will be in pursuance with the provisions of three different treaties made by and between the United States government, the Chippewa, Mill Lacs and other Indian tribes.

Only a proclamation by President Taft will prevent the closing of every saloon within the confines of Minneapolis and St. Paul and adjoining counties and cities.

Land ceded by the Chippewas in 1863, a grant which includes Becker, Clearwater, Hubbard, Douglas, Swift and half a dozen other counties in the north central part of the state, will be in the dry district, too, the treaty providing that no liquor should ever be sold thereon, excepting the provision be abrogated by an act of congress. This and other treaties made half a century ago were forgotten, so far as the provisions restricting the sale of liquor are concerned, years ago, until W. G. Calderwood, secretary of the state Prohibition party, discovered them. He secured maps and directed the attention of the government thereto.

Chief of the Indian Service Johnson has just completed an exhaustive investigation and has informed Mr. Calderwood that he will soon take action. The government, it is said, is not desirous of enforcing the letter of the law in districts removed from Indian reservations, but saloons in cities towns and counties, continue to the White Earth, Leech, Red Lake and other reservations will be ordered closed. President Taft will undoubtedly revoke by proclamation the provision of the treaty by which the Hennepin-Ramsey county territory was ceded under an agreement for a restriction of the sale of liquor, and congress will be asked to act in the other cases.—Minneapolis Tribune.

A Mistaken Uniform.

Uniformed officials are often a puzzle to American travelers. An instance of this is given in "Recollections of a Varied Career," by General W. F. Draper, formerly American ambassador to Italy. General and Mrs. Draper were traveling in Russia when they had the following amusing experience in the sleeping car:

Mrs. Draper's maid, Marie, speaks German as well as French, but Russian is beyond her. After Mrs. Draper's bed was made she desired another pillow, and Marie rushed into the corridor to get one. Seeing a man in uniform—the railway porters wear uniforms—she demanded a pillow in German.

"I have no pillows," said he.

"A bolster, then," said Marie.

"I have no bolster."

"Then give me a couple of towels to wrap up one of these dirty cushions."

"I have no towels either," said the uniform. "I am a colonel in his majesty's imperial guard."

Poor Marie nearly went into hysterics, and I was called in to explain that no offense was meant.

Woman on the Bench.

Hyman Lazarus, for many years recorder of Bayonne, knew the people who came before him. When a woman appeared to accuse a husband who had beaten her he said, "If I send him to jail you'll come back here tomorrow in tears and ask me to let him out." "No," she said, "I will not. I'd like to have him punished." "How much shall I give him then," asked Lazarus—"two months, one month, six months?" The woman, who had begun to relent, was speechless. "I'll tell you what I'll do," he said. "You come up here and take my chair, and whatever sentence you pronounce will go." The woman hesitated, but the recorder insisted. The husband was arraigned before her, and the recorder in a gruff voice ordered her to pronounce sentence. "Six months, three months, two months, a month—quick," he said; "let us have it." The woman burst into tears. She and her husband embraced and went out of court rejoicing. "There!" said Lazarus. "If you come back I'll give you six months each."—New York Press.

Rhinoceros a Bad Foe.

While easily stalked, the rhinoceros is a dangerous customer, as most men will agree who have hunted him. If the rhinoceros gets one's scent he almost invariably charges, often probably from sheer curiosity, but that does not make him any the easier to dispose of. Moreover, he runs and turns at a speed inconceivable in a beast of his vast bulk. Against his massive, sloping head the heaviest bullet is a mere flea bite, leaving no possibility of a stopping shot except with a hard nose ball sent fairly into the heart through the chest. An alternative is to stand absolutely motionless, when with his bad eyesight there is a possibility he may mistake you for a tree and veer past. Indeed, the best ruse in the crisis of any charge is to stand fast and still, for even the unwounded lion sometimes swerves in his charge and retires before a man who has the nerve to wait his coming.—Edgar Beecher Bronson in Century.

Effect of Fear.

A vigorous young greengrocer, aged twenty-seven, was arrested on a Tuesday on charges of drunkenness and assaulting a policeman, who was assisted in securing him by a Mr. Lyons. On Wednesday it was announced in court that Mr. Lyons was dead, and the greengrocer was remanded to see whether the coroner's jury would hold him in any way responsible for the tragedy. By Saturday it had been found that Mr. Lyons' death was due to heart disease of long standing, but meanwhile the agonizing suspense had aged the young prisoner terribly, his black hair having become completely white.—Pall Mall Gazette.

The Model Army of the World.

What army was the strongest of its time? Judging by results, the Roman army was so from the fifth century B. C. onward until the division of the empire. Its fighting organization was as complete as and possibly more practical than that of any army of today. It was based on a territorial system which maintained the comradeship of locality without bringing it into antagonism with that of the corps, for each of the thirty-five Roman "tribes" was required to furnish to each legion four "centuries" of 120 men, each of which worked together as a local unit. The legion was divided into five cohorts or battalions, of which three were troops of the line, two were a kind of militia and the fifth was a depot battalion. For almost eight centuries the army thus constituted not only conquered the then known world, but acted as explorers beyond its limits and at the same time made and unmade kings and emperors in Rome itself.—Pearson's Weekly.

Too Well Done.

Mrs. Eliphalet Howe of Centerville had never encountered "Hamlet" either in the pursuit of literature or on the stage up to the time of her first visit to her Boston niece. On that occasion she was taken by the niece and her husband to see a performance of the play.

"How did you like it, Aunt Jane?" asked her nephew-in-law as he piloted the old lady up the aisle by her elbow when the performance was over.

"If that's what you call a 'play,' I call it hard work," said Aunt Jane indignantly. "How you and Nettie can sit calm in your seats and see such heartless doings is beyond me. Why, that Hamlet man looked so sick I shouldn't have been surprised if he hadn't lived to finish out his talking. And by the expression of those other folks I'll venture to say they felt the same. I had my smelling salts all ready in case o' need from the first minute he came on to the platform."

The Finicky Humor of Leschetizky.

Some amusing stories are told of Leschetizky, the great piano teacher, whose comic spirit is one of the predominating features of his character. It is well known that he is a man of strong likes and dislikes. When an American pianist a dozen or so years ago went to Vienna to study with him he wore his hair long, a habit much affected at that time by the aspiring young artist. So greatly did his general appearance annoy the professor that at the end of the first lesson the student received instructions to go and have his hair cut short. Although loath to part with his locks, the young pianist nevertheless obeyed and turned up at the next lesson with his hair cut in the conventional way. Still Leschetizky was not satisfied. "There is something about you that I don't like!" cried the professor. "Your ears are too long. Have them cut off and let your hair grow again!"—Smith's Magazine.

Electrical Discharges From Plants.

The atmosphere surrounding our earth is known to be electrified, and its charges are bound to play an important part in many phenomena. Atmospheric electrification thus is responsible for the formation of rain and hail, and, while fine weather generally is characterized by the presence of positive electricity, a change in the weather is generally accompanied by a change in the sign of atmospheric electricity. That the electrification of the air does exert some influence on plant growth is inferred from the fact that electrified plants, under the influence of sunshine, can give off electricity from the leaves, and as the air is naturally electrified relatively to the soil all plants are bound to be in a constant state of slow electrical discharge which is made active on the rising of the sun.—Technical World Magazine.

What Constitutes Baseball?

The essential apparatus of baseball is simple and inexpensive. All that is required is a field, a stick, the ball itself and police protection for the umpire. One advantage of the game as played professionally is that those sitting in the grand stand can play the game a great deal better than the eighteen men on the diamond. It is also true that any one of the spectators, even though perched on a telephone pole across the street or looking through a knothole in the fence beyond right field, can judge of the pitcher's skill or the runner's fleetness much more intelligently than the arbiter, who stands behind the battery. The great merit of the game is that the people can participate in it. It is not like bridge whist. Its science is not synonymous with silence. The thing to do is to take off your coat and root as long and as loudly as you can, even if you don't know what is happening.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Taking It Out In Trade.

The proprietor of a certain Turkish bath establishment, seeing a strong looking young man working in a butcher's shop and being impressed by his magnificent muscles, told him to resign and take a rubber's position with him.

"I'll give you more than you are getting now," he said.

The young butcher, resigning in good faith, turned up the next morning at the bath house.

"Well," said the proprietor to him, "I'll put you on at once. What did you get at the butcher's?"

"Six dollars and my week's meat," returned the young man.

"What did that amount to?"

"About $3."

"Well," said the proprietor, "I offered you more to come here, didn't I? I'll give you $6 in money and $4 worth of baths weekly. That is a dollar more than you got at your old place."

Dutch Engagements.

A custom among the Dutch is the exchanging of engagement rings, which are narrow bands of plain gold, with the initials of the betrothed and the day of the betrothal engraved on the inside. They are worn on the left hand before and on the right after marriage. Dutch engagements extend over a period of from two to five years. During this time the young woman gives up all amusements in which her fiance does not participate. If he is not of the dancing sort she refrains from that recreation, however much she may desire to engage in it. She never goes in company anywhere if he is not present, and when they go together to a ball no gentleman will ever ask her to dance without formally gaining his permission. — London Scraps.

The Sure Thing.

A theatrical manager once offered a famous actress $1,000 a week to make a tour of the world. She insisted on $1,500. But the manager said $1,000 was all he could give, and he reminded her of the fabulous jewels that South American millionaires, Russian grand dukes and Indian rajahs are wont to lavish on the ladies of the stage when they are touring.

"Go home," said the manager; "think the matter over and let me know your decision in the morning."

In the morning the actress sent the manager this message:

"Give me my terms and you can have the jewels."

Little Barbara's Complaint.

Four-year-old Barbara went to church with her two sisters and came home crying.

"What is the matter, dear?" inquired her mother.

"He preached a whole sermon—about—M-Mary and Martha," sobbed Barbara, "and—never said—a—w-word about me."—Lippincott's.

A PLAGUE OF ANTS.

The Vicious Insects Are a Nuisance In Southwestern Africa.

"Ants—white, black and yellow—are a great nuisance in Nigeria," says Charles Partridge in "Cross River Natives." "They march from place to place in military formation. Some carry their young, others bear food, and scouts and a fighting escort are always on duty. Their column looks like a long black snake curving along the ground.

"They leave behind them a well formed road about four inches broad and half an inch deep, worn smooth by the tread of the countless throng.

"They do not bite when the sun is high, but woe betide the hapless wight who comes in their way at other times! While traveling through the bush you occasionally find them in possession of a section of the road. Perhaps you are in the midst of them before you discover the presence of your small but fierce adversary. The first man bitten yells out something meaning, 'Ware ants!' and we all hurry forward, stamping vigorously. Those of us upon whom the little warriors have fastened tear off our clothes and nip the foes to death. My little black horse always wanted to turn back when he came to a column of ants. My dog Bob, a native, used to dance like a bear on hot bricks when the driver ants got between his paws and had to be held down while they were plucked out.

"One night I suddenly awoke with a feeling that something was amiss. All the household pets, such as snakes, lizards, rats, toads, centipeds and spiders, seemed to be bestirring themselves restlessly. No sooner had my foot touched the ground than I knew what it was, for a fierce bite told me that the driver ants were upon us.

"On lighting a candle I found a column marching across the floor and a whole regiment attacking my bed. I roused the assistant district commissioner, and eventually, using wisps of burning paper, we drove out the enemy. Fire or hot ashes are the best means to use for expelling them."

Fair Warning.

Year after year an old farmer had listened in grim silence to the trains thundering by his land. Finally one day, his patience at an end, he dropped his plow and shook his fist at the passing express.

"Ye can puff an' blow all ye like, gol durn ye," he cried, "but I'm goin' to ride ye Saturday!"—Everybody's.

Town Booming Helps

I.—Cackle! Cackle! Cackle!

When Ambassador Choate went to England he made a reputation as a wit with one joke.

He sat at the breakfast table beside a sprightly young lady.

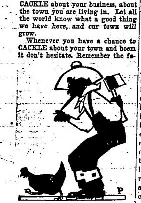
In England they serve soft boiled eggs wrapped in a napkin. The young lady fumbled, and the egg fell to the floor.

"Oh, Mr. Choate," she cried in dismay, "what shall I do? I have dropped my egg!"

"CACKLE, my dear, CACKLE!"

It's a mighty good thing to do a little CACKLING once in awhile. CACKLE about your business, about the town you are living in. Let all the world know what a good thing we have here, and our town will grow.

Whenever you have a chance to CACKLE about your town and boom it don't hesitate. Remember the fable of the old hen that observed that every time she CACKLED some one came and took the egg away. She thought it would be much wiser for her to hide her nest and keep quiet about it, and she did till a Sunday school picnic was organized. Her owner was asked to contribute, and he said:



"Well, that old hen is not laying any more, and I guess she'd do first rate for a fricassee."

MORAL.

If you want to keep out of the soup pot, CACKLE.

The "bread problem," which Mr. J. J. Hill thinks the next generation will have to solve, would be much more puzzling if its solution were not indicated by practical results elsewhere, says an exchange. It would be no problem at all if the wheat fields of the western praries were as productive as in the days of the pioneers. It would be no problem when farmers have learned that the productivity of the farms may be restored. It must be a matter of better methods of cultivation and a more general use of those fertilizers which make for the growth of the wheat plant. No one would be willing to admit that the soil of the west is less fertile than the soil of Great Britain or other European countries. When from an English or Scotch wheat field the crop will yield anywhere from thirty to seventy bushels to the acre American farmers cannot be doing their best when they got only from eight to fifteen.

Many are under the impression that a letter once mailed is no longer the property of the sender but belongs to the person to whom it is addressed. This is an error. Under the postal regulations of the United States and the rulings of the highest courts in the land, a letter does not belong to the addressee until it is delivered to him. The writer has the right to reclaim or regain possession of it provided he can prove to the satisfaction of the postmaster at the office from which it was sent that he was the writer of it. Even after the letter has arrived at the office which is its destination, and before it has been delivered to the addressee, it may be re-called by the writer by telegraph through the mailing. The regulations of the postoffice department require, of course, that utmost care shall be taken by the postmaster at the office of the mailing to ascertain that the person who desired to withdraw the letter is really the one who is entitled to do so, and the postmaster is responsible for his error if he delivers the letter to an imposter or to an unauthorized person. The vital principle in our political system lies at the bottom of this matter. In this country the state is the servan or agent of the citizen, not his master. It remains merely his agent throughout the transmission of a letter. The state may prescribe regulations under which its servants may carry a message for the citizen, but it cannot shirk its responsibility to him.—St. Charles Union.

Andrew French, state dairy commissioner, says: "Our report shows a considerable increase in creamery outputs over a year ago. This is without regard to new creameries that have been built. We have no exact figures, but our inspectors reports show nearly all of the creameries turning out more butter than last year, and the increase will run from 10 to 15 per cent. I believe this is due to increase in the number of cows and improvement in the quality of dairy herds. It is certainly not to be attributed to better feed, as conditions in that respect have been far from good this spring."

The supreme court of Missouri has annulled the sentence of Fred Warner, a former member of the Missouri legislature, who was convicted of bribery and sentenced to two years imprisonment, for the reason that the word "the" was ommitted in the indictment. The indictment read that the crime was ommitted "against the dignity of state," whereas it should have read "against the dignity of the state." It is annulling convictions on such trifling and absurd technicalities as this that utterly disgusts the people with the courts.—Fergus Falls Journal.

As the largest rock can be broken by the constant dripping of water upon it, so the body of man becomes a wreck by the daily grind of life having only one idea. The man who is interested in different things lives longer than he who is able to grasp and enjoy only one. In other words the broad minded man has the advantage over the fellow who is only able to look thru one key hole.—Grafton Record.

Every spear of wheat bursting forth from the rich and fertile soil of this section should make the knocker hang his head. Prosperity is in the air, and this will be the year when the Red River Valley will show that in fertility it surpasses any section in the world and for opportunity it has all other districts backed off the boards.—Crookston Chronical.

Northwestern Agriculturist: A Duluth newspaper writer is rubbing his eyes and exclaiming upon seeing farmers take their butter and eggs to market in automobiles. Well, where should farmer take butter and eggs, anyhow? What is there wrong about that? Probably, too, they own the automobiles without mortgaging the piano and the baby to get them.

Warroad Commonweath: One reason whymany farmers make a failure at farming is that they have never learned the business. Farming is a science and a complex one at that, and requires as much study and preparation in order to achieve the highest success as it does to become a good blacksmith, carpenter, or a lawyer.

Minnesota Dairyman: James J Hill says the farmers of Minnesota are losing $6,000,000 annually because they do not properly care for their lands. And the farmers of Minnesota lose $20,000 000 additional annually in being compelled to pay excessive freight rates on what they sell and buy,

T. B. Walker of Minneapolis is again mentioned for United States senator. In justice to Mr. Walker it should be said that he is not a candidate, but admits that he has been urged by numerous politicians to get into the fight. Mr. Walker is a very wealthy man, and there are "generals" who would like to be his managers.

IN order to close out our line of gang plows, breaking plows, sulkey plows, disc harrows and road scrapers we will sell the same at greatly reduced prices. Now is the time to buy if you are in need of anything in this line.

Nelson River.

The Nelson river may be described as one of the greatest rivers of the world as regards the actual volume of water discharged into the Hudson bay. Its total length is approximately 400 miles, and its drainage area is tremendous. Its tributaries cover the whole of Manitoba, the greater portion of Alberta, Saskatchewan, North Dakota and Ontario west of the great lakes, where they also enter Montana and Minnesota.—Exchange.

Two Points of View.

They were looking at a portrait of Catherine of Russia.

Said the man, "What a remarkably strong and vigorous face she has!"

Said the woman, "I wonder if her hair waved naturally."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Hope.

"Hope," remarked the mere man, "is certainly a wonderful thing."

"It is," rejoined the wise woman. "Why, one little nibble will keep my husband fishing all day."—Chicago News.

Advice.

"Can I offer you a little friendly advice?"

"If you take a little in return."

Too Much Muscle.

A young highland plowboy was pestering a female servant with his unwelcome attentions, and one day he proposed. At this instant the pair (they were walking in the fields) came upon another servant, a man, sleeping instead of working. The lassie, a brawny wench, seized a stick and beat the idler till he roared. When he had slunk off to his duty the swain remarked admiringly:

"Ma certie, lassie, but ye cud well manage yer childer."

"Aye, or their father," replied the girl, with a significant look.

The lover turned pale.

"Ma lass," he gasped, "I juist remembered ma auld mither at hame. I'm her only laddie, and I think it's na richt for me tae mairry while she's alive. W-w-when she dees I'll come back an' mairry ye."

And as he got safely away he said fervently, "May the Lord alloo ma mither to live as lang as me!"

Deeply Interested.

The play was one of Shakespeare's tragedies. Mrs. Simmons and her little boy, having been unable to secure seats in the parquet, were well located in the front row of the first balcony, where they could see better and hear almost as well as if they had been farther forward on the main floor. Mrs. Simmons was agreeably surprised at the interest that Bobby appeared to take in the somber drama. He sat leaning forward, with his elbows on the cushioned railing in front of him, resting his head on his hands, deeply absorbed. As the curtain went down on the first act he straightened up.

"Well, dear, how do you like Shakespeare?" asked his mother. "Are you enjoying the play?"

"Mamma," said Bobby with the air of one who has made a great discovery, "there are sixty-nine men here that have got bald spots on top of their heads! I've counted 'em five times!"

Swallowing a Reindeer.

"Doctor, doctor! I's swallowed a reindeer!"

Choking violently and literally black in the face, a negro boy rushed into the office of a throat specialist. His small woolly head jerked frantically, and his eyes rolled in anguish. It was very evident that some irritating substance had lodged in his throat.

The specialist summoned his assistant.

"Dr. Blank, here is a young man who says he has swallowed a reindeer."

"Nawsur," spluttered the patient, "it weren't a whole reindeer. It were jess his nake and his horns."

The physicians removed the offending object.

With a long sigh of relief the pickaninny opened his eyes. His glance rested on the instrument table.

"Yassur, dat's de reindeer."

It was an Elks button.—Los Angeles Times.

SOMETHING TO REMEMBER

Tax Rate in Small Counties is Lower Than in Large Counties.

Mahnomen County, Which Has Much Unimproved Land, Has Low Tax Rate.

Inasmuch as there is considerable talk to the effect that the division of Red Lake county would result in an increase of taxes, the following taken from the Waubun Forum, published in Mahnomen county, will be of much interest:

Mahnomen county has the third-lowest tax rate among the counties of the state, only two counties paying a lower rate, the two being Nicollet and St. Louis. Mahnomen's tax rate is 19.50 mills. This compares with the four adjoining counties as follows: Becker 25.17, Norman 26.56, Polk 43.50, Clearwater 35.30. So if you hear any one talk of high taxes here just remember that it isn't so. The highest tax rate of any county in the state is 45.00 in Carlton, while Beltrami is a close second with 41.00. The average tax rate for the state is 20.68 mills. One fact the list of tax rates shows, which is contrary to the popular notion, is that small counties have lower taxes than large ones. Five of the smallest counties in the state is Dodge, Steele, Waseca, Grant and Mahnomen, which are all below the average tax rate, while we find the big counties of Polk, Otter Tail, Beltrami and Morrison with a tax rate far above the average for the state. In fact the only four big counties that have a tax rate below the state average is St. Louis, Renville, Goodhue and Stearns. On the other hand only five of the small counties, Kanabec, Anoka, Benton and Wadena, that pays a higher rate than the average for the state.

Our Butter Goes West.

The entire output of the Thief River Falls creamery and many others of this section is now being shipped west to a Spokane firm for the Alaska trade. The butter is packed in special boxes and a higher price is paid than in New York City.

Water Is Low.

The log drive arrived here Tuesday and the mill again started up on that evening and it is not anticipated that it will have to close down again until it freezes up this fall. There are 12,000,000 feet of logs in this drive, half of which are for the Thief River Falls Lumber company and the remaining half for the Crookston and East Grand Forks Lumber companies. Owing to the low water, it has been necessary to employ a crew of 70 men to bring down this log drive, and in former years a crew of 14 or 16 men would have accomplished the results.

As there are about 60,000,000 feet of logs for the Crookston and East Grand Forks Lumber companies and about 35,000,000 feet for the Thief River Falls Lumber company to be brought down the river this summer, it is going to keep a small army of men employed to do the work. Never before was the river and lake so low, and it will cost the lumber companies considerable more than usual to drive the logs this year.

Farmers Institute.

Every farmer living in the vicinity of Thief River Falls should make it a point to be in this city on Tuesday, June 15, to attend the State Farmer's Institute. Matters of interest to the residents of this section will be discussed by able men, and no farmer can afford to be absent.

A Peculiar Case.

Owatonna has a physician who has lived for twenty years on little more than water, and recently in a moment of irresponsibility he asked that he might be put quietly out of the way in order to relieve his suffering. That he will never recover, is assured by his physician, Dr. W. C. Roberts of Owatonna. This man Dr. T. Hatch, and his case is one of the strangest that has come to the notice of physicians in Minnesota in recent years. He is suffering from chronic gastritis, double pneumonia and heart disease, and has been unable to assimilate any solid food for more than twenty years.

Meeting of Merchants.

The merchants living north of Thief River Falls on the Soo and Great Northern lines will meet in this city on Sunday and perfect their organization. It is expected that there will be a large attendance as every merchant has been urgently requested to be present. Four weeks ago there was a meeting of a number of merchants here and a temporary organization perfected.

The visiting merchants are to be well entertained and the Hanson & Barzen Milling company is going to give a banquet to the association at the Hotel Ogahmah on Sunday evening.

Formerly Resided Here.

Mrs. F. W. Bleakley, who was one of the five killed in a cyclone at Langdon, N. D., last Saturday, was formerly a resident of this section, being a daughter of a Mr. Morgan, who at one time owned part of the townsite of St. Hilaire, and later removed to a farm just north of Thief River Falls which is now owned by C. J. Knox. Mr. Morgan died here and his widow and children removed to Langdon, and are now making their home in that city.

Golmar Bros. Circus Coming.

Golmar Bros. circus will be in Thief River Falls on Tuesday, June 29. This circus visited Thief River Falls three years ago, and is said to be much better now than before. The show will come in over the Great Northern.

Street Commissioner Mellby is putting in some excellent cement cross walks, and they are far superior to any work of this character ever done here. Mr. Mellby made his own plans and specifications for these walks, and without doubt all walks laid hereafter will be after this pattern.

While in Thief River Falls last week, Hon. J. Adam Bede was the guest of Supt. and Mrs. J. H. Hay. J. Adam and Mr. Hay are old friends, and it was largely on this account that the talented ex-congressman was secured to deliver the commencement day address here.

The average farmer is probably not aware of the fact that an average mule sells for $10 a head more than horses. Such is the case; and the price has been gradually rising for a number of years. There has never been what would be called an overproduction of mules while the market has often been unable to fully supply.

MEMORIAL EXERCISES

Thief River Falls Citizens Celebrated Memorial Day in Appropriate Manner.

E. M. Stanton Was Orator of the Day and Delivered an Excellent Address.

Memorial Day was celebrated in Thief River Falls Monday in a very appropriate manner. A procession, headed by the police department and consisting of the band, old soldiers in carriages, state militia, members of the fire department, school children and citizens in carriages formed at the Central school house and marched to the Mozark roller rink where exercises were held and later proceeded to Greenwood cemetery and the graves of the old soldiers there were decorated.

The exercises at the rink were very pleasing and patriotic. Mayor Hamre presided and after a prayer by the Rev. J. B. Smith there was music by the band and a male choir. E. M. Stanton was the orator of the day and he was at his best and delivered a very forceful and patriotic address which was well received by the large audience.

One of Edison's Jokes.

Edison was always a great joke player. Those ones he seemed to enjoy most were like the one he worked on one of the laziest operators in the office where he was once employed. One night, when this fellow thought his day's work was over and was getting ready to go home, Edison slipped around to the office switchboard, made a connection with the lazy fellow's telegraph key, called him down to the table and, supplied with an old newspaper, proceeded to send Mr. Lazy a long lot of presumably Associated Press stuff from New York. Edison was a lightning sender (as well as receiver) from almost the beginning of his career, and the way he made that fellow work for two solid hours was a joy. After wearing him completely out, making him receive and copy the equivalent of about three or four newspaper columns, Edison suddenly came from behind the switchboard, exposed the joke to the poor fellow and wound up by pelting him on the nose with the newspaper he had been sending from.—Pearson's.

Scolded and Comforted.

At a lunch given in his honor Sven Hedin read an amusing letter written to him by Alfred Nobel at a time when Hedin was still a student, but already filled with a longing to explore unknown Asia. He applied to the government for funds, but the answer was so slow in coming that he wrote to Nobel, who promptly replied: "I take no interest in these geographical exploration trips. In fact, I regard them as an anachronism. Men communicate with each other today from one end of the earth to the other by means of telegraph and post. There are in Asia, too, explorers and savants who are surely better qualified than you, sir, to study and describe their native country. I therefore believe that you could make better use of your ambitious impulses than by undertaking trips to Asia. But in order that you may see that I do not always act as I think I send you a sum which may serve as the best confutation of my own convictions."

Squandering Ability.

Doing the lower when the higher is possible constitutes one of the greatest tragedies of human life. The squandering of money seems a wicked thing when we think of the good that might be done with it. But what about the wicked waste of ability, the deliberate throwing away of 50, 75, perhaps 90 per cent of one's success possibly just because he never trained himself to use it, to grasp it with such vigor and power that he can fling his life into his career with its maximum effectiveness? Most people take hold of life with the tips of their fingers. They never get hold of the life proposition with that grip and tenacity of purpose and vigor of determination which do things worth while. They just hang on the outskirts of things, playing upon the surface of their possibilities without ever getting down into the marrow of their being, where efficiency and power dwell.—Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine.

Exclusive Perfumes.

The late Dr. Andrew Wynter in a charming article on perfumes suggested the desirability of every lady having her own special and self prepared perfume. The custom, however, would have its disadvantages. More than one sensational story might be mentioned wherein the heroine or villain was saved or unmasked, as the case might be, by the recognition of a distinctive scent. In "Diplomacy" the denouement is effected by the telltale perfume of the adventuress being detected in the dispatch box she had rifled. As a matter of history, the assassins of the oriental sovereign Yezdijird were discovered by one of them smelling of the perfume with which the robes of the murdered king had been redolent.—London Globe.

Hope.

"Have you seen the account in this morning's papers about Dr. Cutting having brought a dead man back to life?"

"No. Did he do that?"

"Yes. It was a wonderful demonstration of his skill."

"Well, I shall be more hopeful now than I have been for some time. If he can bring the dead back to life he may be able to bring back the book he borrowed from me about two years ago."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Begging In Paris.

Giving up his profession, a Paris beggar offers his "pitch" for sale. His advertisement reads: "For sale, present holder retiring to the country, good situation for one legged man; neighborhood of the Etoile; hours of work, 2 p. m. to 7 p. m.; receipts, $2.40 to $3.15; regular passersby, children and strangers; or any infirmity would suit."

A Feminine Reason.

"But," asked the first co-ed, "why did you elect to take up the study of German instead of French?"

"Oh," replied the other, "the German professor was so awfully handsome, you know."—Catholic Standard and Times.

The Complaint.

A magistrate looked at a disreputable specimen of manhood in the dock and turned to the policeman. "Officer," he asked, "what is the complaint?"

"Rheumatis, y'r honor!" exclaimed the prisoner, answering for himself.

A Test Question.

Newed—I tell you, old chap, I'm another man since I was married. Singleton—So? Does your wife love you as much as the man she married?—Exchange.

Daring Betting.

During the close of the eighteenth century the craze for gambling in England rose to an extreme. At certain notorious clubs every incident was made the subject of a wager, and thousands changed hands over the veriest trifle. A certain Mr. Blake made himself notorious by betting £1,500 that a man could live twelve hours under water. He hired a daring fellow, and, purchasing an old ship, they were sunk together by way of settling the bet. Neither ship nor man reappeared, so Mr. Blake had to pay up. The famous Earl of Carlisle once staked £5,000 on a single card at faro. On one occasion at Brooks', another noted gambling club, Lord Robert Spencer lost the last shilling of the fortune which he had obtained from his brother, the Duke of Marlborough, and General Fitzpatrick was in the same condition. The twain combined, and, borrowing a sum of money, they opened a faro bank. They had a run of luck, and Lord Spencer's share of the proceeds came to £100,000. He pocketed this cash and never gambled again.—London Tatler.

One Block of Sightseeing.

It was on East Eleventh street that the sightseeing wagon started. Anxious mothers placed their very small children in it, then stood anxiously watching the youngsters for fear they would fall out, in spite of the fact that the wagon was very low and drawn by a little white pony, who went along in a walk. A man walked beside the wagon. A small boy on the front seat drove, holding the reins in a slack way and chatting with a small child by his side.

"How much do you charge them for a ride?" asked a woman on the sidewalk.

"One cent," said the man.

"And how far do you go?" she asked.

"Just up and down the block," said the man. "Afraid to go any further—afraid I'll lose them."

The woman counted the children, sixteen. Sixteen cents for going up and down the block.

"There are a lot of little ways of earning a living on the east side," she said.—New York Press.

The Boatswain's Judgment.

It was somewhere in this wide, wide world, just where has slipped my mind, and they were about to buy beef on hoof for the ships. So the officer whose duty it is to make the purchase took ashore with him the bo's'n, as representing the crew, to look over the animals and either object or not. They approached the first animal.

"How will that do?" asked the officer.

The bo's'n cautiously approached the beast, bent down and gingerly ran his thumb and forefinger down first one shank and then the other until the whole four shanks had been examined. Straightening up he said:

"He'll do all right, sir."

The officer, flabbergasted, cried:

"But, dash it all, you can't tell the good points of a bullock by the shanks!"

"Perhaps not, sir, but they're the only parts we ever gets, sir," was the reply.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A German Holiday.

At Haslach, in the Kinzig valley, in Germany, Feb. 22 is a holiday and has been observed as one for hundreds of years. Once upon a time, the story teller who explains its origin begins, Haslach was overrun with snakes, and no one knew how to drive them out. One day a great flock of storks appeared, and they were the saviors of the place. In recognition of this deliverance from the pest, which occurred on Feb. 22, the day has been kept sacred and is known as "stork day." An appointed official known as the "stork father" parades the streets, followed by as many children as care to join the procession. He wears his "Sunday clothes" and a high hat decorated with two stuffed storks. Stops are made by this procession at houses along the line, and the children receive gifts of sweets and small coins, every householder feeling pleased to show his gratitude to the stork.

Nest Eggs.

Take a nice fresh egg and separate the white and the yolk so that the yolk will not be broken. Put the white into a bowl, add a pinch of salt and beat it until it is very stiff. Have ready some little bowl that is pretty enough to put on the table, but that will not break in the oven. Pour into this the stiff beaten white and make a little hole in the middle of it with a spoon. In this little hollow place the yolk, still unbroken. Set the dish in a hot oven and cook for three or four minutes, or until the white has browned a little and the yolk is firm. There must be a separate dish for each egg that you cook in this way. Serve right away.—Delineator.

The Echo.

A little boy was amusing himself by hallooing, then listening for the echo. "What is the echo, mamma?" he asked. His mother attempted to explain, feeling all the while how inadequate her explanation was. The little fellow trotted along at her side, silent for some minutes. Then his eyes fell upon his shadow.

"Oh, I know what echo is," he exclaimed joyfully. "It's the shadow of our voices."—Los Angeles Times.

A Palpable Hit.

"Now, sir," demanded counsel for the defendant, "tell us what time this alleged robbery took place."

"You had better ask your client," retorted the plaintiff. "He had my watch."

News of General Interest from Three Countries.

DIRECTED MALE CHORUS

Arvid Akerlind Happened To Be in Sweden at Time Director Hedenblad Was Taken Seriously Ill and on Vote of the Members of the Chorus He Was Requested to Temporarily Take the Place of the Stricken Director.

SWEDEN.

The other day when the Upsala Student's Male Chorus met for practice to prepare for their annual spring concert it was learned that Director Hedenblad had been taken suddenly ill. There now arose the question as to who should be chosen to take his place and although there were several whom the members believed were able to direct the singing they could not agree on any certain man. But it happens that Director Arvid Akerlind, of New York, is in Sweden on a visit this summer and happened to be in Upsala on this occasion to visit old friends. Almost unanimously the members of the chorus voted to have Director Akerlin lead in place of the beloved Hedenblad and that even if he had been so thoughtless as to emigrate to America about sixteen years ago, where he has since risen to be one of the most successful leaders of Swedish American male choruses. It is but natural that Director Akerlind felt flattered to think that an opportunity was extended him to direct the foremost male chorus in the world, one which in years past captured the prize at Paris and Berlin and whose wonderful rendition of Swedish songs has been the talk of two continents. Director Akerlind will, we understand, invade Sweden next summer with a male chorus of Swedish singers from New York and Boston and that he will be given a royal reception goes without saying.

A writer some time ago wrote an interesting description of the colony of Swedes in Jerusalem after making an extensive trip through Palestine. The Swedes that he found in Jerusalem are known as Larsonites. It seems that they emigrated from Sweden to Jerusalem some fifty or sixty years ago under the influence of a revival and have kept up a comparatively separate existence in the holy city since that time. They reside in what is called the American section. They are described by the writer as being a God fearing people and live among the Catholics and Mohammedans of the city. They are well known for their charity among the poor and the improvident Arabs. It was upon the existence of this interesting colony that the famous Swedish writer, Selma Lagerlof, wrote her book entitled "Jerusalem," in which she describes their life most vividly. Since Miss Lagerlof's book appeared there has been aroused a great deal of interest in this far away colony of Swedes in the holy land and there will undoubtedly come something in detail regarding this characteristic colony from a Swedish pen in the near future.

Next year in June the Augustana synod will celebrate its fiftieth anniversary in Rockford, Ill. The Swedish government will on this occasion send Bishop Von Scheele to represent the Swedish state church at the anniversary meeting of the synod. The bishop has on two former occasions paid a visit to this country when he attended the meetings of the Augustana synod and paid a visit to its leading educational institutions.

The Swedish government will donate the granite stone for the peace palace which will be erected in the near future at The Hague. Every nation will contribute something toward the completion of this characteristic building and Sweden will thus in a sense furnish the foundation for the same.

Prince Eugen, the Duke of Nerike, will return to Stockholm during the latter part of next month after an extended trip abroad. The artist prince has been spending but very little time in Sweden during the past few years and when he comes home he is a comparative stranger.

The Swedish tourists bureaus are being flooded with letters from all parts of Europe and America and indications are that the number of visitors this year will be very large. The steamship companies have all large bookings for Stockholm, Malmo and Gothenburg.

The Danish government has given Professor Nordenskiold's expedition concession to make exploration trips into the interior of Greenland. The expedition, lead by Professor Nordenskiold himself, started May 20 and will return to Gothenburg about Sept. 15.

A large new Swedish hotel has been erected in Hamburg and will soon open its doors for business. It will be known as the Atlantic and has been started for the purpose of accommodating Swedish travelers in that city.

The Michelsen fund at present amounts to 214,045.22 crowns. Regarding the disposition of the fund Mr. Michelsen has made known his wishes which are in fine as follows: "It is my wish and purpose that the Michelsen fund shall remain intact, that for some time to come the interest be added to the principal and that later the interest be expended for the benefit of young men and women who reveal talents for work that would prove of general public usefulness. At a later date I shall give further particulars with reference to this."

When Dr. Sven Hedin lectured on his expedition in Central Asia there was a very large and select audience present. Both King Haakon and Fridtjof Nansen were in attendance, but they left the hall at the close of the lecture and did not attend the banquet given in honor of the great explorer. Nansen excused himself by stating that he is not in the habit of attending social gatherings since the death of his wife. No excuse was given for the king's failure to attend the banquet.

Norwegian sailors are among the best and bravest in the world. The United States is going to have and already has hundreds of Norwegian sailors in its merchant marine ranks. This spring not less than 800 Norwegian sailors have come to America. Of this number 500 will have employment on the great lakes, and the other 300 will engage in whale fishing off the coast of Newfoundland. All but a few were from Tonsberg, Porsgrund, Larvig and adjacent districts in Norway.

Norway proposes to do some active advertising in Germany this season. A branch tourist and travelers' bureau has been established there, giving all kinds of information regarding Norway as a tourist country and incidentally advertising some of the country's resources. The storthing has made an appropriation for the maintenance of the bureau there this season of 30,000 crowns.

The Norwegian and Swedish members of the court of arbitration which is to settle the reindeer pasture question in northern Norway have left Copenhagen after having mapped out the work that is to be done. In November they will convene again in Copenhagen and begin negotiations. The court will consist of nine persons, including Swedish and Norwegian lawyers and secretaries.

An additional 12,000 crowns will be needed in the near future to improve the appearance of the western entrance to the Trondhjem cathedral and it will not be long before large additional sums will be needed for this and other purposes. The cathedral will when completed be one of the most expensive edifices in the world.

Miss Anne Wilhelmine Meidell has donated her whole fortune, 350,000 crowns, to the foreign missions and to charity institutions in Christiania. Miss Meidell has for years been engaged in philanthropic work and is perhaps one of the very best friends that the poor have ever had in Christiania.

The king's villa, which is under course of construction, will be far more expensive than was calculated and the building committee is already lacking funds to go ahead and complete it. It is believed that the storthing will make an extra appropriation.

The National theater made a great hit with "Madame Butterfly." Not only was the average theater-goer well pleased, but King Haakon and Queen Maud also liked it so much that they personally congratulated some of the actors who participated in the play.

The May 17 celebrations this year in all the cities of Norway were of a comparatively orderly character. A great deal of the usual carousals and street fights were for some reason or other not so strongly in evidence this year as during former years.

The Mormons of Norway held their annual conference in Bergen a few days ago under the leadership of Andrew Jensen from Utah. There were several hundred people in attendance at the conference.

Trondhjem spends this year 290,000 crowns on new school buildings. There are under course of erection one new school building on the west side and one on the north side.

There will be the usual large quota of home returning Norwegian-Americans this summer. They come to spend the summer. Few of them remain.

DENMARK.

The Danish crownprince has accepted an invitation to attend the Danish-American reunion at Aarhus on July 4. Premier Neergaard also will be present, and about 2,000 Danish-Americans are expected. The American minister, Maurice F. Egan; Danish minister to America, Count Moltke, and the famous critic, Dr. George Brandes, will be among the speakers. This is the first time that an attempt has been made to have a Fourth of July celebration in a foreign country conducted by naturalized American citizens descended from that country. The object is to afford Scandinavians an opportunity to learn the truth about about the United States, a land that many people from Denmark have chosen as their adopted country.

The owner of the old dance hall in Copenhagen known as the "Kaeden," has evidently a monopoly on the dance hall business in the city. The other day he purchased the aforementioned institution for 480,000 crowns. Last year he purchased a similar institution known as "Figaro" for 450,000 crowns. Both these resorts are much frequent by the gay population, especially in the summer time.

Consul General Clan, of New York, is at present in Copenhagen and will remain there until the latter part of August, meantime assisting at the foreign department in making out new instructions for Danish consuls in all foreign lands. Consul Clans stands high in the diplomatic circles in the Danish capital and is very much thought of by his countrymen in New York.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

Overton W. Price, associate forester of the federal government, has written Governor Johnson that the forestry bureau of the federal government will spend an amount equal to any the state may spend in making a preliminary survey of the state's forestry resources and making plans for the conservation of the forests of the state.

The Soo railway has placed in the hands of Foley Bros., general contractors of St. Paul, a contract for 220 miles of railway to be constructed between Moose Lake, on the company's Duluth line, and Thief River Falls, on its Winnipeg line. The construction will take two years.

Attorney General George T. Simpson, acting for State Treasurer C. C. Dinehart, is preparing to bring suit against Hennepin county to recover $16,068.94 as the state's share of money the county had deposited in banks which failed during the panic of 1893.

A remarkable decrease in the number of cases of smallpox reported to the state board of health is noted in a comparison of the reports for this and last year. Members of the board attribute the decrease to the new method of handling cases.

Brigadier General C. L. Hodges has arrived in St. Paul from the Philippines to take command of the department of Dakota, relieving Brigadier General W. S. Edgerly, who succeeds General J. B. Kerr of Fort Riley.

John I. Davis, an attorney in Lyon county, was suspended from practice for six months in a per curiam decision of the supreme court. The State Bar association made the complaint.

Professor Maria Sanford, head of the rhetoric department of the University of Minnesota for the last thirty years, has retired.

The Switchmen's Union of North America, in convention at Peoria, Ill., selected St. Paul as the meeting place in 1910.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Amos Dudley Seward, a former well known resident of Mankato, is dead at Ventura, Cal. He was born in Oneida county, N. Y., April 19, 1815. He moved from Indiana to Mankato in 1855 and engaged in flour milling. He served as county auditor of Blue Earth county for eight years and was post quartermaster at Mankato during the Indian outbreak of 1861-2.

William Scott Fleming, eighty-four years old, is dead at Minneapolis. Mr. Fleming was a son of General James Fleming, who served with General Scott in the War of 1812. He was at one time aide to Governor Curtin of Pennsylvania and at the end of the Civil war was offered a commission.

George E. Burns, the private detective who planned the Minneapolis school board investigation and brought about the grand jury report on school board conditions, is dead. He died in a Los Angeles (Cal.) hospital, where he had been taken for lung trouble.

Arthur P. Blanchard of Little Falls, one of the widest known attorneys in the Northwest, died at the Northwestern hospital, Minneapolis, of cancer. Mr. Blanchard was forty-five years old.

Andrew Ascher, a pioneer hotelkeeper of St. Paul, is dead at the age of eighty-eight years. He was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, but had resided in St. Paul since 1851.

Mrs. Reece M. Newport, one of the best known and generally esteemed women in St. Paul, is dead after a long illness, aged seventy-three.

Mrs. Abigail Porter, a pioneer of Clearwater, and the first white woman to settle in that place, is dead, aged eighty-nine.

Mrs. Galena Andrea Grover, an old settler of Clay county, is dead at Barnesville.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Captain Tom Gavin of the North Minneapolis police station and seventeen patrolmen made a sensational raid on alleged blind pigs, rounding up seven suspected proprietors of confectionery and cigar stores and confiscating seven cases of what appears to be beer and eight gallons of whisky.

The west half of a block at Akeley composed of a large store building, two livery stables, a laundry, a temperance saloon and five dwelling houses, was destroyed by a fire which for a time threatened the entire business portion of the city. Six horses were burned to death.

A hand car driven by Frank Enquist and Charles Knutson was run down by an engine on the Great Western east of Cannon Falls. Enquist received injuries which proved fatal in a short time. His companion was not hurt.

Carl Lempke, eight years of age, was drowned in the Mississippi river at St. Paul while his older brother Eddie, twelve years of age, was near by and unable to render him any assistance.

Oscar Dahlgreen, aged twenty-two, of Little Falls, this state, was struck by lightning and killed at a sheep camp of the T. C. Power company, twenty miles north of Great Falls, Mont.

Mrs. Henry Wright, aged forty-eight years, was killed in a runaway accident in Woodland, a suburb of Duluth.

TESTIFIES IN RATE CASE

J. J. Hill on the Stand at St. Paul Hearing.

James J. Hill, chairman of the board of directors of the Great Northern, was called to testify in the rate hearing case before Master in Chancery C. E. Otis at St. Paul. Mr. Hill was on the stand all day supporting the statements of previous witnesses of the road regarding the cost of reproducing the Great Northern and as to the confiscatory freight rates in Minnesota.

Mr. Hill maintained that the railroad had always made its rates as low as possible and that they have been and are the lowest west of the Mississippi between Manitoba and Mexico. The reason given for the rates being lower here than in Iowa, Mr. Hill said, was due to his policy of building up the state.

Mr. Hill paid a tribute to Patten, the Napoleon of wheat, as the benefactor of the American farmer. He said that if Patten hadn't cornered wheat it would have been exported and then no one could say what the price of wheat would have soared to.

ALLEGES ILLEGAL MONOPOLY

Minnesotan Files Complaint Against Express Companies.

A general attack on the system of management of the principal express companies doing business throughout the country has been started by State Senator B. E. Sundberg of this state.

Senator Sundberg has lodged a complaint with the interstate commerce commission in which he declares the American, Adams and United States Express companies have formed themselves into an illegal monopoly for the control of the express business throughout the United States and that they are conducting such a monopoly in violation of the Sherman anti-trust act of 1887. He asks the commission to break up the monopoly and fix a schedule of prices for the express business which will bear a fair relation to the cost of transportation.

YOUNG FARMER MURDERED

His Corpse Was Left to Be Eaten by Swine.

Murdered and left to be eaten by swine was the fate of John A. Carlson, single and thirty-five years old, whose body was found by a group of boys. They were forced to chase the hogs away that they might reach the corpse.

This atrocious crime was committed on a hog farm at the south end of Twin lake, Golden Valley township, a few miles north of Minneapolis.

The murder was the result of a drunken brawl, the police say, and August Carlson, the dead man's uncle and employer; his wife, Marie Carlson, and the hired man, Charles Johnson, are being held by Hennepin county officials at the county jail pending further investigation.

STRENGTHEN THE OLEO LAW

Campaign to Kill It Probably Will Be Nipped in Bud.

Representative Charles R. Davis of this state has received information that an organized and carefully planned campaign is on to have repealed the existing oleomargarine law. He has started out to defeat the project in the interest of the dairymen of his district and will urge the strengthening and perfection of the law by making its violation more difficult and providing heavier penalties.

The dairymen's associations throughout the country are urging that oleomargarine be put up in small sealed packages that may not be broken by the retailer and must go to the consumer plainly stamped with the government seal intact.

Twenty Buildings Destroyed.

Twenty buildings destroyed, four people injured and hundreds of trees blown down is the result of a tornado at St. Cloud. The buildings of the St. Cloud Granite company were blown over and those of other granite companies were moved off their foundations. The Italian settlement to the north of the railroad shops was totally destroyed.

Woman Attempts Suicide.

Miss Lizzie Dewald, twenty-five years old, was found near death in her room at St. Paul from the effects of drinking carbolic acid. She was hurried to the city hospital in a patrol wagon and later it was said that the young woman would probably recover. It is supposed that she intended to end her life. The motive is unknown.

St. Paul Centenarian Dead.

With her mind lucid until a few hours before her death Mrs. Liza Fletcher of St. Paul died at the age of 103 years at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Dayton. Mrs. Fletcher was the oldest woman in St. Paul. She was born in Scotland and located in St. Paul in 1849.

SAVED BY WIRELESS MESSAGE

Vessel Had Drifted Helplessly for Three Days.

Guaymas, Mex., June 1.—Through the use of wireless telegraphy the American steamer Precursor, rendered helpless by a broken propeller, was rescued from a dangerous position and towed into port. The Precursor had drifted helplessly for three days. Some of the passengers had become uncontrollable from fear and had to be locked in their staterooms.

TWO MEN DROWN

Mill City Conductors Lose Lives When Boat Capsizes.

THIRD OCCUPANT IS RESCUED

Unable to Swim He Clings to Craft Until Saved.

The second double fatality of the fishing season near the Twin Cities occurred when W. G. Conley and George Gibbs, both conductors on the St. Paul road, whose homes are in Minneapolis, were drowned as they desperately swam shoreward in Lake Chanhassen, seventeen miles out of Minneapolis, following the upsetting of their boat, in which they had set out for an afternoon's fishing.

Patrick Kenny, a brakeman employed on the St. Paul road and a resident of Minneapolis, who was a member of the fishing party, probably owes his life to his inability to swim, for he clung to the overturned boat and was rescued.

The bodies of his two less fortunate companions were recovered.

KELLOGG, "TRUST BOOSTER"

So Declares President of Minnesota Shippers' Association.

"Frank B. Kellogg is a trust booster instead of a trust buster," declared George S. Loftus of St. Paul, president of the Minnesota Shippers and Receivers' association, in an address to the Sixth Ward Equality club at Minneapolis.

"He has been counsel for the United States Steel corporation and other steel trust concerns and employed by the Standard Oil company and yet he is the man who is going to bust the trusts. You know, and I know, that Frank B. Kellogg will not do much to injure the Standard Oil company. He is the man who is going to be boomed for United States senator by a certain Minneapolis newspaper to succeed Moses E. Clapp. Clapp is a good man, but is not easily led by the 'system,' so Kellogg is going to have his place. Kellogg is a trust booster instead of a trust buster."

Mr. Loftus further charged that James J. Hill controlled the politics of Minnesota and several other states.

HOLDUP ON FREIGHT TRAIN

Iowa Man Shot and Killed Near Hampton, Minn.

Joe Rood of Newhall, Ia., was shot and fatally wounded by holdup men on a Chicago Great Western freight train near Hampton. Rood, with his brother, S. B. Rood, was riding on an oil car and as the train was nearing Hampton two men boarded the car and ordered the Roods to throw up their hands. As Joe Rood was slow in getting his hands up when ordered to do so the assailants shot him twice, once in the head and again in the body, after which they kicked him off the moving car. They got about $15 from his brother.

S. B. Rood went to Hampton for help and the wounded man was taken to town, but died in a few hours.

MINNESOTA PEDDLERS' LAW

Judge Snow of Winona Declares It to Be Unconstitutional.

The first round in the case to test the constitutionality of the state peddlers' license law, which was passed by the last legislature and which became effective April 19, last, closed when Judge Arthur H. Snow of the district court at Winona handed down a decision in the case of the state vs. F. R. Mudeking, holding that the law is unconstitutional.

The case will be appealed to the state supreme court, according to programme, where a decision will decide the fate of the act.

Brakeman Killed.

Charles Edward Brennan of St. Paul, a brakeman for the Chicago Great Western railway, was found dying on the tracks at Empire with his right arm and his left leg severed from his body. Just in what manner he received his injuries is not known. He was placed on a passenger train and hurried to St. Paul, but he died from shock just as the train reached the depot.

Duluth Fire Chief Dead.

Chief John T. Black of the Duluth fire department is dead in that city after an operation for appendicitis. Chief Black was one of the best known fire fighters of the country, having for years been head of the St. Paul fire department.

Blew Out the Gas.

Gust Hedlund, twenty-eight years of age, is dead at Minneapolis and his companion, Elias Borgren, is dying at the city hospital as the result of one of the men blowing out the gas in their room at Lyman's hotel.

Two Fatal Accidents.

Two fatal accidents occurred at Winona one day recently. Miss Mabel Kirst drank carbolic acid by mistake and Fred Sieboldt, a somnambulist, was killed by a train while walking in his sleep.

A REAL MONTE CRISTO

The Tragic Career of Picaud, a Cobbler of Paris.

HIS RISE TO GREAT WEALTH.

Thrown Into Jail by Secret Enemies, He Was Left a Fortune by a Fellow Prisoner—Released, His Scheme of Vengeance Brought Him Death.

That romantic creation of the brain of Alexandre Dumas, "The Count of Monte Cristo," had a counterpart in real life in France in the last century. This is the tragic story:

In 1807, when Napoleon was at the height of his power, Francois Picaud was a sturdy young journeyman cobbler of Paris, full of health and animal spirits and happy in the love of Marguerite Vigouroux, a young girl of his own station in life. On the eve of his marriage hidden enemies denounced him to the imperial government as a spy. He was cast into prison, where he remained, forgotten by the world, for seven years.

Among his fellow prisoners was a wealthy Milanese priest, who treated him like a son and bequeathed to him 7,000,000 francs on deposit in the Bank of Amsterdam. Furthermore, this ecclesiastic told Picaud the secret of a hiding place in Italy where were concealed jewels to the value of 1,200,000 francs and specie amounting to three millions.

When the empire was overthrown in 1814 Picaud was one of a vast number of political prisoners throughout France who were given their freedom. He proceeded to gather the priest's treasure and to plan vengeance upon his enemies. Who they were he did not know.

Disguised as an Italian priest, he succeeded by bribing the least guilty of the conspirators and discovering the entire story of his undoing. The leader in the plot he learned was one Loupain, who had married Marguerite Vigouroux, prospered and become the proprietor of one of the handsomest cafes in Paris.

Picaud went to the capital and under a suitable disguise obtained work as a waiter in Loupain's establishment. Fellow servants there were Guilhem Solari and Gervais Chaubard, who, with Loupain, had denounced Picaud in 1807. The pretended waiter was not long in bringing his vengeance to a consummation. Chaubard was the first victim of his wrath. His body, pierced by a knife, was found on one of the bridges over the Seine. Loupain was disgraced, reduced to penury and finally stabbed to death in the Tuileries gardens. Solari was poisoned and died in frightful convulsions.

But speedy retribution overtook the implacable avenger. One night Picaud was seized, bound and borne to an abandoned quarry. In the darkness a terrible voice said:

"Picaud, what name are you passing under now? Are you still the priest Baldini or the waiter Prosper? You wished for revenge. You have sold yourself to the powers of hell. Ten years you have given to the pursuit of three wretches you should have spared. Me you dragged down to perdition. The diamond by which you bribed me was my destruction. I killed him who cheated me. I was arrested, condemned to the galleys and escaped only after years of torture. My one thought has been vengeance on the priest Baldini. You are in my power. Do you know me? I am Antoine Allut. How much will you pay for bread and water?"

"I have no money," groaned Picaud.

"You have sixteen millions. These are my conditions: I will give you something to eat twice a day, but for each meal you must pay me 25,000 francs."

However, the cupidity of the prisoner proved stronger than his hunger. He underwent terrible suffering without any signs of yielding until his captor, goaded to fury at the prolonged obstinacy, threw himself upon Picaud and stabbed him to death.—Bookman.

A Thackeray Story.

A correspondent of London Notes and Queries contributes this anecdote of Thackeray:

Thackeray once desired to succeed Cardwell as M. P. for the city of Oxford and when returning from his canvass said: "What do you think, Cardwell! Not one of your constituents ever heard of me and my writings." He prefaced "constituents" with a strongish adjective.

Strange, if true. They must have been starving in the midst of plenty.

A Straight Tip.

Johnnie (to new visitor)—So you are my grandma, are you? Grandmother—Yes, Johnnie. I'm your grandma on your father's side. Johnnie—Well, you're on the wrong side, you'll find out!—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Horrible.

"That was an awful disaster. There was only one survivor. Isn't that terrible?"

"Fearful. What a bore he'll be!"—Cleveland Leader.

Disenchanted.

"Do you believe in the superhuman?"

"I used to, but I don't any more."

"Why?"

"I married him."—Chicago Record Herald.

No man knows the weight of another man's burden.—Pliny.

Sale of School and Other State Lands

STATE OF MINNESOTA, State Auditor's Office.

St. Paul, April 19, 1909.

Notice is hereby given that on the day and date and at the time and place herein stated below in this notice, in the office of the county auditor of the respective county named in the State of Minnesota, I will offer for sale the following described unsold state lands, and the following described state lands, which have reverted to the state by reason of the non-payment of interest will also be then and there offered for resale. Fifteen per cent of the purchase price and interest on the unpaid balance from the date of sale to June 1st, 1910, must be paid at the time of the sale. The balance of the purchase money can be paid at any time, in whole or in part, within forty years of the time of the sale; the rate of interest on the unpaid balance of the purchase money will be four per cent per annum, payable in advance on June 1st of each year, provided the principal remains unpaid for ten years; but if the principal is paid before the expiration of ten years from the date of the sale the rate of interest on the unpaid balance of the purchase money will be five per cent per annum; interest is payable in advance on June 1st of each year.

Holders of certificates on which the interest payments are in default can have their certificates reinstated on payment, before the sale, of the interest in full to date and the penalties thereon, when the lands covered thereby will be withdrawn from sale.

All mineral rights are reserved by the state. All sales made will be subject to the provisions of Chapter No. 299 of the General Laws of 1905.

SAMUEL G. IVERSON,
State Auditor.

RED LAKE COUNTY.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Whereas Default Has Been Made in the payment of the sum of Two Hundred and twenty and 22-100 Dollars, which is due at the date of this notice, upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by William J. Kelley, a widower, mortgagor, to Peoples State Bank of Thief River Falls, Minnesota, a corporation, mortgagee, bearing date the 27th day of October, A. D., 1906, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota on the 7th day of November, 1906, at 8:30 o'clock a. m., in book 31 of mortgages, on page 301; and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof, and that there is due on said mortgage the sum of Two Hundred twenty and 22-100 Dollars ($220.22), at the date hereof to which should be added unpaid taxes, if any,

Now Therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage viz: All that tract or parcel of land lying and being in the County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota and described as lot numbered thirty-six (36) in block numbered eight (8) of Knox's Addition to Red Lake Rapids, now a part of the City of Thief River Falls, Minnesota, according to the plat thereof on file and of record in the office of the Register of Deeds within and for the County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Red Lake County at the front door of the Post Office in the City of Thief River Falls in said County and State on Saturday the 17th day of July A. D., 1909, at one o'clock p. m., on that day at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay the said indebtedness of Two hundred and twenty and 22-100 Dollars ($220.22) and taxes, if any, on said premises, and Twenty five Dollars ($25.00) as attorneys fees as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the date of sale as provided by law.

Men Past Fifty in Danger

Men past middle life have found comfort and relief in Foley's Kidney Remedy, especially for enlarged prostate gland, which is very common among elderly men. L. E. Morris, Dexter Ky., writes: "Up to a year ago my father suffered from kidney and bladder trouble and physicians pronounced it enlargement of the prostate gland and advised an operation. On account of his age we were afaraid he could not stand it and I recommended Foley's Kidney Remedy, and the first bottle relieved him, and after taking the second bottle he was no longer troubled with this complaint." Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of One hundred sixty-two and no-100 Dollars, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain Mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Harry M. Swensen, a single man, Mortgagor, to B. T. Randall, Mortgagee, bearing date the 10th day of February, 1906, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Red Lake, and State of Minnesota, on the 23rd day of February, 1906, at 8:00 o'clock a. m., in book 13, of Mortgages, on page 273.

And Whereas, The said B. T. Randall, the Mortgagee and Holder of said Mortgage, has duly elected and does hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said Mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, under the terms and conditions of said Mortgage and the power of sale therein contained; and whereas there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable at the date of this notice the sum of Two thousand eight hundred ninety-three and 05-100 Dollars, and whereas the said power of sale has become operative, and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said Mortgage, or any part thereof;

Now, Therefore, Notice is Hereby Given, That by virtue of the power of sale contained in said Mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said Mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said Mortgage, viz:

That part of the south-west quarter of Section Seven (7) in Township One-hundred fifty-two (152) north of Range Forty-three (43) West of the 5th Principal Meridian, that lies south and east of the Great Northern Railroad, containing 127 acres more or less, in Red Lake County and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Red Lake County, at the front door of the Post-office in the City of Red Lake Falls in said County and State, on the 22nd day of June, 1909, at 9:00 o'clock a. m., of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of $2893.05, and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and Twenty-five Dollars, Attorney's fees, as stipulated in and by said Mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

ROADS MAY BE COMBINED

Another Rumor That the South Shore and the Soo Will Be Merged.

Canadian Pacific May Run its Through Trains by Way Thief River Falls.

Sometime ago the report was sent out to the effect that the Duluth and South Shore road would be merged with the Soo and the Canadian Pacific would run through trains through Thief River Falls and over the new cut-off to Duluth and then go over the South Shore line to Eastern Canada. This would make a much shorter route for the Canadian Pacific and would go through a country that would yield much traffic. The following taken from the Duluth Herald would indicate that there is considerable truth in the rumor:

There is a quiet rumor in Northwestern railroad circles that one feature of the plans of the Soo railroad is the taking over of the operation of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic railway, and that the officers of that railroad will be transferred from Marquette to Duluth, where some of the offices of the company are at the present time. There is another story to the effect that the line of the South Shore will be double-tracked in order to enable the Canadian Pacific, the Soo and and Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic, to handle its coast to coast business. As to the taking over of the management of the South Shore by the Soo line, there is some credence given the story by practical railroad men. There has been a persistent rumor for some time that the management of the Soo and the South Shore roads would be concentrated, and that some official at the head of the lake would have the management for the two roads at least at this point. The Head of the Lakes is one of the most important terminal points for both the Soo and the Wisconsin Central, now known as the Chicago division of the Soo. With the development in the traffic affairs of the Canadian Pacific railroad, with its acquirement of more railroad mileage in the United States, it is not illogical to suppose that the concentration of management of its Head of the Lakes terminals will be brought about.

Montreal, June 5.— It is announced that work on the new connecting link of the Canadian Pacific railway, between Thief River Falls, Minn., and Duluth, which will connect the Canadian Pacific-Soo Line with the South Shore & Atlantic, will be rushed to completion. The new line, it is figured will cut 200 miles off the present shortest route between the Atlantic and Pacific.

May Was Cold.

The month of May just passed has offered a little of almost every kind of weather that it was possible for the weather man to hand out without infringing on summer's monopoly of thunder and hail storms. The month was cold—colder by 2.7 degrees than the mean temperature of this locality, counting back for thirty-nine years. It was likewise cloudy, there having been eleven days when the sun did not appear at all and eleven more when he merely said "Good Morning" and went back. Nine days were bright and sunny.

To state that the movement of the wind in May was 11,660 miles makes people feel like nailing down their belongings, if they want them to remain in place. However, by reducing these figures to their lowest terms, it is found that the average hourly velocity was 15.7 and the maximum 43 miles an hour.

Every one knows there has been a deficiency in the temperature of late, but few realize that this deficiency has accumulated a meteorological total of 274 degrees in the hole since the first of April.

Hagen Promoted.

Wm. Hagen a former mail clerk of the St. Vincent line, afterwards for five years on the St. Paul-Grand Forks run recently transferring to the western division, has been appointed official printer for the 12th division, a new railway mail service divison just created. He was a visitor in the city this morning enroute to Thief Rive Falls, where he owns a farm.—Crookston Times.

BALL GAME ON SUNDAY

Thief River Falls Declared to be the Winners of the Game.

An Unfortunate Affair That Marred the Game is Greatly Regretted.

The ball game played Sunday afternoon at the fair grounds in this city between Fosston and Thief River Falls had rather an unfortunate ending. The game was an exciting one throughout and at the end of the last half of the ninth inning stood three to one in favor of Fosston. By a series of safe hits Thief River Falls succeeded in getting three men on bases and had but one man out. Nason knocked out a safe two base hit which brought home two scores and thus resulted in making a tie game. Hallet tried to steal from third base to home, but was caught, and he claims that the Fosston catcher struck him a blow in the back of the neck with a ball, and this resulted in an exchange of blows between the two. Both are White Earth Indians and there is said to have been some feeling of long standing between the two players. Other spectators at once rushed into the diamond and it looked for a while as if there would be a free for all fight, but the cooler heads prevailed and no one sustained any injury. Fosston refused to play out the game and of course there was nothing for the umpire to do but declare the game won by Thief River Falls, although it would have proved much more satisfactory to all the spectators to have seen the game decided upon its merits. The affair was a most unfortunate one and it is to be hoped that it will never be repeated on the ball grounds in this city.

James Farr returned last week from his trip to Eastern Canada. He reports having had an excellent time and enjoyed the trip a great deal.

RELIEF FOR SETTLERS

Congressman Steenerson Will See That None of the Settlers Will Lose Their Land.

Bill Introduced Extending the Time of Payment for the Land.

The following letter received by U. S. Commissioner Wilhelm Michelet will be of much interest to settlers on the eleven towns and explains all matters very fully:

Mr. Wilhelm Michelet,
Thief River Falls Minn.,

My Dear Sir:- Yours of the 25th of May received.

The reason for the action of the Secretary of the Interior in making the demand for the payment of those in arrears is that a large number of settlers who made the first payment have abandoned their claims and failed to make any further payments and there is no way to clear the record of those entries except for the Secretary of the Interior to declare a forfeiture by re-offering the land for sale. The forfeiture, however, is not completed until the land is actually re-offered for sale. For the relief of those who are occupying their land and who desire to make proof and payment but who are unable to do so, I have this day introduced a bill which provides "That entrymen on lands ceded under the Act of February 20, 1901, who have complied with the requirements of the homestead law as to residence and improvements, are hereby granted an extension until seven years after the date of their entries in which to make final proof and payment therefor."

This bill has been referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs but cannot be acted upon until Congress meets in December, I have, however, called at the Interior Department in the interest of the settlers on these lands and I have assurances that while this bill is pending no steps will be taken to perfect a forfeiture against lands embraced within its terms, that is, against lands upon which the settlers are actually occupying and cultivating. I am quite confident that some such legislation as provided for in the bill will be granted by Congress before the next session adjourns, and I shall do all that I possibly can in that behalf.

Very sincerely yours,
H. Steenerson.

Peddlers' License Law.

The Pedders License law passed by the last session of the legislature has been held unconstitutional by the District Court at Winona. The law was pushed by the retail dealers and was intended to put peddlers out of business but in making exceptions so as to permit merchants to carry on their order taking it is the opinion of the court that the law is defeated. F. R. Mudeking was charged with peddling without a license and began habeas corpus proceedings which resulted in Judge Snow ordering his discharge, holding that the act violates the constitution of Minnesota, and, so far as it relates to peddlers, is of no effect, and that therefore the detention of Mudeking is illegal. Judge Snow holds the act unconstitutional because it exempts from license all those who sell articles which they themselves grow or produce, and because it exempts permanent merchants who solicit orders for the sale of their goods in the county in which they reside and in adjoining counties from license, while all other persons offering goods for sale for future or present delivery must have a license.

A New Enterprise.

The Northern Fur and Wool company is the name of a new business enterprise that has been started up in Thief River Falls. Louis Krause, formerly of Park Rapids, is the proprietor of the new concern and he will devote his time in the future to the buying of wool, hides, fur, etc. For the present he will make his headquarters at O. Tessum's feed store and will be in Thief River Falls every Friday and Saturday, and the remaining days of the week he willl travel through he country.

The Housefly a Germ Carrier.

The State Entomologist has just issued Circular No. 17, showing how the house fly carries germs of typhoid, tuberculosis and other diseases, and what a menace it is in a dwelling house, both to children and adults. The circular is well illustrated and tells how to eliminate the fly or reduce its danger to the minimum. The same circular advises house-keepers how to keep their woolen and furs during the summer months away from the clothes moths and other insects which attack these fabrics.

This circular will be mailed free of charge to citizens of Minnesota who request it. Requests should be addressed to the Entomological Division of the Experiment Station, St. Anthony Park, Minnesota.

Circulars on other household pests, such as fleas, ants, bedbugs will be issued later.

Eclipse of Sun.

A total eclipse of the sun is sceduled to occur on June 17, visible in all portions of the United States except the extreme south.

The eclipse will be on this latitude about 6:10 in the morning and will continue until after sunset. At the time of the disappearance of the sun, the eclipse will cover about one-half the area of Old Sol.

The last total eclipse of the sun was witnessed shortly after the close of the civil war, in the year 1869. The eclipse will be remembered by many citizens who yet speak of it as a queer experience.

The eclipse predicted for June 17 is to be total and will be a reproduction of the one in 1869. The occasion will afford a rare experience.

Marshall County Old Timer.

J. C. Craig was transient in the city this morning enroute from San Francisco to Warroad to visit his brother. Mr Craig is well remembered by the old timers of northern Polk and Marshall counties. He plastered most of the first houses in that territory. He is afflicted with a slight deafness, notwithstanding that there never was any sport or games but he was right there. He has been gone ten years, spending most of the time in the west. After a visit with his brother, he is going to Seattle to take in the fair.—Crookston Times.

Didn't Have Time.

A short time ago some men were engaged in putting up telegraph poles on some land belonging to an old farmer who disliked seeing his wheat tramped down. The men produced a paper by which they said they had leave to put poles where they pleased. The old farmer went back and turned a large bull into the field. The savage beast made after the men and the old farmer, on seeing them running from the field, shouting at the top of his voice: "Show him the paper — Elk City(Kan.) Sun.

Lindquist Got His

At the meeting of the board of county commissioners held last Friday, County Commissioner Lindquist succeeded in making a bigger fool of himself than usual. It seems that an item which appeared in a recent issue of the News to the effect that Mr. Lindquist had volunteered to take a trip to different towns in the state at the county's expense was not to his liking, and he accused County Commissioner Shaw and County Attorney Michelet of giving this information to the News. Messrs. Shaw and Michelet paid no attention for a considerable length of time to the insulting remarks Mr. Lindquist was making but with Mr. Shaw patience at last ceased to be a virtue and he told Mr. Lindquist in good plain queen's English some things that gentlmen did not like to hear. In Red Lake Falls they have about as little respect for Lindquist as they have in Thief River Falls (only they don't dare to come out in the open about it) and Mr. Shaw was privately congratulated by a number of the citizens of that place upon the deserve rebuke he gave to Lindquist.

An Attractive Display.

John F. Brown, manager of the hardware department of the Langseth Mercantile company, has arranged a handsome display of sporting goods in the show window of the hardware department which is attracting the attention of all the sportsmen of the city. There are all kinds of mounted game in natural surroundings and an artistic display of sporting goods. The work is very artisticly done and Mr. Brown is in receipt of many compliments.

Jim Hamlin, editor of the Bricelyn Sentinel, gets off the following, and you don't have to believe it unless you want to: "A grade teacher at Winnibago, after having a medical examination in her room recently, wrote the following to the parents of a certain little boy: 'Your boy Charles shows signs of astigastigmatism. Will you please investigate and take steps to correct it?' To which she received a note in reply saying: 'I don't understand exactly what Charles has been doing, but I have whipped him good and hard tonight and you can whallop him tomorrow, and that ought to help some. I think both of us can lick it out of him.' "

RESULT OF THE DECISION

White Earth Indian Land Dealers Interested in Brunette Case.

All of the Parties Interested in Case Well Known in Thief River Falls.

Detroit Quiver: Last Monday Judge M. D. Taylor handed down a decision in the Mary Brunette case, which he has had under consideration since it was tried at the special term of court last January. The order is favorable to Mary Brunette, and the decision is so sweeping in its extent that under similar evidence large numbers of the land sales made by Chippewa Indians may be set aside by the procecutions of suits. Judge Taylor holds that Mary Brunette is incapable of making such a deal as she attempted, and also unfitted from business experience to care for the property under contract.

The suit was brought by Geo. K. Fargo and C. A. Baker, bankers, at Ogema, against the Nichols Chisholm Lumber Co., to recover $9,000 on a due bill given to Mary Brunette and assigned to the plaintiffs. Miss Brunnette intervened, as did also May-shuck-e-ge-shig, her grandfather. The lumber company answered that it had $10,500 of somebody's money, and was ready to pay it over to the rightful owner. This left the case to be determined upon the evidence in the land deal between the plaintiffs and the intervenors.

The history of the transaction is as follows: Some two or three years ago Mary's grandparents, who do not understand English, gave her a deed to 80 acres of land, provided she would take care of them as long as they lived. She sold the timber on the land to the Nichols-Chisholm Lumber Co. for $15,000, receiving $4,500 in cash and a due bill for $10,500. Mr. Baker owned an interest in a two-story brick business block in Thief River Falls, and getting the consent of the other owners proposed to trade the business property, valued at $15,000, to Miss Brunnette for her due bill. There were two mortgages on the building, aggregating $6000. The trade was finally made by Mr. Fargo, assisted by Mrs. Jennie Ledeboer, a highly educated and intelligent Indian woman, of White Earth, and friend of Miss Brunette. Contracts were drawn and signed. Miss Brunette, pending the adjustment of turning over the proceeds of the due bill by the lumber company, received $281.13 for two months' rent of the building. She afterward decided not to complete the deal by making the deed, and the suit was brought.

The evidence showed that Mr. Fargo, Mrs. Ledeboer and Miss Brunette went to Thief River, looked over the property, agreed as to the terms and made the deal, Miss Brunette giving an order on the lumber company for $1,000 as a cash payment to bind the bargain. The company refused to honor the order without the consent of the girl's grand parents. They were sent for and came to the home of Mrs. Ledeboer, at White Earth. There they met Fargo and Mary, and having the matter explained to them by Mrs. Ledeboer, who speaks Chippewa and English fluently, gave their consent and joined in an order to the lumber company for $9,000, which the mortgage of $6,000 equalled the price of the Thief River property.

Afterward Miss Burnette refused to accept a deed and the lumber company refused to honor the joint order.

The court holds that the purchase of the property was unwise, improvident and against her interest for the reason that she is not competent to handle and manage the property, and orders that upon the return of the $281.13 and interest, which she had received as rental for the building, the order against the due bill in favor of Baker and Fargo be adjuded void.

To Hold Auction Sales.

Ole C. Brenna, the auctioneer, has rented the Crocker building at the corner of La Bree avenue and Second street and will here after hold auction sales every Saturday afternoon and evening. Farmers and others having goods that they desire to sell are requested to bring them in to Mr. Brenna and he will sell the same, charging a small commission for his work. He already has a large number of goods in the building which will be sold at the sale on Saturday of this week.

The county division promoters do not need to make any campaign in this part of the country, if there is more districting of the county. There is a large percentage of the people up this way that are opposed to any removal or fighting over the county seat, but they want a fair representation on that board of County Commissioners, and they are going to try and get it either one way or the other.—Sunbeam.

Married Saturday.

Conrad N. Erickson, junior member of the firm of I. L. Erickson & Son, proprietors of the E. & E. Clothing store, was united in marriage last Saturday evening to Miss Pauline Lind, of Brainerd. The groom is a well known, popular and energetic young business man of this city who has a large circle of friends here. The bride was formerly one of the teachers in the Thief River Falls public schools and this year was employed in East Grand Forks. She has many friends here who are extending congratulations. Mr. and Mrs. Erickson have commenced housekeeping in the Nyhus house on North Main Avenue.

Good Profit from Sheep.

Peter Engelstad does something else besides draw the largest checks from the Thief River Falls creamery. On Monday he brought a load of 1000 pounds of wool to town for which he received $227.50. The wool was sheared from 150 sheep which he keeps upon his farm and Mr. Engelstad says that it was the largest sum of money he ever received for any one load of produce from his farm. By the sale of lambs and a few sheep, Mr. Engelstad has realized a profit of about $500 from his flock of sheep during the past year. This might be considered pretty good when it is taken into consideration that sheep raising is only a side line with Peter.

ASSOCIATION IS ORGANIZED

Retail Merchants of This Section Get Together in Thief River Falls.

Hanson & Barzen Milling Company Tender the Visitors an Elaborate Banquet.

At a meeting of merchants from north of here on the Soo and Great Northern lines, held in Thief River Falls on Sunday, the Northern Minnesota Retail Merchants association was organized. There were between thirty and forty merchants in attendance and it is expected that later on other merchants of this section will join the association. The following officers were elected.

President.—Isreal Sjoberg, Roseau.
Vice Pres.—Peter Lofgren, Polan.
Secr'y—W. C. Addy, Strandquist.
Treasurer.—A. J. Hunter, Orleans.
Directors—Fred Blodgett, Warroad;
And. Vik, Bronson;
C. E. Nelson, Viking;
Olaf Hildahl, Greenbush,
Knute Nelson, Middle River;

The object of the association, as previously stated, is to form a closer relationship between the retail dealers in this section of the state in order to buy goods cheaper and in large quantities and thus be in a position to undersell the catalogue houses in this section.

The next meeting of the association will be at Warroad on Saturday and Sunday, June 26 and 27. An effort is to be made to secure a special train from Thief River Falls to Warroad on Sunday so that the residents of this city as well as the merchants can have an opportunity of visiting Warroad.

On Sunday evening the Hanson & Barzen Milling company entertained the members of the Northern Minnesota Retail Merchants Association, the traveling men who make their headquarters here and a number of citizens of the city at an elaborate banquet at the Hotel Ogahmah. The affair was a most pleasan one and a success in every way, and the Hanson & Barzen Milling company was voted to be royal entertainers as well as Mine Host Robbecke an excellent provider for the inner man. W. B. Fuller acted as toastmaster and short addresses were given by a number of guests and several musical selections rendered After the banquet had been served, the guests adjourned to the Antlers Club rooms where an enjoyable social evening was spent.

The Great American Railway.

D. R. W. Williams, an elderly gentleman said to be 81 years of age, arrived in the city a week ago Monday and announced that he was locating a line of railroad from Chicago to the Pacific coast by way of Thief River Falls and Winnipeg. Since Mr. Williams' arrival several engineers and contractors have joined him here, and there has been much speculation as to what developments would follow. Most people were of the opinion that Mr. Williams was backed up by one of the old railway lines, but to a meeting of business men held in the Antlers Club rooms Tuesday evening Mr. Williams explained that the project was a new one and that an incorporation known as the Great American Railway was to build the line. He wanted a free right-of-way through the city and says that his line is to be built on the co-operative plan. Farmers will be asked to give a right-of-way and do the grading, taking stock in the new enterprise as pay. Mr. Williams may push his line to a successful finish in this manner, but there are those who have doubts.

Base Ball Sunday.

The Red Lake Falls base ball club just recently organized and said to be a world beater— will be here Sunday

The home team propose to make the visiting nine feel like Lindquist running for office in Pennington county. Every one in the city is invited to come out to the fair grounds.

Ives Elected Treasurer.

A special meeting of the board of county commissioners held on Tuesday for the purpose of electing a successor to the late O. T. Tanberg, and H. E. Ives was elected on the first ballot, securing three votes. Arthur Lizze, of Red Lake Falls, secured one vote. Mr. Ives was requested to furnish a security company bond in the sum of $50,000, for which they will pay the premium, and when this filed he will assume the duties of the office.

A Large Shipment.

On Tuesday the Thief River Falls Co-Operative Creamery association shipped 11,000 pounds of butter for the Alaska trade. This amount of butter was made last week and is the largest output in any one week for the local creamery, but it is expected before the summer is over that this record will be smashed. The local creamery is getting to the front in great shape as is also all other creameries in this section.

OLD CADIZ.

Once Richer Than London, Its Chief Business Now Is Salt.

Of Cadiz, De Amicis said, "It is best described by writing the word 'white' with a white pencil on blue paper."

Under the noonday sun, seen from the lofty Torre de Vigia, the mediaeval watchtower in the center of the city, its buildings are dazzling and almost encircled by the blue sea. A long, narrow isthmus like the stem of a pipe leads from San Fernando, on the mainland. Cadiz rests on the bowl of the pipe—yes, a pure white meerschaum without coloring, though 3,000 years old.

Americans may justly regard this now decadent place with compassion, because it grew to greatness by its commerce with the new world—while Spain ruled the Americas—and then fell away into decay on the loss of the western possessions.

It was great before Rome was founded. And as late as 1770 it was wealthier than London. Commerce has ever been its life. Today its chief business is the production of salt for export. This humble staple, evaporated in countless shallow lagoons in wide spreading marshes, still keeps Cadiz in touch with the new world, as most of the salt is shipped to South America.

The natives pronounce Cadiz with "z" silent and "a" very broad—"Ca-di." That has always been its name, with slight variations. Its Phoenician and Tyrian founders called it Gadir, a castle of fastness. The Romans called it Gades. The Arabs had it Kadis.—Detroit News-Tribune.

HER GREETING.

In Spite of the Old Lady's Care She Managed to Blunder.

The daughters of a certain charming old lady in Washington are frequently much upset by the odd social blunders of their parent, whose failings in this respect are, however, more than offset by her kindliness of manner.

Among the callers to the house of this family was a Mrs. Farrell, who, after some years of widowhood, again married, this time becoming the wife of a Mr. Meggs.

"If you love us, mother," said one of the girls when the newly married lady's card had been brought in one afternoon shortly after the completion of the honeymoon, "don't make the mistake of calling her Mrs. Farrell."

The mother solemnly promised to commit no faux pas and as she went downstairs was heard to repeat to herself, "Meggs—Meggs—Meggs—not Farrell."

At the conclusion of the call the old lady was met at the head of the stairs by the daughter, who at once observed an ominous expression of despondency on the old lady's face.

"Oh, mother," she exclaimed, "surely you didn't"—

"No, Clara," replied the mother emphatically, "I didn't. I was so careful to call her Mrs. Meggs all the time."

"Well, what's the trouble, then?"

"Oh, dear!" murmured the kindly old lady, as she sank into a chair. "It was awful of me, I know! When I greeted her I said: 'I am glad to see you, Mrs. Meggs. How is Mr. Farrell?'"—Harper's Weekly.

His Little Joke.

It was just two years after their wedding.

"George," she said romantically as she gazed at the fantastic pictures the red coals formed, "do you remember our courting days?"

George laughed teasingly.

"No, my dear. I do not."

She looked up with a hurt expression.

"George, do you mean to sit there and say you do not remember our courting days? Why, I am shocked at your coldness."

"No, dear; I do not remember our courting days because only night watchmen have to do their courting in the daytime. But I do remember our courting nights, and they were delightful, pet."

But she said he was too horrid for anything.—Chicago News.

Delaware's Circular Boundary.

The northern boundary line of Delaware is circular because the charter given to Penn states that Pennsylvania was to be "bounded on the east by the Delaware river from twelve miles distant north of Newcastle town until the three and fortieth degree of north latitude" and that the southern boundary was to be "a circle drawn at twelve miles distant from the town of Newcastle northward and westward until the fortieth degree of north latitude and then by a straight line westward." This makes a circular boundary for northern Delaware unavoidable, and the facts above set forth explain a geographical curiosity that has puzzled many students.

Domestic Economy.

"Nora, was that the coal man I saw making love to you yesterday evening?"

"Yes, ma'am, but I 'ope, ma'am"—

"Does he love you very much, Nora?"

"'E says 'e does, ma'am."

"Devotedly?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Well, you tell him that unless he gives us better weight than he has been doing we shall get our coal elsewhere."—London Illustrated Bits.

Within Her Means.

A pretty little girl of three years was in a drug store with her mother. Being attracted by something in the showcase, she asked what it was. The clerk replied, "That is a scent bag."

"How cheap!" replied the little girl. "I'll take two."—Lippincott's.

ANSWERED THE LETTER.

The Way a Brooklyn Politician Once Won a Bet.

There is, or was a few years ago, a neatly framed letter hanging in the consulting room of a Brooklyn doctor which he found in his mail one winter morning. It ran as follows:

Princeton, Jan. 12, 1898.

Dear Sir—I cheerfully accede to your request and acknowledge the compliment paid to my wife and daughter by bestowing their names upon your own twin daughters, and I hope these children may be spared to be of constant comfort to their parents. Sincerely yours,

GROVER CLEVELAND.

The young doctor's brain whirled. Being a bachelor and having no acquaintance with the former president, he could not understand it at all.

The mystery was solved when a friend of the doctor's, a Brooklyn politician, met him. The politician had made a bet with a cynical acquaintance that any American statesman would personally reply to a courteous letter from the humblest of his countrymen. The cynic took him up and named Grover Cleveland. The terms of the bet were that the answer to a letter mailed on Jan. 8 must be received before Jan. 25. Signing the young doctor's name, the politician wrote of how his marriage had been blessed by twin daughters. Would it be asking too much for an autograph letter to frame which the sweet twins could look upon and read when they grew up and cherish ever afterward?

Mr. Cleveland courteously and promptly answered the letter, and the politician won his bet.—New York Tribune.

CORRECT SPELLING.

There Was a Time When It Was Not Considered Important.

The art of spelling words correctly is of comparatively recent repute. Time was when men and women did not care, but wrote ahead without regard to strict orthography. Mme. de Sevigne, for instance, never learned the proper way to write her name, while it was remarked by Mme. de Maintenon that at the College of St. Cyr much precious time was wasted in learning how to spell.

It remained, however, for the Empress Eugenie in 1868 at Compiegne to put to a practical test the spelling standard which obtained even among the highest literary authorities. Thus under the pretext of a theme proposed to them for an examination a number of French academicians took down from dictation a composition by Prosper Merimee. Not one "immortal" wrote without mistake.

As to the empress, she could not understand so many faults being made until it was conveyed to her that she herself from the same dictation was responsible for no less than ninety. The emperor, again, made sixty. It is but fair to add, however, that the dictation was compiled expressly with a view to focusing the difficulties not only of spelling, but grammar.—Harper's Weekly.

A Versatile Parisian.

A quaint Parisian character was Mlle. Montansier, an actress, who, while on the stage one night, heard Marie Antoinette say, "How good that cabbage soup they are eating smells!" The actress took a bowl round to the royal box and that night supped with Marie Antoinette, an honor to which the highest nobles in France dared not aspire, thence in due course becoming manager of the fetes at Versailles. Later she was a sort of queen of the Palais Royal and sent to the war a band of actors who performed farces between two battles. She obtained 8,000,000 francs from the revolutionary government, almost married Napoleon—or so Barras said—and had her last love affair when she was eighty-five. When she died she bequeathed all her creditors to the king of France.

A Heroic Slave.

There was a humble slave in the palace of the Caliph Haroun al Raschid. The caliph had in his audience chamber twenty rare vases, and it was written in the laws of Bagdad that he who should have the misfortune to break one of these would pay the penalty with his life. This slave one day broke a vase. He was instantly seized, tried and condemned to death. But the caliph had no sooner pronounced sentence on him than the slave turned, and, walking calmly to the other nineteen vases, with one sweep of the arm destroyed them all.

"Wretch," the caliph thundered, "why have you done that barbarous deed?"

"To save the lives of nineteen of my fellow countrymen," the doomed slave replied.

Munich an Artistic Leader.

Munich is in great part a creation of the nineteenth century. Yet when one sees how artfully and lovingly she has woven the new about whatever remains of the old it is easy to understand why she has been Germany's artistic leader for the last hundred years and why such geniuses as Lenbach, Von Uhde, Schwanthaler, Orlando di Lasso and Richard Strauss have felt at home there.—Robert Haven Schauffler in Century.

The Desire For Appearances.

The Village Grocer (peevishly)—Look here, Aaron! What makes you put the big apples in the top of the bar'l? The Honest Farmer (cheerily)—What makes you comb that long scalp lock over your bald spot?—Puck.

Paid.

Miss Belle (warningly)—Sally, they used to tell me when I was a little girl that if I did not let coffee alone it would make me foolish. Sally (who owes her one)—Well, why didn't you?—Life.

Sale of School and Other State Lands

STATE OF MINNESOTA, State Auditor's Office.

St. Paul, April 19, 1909.

Notice is hereby given that on the day and date and at the time and place herein stated below in this notice, in the office of the county auditor of the respective county named in the State of Minnesota, I will offer for sale the following described unsold state lands, and the following described state lands, which have reverted to the state by reason of the non-payment of interest will also be then and there offered for resale. Fifteen per cent of the purchase price and interest on the unpaid balance from the date of sale to June 1st, 1910, must be paid at the time of the sale. The balance of the purchase money can be paid at any time, in whole or in part, within forty years of the time of the sale; the rate of interest on the unpaid balance of the purchase money will be four per cent per annum, payable in advance on June 1st of each year, provided the principal remains unpaid for ten years; but if the principal is paid before the expiration of ten years from the date of the sale the rate of interest on the unpaid balance of the purchase money will be five per cent per annum; interest is payable in advance on June 1st of each year.

Holders of certificates on which the interest payments are in default can have their certificates reinstated on payment, before the sale, of the interest in full to date and the penalties thereon, when the lands covered thereby will be withdrawn from sale.

All mineral rights are reserved by the state. All sales made will be subject to the provisions of Chapter No. 299 of the General Laws of 1905.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of Eight Hundred Seventy-nine and 03-100 Dollars, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Marit Hanson and Anders C. Hanson, her husband, Mortgagors, to Ezra C. Eshelby, Mortgagee, bearing date the 2nd. day of November, 1903, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on the 23rd. day of December, 1903, at 2:00 o'clock P. M., in book 29 of Mortgages, on page 274, and

Whereas, on the 30th day of June, 1906, a portion of the premises described in said mortgage, to-wit, commencing at the southwest corner of the southeast quarter of the northwest quarter of Section 28, in Township 154, Range 43, in Red Lake county, Minnesota: thence north along the west line of said forty a distance of 46 rods; thence east 19 rods to intersection with the west line of the Great Northern Co's right of way; thence southeasterly along the west line of said right of way to intersection with the south line of said forty a distance of about 50 rods; thence west along the south line of said forty to place of beginning, all in Red Lake county, Minnesota, was duly released from the lien and operation of said mortgage, and said mortgagee did on said date surrender said above described premises and agreed to hold and retain the residue and remainder of the premises described in said mortgage as security for the money remaining due on said mortgage, which said partial release of said mortgage bears date the 30th day of June, 1906, and was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Red Lake county, Minnesota, on the 10th day of July, 1906, at 11:30 o'clock a. m., in book 32 of Mortgages on page 325,

And Whereas no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, Therefore, Notice is Hereby Given, That by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises not released and remaining as security for the money remaining due on said mortgage, and as described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

The South one-half (S. ½) of the north-east quarter (N.E.¼), the northwest quarter of the south-east quarter (N.W.¼ S. E.¼) and the northeast quarter of the southwest quarter (N. E. ¼ S. W. ¼) all in section fifteen (15), in township one hundred and fifty-three, (153) north of range forty-three, (43) west of 5th. P. M. in Red Lake county, Minnesota, and also

The Southeast quarter (S. E. ¼) of the northwest quarter (N.W.¼), (except a strip one hundred feet wide across said forty heretofore granted to A. Guthrie, Trustee, for railway right-of-way purposes, and also a strip four (4) rods wide on the south and west sides of said forty heretofore laid out for and now used as a public road.) (and excepting the released premises above described) all in section twenty-eight, (28) township one hundred and fifty-four (154) north of range forty-three, (43) west of 5th. P. M. in Red Lake County, Minnesota, all in Red Lake county, and state of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Red Lake county at the front door of the Post-office, in the city of Red Lake Falls, in said county and state, on the 22nd day of June, 1909, at 9 o'clock a. m., of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of Eight Hundred Seventy-Nine and 03-100 Dollars, and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and Fifty Dollars, Attorney's fees, as stipulated in and by said Mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

Town Booming Helps

II.—The Head of the Table

A lot of quarrelsome Scottish chiefs used to quarrel because each wanted to sit at the head of the table. Some one hit on the plan of putting a round table in the room where they met, and each of them then imagined that he had the place of honor.

This arrangement worked splendidly until Rob Roy McGregor took a shy at it. After he had become sure of his power a banquet was being served to the chiefs at the round table.

When the servants brought in the roast McGregor shouted, "PUT IT AT THE HEAD OF THE TABLE!"

"But where is the head of the table?" asked the servant.

"THE HEAD OF THE TABLE IS WHERE THE M'GREGOR SITS."

The McGregor spirit is what this town needs. So far as we are concerned, this is the CENTER OF THE EARTH. If we're not proud of our town we should get a hustle on and make it a town to be proud of—MAKE IT THE MOST IMPORTANT PLACE ON THE MAP! Make it the chief place on the green earth in the eyes of its citizens.

James J. Hill is in favor of having only as many laws as we able to enforce. The idea is a fairly good one; but it would necessitate the wiping out of about all of the laws which have been passed for the purpose of curbing Mr. Rockeffelur's organization.

Acerding to a report of the United States census, it is stated that the mortality of the Indians from tuberculosis is undoubtedly far higher than that of either the whites or the negroes, although it is believed by careful investigators that the disease was entirely absent before the advent of the whites in America.

Hasn't the republican party of Minnesota enough sins to answer for without making T. B. Walker of Minneapolis, a United States senator? Should he be chosen to succeed Moses E. Clapp, we might well say that the republican party is lost. Mr. Walker cannot ask for the place by reason of party service for special fitness and would therefore undoubtedly have to fall back on the "barrel" for the necessary sinews with which to conduct his campaign.—Foley Independent.

Every time Gov. Johnson returns from a trip east or south it seems to be necessary for him to reiterate his statement that he will not again, no never, become a candidate for the office he now holds. The last denial is accompanied by a bill of particulars as to how it happened that he did not stand pat on his emphathic statement made before the convention of 1908 was held and he really means it this time and that the convention of 1910 will not even consider his name. He doth protest too much. Brainard Dispatch.

The law which provides that ten per cent of the money collected for liquor licenses except in cities of the First, Second and Third class shall be paid into county treasury will hardly hold water if any one decided to test it. It is class legislation and violates the constitution if any law ever did. Under the provisions of Chapter 450 the small cities and villages have to give up ten per cent of their license money while the cities of over 10,000 do not. This bill was put through by the liquor interests to stop the argument that the county pays the bills therefore should vote on license, but they could not get it through without including the six or eight larger cities of the state and this has evidently made the law bad.—Fergus Falls Journal.

A COW TO THE ACRE.

Bulletin No. 242 issued by the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture is entitled "An Example of Model Farming." It is devoted to a description of methods employed on a fifteen-acre farm upon which roughage is raised for thirty head of stock, seventeen of which are cows in milk. The little farm is owned by Mr. J. D. Detrich and is located at Flourtown, Pa. Parties who are skeptical about the possibility of keeping one cow per acre and supplying her with all roughage consumed, should send for this bulletin and study it carefully. It is impossible for us to review it in detail, but we glean the following facts which are of particular interest: The farm had a mortgage of $7, 200 upon it when Mr. Detrich bought it in 1881. The first year he lacked $46 of paying expenses. During the next six years the mortgage was paid. The soil was so poor that it did not keep the two cows and one horse kept upon it in 1881. No commercial fertilizers have been used. No manure is wasted, either liquid or solid. The owner had had no experience in farming when he took hold of the place, having been in the ministry. He was a student, however. He uses soiling crops of rye peas, oats, clover and corn instead of pasture. The cows remain in the barn the year round; there is not even a yard. The cows are healthy and strong in spite of ther lack of exercise. The annual income from milk sold is about $2,400 a year with an expense for grain of $625.

One man or boy does all work except at haying time and during silo filling. The cows are not only pure bred, but they are well bred. There are two round silos on this farm each ten feet in diameter and thirty-four feet high. All roughage is cut finely into one-quarter inch lengths. At least two crops a year are harvested from most of the fields. The remarkable yields on this farm are due to the intelligent use of manure and good tillage. Above all, the owner is a student and studies his business, and he knows just what he is doing as well as what his cows are doing.—Northwestern Agriculturist.

A small feed of shelled corn and oats will be a good thing for calf and colt as soon as they get on to the trick of eating it. The combination is a good bone builder and muscle former.

Should the family clock quit business and the hands go on a strike, the trouble can usually be arbitrated by the application to the working parts of a little kerosene with a broom splint or turkey feather.

Depends a good deal on the man. One will take a hoe and make a living for himself and family from an acre or two, while another will be given a clear title to a fine quarter section farm and be busted in a dozen years.

The other day a trapper living along the Mississippi dug a trench six feet deep and forty feet long to capture five wolf cubs, from which he realized a bounty of $10. It is not likely that this fellow could have been induced to do a job of like magnitude on a city street for love or money.

Very little water will need to be given the newly set fruit or shade tree if the soil within a radius of three or four feet from the trunk is kept mellow, so that it will not pack and bake. There is abundant moisture in the earth for the needs of the tree, except in very dry seasons, and this can be made available in the manner suggested.

In these days, when butter is worth 30 cents a pound, it behooves a fellow to provide a substitute which will answer the same purpose and not cost so much. Corn, consisting as it does so largely of fat forming elements, is the substitute which will be available in most cases, and it may be fed as meal, cracked or whole. In small quantities oilmeal is also an excellent substitute.

Large tracts of the cutover pine lands of northern Wisconsin are being cleared for the growing of peas for large canning factories. The soil has been found to be adapted to the growing of this legume, which does not rob but, rather, enriches it, while the somewhat cool weather during the growing season gives a fine texture and quality to the product.

The ugly burdock, which often mars the looks of back yard or alley, may be exterminated by cutting the root of the old plants below the crown with a spade and by hoeing over the little chaps. Patches of nettle, which belong to the root stalk family, should not only be kept from going to seed, but the entire root system should be dug from the soil, allowed to dry in the sun and burned. If there are small patches of quack grass in the garden they should be handled in the same way, as any joint of root left in the ground will start growing.

The economic prostration of the inhabitants of the wheat growing sections of India is due in part to variable and uncertain rains, with ensuing drought and famine, and as largely to the very crude and primitive methods which are still followed in the handling of the soil and harvesting of the crop. In the former operations the crudest kind of plows are used, which barely scratch the ground, the grain is thrashed by the feet of oxen and separated from the chaff by hand winnowing in the wind. So low is the yield that in fat years there is not enough grain produced to tide the people over seasons of drought.

The richest group of people in the world are said to be the 926 remaining members of the Osage Indian tribe, who live seventy-five miles north of McAlester, Okla. Each individual has a clear title to 660 acres of the richest farming land, which is valued at $100 per acre without regard to the mineral wealth which it may contain, fat bank accounts and a pro rata share in the $8,000,000 fund which is held in trust by the government. It is said that, in addition to being fortunate in the property to which they have fallen heirs, they have been industrious and thrifty and that it is in quite a measure to this fact that their unusual prosperity is due.

An investigation into the cost of eggs shipped from the Mississippi valley farm to the consumer in New York shows those who take toll in handling and the amount exacted to be as follows:

	Cents.
Paid to the farmer	15
Profit of the country store	0
Gross profit of the shipper	.75
Freight to New York	1.5
Gross profit to receiver	.5
Gross profit to jobber	1.25
Loss from candling	1.5
Gross profit or retailer	4.5
Cost to consumer	25

A glance at the items would seem to indicate that the retailer might well divide a bit with the country storekeeper and the farmer and consumer be no worse off.

A friend who has a pair of red squirrels making headquarters on his premises put a handful of peanuts on the porch the other day and retired to see what would happen. Soon one of them appeared and after a survey of the situation made off with the nuts one by one, burying each in a hole by itself, taking pains to pack the soil down firmly so as not to arouse the suspicion of the passerby. It was also noticed that the only nuts that were eaten on the spot were those of which the shell was cracked and would spoil quickly. The gray squirrel, found so often in native timber lots, follows a different plan from the one noted, usually hiding the nuts which he garners in the fall in holes in stumps or depressions at the roots of trees, often half a bushel or more in a place.

GIFT OF LANGUAGE.

Advantages of the Man Who Is Able to Talk Well.

There is no other one thing which enables us to make so good an impression, especially upon those who do not know us thoroughly, as the ability to converse well. A man who can talk well, who has the art of putting things in an attractive way, who can interest others immediately by his power of speech, has a very great advantage over one who may know more than he, but who cannot express himself with ease or eloquence.

You may be a good singer, a fine artist, you may have a great many accomplishments which people occasionally see or enjoy, you may have a very beautiful home and a lot of property which comparatively few people ever know about, but if you are a good converser every one you meet recognizes and appreciates your art. Everybody you converse with feels the influence of your skill and charm.

In other words, there is no accomplishment, no attainment, which you can use so constantly and effectively which will give so much pleasure to your friends as fine conversation. There is no doubt that the gift of language was intended to be a much greater accomplishment than the majority of us have ever made of it.—Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine.

PAPER AND CANVAS.

An Anecdote of Turner, the Great Landscape Painter.

In a book entitled "Stories of the English Artists" R. Davies and C. Hunt tell an interesting anecdote of Turner, the great landscape painter. He disliked to part with his pictures and when he sold one invariably wore a look of dejection and oppression. If a friend asked him what was the matter he would sorrowfully explain, "I've lost one of my children this week."

Once a rich Birmingham manufacturer, Gillott by name, introduced himself to the painter and stated that he had come to buy.

"Don't want to sell" or some such laconic rebuff was the answer.

The manufacturer then drew from his pocket a bundle of banknotes, about £5,000 worth.

"Mere paper," observed Turner, with grim humor, a little softened, however, and evidently enjoying the joke.

"To be bartered for mere canvas," replied the persistent Gillott, waving his hand at the "Building of Carthage" and its companions.

This tone of cool depreciation seemed to have a happy effect, and finally Gillott departed with some £5,000 worth of Turner's pictures.

A Strenuous Wooer.

"The Reminiscences of Bismarck" contains an account of his courtship. He was a young Prussian officer when he first met Johanna von Puttkamer, but he made application at once to her father for permission to pay his addresses. Aghast at Bismarck's proposal, the old gentleman did not absolutely decline it. Instead he wrote giving permission to pay a sort of "visit of inspection" at the Puttkamer home. Bismarck hastened to Reinfeld. The whole Puttkamer family was lined up to greet him. The father and mother glared at him solemnly, and Johanna herself stood between them, her eyes cast modestly downward. With the swift, whirlwind decision that secured Bismarck his later political triumphs he carried the situation by storm. Galloping up the driveway, he leaped from his horse, ran forward and flung his arms around Johanna, taking no heed of her scandalized parents and catching her to his breast and covering her blushing face with kisses. After that there could be no talk of "probation" or "waiting." The betrothal was necessarily an accepted fact.

A FARMER'S INSTITUTE.

One to Be Held in Thief River Falls on Tuesday the 15th of June.

Every Farmer in This Vicinity Should Be Sure to Attend.

A state farmers' institute will be held in Thief River Falls next Tuesday, June 15, and every farmer in this vicinity should be sure to make it a point to attend.

Prof. Wm. Robertson, of the Crookston School of Agriculture, will have charge of the Institute, and will speak on Clover, Rotation of Crop, Fruits and Vegetables, and General Agriculture.

Mrs. Ida E. Tilson, of West Salem, Wis., will take up the subjects of Poultry Raising and Household Economics.

Mr. O. Storvick, of the Dairy and Food Department, will speak on Dairying, Co-operative Creameries and the Care of Milk.

Supt. L. P. Harrington, of Crookston, will take up the subject of Rural Schools and the Industrial Contest.

Those four speakers will give an excellent program—one that will be of great interest to the men and women, the boys and girls.

Sessions Commence at 10 A. M. and 1:30 P. M. sharp.

The Red Lake County Agricultural Society has made a contract with the Chicago Amusement company, Harry I. Wisler, manager, for attractions for the county fair. The attractions this year will be far better than ever before, and include many daring and novel features.

There will be two balloon ascensions, one made by a monkey, who goes up, cuts himself lose from the baloon, and descends in a parachute. The other ascension is made by a man and a lion in a baloon and both descend in seperate parachutes.

Other attractions include a slide for life from the top of water tower across the Red Lake river, trapeese acts, contortion acts, acrobatic acts, etc. All of these attractions are to be free and there will also be the usual number of tent shows. The fair this year is going to be a bigger success than ever before and it is expected the attendance will be far greater.

Otto Ramstad finished the five year course at the Moorhead State Normal school last week and returned to this city on Saturday. He expects to go to the Wisconsin State University next fall.

DEATH OF O. T. TANDBERG

Pioneer and Highly Esteemed Resident of Red Lake County Passed Away.

Funeral Services Were Held on Monday and Largely Attended by Friends.

County Treasurer O. T. Tandberg died at a sanitorium in St. Paul last Thursday from the effects of an operation that had been performed upon him a few days previous for appendicitis. Nearly two years ago Mr. Tandberg suffered a stroke of paralysis from which he never fully recovered and it was while in the St. Paul sanitorium receiving treatment for this disease that it was discovered that he had appendictis, and the operation was decided as necessary. He apparantly recovered from the operation, but later had a sinking spell and death resulted.

Mr. Tandberg was one of the pioneer and highly esteemed residents of this section and held the confidence and respect of all who knew him intimately. He was born in Norway on the 30th of December, 1855, and removed to this country in 1870 with his parents, settling at Spring Grove, Huston county, Minnesota. He attended the village schools at Spring Grove, Darling's College at Rochester and finished his education at St. Olaf's College in Northfield. In 1883 he was married to Miss Julia Nelson and ten children have blessed this union, eight of whom are now living and are as follows: Ida, Emma, George, Theodore, Esther, Elmer, Alvin and Agnes.

Twenty-six years ago Mr. Tandberg became a resident of this section, settling upon a homestead west of Thief River Falls. For a number of years he was school teacher in Red Lake county, having taught schools in Thief River Falls, Red Lake Rapids and a number of country districts in this vicinity. He was one of the first members of the city council in Thief River Falls when it was organized as a city and for five times he was elected county treasurer of Red Lake county.

The funeral services were held Monday, a short service being held at the late residence of the deceased in Red Lake Falls on Monday morning, and conducted by the Rev. S. T. Palm, of St. Hilaire. The body was then taken to this city on the Great Northern and services were held in the Norwegian Lutheran Synod church, of which the deceased was one of the original members and for a number of years a trustee and secretary and also superintendent of the Sunday School. The funeral services here were conducted by the Rev. I. T. Aastad and were in both Norwegian and English.

The funeral was attended by a large number of friends of the deceased residing in Thief River Falls, St. Hilaire, Red Lake Falls and vicinity, and the following officials of Red Lake county acted as pall bearers: C. W. Johnson, L. A. Nelson, Wilhelm Michelet, S. A. Swanson, A. A. Letandrease and H. F. Anderson. The honorary pall bearers were: D. B. Bakke, R. Oen, N. S. Nelson, Ole Finsand, Lars Backe, E. Graslie, E. O. Gullingsrud, and Chris Granum, of Thief River Falls, and K. O. Gigstad, of St. Hilaire, and G. G. Fiseth, of Red Lake Falls. The remains were buried in Greenwood cemetery.

BIG DITCH ESTABLISHED

Germantown Ditch Largest Project Ever Undertaken By a County in the State.

Over One Million Yards of Dirt Will Have to Be Removed on This Ditch.

After a strenuous five days's session the board of county commissioners of Marshall county at Warren finally established county ditch No. 20, the contract for the construction of which will be let on the 25th day of June.

This is probably the biggest drainage ditch project ever undertaken by any county in the state. It is 58.15 miles in length and will require the removal of a total of 1,050,227 yards of dirt, a project that would stagger the average contractor. Along a considerable portion of the heaviest portion of the work there will be over 100 yards removed from every 100-foot station.

The ditch is known as the Germantown ditch and there will be a quarter of a mile of bridges required over it.

In addition to this ditch, the commissioners of Beltrami county have about concluded arrangements to have a 21 mile ditch from that county empty into it, offering Marshall county $6,000 for this privilege, and the proposition will without doubt be accepted, although it will require $10,000 aditional to build the Marshall county ditch large enough to take care of the additional water from Beltrami.

The total area to be drained will be immense, and some of the richest land in the state will be made fit for cultivation.

G. T. Almen, of Grand Forks, and G. A. Naplin were in the city Monday looking over the city with a view of establishing a business college here in the near future. Both are experienced men and while here met a number of business men who gave them a great deal of encouragement.

They expect to open the school here in August.

Young Man Killed.

Olaf Walfred, a nineteen year old young man living with his father on a farm four miles east of Warren, was Monday accidentally killed by the discharge of his gun, while pulling it towards him from the wagon. The young man was plowing in his father's fields.

Espying a wild goose, he went to the wagon nearby to get the gun when the accident above mentioned happened. The shot entered his breast, killing him almost instantly. The young man was popular among his mates and was very well liked in his neighborhood.

SHAW HAS RESIGNED

Cannot Spare Time to Devote to Duties of County Commissioner.

His Successor to be Elected by Mayor and Chairmen of Township Boards.

On Tuesday Daniel Shaw tendered his resignation as a member of the board of county commissioners. This action upon the part of Mr. has been contemplated for some time and is taken because Mr. Shaw feels that he cannot devote the time to the office that it requires. He has served in the capacity of commissioner for nearly five years and has rendered the county valuable service, and it is to be regretted that he will not longer consent to remain in the harness.

Mr. Shaw's successor will be elected by the chairman of the town boards from the towns of Norden, Sanders, North, Silverton, Clover Leaf, Goodridge, Reiner and Star and the Mayor of the city of Thief River Falls. In so far as we have been able to learn there are no candidates for the office. Several prominent citizens of Thief River Falls who have been requested to become candidates have refused to consider the matter and it is quite likely that some good man from the country will be selected.

MEET HERE IN JUNE, 1911

Scandinavian Singers Association of the Red River Valley to Meet Here.

A Very Successful Meeting of the Association was Held at Fergus Falls Last Week.

B. Dan Bjorkman, Dr. Vistaunet, G. Halvorson, Lars and B. J. Bakke, C. C. Gullingsrud, John Simonson and Ole Iverson have returned from their trip to Fergus Falls where the Scandinavian Singers Association of the Red River Valley held a four days singerfest. They report having had a most excellent time and were entertained in royal style by the citizens of Fergus Falls. The association meets every two years and the next meeting will be held in Thief River Falls in June, 1911. It is expected to make the meeting to be held in this city one of the biggest affairs ever witnessed here in the musical line and all of the noted singers in the Red River Valley as well as some from other sections will be invited to attend.

A BETTER WAY.

If there is one portion of the country more than another which has been bankrupted with a ruinous system of agriculture it is those sections of the south which have been devoted to the growing of cotton for the past thirty to sixty years, with no change or let-up. As a result of this shortsighted policy lands that once possessed a marvelous virgin fertility have been so reduced that today they produce barely half a bale of cotton per acre. Hand in hand with this bankrupting of the soil has come a virtual reduction to poverty of those who worked it, aggravated by the ills attendant upon a tenant system of working the land, the per cent of cotton lands worked by tenants varying from 40.6 per cent in Texas to 62.4 per cent in Mississippi. Because of this state of affairs the annual income of the tenant farmer of the south ranges from $144 in Alabama to $305 in Texas, the poorer ones often being compelled to give the landlord a mortgage on the crop before it is harvested or even planted. It is in the face of such conditions as these that the department of agriculture has taken up what is known as the farmers' co-operative demonstration work, which has in view making agriculture a source of pleasure and profit, improving rural conditions and enriching rural life. It has inaugurated field schools, in which these tenant farmers meet, with an agent of the department, who is teaching a better way—deeper plowing, the use of fertilizers and legumes in a crop rotation, better and more intensive tillage, the substitution of horse for hand power, the raising of stock and the growing on the farm of the stuff which is consumed there. As a consequence of this much needed agricultural missionary work very gratifying results are being realized. The change which is taking place is well stated in the words of one of the beneficiaries of the better way contained in the department's report: "I was born in the cotton field. I worked cotton on my farm for more than forty years. I thought no one could tell me anything about raising cotton. I had usually raised half a bale and thought that was all the cotton in it for one season. The demonstration agent came along and wanted me to try his plan on two acres. I agreed, but I did not believe him. I tried my best to do as he said. At the end of the year I had a bale and a half to the acre on the two acres worked his way and a little over one-third of a bale on the land worked my way. You could have knocked me down with a feather. This year I have a bale and a half to the acre on my whole farm. As a good cotton planter I am just one year old."

This improvement in economic condition is having a wholesome effect all along the line, one of the most hopeful aspects being that the farmers who are realizing its benefits are becoming interested in agriculture.

BEET SUGAR INDUSTRY.

Secretary Wilson has recently prepared a statement giving facts and figures relating to the growth of Uncle Sam's beet sugar industry in the past ten years. The figures of the report are interesting and encouraging. The production of beet sugar has risen from 30,000 tons in 1898 to 484,000 tons in 1908, an increase of more than thirteen fold. In 1896 41,000 acres were devoted to growing beets, while in 1908 there were 370,000 acres. In 1898 the farmers sold 364,000 tons of beets to the factories, for which they received $1,564,000; in 1908 they marketed 4,230,000 tons, which brought them $21,004,000. The price paid per ton for beets in 1908 was $4.10, but it is now $5.25. The total amount paid out by factories for beets during the past twelve years has been $121,000,000, and the amount invested in beet sugar factories at the present time is placed at $70,000,000. Mr. Wilson places the area of land suited to the culture of beets at 274,000,000 acres, one acre out of every 200 being ample to produce all the sugar now imported from foreign countries. He gives this fact still further emphasis by saying that if beets were grown once in four years in rotation on land adapted by nature and irrigation to their culture the annual production of beet sugar would be 15,000,000 tons, or more than the world's output at the present time. Of the sixteen states which are engaged in producing beet sugar Colorado leads, with sixteen factories and an output of 160,000 tons. She is also credited with the oldest successful factory at Alvarado, which has been in operation since 1879. California and Michigan follow Colorado in their respective output of beet sugar. Utah has five factories, Idaho and Wisconsin four each, while ten states boast one factory each. The largest factory in the United States is at Spreckels, Cal., which will slice 3,000 tons of beets a day, or a hundred carloads of thirty tons each.

It is a standoff whether one's own irresponsible puppy or the neighbor's hens constitute the greatest drawback to successful and enjoyable floriculture.

He who keeps a neat yard or a clean and thrifty garden is essentially a public benefactor, for not only is it a source of pleasure to the passerby, but the good example which is set is quite likely to be followed by his neighbor.

During the spring and summer months the flock of hens do not have to scratch to keep warm; nevertheless if they are confined it is well to make them scratch litter for their grain ration in order that they may get necessary exercise.

One of the critical periods for the growing corn and, for that matter, for any other tilled crops is the period of bright, rapidly drying weather following a heavy driving rain, which packs the earth and makes it form a hard crust. Before the crust forms the cultivator should be used.

A tempting price often induces the stock raiser to part with his best pure bred animals when his own financial benefit covering a period of years would be served by keeping them. It is only in rare instances that such stock is not worth just a little more to the grower than to any one else unless the sale is deemed necessary to prevent inbreeding.

The young man who comes to his majority clean hearted, with a good physical constitution and a reasonable ambition to be somebody in his day, is by all odds more fortunately endowed than his fellow who inherits a quarter section and a big wad of greenbacks merely. It is what he is rather than what he has that counts in satisfaction and contentment.

The ice cream makers in some states are up against recently enacted pure food laws which say this delectable product shall not contain more than 1 per cent of gelatin nor less than 12 per cent of butter fat or, in plain English, a generous supply of cream. While this regulation may work a hardship on the manufacturers of some of the stuff that has been palmed off on a long suffering public as cream, it will be deemed a real blessing.

A Minnesota reader of a northwestern agricultural paper is led to speak a word in defense of quack grass because through its almost complete occupation of his farm he was compelled to quit grain raising and adopt a stock raising type of agriculture, which he finds more profitable than the other. The average landowner should be able to see the errors of this soil robbing way without going through any such harrowing penitential experience as this quack grass imposes.

A friend who has several apple trees in his yard has noticed that a certain tree which a husky house cat has sharpened his claws on for several years past has borne the largest quantity of fruit. This was without question due to the bruising and mutilating of the trunk, the cat doing in this way unwittingly what the orchardist aims to do when he prunes a tree heavily, cuts and peels up the bark or girdles the trunk. While this practice of tree mutilation may be followed within certain limits, it is questionable if it is advisable in the long run, even if the cat does the job.

One of the improvements that might be carried out on many farms this season is that of a drainage of the wet acres. At the least it will cost nothing to have some reliable man who understands tiling to come and look things over and give you a pretty accurate estimate of the cost of a system of tiling which will carry surplus water off readily. While economy of construction is a proper consideration, efficiency and permanency are of more weight and will mean a saving in the long run. It is fair to say that the value of land redeemed through tiling will be worth five or six times per acre the cost of the improvement.

Readers who may have in mind seeking a western home will be interested in the drawing which the state land board of Colorado will hold at Ignacio, Colo., on July 15 for the disposition of the Ute Indian lands in Pine river valley, opened by a recent special act of congress. This land is to be supplied with irrigation, the cost of constructing the canals being payable over a period of years on easy installments. The tract in question is situated in the famous fruit section of southern Colorado, where lands of the same character under private ownership in bearing orchards are worth from $1,000 to $2,000 per acre.

Intelligent dairymen interested in the health of their dairy cows are equipping new barns which they are building with ventilating systems and installing the same in their old barns, which are of tight construction. The King system, which is recognized as one of the best, lets fresh air in near the floor through several small openings, while the foul air is taken from the building by a good sized ventilator shaft extending from within a foot or so of the floor up the side of the wall through the story above the stable to the cupola, where it is discharged. This system recognizes the fact that impure air is heavy and lies near the floor.

SWEDISH NAVY GROWING

Increasing In Strength as the Years Go By but Very Little Noise Is Made About It—Two New Torpedo Boats Now Ready for Delivery—People In Sweden Are Taking a Lively Interest in the Work of the Anti-Tuberculosis Society.

SWEDEN.

As the years pass by the Swedish navy is being increased in strength. Not a lot of noise is made about it by the Swedes, but if any one believes that Sweden is behind the times in this respect they have a guess coming. The two new torpedo boats are now ready for delivery. One was built at the Gota Iron works and the other at the Lindholmen works. They have now been sent to Helsingborg, where they will undergo a thorough test within a few days. The Swedish navy ranks high for a small country and with the natural defenses of the country she could do no end of damage to an attacking fleet, be it ever so much larger.

The anti-tuberculosis work in Sweden is progressing nicely and some very effective work has been done this year. People are taking a lively interest in the work of the Anti-Tuberculosis society and there have this year been collected, through the sale of trading stamps, not less than 35,162 crowns. Besides this the work has been advanced by many private donations. Now sanatoriums are under course of erection and the fight against the terrible disease is being better organized as the conditions are better understood.

Lennart Nicholaus Gustaf Paul is the name of a new little prince born to the Duke and Duchess of Smaland about three weeks ago. This introduces Russian blood into the Swedish royal house, for the mother of the young prince is Pavlowna Romanow. She has resided in Sweden for so short a time that the Swedish people have not had time to get acquainted with her. She is spoken of, however, as a woman of great beauty and as being a person of very unassuming manners.

The young Duke of Smaland, although a comparatively young man, has set a good example by starting what is known as the Duke of Smaland Fund, the proceeds of which are to go to poor and deserving parents who desire to educate their children. The young duke has been much complimented for this graceful act and the Swedish people are going to have faith in a prince who so early in life begins to show unmistakable signs of a good and generous heart.

The international committee for the Olympian games met in Berlin last week, on which occasion they were to decide where the next games are to be held in 1912. The general belief in Sweden is that Stockholm will be the place chosen. The American representatives on the committee are A. B. Armour, of New York, and Professor W. H. Sloane, of Columbia university.

For the purpose of encouraging people who have emigrated from Sweden to return there in the event that they come back and find things to their liking, both chambers of the Swedish riksdag have passed a resolution to the effect that persons who have been residing in a foreign country for a period of eight years will not be compelled to submit to any military service.

Reports state that Lektor P. P. Wiedemstrom was taken sick in Germany the other day while attending a mission conference in Dresden. While his illness is not necessarily a critical one, he will nevertheless be confined to his bed for a long time, according to the statement of his physician.

About 300 Russian school teachers will this summer visit Sweden and Norway. They will during their visit in Sweden be entertained by the Swedish Educational association and given a very comprehensive idea of what Swedish educational work stands for.

Prince Bernadotte's oldest son, Count Carl Bernadotte, completed his collegiate course at the Nya Elementar school in Stockholm last week. He was a diligent student and took a brilliant examination.

Henning Berger's new play, entitled "The Deluge," was hissed down at a theater in Naples some time ago when an attempt was made for the first time to present it to an Italian audience.

There were 250,000 May flowers sold in Stockholm this year on May 1. The income amounted to not less than 20,000 crowns, a sum of money which will be devoted to charity.

A male chorus, consisting of 158 men from Vienna, gave a concert in Stockholm May 15, which was attended by about 3,000 people.

The cetal department is a prosperous one and always manages to show a surplus. During the past twelve months reports show a surplus of $45,600 crowns.

Former Minister Gyldes will not return as Sweden's envoy to Buenos Ayres. He will most likely be succeeded by C. F. Haltgren or C. E. Kiercher.

Former Minister of Foreign Affairs Trolle has now assumed his duties as Sweden's ambassador at Berlin.

The late Dr. A. Lindberg donated 10,000 crowns to the Hedwig Eleonora church in Stockholm.

Queen Victoria is at present sojourning at Karlsruhe. Her health is somewhat improved.

NORWAY.

A young American sailor was arrested in Fredrikstad the other day because he had made a statement to the captain of his vessel that he had helped Belle Gunnes murder four persons at LaPorte, Ind. The man under arrest did not seem to be out of his mind in any way, but is being closely watched by the authorities. Reports say that his conscience has troubled him and that it was this that drove him to confess. The case has been placed in the hands of United States Minister Pierce, who will make a thorough investigation. Later reports state that his name is John Small and that his home is in the state of Maine. He registered as a sailor on a Finnish vessel in New York and when he arrived in Norway he wanted to get out of the service and before the police court in Christiania he stated that in order to accomplish his desire he hit upon the idea of telling the captain of the ship that he had aided Mrs. Gunness in her wholesale murders. The authorities, however, are not satisfied with these explanations, but have concluded to place him in the hands of the American authorities and send him back to the United States.

It will be of interest to our American farmers to know that there is a man who has been using an automobile plow on his farm in Helgeland for a number of years. His name is Isaac Coldwin and he has long ago eliminated the horse. He pumps his water by means of electricity, uses an automobile plow and delivers his cream and milk in a motor boat. He is one of the most practical farmers in Norway and has been visited by a number of British farm experts who are deeply interested in his modern methods of running a farm.

According to dispatches from St. Petersburg King Haakon will pay a visit in the near future to the Russian czar. The visit will be of an official nature. The Norwegian king contemplates at the same time to pay a visit at the courts of Vienna and Rome. Just when he will start on his important journey has as yet not been announced, but it is believed that he will make the trip not later than September next.

There is a movement on foot to erect a hospital for weak and nervous women at Bergen if plans set on foot by Dr. Friele are successfully carried out. Already 7,000 crowns have been pledged and an anonymous donor has given 10,000 crowns for the benefit of the institution. When 12,000 crowns have been subscribed work on the hospital building will commence at once.

Norway will in the near future build another armored cruiser, which when completed, will cost in the neighborhood of 1,000,000 crowns. Even the little nations are slowly but surely arming themselves either for peace or for future struggles.

Christian Sinding has been chosen an honorary member of the Academy of Arts in Berlin. Mr. Sinding spent the great part of last winter in the German capital.

The Bergen railway, which is now approaching its completion, will be an expensive affair. It will cost not less than 60,000,000 crowns and this is a little more than the storthing has bargained for.

DENMARK.

A large number of Danish-Americans are leaving these days for Denmark to be present at the great Fourth of July celebration, which will be held at Aarhus. Much interest is being evinced all over the country for this celebration and it is certain that, judging from all present indications, there will be a large amount of Danish-Americans coming over this year than ever before. The Danish crownprince has promised to be present on this occasion and deliver the address of the day. This is the first time in history that any European prince has been present at a Fourth of July celebration in a foreign country and little Denmark also has the honor of giving the greatest Fourth of July celebration that was ever held in Europe. There has, it is true, been many occasions when the day has been observed by Americans and others in foreign lands, but never before has so elaborate a Fourth of July celebration been planned abroad before as the one which will be held in Aarhus.

The dispatch from Copenhagen which was published recently in a large number of American newspapers to the effect that Maurice F. Egan, the United States minister at Copenhagen, was about to resign have now been silence by President Taft's official announcement that he will retain his post. Mr. Egan is popular in Copenhagen and King Frederick not long ago expressed the wish that he be retained.

There will be lots of Danish journalists in Norway in July if the present arrangements will not be abandoned. The journalists are all strong "Venstre" men, belong to the same association and make it a practice of going on an excursion every summer. They will spend a couple of days in Christiania and will make long excursions into the country districts.

Hertz, the prominent Copenhagen goldsmith, who died recently, donated prior to his death 600,000 crowns to constitute a fund, the rents of which will go to poor and deserving working girls.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

The $1,500,000 failure of the Detroit brokerage firm of Cameron Currie & Co. last July resulted in the indictment of Louis H. Case, managing partner; Herbert B. Page, Robert L. Edwards, Ernest Kraetke and William H. Stritzkie, clerks, and William Rouland and Frederick L. Dolson, telegraph operators employed by the defunct firm, on charges of criminal irregularity.

Twelve hours after her husband, John Glaesser, a cigar salesman, had been arrested at St. Louis on a charge of embezzlement Mrs. Martha Glaesser was found dead in bed by the side of the dead bodies of her children, Arnette, eight years old, and John, Jr., five years old. The room was filled with gas and the police advance the theory that the mother turned it on.

National Bank Examiner Claude Gatch is authority for the statement that a shortage has been discovered in the funds of the Lewiston (Ida.) National bank. Beyond the fact that the stockholders have made the alleged shortage good Mr. Gatch declines to discuss the situation. It is said that the alleged defalcation amounts to $137,000.

Louise Arbogast, eldest daughter of Louis Arbogast, who was murdered at St. Paul May 13, has been indicted by the grand jury on the charge of murder. A second and secret indictment was also found by the grand jury and it is said that it is against Mrs. Mina Arbogast, widow of the dead man, and that the charge is murder in the first degree.

The famous Chicago bomb thrower, who has been the nemesis of local gamblers for more than a year, resumed operations after a long vacation. Three persons were slightly injured. His latest attempt caused more destruction than any before, as he practically wrecked a building in the down town district.

Frank H. Horn, S. H. Snyder and Raymond P. May were sentenced at Kansas City to serve a year and a day in the United States prison at Leavenworth, Kan., and to pay a fine of $500 each. John E. Horn was fined $500. They were convicted of fraud in promoting the "Two Queens" mine in Arizona.

John Junkin, colored, was found guilty at Centerville, Ia., of the murder of Clara Rosen, the Ottumwa choir singer, on Feb. 5 last, and was sentenced to death by Judge M. A. Roberts. The sentence of death has quieted the people, who threatened lynching if Junkin escaped the gallows.

Five workmen were killed and four more seriously stabbed by John Murphy, who ran amuck in the plant of the North Packing and Provision company in Somerville, Mass. Armed with a big knife which he used in his work Murphy ran through the factory, lunging at every one within reach.

Dr. John T. Binkley of Evansville, Ind., eighty-two years old, was found dead in a room at the Wellington hotel at Chicago and his relatives are certain he was murdered, while the police and hotel authorities incline toward the suicide theory.

A sentence of not less than seven years nor more than twenty years in Sing Sing prison was imposed upon William Darragh, a New York chauffeur, whose automobile ran down and killed Ingvaard Trimble in that city on March 27.

Four masked highwaymen held up a crowd of thirty merrymakers at the Tavern, a resort at Petersburg, ten miles from Denver, and made away with more than $3,000 worth of diamonds and $200 cash.

Dr. Haldane Cleminson of Chicago has been arrested charged with slaying his wife, Mrs. Nora Jane Cleminson. Dr. Cleminson claims burglars caused his wife's death by chloroform.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

The cattle business took quite a spurt at South St. Paul last month in comparison with May of last year, according to the report issued by the stock yards company. While the total receipts of cattle in May, 1908, were 16,549 they were 19,461 last month, while there were 8,527 calves received last month, as against 5,984 for the corresponding period of last year.

A unique sentence was imposed upon Kenneth Way of Minneapolis, seventeen years old, son of Charles Way, president of the Minneapolis Bedding company, when Judge C. L. Smith fined the boy $25 and ordered him to keep away from the steering wheel of an automobile for one year. Way was caught speeding his automobile in Southeast Minneapolis.

A communication has been received by Insurance Commissioner Hartigan cancelling the licenses of twenty of the fifty-one agents of the New York Life Insurance company in this state. This is done by the company to keep from violating the New York law, which prohibits any company from doing more than $150,000,000 of new business in any year.

Contending that the state board of health with illegal procedure is trying to restrain them from maintaining a rendering plant the J. T. McMillan company of St. Paul, pork packers, filed a suit in the Ramsey county district court asking for an injunction restraining the board from issuing the order to close down the rendering plant.

The cash balances in the state treasury at the close of business for May were considerably less than a year ago. The total of all funds was $1,568,400, while at the same time last year it was $2,148,227. Of this amount the general revenue fund contains $961,376 this year, while a year ago it had $1,299,108.

Independent iron operators who have organized the Imperial Steel corporation with a capital of $3,000,000 are reported to have in contemplation the construction of ore carrying railroads in Northern Minnesota that will compete with the roads now owned by the United States Steel corporation.

President Taft has rejected an application for pardon made in behalf of Thomas B. Clements of Faribault, formerly president of the First National bank of that city, who is serving a term of imprisonment in the Stillwater penitentiary.

George Yung Soo, the proprietor of a chop suey restaurant at Minneapolis and one of the leading Chinamen of the Twin Cities, was married at St. Paul to Miss Mary Nowacki of Milwaukee, a white woman.

A report received by the state auditor from F. A. Wildes, state mining inspector, states that the May shipments were 2,400,000 tons, six times as much as in May, 1908, and almost as much as in 1907.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Carrying a can of gasoline and a rifle Alma Valimaa, a settler who lived eighteen miles north of Virginia, entered the house where his bride of three weeks was sitting and expressed his intention of setting fire to the house and killing her and himself. The woman fled screaming from the house before he could carry out his purpose and ran to the home of a neighbor. As she left the house she heard a shot and, returning later with assistance, found the body of Valimaa on the floor with a bullet hole through his head.

Jacob Swartz, a junk dealer of Minneapolis, was killed by a Northern Pacific train near Richdale, Otter Tail county. Swartz had started to walk from Richdale to New York Mills along the double track. He met a freight train and stepped upon the track alongside to let it pass just as the fast coast passenger train from the other direction came along. The passenger train hurled him from the track, killing him instantly.

Adam Morrow of Duluth was instantly killed and Newton Ensign, also of Duluth, was injured by a gravel train in the Northern Pacific pit two miles west of Carlton. Both were at work under a train at car repairing and the train started unexpectedly. Morrow's head was severed.

Joseph Brinkman, forty-two years old, a car repairer at South St. Paul, sent his wife to Calvary cemetery to decorate the grave of her first husband and then hanged himself from the rafters of his barn.

C. A. Lanveen, fifty-three years old, committed suicide in Camden Place park, a beauty spot of Minneapolis, by firing three shots into his head.

H. L. Hughes, aged fifty-six, committed suicide at Minneapolis by taking carbolic acid. Ill health was the cause.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Hiram H. Tyner, a former well known resident of Mankato, is dead at Springfield, O., aged sixty-five years, leaving a wife. He was an adopted son of former Sheriff Daniel Tyner and enlisted in the First Minnesota in 1860 and served throughout the war as a drummer boy.

George W. Magee, proprietor of the Magee hotel at St. Paul, is dead after a protracted illness.

WANTS BERTH PRICES EQUAL

Interstate Board Hears Charges Laid by St. Paul Man.

The interstate commerce commission, sitting at Washington, heard oral arguments in the case of George F. Loftus of St. Paul against the Pullman Palace Car company, in which the question of rates for sleeping car berths between St. Paul and Chicago and St. Paul and the Pacific coast is involved. The point to be determined is whether the railroads shall be permitted to charge as much for an upper as for a lower berth.

The commission also heard arguments in the case of James Manahan against the Northern Pacific and other railroads operating between the Twin Cities and Duluth, involving alleged excessive charges for the transportation of hard and soft coal from the lakes to the Twin Cities. In this case it is charged that the people of the Northwest are being mulcted of about $750,000 annually because of the imposition of high rates.

DULUTH WOMAN IS ROBBED

Loses $20,000 in Currency at Seattle, Wash.

Mrs. George Shea of Duluth, this state, who is visiting her sister, Mrs. John English, at Alki Point, a suburb of Seattle, Wash., reported to the police that she had been robbed of $20,000 in currency. Mrs. Shea intended to invest the money in property at Seattle.

Her husband, who intended to follow her from Duluth, shipped the money to her by the Great Northern Express company, which delivered the package to her on Thursday. Mrs. Shea intended to put the money in a bank at once, but delayed doing so, and she and her sister decided to visit Seattle to see the decorations. They hid the $20,000 carefully between the sheets of a bed. On returning home at night she found that burglars had ransacked the house from top to bottom and had discovered and stolen the treasure.

ST. PAUL COMPANY LOSES

Decision Rendered in Famous Copyright Case.

The copyright case of the West Publishing company of St. Paul against the Edward Thompson company of Northport, L. I., ended when Judge Chatfield, in the United States circuit court, handed down an opinion dismissing the suit without costs. The action was brought in an effort to have the Thompson company restrained from publishing, circulating or selling a law encyclopedia. Judge Chatfield decided while there might be a few instances where the text of the West publications had been used there was not enough to warrant the suppressing of the entire edition of the encyclopedia, consisting of seventy-four volumes, and that there was but one action for comparatively small damages, which could not be considered in connection with the case at issue.

ODD RESULT OF CRUSADE

Coleraine Minister Found Guilty of Burglary.

Rev. F. W. Hill, a minister of the Methodist church of Coleraine, has lost the first round in his battle to keep the lid straight on the Bovey saloons, and the unique result up to the present is that he finds himself declared guilty of burglary.

He was so found by a justice of the peace at Hillman, and was fined $100 or ninety days in jail. The case will be appealed.

Rev. Hill and others conducted a lid law enforcement campaign in Bovey one Sunday recently and the keepers of two saloons visited declare their places of business were opened up and thieves trailed the lid enforcement and robbed the tills of several hundred dollars.

THREE MEN KILLED AT TOWER

Another Badly Injured by Fall of Earth in a Mine.

Two men were instantly killed, another man received injuries from which he died later and a fourth was badly injured by a cave-in or fall of earth on the fifteenth level of shaft No. 8 of the Soudan mine at Tower.

Charles Morrin and Gabriel Nilkala were caught by the full force of the cave-in and badly crushed and mangled. It was three hours before their bodies were recovered. Martin Koretch had his skull fractured and both feet crushed and was in a dying condition when removed to his home, where death ensued several hours afterwards.

About 100 feet of ground, torn and loosened by a blast, fell upon the men.

Workman Crushed to Death.

Crushed and mangled almost beyond recognition and with almost every bone in his body broken Pearley Holmes of St. Paul, employed as an oiler by the St. Paul Crushed Stone company, is dead at the city hospital. While attempting to repair a belt on an engine Holmes was caught in the machinery and pulled through an immense pulley used to lift large pieces of stone.

Boy Accidentally Killed.

Tommy, the twelve-year-old son of Robert Papineau of St. Paul, was shot through the heart by the accidental discharge of a rifle with which he and Albert Biever, eleven years old, were shooting at marks while sitting in a hammock in the rear of the Biever home. The manner in which the accident occurred is a complete mystery.

WIDOW GUARDED

May Have to Face Charge of Killing Her Husband.

DAUGHTER HAS BEEN INDICTED

Developments in Arbogast Murder Case at St. Paul.

Mrs. Mina Arbogast of St. Paul, widow of Louis Arbogast, is in custody of two trained nurses, who have been sworn in as special deputies by Sheriff Gerber, and is under arrest at her home in connection with the murder of her husband on May 13.

Louise Arbogast, eldest daughter of the murdered man, has been indicted by the grand jury on the charge of murder and will be called into court shortly, when her attorney will ask the appointment of a commission by the probate court to inquire into her mental condition.

A second and secret indictment was also found by the grand jury and it is known that it is against Mrs. Mina Arbogast and that the charge is murder in the first degree.

It is believed that Louise Arbogast will never be tried for murder, but it is said that Mrs. Arbogast will positively have to answer that charge. And it is also said that her plea will be justifiable homicide, committed in a frenzy of fury when she discovered conditions in her household that robbed her for the moment of reason.

MISS ARBOGAST ARRAIGNED

St. Paul Woman, However, Does Not Plead to Murder Charge.

Louise Arbogast was called before Judge O. B. Lewis of the district court at St. Paul for arraignment charging her with murder in the first degree for the slaying of her father, Louis Arbogast, the West Seventh street butcher, on May 13.

The young woman did not plead, however, William D. Mitchell, her attorney, asking the court first to order an examination of the girl's present mental condition. The court ruled that this question will be considered later at the convenience of the counsel for the defense and the county attorney.

The girl's manner while in the courtroom was anything but that of an insane person.

It is not now considered probable that the condition of Mrs. Arbogast, who was indicted on the same charge as her daughter and who is confined at her home as a result of burns received while attempting to extinguish the flames that were consuming the bed of her husband, will warrant her being arraigned for several weeks to come.

COURT TIES UP THE FUND

No Money for Roads and Bridges for the Present.

The "pork barrel" appropriation of $600,000 for roads and bridges is declared to be unconstitutional by Judge Hascal R. Brill of the Ramsey county district court, who granted a temporary injunction against State Auditor Iverson restraining him from issuing warrants for the amounts set aside by the legislature.

The language of the court's decision makes it certain that a permanent injunction will be granted by the lower court, but, meanwhile, an appeal will be taken by Attorney General George T. Simpson to the supreme court to get a final decision. Until the supreme court acts no money from the fund can be paid for building roads or bridges.

The injunction is granted on petition of Senator L. O. Cooke of Wabasha county, who declares that the "pork barrel" appropriation is not only poor business for the state, but invalid in laws. His contention is sustained by Judge Brill. The defendants are granted twenty days in which to answer.

MEETS DEATH IN ELEVATOR

Albert Lea Banker and Pork Packer Caught in Shaft.

Charles Soth, banker, pork packer and capitalist of Albert Lea, was so seriously injured by being caught in the elevator shaft in the packing plant that he died after several hours of intense suffering. He was sixty-four years of age and is survived by his widow, one son and one daughter. His sister, Mrs. Naeve, died a year ago by being run over by a horse and having her head crushed. Mr. Soth was a leading citizen of Albert Lea and his untimely death is greatly lamented.

Cyrus Wellington Dead.

Cyrus Wellington of St. Paul, for years chief counsel for the Great Northern railway and later private counsel for James J. Hill, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. W. Helmbold, at Balsam Lake, Wis. Mr. Wellington was a veteran of the Civil war.

Duluth Fire Chief Dead.

Chief John T. Black of the Duluth fire department is dead in that city after an operation for appendicitis. Chief Black was one of the best known fire fighters of the country, having for years been head of the St. Paul fire department.

IN HIGH ALTITUDES.

The Most Common Ways In Which the Heart Is Affected.

Dr. I. N. Hall, writing in the American Journal of the Medical Sciences, says that the dangers to the heart in high altitudes are the same as in other places, but are greatly exaggerated in some directions. The troubles most common and serious, he says, relate to inflammation of the heart muscle, hardening of the arteries and dilation of the heart.

The principle applied is this: The heart and lungs have an increase of functional work with each added degree of elevation and the consequent decrease in atmospheric pressure. To meet the increased demand on the circulation the heart must enlarge if the usual amount of exercise is taken. It is not unusual for acute dilation of the heart to occur after slight effort on the part of those whose arteries have begun to harden and who long have been accustomed to atmospheric pressure at the sea level. The trouble with those who suffer in high altitude, the writer declares, is that they try to do too much at first when they feel invigorated by the bracing atmosphere.

Dr. Hall adds that even an ascent in a railway train may be fatal to those who have but a narrow margin of heart strength, or the slightest exertion at such a time may produce angina pectoris. The average case of well compensated valvular disease will do as well at a high altitude as anywhere else if the patient observes proper precautions. In such a climate he is less susceptible to acute rheumatism.

A LUCKY SHOT.

Exciting Incident of a Lion Hunt In East Africa.

In the Wide World Magazine there is an exciting account of a lion hunt in British East Africa. The party consisted of Walter Cooper, Captain H. and his sister. The young lady captured four lions, while the men slew five between them. The tenth lion was killed through its desire to capture a native carrier who, realizing that things were becoming too warm for him, had bolted. The following is the account of the misfortune which befell the lion through his attempt to stay the haste of the native:

The lioness, attracted by the sight of the fleeing man, swerved off suddenly and made after the fugitive. The man had not more than twenty yards start, and the great brute rapidly overtook him. Miss H. fired again, and we men both fired as well, but we were not near enough to make a good running shot. The wretched man, with a courage born of desperation, turned at the last moment and hit at the lioness with his rifle. The blow fell a bit short, and the enraged brute, snapping at what came nearest, caught the weapon in her mouth at the muzzle. The pace at which she was traveling was so great that Hassan was hurled backward, and in falling his finger caught the triggers, letting off both barrels. By the most extraordinary piece of luck the rifle was pointing straight down the beast's throat at the moment, and down she went, with her head nearly shot away, right on top of him.

Notorious Women Gamblers.

One of the most notorious female gamblers of the eighteenth century was Miss Pelham, the daughter of the English prime minister. She not only ruined herself at cards, but would have beggared her sister Mary as well had not their friends intervened and insisted on the sisters separating. Horace Walpole gives a pitiful account of "poor Miss Pelham sitting up all night at the club without a woman, losing hundreds a night and her temper, beating her head and making a scene before the young men and the waiters." Another writer says that the unhappy woman often played cards with the tears streaming down her cheeks.

Lady Mary Compton, an old maiden lady, a contemporary of Miss Pelham and, like her, addicted to gambling, had the same propensity to tears. When she lost, we are told, she wept bitterly—"not for the loss itself," she was careful to explain, "but for the unkindness of the cards."

A Bank of Brides.

Simla, the summer capital of the Indian empire, is a pretty pine treed place well up in the foothills of the Himalayas. A feature of Simla life is the annual fair held by the native hills people, an attractive item of which is a "bank of brides" in an amphitheater, where sit numbers of young women who thus calmly announce that they are candidates for hymeneal honors. Some of these aspirants to matrimony so patiently awaiting a choosing are quite pretty and have intelligent faces, but those of Mongol caste must needs linger long for a partner if personal beauty enters into the equation.

Love In a Flat.

"May I kiss you?"

The girl hastily consulted a document.

"You may," she said.

"Why did you consult that paper?"

"To see if there is anything in our lease prohibiting it."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Nice Discrimination.

"Stop!" cried an author to a maidservant. "What papers are you burning there?"

"It's all right, sir," was the reply. "These are only the old sheets covered with writing. I 'aven't touched the clean ones!"

PERILS OF EXPLORERS.

A Tragic Journey Across a Desert of Central Asia.

One of the most trying of the central Asian adventures of Sven Hedin, the Swedish explorer, was this: In February, 1895, Sven Hedin started eastward, exploring the country between the Kashgar and Yarkand rivers, proceeding in April to cross the Takla Makan desert, between the Yarkand and Khotan rivers. Never before had any known traveler attempted to exploit a course amid the eternal sea of shifting sand hills from river to river. The tale of that little, travel worn, bedraggled group far beyond the last watering place, enveloped in dust, stumbling along through the dreary but agitated desert sea by crooks and roundabout ways, with desolation spread around and every trace of life departed, was a weird and pathetic one. "Not even a fly was to be heard in the air, not even a yellow leaf broke the monotony."

And ever at their head was the sturdy figure of the Swedish explorer, compass in hand, still enthusiastic, guiding them as best he could through the death shrouded wilderness. At length the camels had to eat their straw saddles, and the last of the bread was gone. Horrors followed. As men and camels dropped out of the line they were immediately enveloped in the whirling sand shroud and never seen again.

The end came on May 5, when Sven Hedin, crawling on all fours, dragged himself across the dry bed of the Khotan river. "All of a sudden a duck flew into the air and water splashed," he wrote. Two of his followers were all that survived, and it is doubtful whether even those two would have lived to tell the tale had not Sven Hedin carried back water for them in his boots.

MARKED THEIR TRAIL.

Two Brave Women Who Outwitted a Band of Indians.

One summer afternoon in 1776 Jemima Boone and two sisters named Callaway while boating on the Kentucky allowed their canoe to drift close to the opposite bank. Here, behind a bush, five Shawnee warriors were in hiding, and, although the spot was not more than a quarter of a mile from Boonesborough, one of the Shawnees struck boldly out into the water, seized the canoe and dragged it to shore with its screaming occupants.

Once in the power of the Indians, however, these youthful daughters of the wilderness betrayed a wonderful self possession and resourcefulness. They knew enough of Indian customs to realize that if their strength failed them and they should prove unequal to the long march to the Shawnee towns on the Ohio they would be slaughtered mercilessly. So they stifled sobs and calmly accompanied their captors without protest or struggle. At every opportunity, though, they secretly tore little pieces from their clothing and attached them to bushes on the trail. Nothing more was needed to inform Boone and his fellow settlers, who had quickly started in pursuit, that they were on the right track, and on the second day of the captivity they caught up with the Indians. A volley laid two Shawnees low, the rest fled, and by the close of another day the girls were safe in the arms of their thankful mothers.—H. Addington Bruce in Smith's Magazine.

Stories of W. S. Gilbert.

When Sir Henry Irving and Edwin Booth were acting together in London at doubled prices, the story goes that Mr. Herman Vezin, meeting W. S. Gilbert in the street, asked him whether he had been to this quite exceptional show. "No," said Mr. Gilbert; "I have sometimes paid half a guinea to see one bad actor, but I will not pay a guinea to see two."

Mr. Beerbohm Tree was playing the part of Falstaff at the London Haymarket, and the indispensable stuffing made him perspire profusely. Mr. Gilbert, who was in the theater, went behind the scenes to see the actor, who may well have been expected to be congratulated on the excellence of his impersonation.

"How well your skin acts!" said Mr. Gilbert.—London Graphic.

Peter the Great as a Drinker.

There is preserved in the Bodleian library, Oxford, an innkeeper's bill for breakfast eaten in England by Peter the Great of Russia. The czar and his twenty companions managed to dispose of half a sheep, a quarter of lamb, ten pullets, twelve chickens, three quarts of brandy, six quarts of mulled wine, seven dozen of eggs, with salad in proportion. Peter was always a hard drinker. He would drink a pint of brandy and a bottle of sherry for his morning draft; after dinner he managed eight bottles of sack, "and so to the playhouse." But his favorite drink was hot pepper and brandy.

He Had the Bill.

Tom (in restaurant)—Excuse me, old man, but would you mind paying my check? I haven't anything but a forty dollar bill. Jack—A forty dollar bill! Why, I never heard of a bill of that denomination. Tom—Here it is—a bill from my tailor!—Chicago News.

To Fresh Eyes.

Willie, accompanied by his father, was visiting a circus and menagerie. "Oh, papa," the boy exclaimed as they passed before an elephant, "look at the big cow with her horns in her mouth eating hay with her tail."—Christian Register.

ROYAL MAIDS.

When They Wish to Marry They Must Do the Proposing.

When a reigning queen is to be married she must be the one to broach the subject first to her future consort. The same rule holds good with regard to all royal ladies who marry commoners.

The late Queen Victoria has told how she managed to "put the question" to Prince Albert—how she first showed him Windsor and its beauties and the distant landscape and then said, "All this may be yours." The queen of Holland on a like occasion simply sent a sprig of white heather, begging Prince Henry to look out its meaning in a book of flowers and their meanings. The Duchess of Argyll took the following means of proposing to the Marquis of Lorne: She was about to attend a state ball and gave it out that she would choose as her partner for the first dance the man she intended to honor. She selected the marquis, who subsequently became her husband.

But perhaps the most interesting of all ways chosen was that of the Duchess of Fife. She took the earl, as he then was, to a drawer and showed him its contents. There he saw a number of trifles he had given her at different times, including sprigs of several kinds of flowers, now dead, he had picked for her at various times. He was much impressed at the sight, nor did it require words on her part to make her meaning plain.—London Answers.

ADENOIDS.

The Way These Growths Endanger the Health of Children.

Adenoids are curious little cauliflower-like growths which appear at the junction of the nasal cavity and the pharynx. They are often observed at birth, but they seldom cause discomfort until some months later. Then they interfere with respiration and cause the baby to be restless. It tosses in its sleep and wakens suddenly, crying out as if in distress.

If adenoids are permitted to remain they deform the mouth, teeth, throat, chest and face. At their worst they produce pop eyes and what is called a frog face. They cause mouth breathing, with all its attendant evils. They open the way for a hundred and one ills, from rupture of the eardrum, running from the ears, coughs and tonsilitis to pulmonary tuberculosis.

A slight operation suffices to remove them. The baby suffers little pain and loses little blood. Out they come, and with them the overgrown tonsils that commonly accompany them. If they are suffered to remain they may never be discovered. But it is certain that in one way or another, directly or indirectly, they will cause damage.—Dr. Leonard Keene Hirshberg in Delineator.

Yarmouth's Narrow Street.

Kitty Witches row, Great Yarmouth, can justly claim to be the narrowest street in the world, the entrance at one end being only twenty-nine inches and at the other fifty-six inches. It gives some idea of the width when one mentions that neighbors can shake hands and put out each other's candles across the street! Why these rows have been so constructed has given rise to a good deal of discussion. Some writers give the reason that when there was a very high tide the water might flow through them; others, in the event of an invasion they would prove an excellent means of defense or that the ground plans of the rows were suggested by the fishermen's nets, which, spread on the dunes to dry, had a narrow pathway left between them, which represented the rows. Yarmouth has 145 rows, and their total length exceeds seven miles, Kitty Witches being the most interesting and the narrowest of all.

How Faraday Refused a Pension.

Lord Melbourne once announced to Faraday that it was his pleasing duty to offer him a pension, but, he added, "I suppose all this science is humbug." Faraday at once replied, "If that is your opinion, my lord, I decline the pension," and retired. Melbourne, on meeting some of his colleagues, said: "I have had a strange thing happen. A man has declined a pension." But these gentlemen knew Faraday's position and reputation better than the premier and urged him to rectify the blunder. Faraday was again interviewed, but Melbourne was obliged to retract and apologize before the pension was accepted.

London Snowstorms.

The purifying effect of a snowstorm on city air was shown in London by experiments which demonstrated five times the amount of impurities on week days, when all the factories are active, as on Sundays. It was figured out that nevertheless a single Sunday snowstorm carried to the surface of the county of London 73 tons of dissolved solids, 142 tons of suspended matters, 100 tons of coal, 25 tons of salt and a ton of ammonia.—London Chronicle.

How a Little Wisdom Came to the Wises

The Wise's house looked homelike to the long legged bird that hovered overheard. Favorably impressed, he softly deposited on the steps, his wee burden of blessedness.

The Wise's pleasure at the Stork's thoughtfulness was tempered by Mrs. Wise's following illness and her inability to provide nourishment for the Blessing.

It looked as tho the precious gift might be taken away.

Wise's doctor saved the day. He said "DIGESTO." Mrs. Wise became healthy and rosy and the Blessing became healthy and rosy.

One more credit mark for DIGESTO. It is a necessity before and after the Stork's visit.

A Sinister Comment.

"That new neighbor of ours asked us to let him use our hatchet and our clothesline," said Sirius Barker's wife.

"Did you give him the hatchet?"

"Yes; the one that has nicks in it and a wabbly handle."

"And did you give him the clothesline that has been tied together in eight places?"

"Yes."

"Well, that's a case of borrowing trouble, all right."—Washington Star.

Russian Princesses.

In Russia the term "princess" does not mean very much, for the simple reason that there are so many of them and that it is never a royal title. All the female descendants of a prince of a certain rank are princesses, and the result is that many princesses are as poor and of as little account as any ill used princess of a fairy tale. The real royal princesses of Russia are styled grand duchesses. They are the daughters and sisters of the czar.

Their Real Duty.

"I was just reading of a man who has a hen that can sing; another man has a hen which whistles and imitates various birds."

"I don't care for those vaudeville hens. A hen should stick to the legit and lay eggs."—Kansas City Journal.

On the Safe Side.

"How do you ever get on so well with your wife? Don't you ever have any differences of opinion?"

"Of couse we do. But I don't let her know it."—Cleveland Leader.

A Puzzle.

Bacon—There's one thing I can't understand. Egbert—What is that? Bacon—When a couple get married they become one. But they say it takes two to make a quarrel.

Helped Out.

A grocery clerk in a small town had been considerably bored one day by solicitors for church fairs, raffles, charity and other purposes and was getting disgusted when a small, red haired urchin came in and asked him if he could help him out with a baseball glove.

"Got the glove with you?" asked the impatient clerk.

"Er—no," answered the urchin.

"Then," said the irritable clerk as he caught him by the neck and trousers, "I'll help you out without it!"—Judge.

In a Dilemma.

"A necklace of diamonds has been stolen from me!" said Mrs. Cumrox.

"Aren't you going to notify the police?"

"I don't know what to do. It does seem rather classy to be robbed of jewelry, and yet I hate to have people think that I'd ever miss a little thing like a necklace."—Washington Star.

Exclusive.

"Where do the Hottentots live, Mary?" a schoolteacher asked one of her pupils.

"I don't know, 'm," said Mary primly. "Ma won't let me visit any of the people in this neighborhood."

The Exceptions.

"Binks has a fine new apartment."

"Everything stationary in it, I suppose."

"Absolutely everything—except his wife and the cook."—Harper's Bazar.

THE THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS.

VOL. XXVI. THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, JUNE 17, 1909 NUMBER 25.

SUCCESSOR TO SHAW

Chairman of Supervisors and Mayor of this City to Select a Commissioner.

Will Meet at Red Lake Falls Tomorrow and Name the New Man.

Tomorrow the chairman of the board of supervisors of the townships of Sander Nordon, North, Silverton, Clover Leaf Reiner and Star and the mayor of the city of Thief River Falls will meet at Red Lake Falls and select a successor to Daniel Shaw as county commissioner from this district. There are not many active candidates for the office, and it is hard to say who will be appointed. Nels K. Anderson, of Sanders, was in the city Tuesday and he said that he was a candidate for the office. Mr. Anderson would make an excellent county commissioner, the only objection to him being that he does not live in the center of the district. Andrew Trovoten, of the town of North, is being prominently mentioned by a number and he would make a most excellent commissioner. Others who are mentioned are Joseph Johnson, of the town of Star, D. B. Bakke, Charles P. Quist, D. P. O' Neill, Robert Mc Ginn, M. V. Evenson and Olaf Ramstad of this city.

Simonson Uninjured.

Our old friend O. W. Simonson who is manager of an old line elevator at Langdon, N. Dakota., sends the REVIEW some post card views of the havoc wrought by the cyclone that struct that town on May 29, in which five people lost their lives and over a score were injured. Two elevators were torn to pieces and Mr. Simonson's elevator was next in line but just outside the storm's vortex and got off with a twisted cupola. Mr. Simonson was at the elevator when the storm came up but saw the twister coming and ran out into the open about 300 feet from the building and watched the cyclone go by, taking everything in its path and leaving death and destruction its wake. Osakis friends are glad to know that Mr. Simonson and the members of his family escaped without injury.—Osakis Review.

Are Still Here.

D. R. W. Williams, the elderly gentlemen who is at the head of the Great American Railway company, continues to remain in Thief River Falls and his crew of surveyors have been busy in the county throughout this section. The surveyors have been returning to Thief River Falls every evening, but on Tuesday morning they went southeast from town and announced that they would not return until Saturday.

James Meehan, Sr., Here.

James Meehan, Sr., arrived in the city Sunday morning from Milwaukee and will spend a few days here attending to some business matters and visiting his brother, John Meehan. Nine years ago the firm of P. & J. Meehan disposed of its saw mill in Thief River Falls and timber interests in the Red Lake county to the Thief River Falls Lumber Co., and since that date Mr. Meehan has not visited the city. He sees a great change in the city and was surprised to find that it had enjoyed such a substantial growth. For the past two years Mr. Meehan has not been actively engaged in any business and makes his home most of the year in Milwaukee.

Hotel Fire at Roseau.

Roseau, Minn., June 14.—Hotel Elliott was thoroughly gutted by a fire that started in the annex yesterday. The annex and all that it contained, including a complete set of bar fixtures, was totally destroyed, and the hotel fixtures and furniture were more or less damaged by fire and water.

The fire was burning fiercely when first discovered, and it was only after a hard fight that the firemen were able to save the main building in a badly damaged condition.

The loss is estimated at about $5,000 insurance $4,300.

After the Officials.

Bemidji, Minn., June 10.—Misconduct in office, in allowing excessive charges, holding personal interests in county contracts and other serious allegations, are raised against County Commissioners F. O. Sibley, Wes Wright, J. Gunderson and S. W. Danaher and County Auditor John Wiltman in indictments returned by the Grand Jury that is probing the charges of frauds in county affairs.

It is expected that Gov. Johnson will remove the accused from office. They will not be tried until next September. The county is said to have a floating indebtedness of $200,000, alleged to be due to official extravagance. The last legislature authorized a bond issue and the bonds were sold this week. The public examiner's department will superintend the disbursment of this money.

Celebrate Tin Wedding.

Monday was the tenth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Math. Barsen and they were very pleasantly surprised by a number of the old settlers of the city. All present had a most delightful time and Mr. and Mrs. Barsen were given an opportunity to show their skill in handling numerous tinware presents brought by the guests.

Farmers Institute.

The Farmers Institute held here on Tuesday was quite well attended, but there were not so many farmers out as there should have been. Interesting talks upon agricultural matters were given and all who attended were well paid for the time they spent here.

A log drive for the Crookston Lumber company arrived here Saturday evening and it will take about ten days before the logs are all sorted and sluiced over the dam. It will take about 60 days more before the drive reaches Crookston.

M. Murphy, who for a number of years made his headquarters in Thief River Falls, being collector for the International Harvester company, but of late has been conducting a hotel at Twin Valley, sold his property there last week and has gone to Calgary to visit his son, William Murphy.

H. E. Ives, recently elected county treasurer to fill the vacancy caused by the death of O. T. Tandberg, was in the city Tuesday attending to business matters. Mr. Ives and family will remove to Red Lake Falls this week and on Saturday Mr. Ives will assume the duties of office.

Joe Blair was up from Red Lake Falls Tuesday piloting a delegation of Southern Red Lake county township supervisors around the metropolis of Red Lake county. Mr. Belair is the agent in the southern part of the county for the Northern Culvert company, of Thief River Falls, and it was for the purpose of inspecting the factory and the product that the other gentleman were here. They were greatly pleased with the culverts manufactuered by the local concern.

A perfect town is that in which you see the farmer patronising the home merchants, the laborers spending the money they earn with their own tradesmen, and all animated by a spirit that will not purchase articles abroad if they can be bought at home. The spirit of reciprocity between man and the mechanic, tradesman and laborer, farmer and manufacturer, results every time in making the town a perfect one to do business in "Perfection" should always be desired where attainment is barely possible, we presume, but a perfect town must be denominated a great rarity until we reach a more advanced stage toward the millennium than has yet been gained.

Park Board Appointed.

A special meeting of the city council was held Tuesday evening and about the only business to be transacted was the appointment of a park board. Perl W. Mabey and Herbert Fuller were appointed. The other member of the board is T. L. Meigaard.

Branching Out.

George and Oscar Williams this week purchased the cold storage plant of the John Gund Brewing company in this city. They will remove their pop factory to the manufacture of soft drinks will make ice cream.

To Go To Grand Forks.

The Thief River Falls ball club goes to Grand Forks Sunday and will play a game with the team of that city. Sixty per cent of the gate receipts will go to the winning team and 40 per cent to the losing team. The full nine will go over and it promises to be a good game.

Who Is the Owner?

Two men, evidently under the influence of liquor, had a quarrel Monday evening on the road just south of Dennis Conely's farm. The next morning a horse hitched to a buggy, which had been turned upside down, was found in the ditch near where they had had the trouble. The horse has since been cared for by Ole Jarneson, but no one has appeared to claim it as yet. The animal does not belong to any of the livery stables in this city.

A Picnic Sunday.

The Brage Male Choir will give an excursion and picnic Sunday up the Thief River to which the general public is invited. A musical program has been prepared and a good time is guaranteed to all who attend. Two gasoline launches have been chartered and the boats will leave the dock near the creamery at 10 and 12:30 o'clock. Gentlemen will be charged 50 cents and ladies 25 cents. The ladies are expected to furnish a lunch for two. Tickets for the excursion are on sale at the Peoples Drug Store.

Soon to be Married.

George T. Wernham, the genial representative of F. A. Patrick & Co., of Duluth, who for the past few years has made his headquarters in this city, left yesterday for Chicago. Just why Mr. Wernham is making the trip to Chicago is explained by the following taken from the Sunday Chicago Tribune:

"The marriage of Miss Grace E. L. Chapman, daughter of Mrs. G. C. Chapman, 1112 North Clark street, to George Titus Wernham will take place on June 21 at 8:30 p. m., at the residence of the bride's mother. The Rt. Rev. Daniel D. Tuttle, bishop of Missouri, will perform the ceremony. The bride will be attended by her sister, Miss Florence Chapman, as maid of honor, and Miss Harriet Goodrich and Miss Emma Wernham as bridemaids. Arthur Hill of Dundee will be best man."

Mr. and Mr. Wernham will arrive in Thief River Falls the latter part of July and make their home in the Evenson flat on LaBree avenue.

Here June 29th.

Among the many attractive features of the mammoth $1,000,000 collection of wild animals exhibited with Gollmar Bros.' Greatest of American Shows is the only genuine black African blood sweating hippopotamus in captivity. This monster brute, representing a cash outlay of $20,000, is transported in a colossal tank which is built to hold 40,000 gallons of water weighing more than a frieght car. The mighty captive is greater in bulk than the largest elephant and alone is worth traveling hundreds of miles to see. In the arena are shown 100 new feature acts in which are engaged the world's most famed circus celebrities, riders, leaders, vaulters, acrobats and contortionists. The hippodrome exercises present a spectacular realistic page from the old world's tournament history, and with dare devil races, jousts and gladiatorial contests keep the interest of the audience at the highest pitch. At 10 o'clock each morning the Gollmar Bros.' new featured free fair and triumphal pageant through the principal streets; dont fail to see it.

Gollmar Bros.' Greatest of American Shows will be in Thief River Falls Tuesday, June 29. Two performances daily, doors open 1 and 7 p. m.

Gollmar Bros. This Season.

Always an event of more than passing interest is that form of entertainment which appeals most generally to the public, THE CIRCUS, and Gollmar Bros. this year bring it to its highest expression. It is an accepted fact that the exceptional and most artistic in act and feature has always held the ascendancy in their exhibitions and whatever of novelty has been procurable has been found in the program of the Greatest of American Shows from season to season. And in 1909 this fact will be most clearly noted for "thrillers", new enough, novel enough and sufficiently daring to engender the emotional excitement has been secured. In the arena new European families will thrill, dazzle and delight the audience in what is far and away the most sensational danger defying and expert arial act ever shown in America, closely calling the world renowned Flying Nelsons in their new casting, and return exercise in which these stoical people gamble with destiny and dare death in the performance of deeds which make the hazardous loop the loop and loop the gaps, with which most readers are familiar, look by contrast like a parlor game of ten pins. There are over 100 new ring acts and in feature and exercise the new Grand Entree will present a new magnificent spectacle. The hippodrome will introduce scores of new races and stunts and 30 of the most celebrated clowns, jesters and comiques will furnish side-splitting divertisement for the entertainment of the audience. A magnificent collection of wild animals will be on exhibition in the menagerie and a monster herd of elephants with the smallest baby of its kind in captivity. Remember the day and date, Thief River Falls, Tuesday, June 29, and the magnificent, allegorical, millitary and spectacular free street parade with 3 big bands and 32 pipe $5000 calliope at 10 a. m.

A Peculiar Accident.

The Alexandria Post News gives the particulars of a shocking accident which occured at Holmes City, Douglas county, a few days ago. The sixteen year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bachlin, had occasion to go to the barn to gather eggs. She had heavy black hair, and wore it in two braids. A large pump, driven by a gasoline engine was in operation in the barn, and in some manner, her hair caught in the shafting. Before she could be released, her entire scalp was torn from her head, and one ear was loosened. A physician was summoned and found her very weak from loss of blood. The scalp has been replaced, and at last reports she was in as good condition as could be expected.

Married Today.

At the home of the bride's parents at Henning today will occur the marriage of Mr. John O. Cronkhite, of this city, to Miss Lillian Allberg, of Henning.

The bride is one of the accomplished young ladies of Henning and the groom is one of the popular mail clerks running on the Wheatline. Mr. and Mrs. Cronkhite will return to this city about the 1st of July and make their home on the East Side.

INDIANS ARE CELEBRATING

A Thousand Chippewas and Sioux Indians Renew Peace Pact.

A Large Number Of Visitors from Adjoining Towns In Attendance.

Quite a number from Thief River Falls were down to White Earth the first of week to take part in the celebration of the 41st anniversary of the settlement on this reservation Over 1000 Indians are participating in the exercises. Visitors from towns have been pouring in on foot, by teams and autos. The forenoon exercises consisted of a meeting of representative chiefs of the Sioux and Chippewas in a peace compact and the solemn ceremony of burying the hatchet, followed by an Indian parade on foot and horseback. Fully 500 Indian braves, many of them scard and wrinkled with age, took part in the parade.

Then followed the speechmaking by D. S. Hall, Chief Maycouzgoshiz, Joseph Sharet and others. She Chippewas and Siouxs participated in the customary dances, foot, pony and canoe races, lacrosse, sham battles, etc. Several bowries furnished amusement to those who enjoy dancing.

Among those present are the venerable heap chief Mayzheau of the Chippewas and Chief Two Star of the Sioux. Both formerly met on the war path on these grounds long ago when the Chippewas were enemies. A strong detachment of police from the agency office serves to keep perfect order.

Matched for a Fight.

Curley Ulrich, erstwhile Thief River Falls resident, is coming to the front in the East, according to the following taken from the Duluth Herald:

Curly Ulrich sends good news and plenty of breezy confidence from the slumbering city of Philadelphia.

At the present time the Duluth scrapper is matched with Paddy Lavin. The bout will be held the present week. If Curly wins that fight, he is sure that he can secure some matches with the best boys in the East. Lavin, according to the dope sent by Curley, has beaten young Loughery, Willie Fritzgerland, "The Fighting Harp," and others of the best of their class in the East.

Gunther and Willie will fight their postponed battle on June 18. If Gunther and Ulrich are successful in their fights scheduled for Philly, they may come West seeking matches on the Pacific coast.

Condemn Gift of Silver Service to Battleship.

The forty-third annual reunion of the Minnesota G. A. R. at St. Paul came to an end after a day of important events, principal among which were the passing of a resolution condemning the presenting of a silver service bearing the portrait of Jefferson Davis to the battleship Mississippi; the unanimous endorsement of former Governor Van Sant for national commander at the next national encampment at Salt Lake City Aug. 9 and the election of officers and delegates to the national encampment. The officers elected are: Judge L. W. Collins, Minneapolis, commander; Dr. O. S. Pine, St. Paul, senior vice commander, and J. A. Towne, Washington, junior vice commander.

DECLARES THE LAW VALID

Itasca County Jurist Passes on Statute Limiting Saloons.

The Alderman law limiting saloons to one for 500 inhabitants in towns where a larger number does not already exist has been sustained in a decision just handed down by Judge Wright of the Fifteenth judicial district in the case of Edward Langthig against County Auditor M. A. Spang of Itasca county.

The attorneys for Langthig, the applicant, argued that the law is unconstitutional because it is class legislation in that it permits some cities to have more than one saloon for each 500 people, that is, those that already have more than the limit, but prohibits others from having more than this number.

The judge in his memorandum says that the law does not fix different ratios for different places, but stops things where they are except as to towns which have less than one saloon for each 500 people.

Any law tending to decrease the evils of the liquor traffic is good, he says, and it is certain that the greater the competition the greater the temptation to break the laws regulating the traffic. It will prevent future towns, he says, from coming to the condition of Calumet, which has only 300 people and fifteen to twenty saloons, or Snowball, where the whole town is composed of saloons.

TWO CAUGHT IN FLYWHEEL

One Man Instantly Killed and a Second Seriously Hurt.

Charles J. Olson, thirty-five years of age, a millwright employed in the Pillsbury-Washburn "B" mill at Minneapolis, was instantly killed and A. J. Swanson, a fellow workman, was seriously injured as the result of being caught in a flywheel.

The two men, with Charles Strahl, beltman, tried to throw one of the large belts from its wheel. Olson's foot slipped and he was carried with the belt to the wheel and instantly killed.

Swanson was thrown back with such force that he was rendered unconscious. He was injured about the face and head and internal injuries are feared. Strahl escaped injury.

MUCH MONEY IN THIS STATE

Bank Deposits Increase More Than 17 Per Cent.

Bank deposits in Minnesota have increased over 17 per cent in a year, according to figures compiled by George Welsh, state immigration commissioner.

A year ago all the state and national banks in the state had deposits amounting to $223,532,566. Now the deposits in the same banks total $262,042,931.84, an increase of $38,520,365.84, or 17.28 per cent.

SHOOTS HIS WIFE TO DEATH

St. Paul Man Also Attempts to Kill Another Woman.

George Fox of St. Paul, a dining car conductor on the Northern Pacific, made a trip to Burlington, Ia., and going to a rooming house where his wife, Bessie Cox, was rooming, shot her to death. He also attempted to kill another woman named Pearl Smith, but the bullet missed her. He was arrested. Jealousy is said to be the cause.

Child Fatally Injured.

Pushed from her father's stone wagon at St. Paul by a crowd of boys who were trying to catch a ride, Clara, the five-year-old daughter of Henry Sternaman, fell under the rear wheel and was so severely injured that her recovery is considered very doubtful.

YOUNG BOYS ARE WOUNDED

Two St. Paul Youths Shot by Man They Annoyed.

Two young boys were shot at St. Paul by William Seabolt, a plasterer, as the result of a long feud between the latter and a crowd of boys that annoyed him. Both boys will probably recover. Seabolt was taken to the Margaret street police station.

A crowd of boys have been annoying residents for some time along Bates avenue about the corner of Plum street and especially William Seabolt, according to the police. This has consisted in the ringing of bells and pounding on windows and like depredations.

A crowd of boys gathered about on Dayton's Bluff and proceeded about their boyish pranks at the different houses. They made for Seabolt's house later in the evening. Seabolt had repeatedly warned them and that gave spice to the adventure.

They gathered about Seabolt's house about 9 o'clock. They had not long to wait for an answer. Seabolt suddenly appeared at the back door with a shotgun. He discharged this in the direction of the noise.

Aaron Ihrig, eleven years old, was shot six times, once in the neck, once in the left shoulder and four times in the chest.

Arnold Lang, twelve years old, was shot once in the left thigh.

MACALESTER FUND COMPLETE

Nearly Half Million for Endowment and Building Purposes.

Announcement of the completion of the $450,000 endowment and building fund of Macalester college was made at commencement exercises. Three hundred thousand dollars of the amount will constitute the endowment fund. The remainder is pledged for the construction and maintenance of new buildings. President Thomas Shaw of the board of trustees announced that $1,000 would be given for the improving of the athletic field and that the new Carnegie science hall would be built within a year.

The givers of more than $5,000 to the fund were announced as follows: J. J. Hill, $50,000; Frederick Weyerhaeuser, $50,000; General Educational board, $75,000; Andrew Carnegie, $30,000; O. A. Robertson, $26,000; T. B. Janey, $10,000; W. H. Dunwoody, $10,000; R. C. Jefferson, $11,756; R. A. Kirk, $10,282; A. D. Thompson and Judge Thomas Wilson, $5,000 each.

WISCONSIN MEN DROWNED

Two of Them Perish in a Northern Minnesota Lake.

F. C. Cole and Hans Bergam, the former thirty-five years of age and the latter thirty, employed at the Hawkins mine near Nashwauk, were drowned in Pickerel lake. HOWELL PLANER AND MATCHER

We Also Have Second-Hand Machinery

Established 1879

You no doubt find it a hard matter to sell your rough lumber to advantage because most of your customers want it finished. Furthermore you can get twice as much for your lumber by planing it, making it up into flooring, drop siding, window casing and mouldings, for which there is an unlimited demand at big prices. The Howell Planer and Matcher does all this work to perfection.

You can also make big money by working up all your slabs and waste material into Lath and Shingles. All you need for this purpose is our Lath Mill and Shingle Machine. We build the best and most up-to-date machines of this kind on the market which we can furnish you at manufacturers prices. Keep your plant running all the time. Remember we build complete Saw Mill Plants from top to bottom, all of our own manufacture. Our new Catalog B is just now out. If you have not received it, write to-day. Manufactured by

REAL THREAD OF LIFE.

A Tiny Wisp of Tissue Imbedded in the Heart's Walls.

According to tradition, it was Atropos, the blind Fury with the abhorred shears, who slit the thin spun life, and many of Milton's readers may have wondered whether there was any thread in the anatomy of man the severance of which would be immediately fatal. Injuries to the brain and heart, in both of which the principle of life has been supposed to reside, may be survived for shorter or longer periods; but, as an article by Dr. O. E. Lea reminds us, physiologists have of late years discovered a nerve or bundle of nerves which might well be described as the thread of life. One of the developing sciences of our time is cardiography, the science of the heart beat. The heart, as most people are aware, is divided into auricles and ventricles. The ventricles are the pumping chambers; the auricles are the collecting chambers of the blood and, like the stroke of a racing eight, set the rhythm of the heart beat. A little instrument called the sphygmograph is placed on the wrist pulse and magnifies its movements and traces them with a recording pen in a zigzag curve, telling the observer what the ventricles are doing. Another instrument, the polygraph, placed on the jugular, records the more delicate vibrations of the auricle. With the aid of these two instruments the physician can find what all the four chambers of the heart are doing. Now, the auricular contraction acts as a stimulant or starting shock to the ventricular contraction. Most stimuli are conveyed along nerves. Therefore a little nerve in the heart to act as a telegraph wire between auricle and ventricle was to be expected. Such a thing has been found by physiologists; but, rather than a nerve, it is a specialized sensitive portion of the heart muscle itself. It is a little wisp of tissue not an inch long and only one-twelfth of an inch thick. On this delicate communicating wisp, called the auriculo ventricular bundle, hangs existence itself. Evolution has arranged that it shall be so small and so sheltered in position in the heart that it is rarely damaged even by large injuries to that organ. But if it is severed then the ventricles must stop and life must instantaneously cease.—London Post.

THE POSTOFFICE.

It Seemed to Be Located in a Rather Lonely Place.

A veteran stagecoach driver in Idaho used to tell of an incident that happened when he drove the stage over to Boise City from the Union Pacific line. He had on one trip only a single passenger, a little tenderfoot of a New England schoolma'am going to take charge of a school in that town. She had never before been farther from Boston than the Hudson river. Along about dusk one evening as she sat on the box by the driver and the team wound its way around the shoulder of a bleak mountain a highwayman suddenly stepped into the middle of the road and held up his hand. A cocked rifle rested easily in the hollow of his arm and its muzzle pointed straight at the driver's head. He quickly pulled up.

"Throw over Wells-Fargo's box!" said the man with the gun.

The driver reached down and flung the box into the road; then he started to gather up the reins.

"Hold on!" the other cried impatiently. "Where's the mail bag? Don't you think I want that?"

For reply the driver swiftly kicked it overboard.

"All right," said the man on the ground in affable tone; "you can drive on now."

For half a mile they rolled along in silence, schoolma'am and driver. The former seemed to be in deep study. At last, turning to the driver, she said, "I don't know anything about the west, of course, but that certainly does seem to be an awfully lonesome place to have a postoffice."—Washington Post.

A Useless Implement.

Aunt Ann Arkwright, the bustling spouse of Uncle Joshua Arkwright, proudly showed him a silver implement which a friend had given her as a birthday present. It was shaped something like a spatula, but broadened considerably toward the handle. Uncle Joshua inspected it with some curiosity.

"What is it?" he asked.

"Haven't you any idea?" she said.

"No, not the least in the world."

"Well," said Aunt Ann, "it's a pie knife."

Uncle Joshua picked it up, inspected it critically and laid it down again.

"I haven't any use for it," he said, "as far as I'm concerned. It's too wide. I couldn't eat pie with it 'thout cutting my mouth."—Youth's Companion.

Dyed Articles.

In dyeing at home amateurs often make the mistake of putting the dyed article through the wringer, possibly to avoid staining the hands for one reason or perhaps hoping to dry the garment more quickly. This, however, should never be done, for the creases so formed are most obstinate and, in fact, often only disappear with wear, despite all pressing. Dyed articles should be squeezed from the bath and hung out of doors to dry.

Town Booming Helps

III.—Make a Noise Like a Dollar

The man who gets ahead is the one who makes a noise, and it's the same with a town.

But it must be the RIGHT KIND OF NOISE.

There are millions of noises in the world and only one kind worth making. That's the kind a man learned about when he tried to interview a great financier.

He had spent several days trying to get into the private office of the old skinflint, but was always headed off.

At last he went to a friend for advice.

"I'll tell you what to do," said the friend. "You go down and stand in front of the old fellow's door and MAKE A NOISE LIKE A DOLLAR. When he comes out to grab you, that will be your chance."

That's the kind of noise we should make in this town.

We should sound like ready money and look like it.

Nothing would bring new business and hustling citizens quicker than a NOISE LIKE A DOLLAR. Every letter that goes out should be an advertisement for our town.

If you don't know how to make a NOISE LIKE A DOLLAR, just call on us, and we'll try to help you.

One way is to advertise. When everybody gets to making the right kind of noise it will be worth while watching things boom.

HOMESTEAD LAWS.

Senator Nelson has recently published an exhaustive article on the land laws of this country for the American Academy of Political and Social Science, and which appeared in the May number. The United States Senate has since ordered a summary of this article, in which is given a brief review of the most important laws to be published for a more general distribution. As chairman of the senate committee on public lands and chairman on the committee on lands, Senator Nelson has had an unusual opportunity to familiarize himself with the land laws of this country. The homestead Act of 1862 he regards as the most important, in many respects, of all these laws. This he terms a veritable home-builder's law, as under its operations the poor people of the country have been enabled to secure for themselves happy homes. He considers that the growth and development of this country has largely resulted from the operations of this law. "The one defect of the homestead law that has to some extent marred its greatest usefulness has been the permission to 'commute' and make final entry before the end of the five year period says Senator Nelson. This was especially glaring and pronounced while "commutation could be made in six month, and it is still very bad under the fourteen months, limitation. The evil lies in the fact that so many 'take claims' because of the commutation privilege, not for the purpose of a permanent home, but merely for the purpose of securing the land to hold for speculative purposes, as middlemen, to sell out at a profit to some actual and permanent settlers. The real settler is in no hurry to make proof and final entry. He oftentimes avails himself of the seven year period." The timber and stone act, he believes, should be repealed, it having been the vehicle through which the big lumbermen have secured and monopolized thousands of acres of the most valuable timber lands in America. In view of the present conditions, with a rapidly increasing population and a diminishing area of public domain, Senator Nelson concludes that the government should permit no agricultural lands to be taken save under the homestead act, and with the commutation privilege removed; that the forest lands should be preserved, and only the large timber sold, and that the arid lands be disposed of only to actual settlers under the reclamation law.—Alexandria Post News.

Northfield News: There is a good deal to be said in favor of the plan urged by J. F. Spencer, the president of the Olmstead County Good Roadsassocation, for the improvement of the highways of his district. There are, it appears, about 200 miles of roads in the county. Instead of attempting to patch them up in spots he proposes to put them all in thoroughly good condition at once, and would raise the money for this purpose by bonding the county $100,000. He would have the work let by contract and all done under the supervision of a competent road engineer. He estimates that for $500 a mile all the roads in the county could be put in first-class condition, and that the expense would not prove burdensome by his method of issuing bonds, being $3.40 per year for ten years for each owner of a quater section of land. If for any such sum permanent roads could be built, the benefits farmers would derive from them would be purchased cheaply at the price. We would like to have the opinion of a competent road engineer on this point We are inclined to think that on the more tarveled roads the expenditure of a much larger sum would in the end prove more economical, as well as necessary to provide a road which would be good at all seasons of the year. As a preliminary measure, however, Mr. Spencer's plan impresses us favorably. The first thing to do is to make provision for the proper grading and drainage of highways. After that more durable surfacing material than ordinary dirt may be profitably laid on where necessary

For several years, young people have been leaving the farms and casting their lot with the masses in the cities to such an extent that it has been almost impossible to procure help enough on the farms to do the proper kind of farming. There is a question as to whether these people who leave the farm have bettered their condition. Some perhaps have, but thousands have not. Still the cities with their show and many supposed advantages attract the girl or boy like a magnet attracts a piece of steel and as a result the percentage of city and village population has increased and rural population decreased. There are now more consumers than producers and consequently everything now raised on the farm is high. There will from now on, in all probability, be a reaction. People are beginning to see that the farm is not the worst place on earth. In fact it is fast gaining prestige as an ideal place and there are thousands of city people who would be only glad to go back to the farm if they had an opportunity.—Pelican Rapids Press.

Northwestern Agriculturist:—Minnesota land is looking up. A full section of Red River Valley land known as the Jerry Enright Farm located near East Grand Forks, sold last week for $110 an acre and the Christ Coulter farm near Mallory, Minn., not far from the above mentioned farm sold last week for $50. This is a full section averaging, therefore, $78.70 per acre. Both of these farms are well developed and have buildings on. There is no reason why northern Minnesota land should not sell when well developed for $100 to $150 an acre. It will produce just as much as will land in Illinois and Iowa which readily sells for $150 an acre, yet much of this northern Minnesota land can now be bought for $12 to $15 or $20 an acre without improvements The Nimrod Victor farm, just north of Mayard, near Granite Falls, consisting of 240 acres, was sold last months for $62.50 per acre cash.

Rollis Rumblings.

Several parties who came to attend the sale of state lands have been in Rollis looking up homesteads and acquainting themselves with the the prospects spoken of. We may look for a very large number of new settlers as soon as they are assured that this great work of redemption will be carried out.

In the course of the next year and a half, there will be nearly half a million dollars spent in Marshall county and Beltrami counties for drainage. Nearly all this money will be expended in the Thief Lake and Mud Lake districts. A careful estimate shows that this work will redeem about 500 sections of land, 250 of which are unsettled. All this reclaimed land is the finest kind of soil, capable of producing grain, hay, clover or any other kind of crop that will mature in the Northwest. Much of this land is now covered with a fine growth of timber, while hay, such as blue joint and pea vine on the up lands and slough grass on the bottoms, grow all over. That this state of things is going to bring in a flood of settlers, is plain to anyone. The wide advertising it has already had, is beginning to tell and the advance guard is already with us.

The viewers on the Thief River state ditch have been in our neighborhood several days. They called a meeting of the settlers around Thief Lake and on the Moose River bottom which was held at Jonstad last week, at which time the opposition was out in full force, but it was so infinitely small in comparison with the overwhelming sentiment in favor of lowering Thief Lake, at least two feet, that the board simply said that this opposition might as well go away back and sit down, for this work was going on. The lake would be lowered and these poor people who had been suffering for years would have their prayers granted. The state drainage board has pledged itself to co-operate with the settlers and prosecute this work until all eastern Marshall county is thoroughly drained and we know the board is acting in perfect good faith.

Mr. and Mrs. Ole Bredeson and daughter, of Belmont, N. D. arrived in the city last Saturday and are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Aos and family.

Leonard Peterson returned to this city last Friday from his trip to California and other Pacific coast points. He reports having an excellent time and enjoyed his trip greatly.

Emil Larson of Bray township passed through the city Monday. Mr. Larson was bound for Seattle, Washington and will visit the exposition and many other points of interest in the west before returning.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

Dr. Booren went to Stillwater Monday evening to join his wife and later will go to Fergus Falls where he will spend a couple of weeks camping out at one of the lakes near that place. He expects to return to Thief River Falls about the 1st of July.

Big clearance sale at Thompson sisters' millinery for 1 week, beginning June 17. Ladies' and children's hats to be sold at greatly reduced prices. Children's trimmed hats 50 cts., 75cts. and $1. Ladies' hats from $1 up. Don't forget the date.

Ed. and Will Korstad last week closed a deal whereby they became the proprietors of the Wilson Clothing company stock and will conduct this store in the future. Both are experienced in this line of business and no doubt will make a success.

At a recent election held at Pelan, it was voted to dissolve the village corporation, and six months will be allowed to straighten up the village affairs. Pelan was incorporated as a village in 1903, and was a prosperous town until the railroads were built on each side of it, which of course meant its demise.

Chas. Bergton of St. Hilaire was in town Wednesday and took the Northern Pacific train for Mandan, North Dakota. He goes to North Dakota in response to a telegram from Dan Linnihan who is doing some railroad construction work and will be employed with Mr. Linnihan. He was accompanied to Mandan by Ray Linnihan.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

Blanche and Berlin Holum left last week for Lyle, Minn. to spend a few weeks visiting with their relatives.

John Clair, an old time resident of the Red Lake county, arrived in the city Monday and will spend several days here visiting with old friends.

Mrs. T. Mork, of Los Angeles, Cal., was in the city to spend Sunday with friends, being enroute to Warren. Mrs. Mork's husband was formerly clerk of court of Marshall county.

Fred Richards was in from Dorothy Monday. Mr. Richards has been engaged by the Red Lake Falls Milling company as grain buyer in the elevator at Dorothy.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

J. E. Stowell, representing the Thief River Culvert Co., attended the meeting of the town board at Biesmeier's last Monday and succeeded in supplying the town of Rosedale with culverts—Mahnomen Free Press.

A class of nine was taken into the Workmen lodge last Friday evening. Five other candidates have made application and it is expected to greatly increase the membership of this order here in the near future.

Martin Bjorke and Royal Dahlen were up from St. Hilaire last Thursday. Mr. Dahlen has been suffering from a severe attack of rheumatism the past several weeks and leaves this week for Hot Springs, Montana, to take a treatment for severals weeks.

For Sale—Heavy work team, 1 driving mare and 1 Percheon stallion. Anybody requiring such horses would do well by looking them over before buying elsewhere. They are of the best type the market can produce. For further information inquire of P. H. Devany or at Stebbins' Drug store. 19 tf.

John J. Soll has sold his saloon at Wylie to Anton Anderson of this village who has already taken charge. Mr. and Mrs. Soll expect to leave for Montana the first of next month where they will try for a homestead in new land openings which will take place next month.—St. Hilaire Spectator.

B. O. Koch, of Freemont Ill., when in Crookston recently, stated as his belief that more people are going to come into the Red River Valley during the coming five or ten years than are at present located in that section. Mr. Koch is the owner of the well known and extensive Keystone farm and he believes that here are offered opportunities in real estate which can not be excelled in any other section of this whole country.

Wheat Acreage Will Be Large.

"As the result of the artificial prices made for wheat by the transaction of certain individuals in Chicago, there will be an increased acreage of the crop, says, United States Secretary of Agriculture Wilson in a general talk with a correspondent concerning farm conditions. "Directly, the farmer will feel the effect of the prices in the cost of his bread. Only a compratively few farmers can hold their grain. They must, as a rule dispose of it soon after harvesting. Of course, it is problematical, based on climatic and other conditions, what the outcome of the increased acreage will be.

"Our increase in production is not keeping pace with our increase in population. As consumption approaches, production prices naturally advance. Machinery plays an important part upon our modern farms, and of all agricultural machinery, that is used in the wheat fields is the most complicated and delicate. Skilled labor is required to handle it, and this fact is an important feature of the situation. It is impossible to employ everyone willing to work, because the machinery will be wrecked by inexperienced workmen. With the labor supply limited, it can readily be seen why the price of wheat keeps up. The same general factors operate in a measure with respect to corn, but that crop is not dependent upon skilled labor to the same degree as wheat."

F. P. A. K. To Meet.

The Farmers Progressive Association of Kratka will hold a big meeting on Sunday June 20th at home of Peter Hebeen, and arrangements are being made for a big time. This Association was organized some weeks ago and has for its object the promotion of co-operation among the farmers of Kratka and the betterment of the welfare of its members. The meeting on June 20th will be in the form of a picnic and there will be several short speeches and discussions of subjects relative to the object of the organization.—Plummer Pioneer.

Nearly Drowned.

Allen Stenseth, the eight year old son of Andrew Stenseth, came very near losing his life last Saturday by drowning in Red Lake River. With a number of other children he was playing on the river bank and fell in. The other children at once gave alarm and Dan Johnson, who lives nearby went to the river and rescued the young boy. He was unconscious when taken from the water and it required considerable work to revive the action of the heart.

Defeated Red Lake Falls.

By a score of 6 to 5, the Thief River Falls base ball team defeated Red Lake Falls at the fair grounds in this city on Sunday.

The feature of the game was the number of errors made by both teams. The Thief River Falls players were so confident of winning that not any members of the nine played with any enthusiasm and as a result came near losing the game.

Noted Man Coming.

Horace Huron, the musical fun maker of the Modern Woodmen of America, will deliver a lecture in Thief River Falls on Monday evening, July 5th, in the Evenson Hall. The lecture is to be free and it is the intention of the Woodmen to make this affair a Fourth of July celebration.

Notice.

Notice is hereby given that a note given by Jones Holt to C. E. Chapman on March 29, 1909, due June 1, 1909, has been lost and any signature to same will be a forgery. C. E. Chapman.

Holt Won the Game.

A base ball team composed mostly of employes of Thief River Falls Lumber company, was up to Holt Sunday and played a game of ball. The local team was defeated by a score of 13 to 3.

Gone to Lake City.

The local militia company left Sunday evening for Lake City and for the next ten days will be in camp there. Nearly half of the residents of this city were at the Soo depot to see the company depart. Some 53 departed Sunday evening and four more will go down this week and join the company later.

To Hold Auction Sales.

Ole C. Brenna, the auctioneer, has rented the Crocker building at the corner of La Bree avenue and Second street and will here after hold auction sales every Saturday afternoon and evening. Farmers and others having goods that they desire to sell are requested to bring them in to Mr. Brenna and he will sell the same, charging a small commission for his work. He already has a large number of goods in the building which will be sold at the sale on Saturday of this week.

The Dog Came Back.

Crookston Times: Yesterday morning Bennie Moe left for his claim near Germantown, where he will spend the summer months raising prize pumpkins for the state fair exhibit from Polk county, unless Red Lake county officials get next to his intentions He was accompanied by Jack Dunn, who will be the chief cook and bottle washer. He also took along C. C. Hock's prize retriever, known all over the city as "Jumbo".

Jumbo, however, evidently did not like the lay of the land as he came back last evening, arriving at the back door of the Hoch home just after supper time.

Whether Jumbo did not like the cooking of Dunn, or did not take kindly to the place at the table assigned to him by Mr. Moe in the claim shanty, is not known, but the society for the prevention of cruelty to animals will be notified at once and a full investigation of the case made before the adjournment of the December grand jury.

TIDINGS FROM SCANDINAVIA

News of General Interest from Three Countries.

TOURISTS ARE ARRIVING

From All Parts of Europe and America People Are Flocking to Sweden for the Summer Months—Stockholm the Great Center of Interest, Especially for the American and English Visitor.

SWEDEN.

The tourists have begun to arrive. They come from all parts of Europe and America and the hotels of the country are prepared to receive the visitors and make it pleasant for them. While Sweden is not nearly so great a tourist country as Norway the tourist traffic has in that country been increasing at a marvelous rate during the past five years. Stockholm is a great drawing card for all tourists, especially the American and English tourist, who never find it difficult to get along, because English is so generally used at all the leading hotels and by railway and steamship officials. There will of course be the same large number of Swedish-Americans and they are now arriving by the hundreds to celebrate midsummer with the old folks. The Swedish-American generally goes direct home to the folks and does not do much traveling, but while he remains in Sweden he spends his money freely and they are now more welcome in Sweden than they used to be. The Swedish-Americans are now held in high esteem, whereas a number of years ago they were much criticised for using a mixture of Swedish and English in their speech. All this is wearing away and the Swedish-American is not an unwelcome guest in the homeland any longer.

There is no gainsaying the fact that the Swedish Anti-Emigration society has been busy during the past two years, but there have been no encouraging results. At least one cannot so judge by the many people that continue to emigrate to foreign lands, especially to America. One of its lecturers addressed not less than 15,000 persons during one year and over 12,000 pamphlets have been distributed. Several stock companies have been organized for procuring homes for poor farmers and laborers. One of these companies has a capital of $30,000. The results of the agitation are not great, because Sweden has been suffering under a heavy financial depression lately. The leaders, however, of the movement feel satisfied that they will succeed in the long run.

In Berlin there has been arrested a clever swindler who seems to have made it a special business to deal in decorations of Scandinavian orders, such as the North Star Order, the Vasa Order, St. Olaf's Order, etc. He traveled under the name of nothing less than Marquis Floton d'Harancourt, moved in the very highest of society and has decorated several members of leading society families in Munchen, Leipsic and Brussels. From a number of persons he has collected large sums of money, promising them in return to use his influence at the Swedish court and secured them the insignias of distinction. The Swedish police had been endeavoring to locate him and it was rumored some time ago that he had been seen in Copenhagen.

There are about 4,000 carpenters on strike at present in Sweden. It is the largest carpenter strike on record and perhaps the most foolish one. It has been in progress now for several weeks and all the good that it has done has been to retard the building industry and do injury to the carpenters themselves, who cannot see that there is nothing to be gained by a strike of that order.

On July 17-18 at the exhibition there will be not less than 2,500 singers present. It will be the greatest singing festival ever held in Sweden. In 1897 there were over 1,000 singers in attendance during the memorable days of the great sangarfest, but this one will entirely eclipse it.

The Society of Colonial Wars of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania has presented a painting of the Swedish colony in Delaware in 1638 and the same will soon arrive in Stockholm, where it will be placed in the Bergstrahl House.

The late O. Ottesson left the largest collection of eggs in Europe, which are now in possession of the National Museum. There are hundreds of different varieties and there are not less than 20,000 of them.

The queen will, prior to her return to Sweden, pay a short visit to Franzensbad in Germany. She left Karlsruhe May 22 and it is expected that she will return to Stockholm about June 20.

A theatrical school has been started by Emil Hillberg in Stockholm and it is generally believed that it will prove a great success. Mr. Hillberg is an experienced actor and trained to the hour in the dramatic arts.

The tax on salt has been raised from 17 ore per kilogram to 20 ore per kilogram.

NORWAY.

Elias Tonnessen and Otto Fjeld, two alleged thieves, who have been the terror of Skien and vicinity for many months, made their escape from the Skien jail the other night in a most dramatic manner. Tonnessen, with the aid of a short iron bar which he had in some manner secured, succeeded in breaking out of his cell, and then proceeded to break open the door leading to his companion's cell. When they had gotten thus far they, however, encountered another difficulty. They had no clothes. They therefore concluded to wait for the jailer behind a hall door, overpowered him and took his clothes and also repeated the performance with his assistant, secured the keys from them and then made their escape. They have not been seen since in spite of the most rigid search. Several robberies have since been committed and it is laid up against the two escaped convicts. It is believed that they have large sums of money dug down in the woods in the vicinity of Skien and that they are trying to get hold of this before they make an attempt to skip the country. Their escape was of a most sensational order and the police of Skien are completely baffled.

The decision of English capitalists not to rebuild the Bohndalen paper mills, which were burned down last year, has set the people in that vicinity to thinking. In order to arrive at full and reliable information on this subject those who are directly concerned in the matter obtained a copy of the report of the meeting of the English proprietors, and a synopsis of the report has been given to the Norwegian press. It is stated in the plainest terms that the mills will not be rebuilt, because the present administration favors laws which tend to reduce the value of investments in industrial enterprises. A London banker who is financially interested in the Bohndalen plant also stated in his annual report that if the government bill providing for the regulation of factories becomes a law it will be practically impossible to make it pay to run industrial plants in Norway.

The receipts of the National railway in Norway were during the month of February of this year 1,225,622 crowns as against 1,272,807 crowns in February of last year. The total receipts from April 1, 1908, to March 1, 1909, were 16,407,929 crowns, as against 15,463,857 crowns during the same period the preceding year. The traffic on the new Bergen railway has been increasing rapidly and indications are that travel along this route will be unusually heavy this season.

German fishing trawlers who ply between Iceland and Stavanger have during the past year been doing a rushing business. They have already made seventeen trips from Iceland to Stavanger and have delivered 950 tons of fish at the latter city. A Stavanger paper notes that it is singular that some enterprising Norwegian ship owners do not take charge of this business instead of leaving it in the hands of the Germans.

Bishop Wexelsen celebrated his sixtieth birthday June 5 and was on this occasion the recipient of many telegrams of congratulations from all parts of the country. The bishop also received a large sum of money, which his friends desire him to use for a trip abroad in the interest of his health.

Carl Lumholtz will within a few days start on a long exploration tour in the interior of Mexico for the purpose of making ethnological and geographical explorations. He will travel alone, but will be escorted by Mexican scouts, whom the Mexican government has placed at his disposal. Lumholtz calculates spending a year in Mexico.

The Norwegian submarine boat "Kobber," which was recently completed at Kiel, Germany, was launched last month and is giving excellent satisfaction, according to statements of the various naval experts of the country. It is at present stationed in Christiania.

During the first quarter of the present year there were nearly three times as many emigrants that sailed from Trondhjem as during the same period last year. All indications are that this will be one of the heaviest emigration years on record.

The Wellman expedition ship is commanded by Captain Larsen, of Akersund. The ship stopped at Tronhjem not long ago where fifteen Norwegian laborers were engaged.

DENMARK.

The Danish statistical bureau has compiled some figures from the local elections which took place about two weeks ago. In Copenhagen the number of votes was 127,000 (67,000 men and 60,000 women); in Fredriksberg, 15,200 men and 16,500 women; in the provincial towns, 81,500 men and 80,700 women; in the country districts, 232,000 men and 266,000 women. The whole number of votes cast was 880,000, and the two sexes were almost equally represented. The cities polled the heaviest vote. Slagelse headed the list with a precentage of 90.3, while the percentage was only 64.2 in the rural communities. In the cities about 70 per cent of the women voted; in the country districts the corresponding percentage was only 38. In the island of Bornholm only 19 per cent of the women voted, and in nine rural precincts no women voted at all.

At least 1,000 Danish-Americans are expected to participate in the unique Fourth of July celebration which will be held at Aarhus. The King of Denmark even is taking an interest in the affair and will send the crown prince there to represent him. The object is to afford Scandinavians an occasion to learn the truth about the country which many of their nationality have made their home and learned to love as their own country, where they have availed themselves of the opportunities offered them and with which they are thoroughly familiar.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

The thirty-seventh annual commencement of the University of Minnesota took place last week, when 580 students, in cap and gown, the largest class ever graduated from the institution, received their diplomas. Professor Maria Sanford delivered the commencement address, the first woman upon whom this honor has ever been conferred. President Cyrus Northrop conferred the degrees and presented the diplomas.

The Virginia and Rainy Lake company, which operates two large saw mills, a planing mill and a lath mill at Virginia, has decided to double the capacity of its saw mills and erect a new planing mill. It is estimated the company has enough timber in sight to keep its mills at that point busy for fifteen or twenty years.

The rock crusher at the St. Cloud reformatory, which under a law passed by the last legislature is to furnish crushed rock free to counties that ask for it, is about ready to start and State Engineer George W. Cooley is sending out blanks to the counties that want the rock so that they can make formal application.

The Winona Merchants and Business Men's association has decided to become an active competitor of the big catalogue houses for country business in that section. It will issue a catalogue in which the various branches of trade represented by its members will be exploited.

A school of journalism will be established at the University of Minnesota under the department of rhetoric. It will consist of a series of lectures by newspaper men of the state.

The opinion seems to be prevalent that J. B. Galarneault of Aitkin will receive the appointment as state bank examiner when that department begins its existence Aug. 1.

A. L. Lawshe, third assistant postmaster general, will attend the meeting of the Minnesota Postmasters' association, which meets in St. Paul July 16, 17 and 18.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Louise Arbogast, indicted at St. Paul for the murder of her father, will be examined as to her mental condition on June 28. The insanity investigation will be conducted as an ordinary trial with a jury. The evidence submitted will be testimony from specialists on mental diseases and from the girl's jail attendants, her present mental condition being the only issue in the case.

Wong Quong, fifty years old, formerly owner of a Chinese restaurant, was found dead in bed at Minneapolis with his throat gashed. The door was locked and a blood stained razor lay open on a chair. He is believed to have ended his life because he was without a queue and thus made an outcast in his native land, where he had planned to return.

In a battle between two yeggmen suspects and a posse led by Constable Elgine at Millville thirty shots were fired. One of the pursued men cried that he had been "plugged for fair," but he was able to swim the river with his "pal" and escape. None of the posse members was injured.

Hit on the head by a heavy plank which had fallen three stories Peter Olson of St. Paul sat down and rested a few minutes, then resumed his work. He admitted being somewhat surprised when the plank landed, but would not admit that he was hurt.

David Markki and his three-year-old sister Ella were playing around a lumber pile near their home in Chisholm when the top of the pile slid and caught them both. The girl was killed and the boy sustained a broken leg.

Alvin, the twenty-one-months-old son of Paul Staples, who lives west of Winnebago City, found a bottle of carbolic acid in the woodshed and drank a portion of it. Death followed in three hours.

Hattie Linderman, ten years old, was drowned at Park Rapids while fishing from some logs. She was in the water half an hour and could not be resuscitated.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

John B. Grode, president of the board of public works, is dead at St. Paul after an illness covering several months. Death was not unexpected inasmuch as Mr. Grode had been in a critical condition for several days following a general decline which set in last fall.

P. J. Towey, a centenarian, died at the home of his son, Patrolman Thomas Towey, at St. Paul. He was born in the county of Mayo, Ireland, 102 years ago and came to St. Paul twenty-seven years ago.

Elijah Haskell Blodgett, one of Red Wing's eldest and most prominent as well as wealthiest citizens, was found dead in bed. Heart failure is given as the cause.

Carl Hase, a hermit, is dead at Young America, aged seventy-eight years. He owned 160 acres of land, on which no timber has ever been cut.

Richard Powers, one of the pioneers of Carver county, was found dead at his home in Young America. He was eighty-two years old.

James E. Hennessy, one of the best known conductors on the River division of the St. Paul road, is dead at Minneapolis.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

Fred Mohrle, who killed Constable Sam Young in North St. Louis several weeks ago, was assassinated in the corridor of the criminal court building at St. Louis by William Kane, a former deputy under Young. The shooting occurred as Mohrle was being taken to court to stand trial for the death of Young and is the culmination of a bitter political feud.

In several arrests made in Columbus, Marion and Dennison, O., federal inspectors and detectives who worked in conjunction with them in the case believe they have unearthed the biggest and best organized branch of the Black Hand in this country, Marion, O., being probably the headquarters of the organization.

Corporal Lisle Crabtree fatally shot Captain John C. Raymond, commanding officer of Troop B, Second United States cavalry, at Fort Des Moines, shot and seriously injured First Sergeant James H. Washburn and Corporal E. Such, who attempted to disarm him, and then fatally shot himself.

A. Milton Holden, a member of the brokerage firm of Fred S. Osborne & Co. of Detroit, committed suicide by shooting himself through the head. It is said Mr. Holden had been worrying about business affairs and had become despondent.

The bodies of J. Gooder of Rock Valley, Ia., and W. D. Toney of Sioux City, Ia., were found in a well on the McNally ranch near Kadoka, S. D. Michael Malone, who was in their employ, is under arrest, suspected of their murder.

Holding five men and two women helpless under the muzzles of revolvers three masked men secured $40,000 in gold from the bunkhouse of the Nellie mine on Bear creek, near Telluride, Colo., and made their escape.

While quarreling over an account Moses Razchio, a Hebrew peddler, fired two bullets into the body of A. H. Todd, senior member of the wholesale fruit firm of Todd & Kraft of Des Moines, and then committed suicide.

Following an investigation of three months by an Italian detective eight alleged leaders of a so-called Black Hand society were arrested at Barnesboro, Pa., charged with conspiring to commit murder.

Ex-Sheriff Edward Callahan, noted for participation in the feuds that have disrupted Breathitt county, Ky., for years, was shot from ambush at Crockettsville and, it is believed, fatally wounded.

Dr. Jessie A. Bearsley is the latest victim of an alleged "Black Hand" plot in Chicago. She was stabbed in the breast and stomach as she answered a knock at the back door of her home.

Near Honsdale, Pa., George Baker, a farmer, aged eighty-seven years, was murdered by his brother-in-law, Mark Van Dusen, aged eighty-six years. Van Dusen then committed suicide.

Quillie Simmons and Frank Samuels, colored, charged with the murder of young Ben Smoaks two weeks ago, were lynched at Smoaks, S. C., by a mob of over 500.

Cecelia Zwinrer, a widow of Rochester, N. Y., took two of her three children into a bedroom, lay down after turning on the gas and was asphyxiated with them.

In the eighty-seventh year of his life John Howard was sentenced at Chicago to serve nine months in the house of correction on the charge of house breaking.

Mrs. Elizabeth Sharp, wife of G. V. Sharp, a politician and manufacturer of Salem, O., killed herself and her twelve-year-old son Harlod.

Two mounted and masked men blew open a safe in a saloon in the center of Butte, Mont., seized $600 in cash and escaped.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

After eighteen months' service as a United States meat inspector in East St. Louis packing houses J. F. Harms has resigned and has written a letter to Secretary of Agriculture Wilson demanding an investigation of the meat inspection system at the National stock yards. Harms asserts that he resigned because he could not tolerate the conditions he saw and that inspectors in charge of the bureau of animal industry are too lenient with the packers.

The decision of the interstate commerce commission in the Portland gateway case, in which the Northern Pacific was ordered to join with the Union Pacific and the Chicago and Northwestern roads in establishing a through route for passengers, has been nullified by an injunction issued in the federal circuit court at St. Louis.

The Northwestern Newspaper Union of St. Paul, which before the sale of the Pioneer Press to the Dispatch was operated by the former, has been sold. It is understood that the purchaser is the Western Newspaper Union of Omaha.

Great Northern directors have flatly refused to send to Spokane, Wash., the company's records which the grand jury there wants to see in connection with charges made against M. J. Gordon, former counsel for the company.

Sale of School and Other State Lands

STATE OF MINNESOTA, State Auditor's Office.

St. Paul, April 12, 1909.

Notice is hereby given that on the day and date and at the time and place herein stated below in this notice, in the office of the county auditor of the respective county named in the State of Minnesota, I will offer for sale the following described unsold state lands, and the following described state lands, which have reverted to the state by reason of the non-payment of interest will also be then and there offered for resale. Fifteen per cent of the purchase price and interest on the unpaid balance from the date of sale to June 1st, 1910, must be paid at the time of the sale. The balance of the purchase money can be paid at any time, in whole or in part, within forty years of the time of the sale; the rate of interest on the unpaid balance of the purchase money will be four per cent per annum, payable in advance on June 1st of each year, provided the principal remains unpaid for ten years; but if the principal is paid before the expiration of ten years from the date of the sale the rate of interest on the unpaid balance of the purchase money will be five per cent per annum; interest is payable in advance on June 1st of each year.

Holders of certificates on which the interest payments are in default can have their certificates reinstated on payment, before the sale, of the interest in full to date and the penalties thereon, when the lands covered thereby will be withdrawn from sale.

All mineral rights are reserved by the state. All sales made will be subject to the provisions of Chapter No. 150 of the General Laws of 1909.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Whereas Default Has Been Made in the payment of the sum of Two Hundred and twenty and 23-100 Dollars, which is due at the date of this notice, upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by William J. Kelley, a widower, mortgagor, to Peoples State Bank of Thief River Falls, Minnesota, a corporation, mortgagee, bearing date the 27th day of October, A. D., 1906, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota on the 7th day of November, 1906, at [illegible] o'clock a. m., in book 31 of mortgages, on page 301; and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof, and that there is due on said mortgage the sum of Two Hundred twenty and 23-100 Dollars ($220.23), at the date hereof to which should be added unpaid taxes, if any.

Now Therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage viz: All that tract or parcel of land lying and being in the County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota and described as lot numbered thirty-six (36) in block numbered eight (8) of Knox's Addition to Red Lake Rapids, now a part of the City of Thief River Falls, Minnesota, according to the plat thereof on file and of record in the office of the Register of Deeds within and for the County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Red Lake County at the front door of the Post Office in the City of Thief River Falls in said County and State on Saturday the 17th day of July A. D., 1909, at one o'clock p. m., on that day at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay the said indebtedness of Two hundred and twenty and 23-100 Dollars ($220.23) and taxes, if any, on said premises, and Twenty-five Dollars ($25.00) as attorney's fees as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the date of sale as provided by law.

The prevailing price of milk in England is 8 cents a quart, the English quart being one and a quarter times the size of our measure. On the basis of the difference in the value of a penny in the two countries the price for an American quart in terms of our money would be about 13 cents.

The world standing of a nation is quite accurately measured by the economic status of its rural population—the class which tills its fields and raises the products which sustain its life. It is because of this that a country like France is more powerful than India or the United States than Russia.

Analysis shows that a quart of milk contains as much nourishment as a pound of veal or beef chuck, nine ounces of round steak, two pounds of codfish or two pounds and five ounces of solid oysters. This would seem to show that the milk drinkers have some pretty good arguments to justify their practice.

Thousands of tons of powdered milk are consumed yearly in Boston, the growth in the business being accompanied by a considerable falling off in the consumption of natural milk. Whatever may be said of the powdered milk product, it cannot be upbraided with having been kept too near the pump or diluted at the creek on the way to the creamery.

One of the recent introductions of new varieties of plant life by the department of agriculture has been a shipment of 140 tons of bamboo plants from Japan, which have been set out at the federal plant experiment station at Chico, Cal. They are to be cultivated here and later distributed to other sections where conditions seem to be favorable for their growth.

Buttermaking is to be recommended in preference to cheesemaking as a special phase of dairying in that when butter is sold only the fats and no protein elements are removed from the farm, the skimmilk, containing the latter, being kept and fed to the farm animals. In the manufacture of cheese the reverse is the case, and this is true whether it be a full cream or skimmilk product.

Nearer seven feet tall than six was the father of the present earl of Enniskillen. He was a magistrate and a mighty fox hunter. He used to come to the "justice room" ready dressed for hunting quite early in the morning, in order to hear cases before he started off to the meet. His practice was to hear the plaintiff and then horsewhip the defendant, abusing him for behaving in such a blackguardly manner. Then he heard the defendant and afterward horsewhipped the plaintiff. It is said that both parties left the court perfectly satisfied, each saying that the other had been horsewhipped by his honor.—London Graphic.

Got It Free.

A good old preacher who had decided to leave an unremunerative charge, finding it impossible to collect his salary, said in his farewell sermon: "I have little more to add, dear brethren, save this—you were all in favor of free salvation, and the manner in which you have treated me proves that you have got it!"

Would Seem Not.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the terms and conditions of that certain mortgage made, executed and delivered by George W. Harris and Clara A. Harris his wife to James Meehan Jr. as mortgagee covering the following described premises, to wit, lot seventeen and a strip of land six inches wide on the south side of lot sixteen extending east from the west line of said lot sixteen a distance of sixty feet, all in block fifty eight of the original townsite of Thief River Falls, County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, according to the map or plat thereof on file and of record in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County, and which said mortgage bears date the 19th day of February A. D. 1908 and was on the 18th day of March A. D. 1908 duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said Red Lake County, in book 10 of mortgages on page 67, and which said mortgage together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by the said mortgagee James Meehan Jr. to James Meehan by an instrument in writing bearing date March 25th 1908 and which was on the 15th day of June A. D. 1909 duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said Red Lake county in book 2 of Mortgages, on page 53.

That said default consists in the failure of said mortgagors to pay the sum of one thousand dollars due March 1st 1909 and interest thereon at the rate of six per cent per annum from March 1st, 1908, and the interest at the rate of six per cent per annum from March 1st, 1908 upon the sum of four thousand dollars and in the failure of said mortgagors to keep the building situate upon the above described premises insured for at least the sum of five thousand dollars, as provided in said mortgage, and whereas it is stipulated in said mortgage that should default be made in the payment of the principal or any part thereof, or the interest or any part thereof when due, or to keep the building situate on said premises insured for at least the sum of five thousand dollars, the said mortgagee or his assigns might elect to declare the whole sum secured by said mortgage immediately due and payable, and whereas the said James Meehan assignee of said mortgagee has elected and does hereby elect to declare the whole sum secured by said mortgage now due and payable, and whereas, there is due upon said mortgage as principal and interest at the date of this notice the sum of five thousand three hundred and eighty seven and fifty one hundredths dollars to which should be added the sum of one hundred and fourteen and fifty one hundredths dollars paid by said assignee to secure the buildings situate upon said mortgaged premises to be insured making in all the sum of five thousand five hundred and two dollars due at the date of this notice upon said mortgage, and no action at law or equity having been instituted or commenced to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given, that under and pursuant to the power of sale contained in said mortgage and the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the real property therein described will be sold at public auction by the sheriff of the County of Red Lake, and State of Minnesota, on Friday, the 30th day of July, A. D. 1909, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of said day, at the front door of the U. S. Post Office, in the City of Red Lake Falls, County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, to the highest bidder for cash to pay the amount that shall then be due upon said mortgage, including the sum of one hundred dollars attorney's fees as stipulated in said mortgage and the costs and disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the date of said sale as provided by law.

Dated June 15th, 1909.

OSTRICH FARMING.

Ostriches were first introduced into the United States by a Dr. Protheroe in 1882, and today as a result of the increase of this first flock and subsequent importations the number has increased until there are several thousands located in some half dozen ranches distributed in Arizona, California, Florida, Arkansas and North Carolina. Until lately the birds have been raised largely for exhibition purposes, but with the establishment of the big farm at Phenix, Ariz., which now has over 1,000 birds, the industry was taken up on a commercial scale. While the birds mate for life at four years old, they do not breed satisfactorily until six or seven. A pair will produce from ten to twenty chicks a year, each being worth at six months $100, at a year $150 and at three from $300 to $350. A prolific pair may fetch $1,000, and exceptionally fine single birds have been known to bring this amount. The feather output for a year varies from $35 to $90. The first plucking is made at nine months, but is of little value. Succeeding crops are taken every nine months. The nest of the ostrich is a crude affair, being a hole three feet across and a foot deep in the sand scooped out by the breastbone of the bird. The usual clutch of eggs is twelve to fourteen, the weight ranging from three to four pounds each. The eggs are turned daily and hatch in about forty days. The male bird assists in incubation, going on duty promptly at 5 in the afternoon and remaining until 9 next morning. When hatched the chicks are about as large as a common hen, growing in height at the rate of a foot a month until seven or eight feet tall, when they weigh from 300 to 400 pounds.

LIVE STOCK LOSSES.

The Crop Reporter for April contains some interesting statistics on the losses in farm animals from exposure and disease for the year ending March 31, 1909. The loss from disease in horses was 1.8 per cent, being one-tenth of 1 per cent greater than for the year preceding and a like per cent less than for the ten year period. The loss in cattle from disease was 1.9 per cent, the same as for the year before, and the average for the ten year period was 2.1 per cent. For the corresponding periods the losses from exposure were 1.5, 1.2 and 1.8 per cent. The loss in numbers from both causes were 2,419,276 head. Four states bore one-third of this entire loss—Texas, 404,524; Iowa, 151,004; Nebraska, 131,104, and Kansas, 106,225. The loss in sheep was 2.7 from exposure and 2.8 from disease, the total number from both causes being 3,081,148. The loss in swine was 2,761,358, entirely from disease, the chief losses being as follows in the big hog producing states: Iowa, 427,000; Nebraska, 293,000; Missouri, 228,000; Illinois, 200,000; Indiana and Kansas, 185,000 each, and Texas, 115,000.

THE BUSH LIMA.

There is hardly a vegetable which grows in the garden that produces a finer delicacy for the table than the bush lima bean. Yet, developed as it is from a tropical or semitropical ancestor, it requires a great deal of warm weather to bring it to maturity. For this reason it should be planted in the warmest place in the garden, preferably on a southern slope or just to the south of hedge, tight fence or building. The soil should be rich and mellow and in planting the seed should be put in the soil to the depth of an inch one at a time, eye down, so that the seed will not have to twist or turn itself in the process of sprouting and breaking through the soil, a process in which the cotyledons are often broken off and the little plant destroyed because deprived of the nourishment which they furnish to it in the first days. Frequent hoeings to keep the soil mellow and moist will hasten the development of the beans and thus in effect lengthen the season of growth.

TANGLEFOOT BANDS.

Orchardists in several states, more particularly the extensive fruit growing districts of the west, are securing very satisfactory results with "tanglefoot bands," applications made on the trunks of the trees a short distance below the limbs of the same resinous material which is used on the sticky fly paper, the familiar kind an unwary man will now and then sit down upon in a drug store window. Several coats of the composition are applied, the mixture even during wet seasons being effective traps for a period of three months. The band not only traps the worms which hatch in the tree and descend the trunk in search of nesting places, but it catches a majority of those which emerge from apples on the ground and seek food or nesting places in the tree.

Sick folks and milk utensils are the better for being exposed in the open air and sunshine, which are the greatest germ eradicators known.

As soon as the period is over in which eggs are to be saved for hatching the flock of hens will do better and their eggs keep longer if the roosters are sold or put into a fattening pen and made into potpie.

A load of wheat was recently marketed at Junction City, Kan., which brought $91, said to be the largest amount ever paid for a single load in the state. It graded No. 2 hard and brought $1.24 per bushel.

The story is told of an Ohio rat which was caged and gnawed his way through eighteen inches of solid oak. If the rats elsewhere have as effective gnawing outfits it is not strange that they have easy access to loosely constructed corncribs and granaries.

Viticulturists in California have taken to feeding the poorer grades of raisins to their hogs, it being estimated that a ton of raisins worth $35 have a feeding value equivalent to a ton of barley at $30. The raisins are fed in a ration containing two parts of grain to one of raisins.

The frail little woman we heard of the other day who is drinking two gallons of water daily on the recommendation of the family physician is certainly deserving of success in her efforts to gain good health. Many a husky man has fallen down in the face of a less obstacle than this.

One of the great advantages of the hand separator is that it makes it possible to feed the calves the warm skimmilk under conditions which enable them to utilize its full feeding value. Allowed to become stale and sour, conditions which so often exist under the hand skimming system, the food value of the milk is greatly lessened.

Agriculture intelligently followed is a vocation which will always offer a healthful and remunerative occupation for those who will enter it with a fair knowledge of its requirements and a determination to succeed. In its specialized lines there is such demand for experts that the agricultural schools of the country can't turn graduates out fast enough.

The quality of eggs which are produced on the average farm and their value, too, since the passage of pure food laws in so many states, could be greatly improved during the summer months if all sitting hens and those that were broody were given a small house and yard by themselves, which would keep the flock of laying hens from mingling with them.

Potatoes do not mix by planting different varieties in the same hill. It is from the small seed produced in the potato balls on the vines above ground that new varieties are originated. The first season the seed is planted tiny potatoes appear on the roots in the usual manner about the size of beans. The season following these are planted and a larger potato secured whose quality and yielding ability can in a measure be determined.

Patrons and stockholders of farmers' co-operative dairy enterprises should be very slow in biting at the bait of higher prices for butter fat which is so often thrown out by the larger centralized plants, but only long enough to accomplish their purpose, which always has in view, though not expressed or stated in any literature which they send out, the knocking out of the home concern, when prices can be manipulated to suit the concern which pays and not the patron who receives.

There are all too many farmers level headed in most respects who will slop over in the matter of buying catalogue house grass seed from firms of no reliability in other states just to save a few shillings in first cost and in the end, like as not, befoul their fields with noxious weeds to eradicate which they have to pay ten times what they have saved in price of seed. This is nothing more or less than the worst kind of agricultural horseplay, and any man who will look the matter squarely in the face will have to admit it.

A plan that might well be carried out by the merchants of any town who have the comfort and welfare of their country patrons at heart is the equipping of some room in the town conveniently located where the farmers' wives who come to market and often bring little children with them might go to rest. The details of the plan could be worked out by any wide awake committee and the rest room provided with as many comforts and conveniences as the circumstances seemed to justify. The rest room idea is being carried out in many enterprising towns with a large measure of success.

A recent issue of a leading dairy paper, replying to an inquiry as to whether it would pay the questioner to buy a seed corn grader, stated that he doubted it unless corn raising was going to be done on a large scale. This suggestion has just about as much to commend it as would a recommendation from a corn farmer that it wouldn't be worth while to get a Babcock tester unless a fellow had more than a dozen cows. It is just as important that the farmer having ten acres should have a full and even stand of corn as that the loafers should be weeded out of a ten cow dairy.

Considering the kind of a spring we had this year, there was possibly some justification for the admonition contained in the April 1 issue of a western agricultural paper to "beware frosty bits!"

A small area of mangel wurzels might well be grown on every farm, as they are a highly relished and a beneficial ration for hogs, cattle, sheep and chickens in the fall and winter months, when other succulent feeds are scarce.

Dispatches of a short time ago told of a farmer who lost several head of horses supposedly from eating silage that was moldy. While it was not stated just how this came about, it would seem to suggest caution in the use of silage as a horse ration.

Ohio agricultural papers mention the significant fact that carloads of silos are being shipped into the southern part of that state. There is many another state whose farm papers ought to contain just such an item, only it should read "northern and southern."

From the very nature of the case horses do not require as much salt nor so frequently as do cattle, but they both need and relish it, and if it is where they may get it whenever they want it quite a bit will be done toward keeping them in good condition.

However good any pasture may be, it is not what it should be unless it contains some corner in which the dairy cows may seek shade in the heat of the day. A clump of shade trees fills the bill. If these are lacking a shed open on two or three sides or all around will answer the purpose.

Pumpkins do not possess a large food value, but, like turnips and some other root crops, are a good system regulator which tends to create a hearty appetite for the regular rations. They are good for the milk cow, the steer in the feed lot and the porker. They are easily raised in the cornfield and are preferable to a like volume of weeds.

A whole lot of dairy herds look like 30 cents when they have had a round with the Babcock tester and wind up with an examination for tuberculosis. The more herds there are made to look like 30 cents on the two above accounts the better it will be for the pocketbook of the owner and the health of the consuming public.

In some sections of Germany cows are used with horses in the plowing operations, the practice being to balance the work of four cows against that of one horse, giving each cow an hour's work in the forenoon and in the afternoon. The plow used cuts a furrow nine inches deep and eight wide, and about two and a half days are required to plow an acre.

There hasn't been a period in the past fifteen years when grain prices have ruled as high as they have during the past two years and when it was so urgent a matter to weed out the unprofitable cows in the dairy herd. When corn is 25 cents and other feeds in proportion the cow which is just barely paying her keep is useless, but when it is 60 cents a bushel or better she becomes a good deal of a luxury.

Ohio is in advance of many other states in that she has lately passed stringent laws touching the sale of milk. It requires, among other things, that the cows themselves must be healthy, that they must be fed wholesome food, that the conditions under which they are kept must be sanitary and that the milk must reach a given standard as to butter fat and must be free from water or other foreign or injurious ingredients.

Not every farm hand—and this includes a lot of pretty good ones—can successfully adjust and operate the surface cultivator, but where they do get on to the "hang" of it very excellent results are obtained, for not only do the knives kill many weeds which the shovel cultivators do not, but the surface soil is left so fine and level that moisture is more easily conserved, resulting in an increase in yield of all the way from eight to twelve bushels per acre.

There would be considerable benefit to the horse raisers in any community if they could agree on the raising of some particular type of draft horse. Not only could they thus by co-operating secure higher priced and more perfect sires, but the raising of one breed would tend to give the community a reputation in this regard which would attract more buyers and in so far insure considerably higher prices through the competition which would result.

There are large areas of arable land in the United States where there is no gospel which needs proclaiming more emphatically than that of an intensive type of agriculture—the thorough and intelligent working of forty, fifty or sixty acres, in place of the shiftless, skin over and devil-may-care methods the baleful effects of which are seen so commonly on 160 to 320 acre farms. Increase in land values, coupled with a decrease in yield as a result of following slipshod methods and the scarcity of reliable help, is going to compel this partition of land areas some time, but the change might be accelerated a good deal if the wholesomeness and good horse sense of it were recognized now.

A UNIQUE LAND CASE

Settler Filed on a Piece of Land Up in Beltrami County and Abondoned It.

Went to Canada and Took a Homestead and Later Returns to His First Love.

The Middle River Pioneer last week tells of a unique government land case which is probably without parallel.

On June 26, 1902, Emory Kately, of Carmel, Minn., made homestead entry for a quarter of a section of land in Beltrami county. After filing he went to Dakota to work. On returning to the land in December, he found that it had overflowed and was then covered with ice. Hence, believing that he had been deceived in the character of the land and that it was not fit for farming purposes, he abandoned it and went to Canada, where he took a homestead and became a British subject. In 1907 he returned to Beltrami county, and finding conditions improved through accomplished and prospective drainage, he again established his American citizenship and took up his residence on the land. He went on and made valuable improvements thereon and at the expiration of fourteen months residence appeared before Commissioner Clark a few days ago to make commutation proof. Mr. Clark on being apprised of all the circumstances, promptly told Mr. Kately that when he became a Canadian citizen he forfeited his right and title to the land and his entry was no good. But on the advice of Mr. Clark and accompanied by him, Mr. Kately went to the Crookston land office, and under the law of February, 1908, relinquished his former filing and refiled on the same land, thus giving him the right to live seven years on the land and then prove up by time proof instead of by commutation.

For a New Party.

At Ada, Minn., on June 27th, there will be launched in this state a new political party composed of Bryan and LaFollette adherents and their aim will be to correct some of the flagrant evils that exist in the two older parties today. The slogan of the new party will be sounded by Hon. Jas. A. Peterson of Minneapolis, who will probably pay his respects to the existing order of things in the two old parties. Mr. Peterson is an ardent LaFollette follower with a splendid record as legislator and civic reformer and the people of the state may expect to see plenty of fireworks, ere long. James Manahan, Bryan's personal representative in Minnesota, is also said to be behind the move, as is Geo. S. Loftus, of the Shippers' association.

The Day We Should Celebrate.

In fleeting years since its conception the circus has evolved from its pristine glory to a realization of almost superlative magnificence and this year when Gollmar Bros.' Greatest of American Shows appear here our people will have the opportunity of seeing the acme of its greatness. The reputation of the Gollmar Bros. as amusement purveyors is co-extensive with the country, and the name or the establishment is synonomous with pledges kept and promises fulfilled. The shows this season are larger, more perfect in appointment and equipage and comprise more unique features than ever before in the history of the enterprise, and transported in special trains of monster double lengthed cars its arrival in the towns along the route is like the advent of a colossal royal retinue. Circus, museum, menagerie hippodrome; a spreading city of white tops, covering acres of grounds is needed to house the mammoth establishment. Heralding the 2 daily grand exhibitions is the new featured free street pageant comprising mediaeval, military and spectacular tableau effects never before seen in circus pageants. Serried ranks of richly robed knights and ladies, realistic groupings from the pages of tournament history, allegoric floats, and magnificent chariots, royally carved, gold glittering and enmirrored, dazzle the eye and charm the senses, while the music from 3 great bands fills the ear with strains of inspiring melody. Here roll great open dens in which are seen in restless stride savage denizens from earth's deepest jungles, there in stately triumph tramps monster elephants. Here herds of diminutive ponies, equine midgets of royal blood, there the haughty march of richly caparisoned steeds, all in line, marking the street pageant of Gollmar Bros.' Greatest of American Shows, the greatest, most beautiful and grandly glorious free street procession ever organized to advertise the merit of a tented amusement enterprise. Don't forget the date the shows come to Thief River Falls, Tuesday June 29 with program of 100 arenic and hippodrome feature acts, an army of horses and a host of gentleman and lady performers. 2 performances daily; doors open 1:00 and 7:00 p. m.

Shipping Lots of Butter.

The freight train crew swore several swears Saturday when they found over 9000 pounds of butter stacked up on the platform here for them to load. Of the 141 tubs in the lot, 133 were creamery butter which shows that practically all the dairyman of the country patronize creameries. The shipment included the butter from three creameries, Middle River, Grygla, and Rollis. Middle River's portion was 50 tubs, Grygla's 54 and Rollis 32 tubs.—Middle River Pioneer.

Emil Sedlacek and L. O. Robertson were down to Minneapolis last week and while there purchased automobiles. The former purchased a 35 horse power Mitchel car and the latter a Franklin runabout. Both cars have been delivered and the new owners are spending their spare moments learning how to operate the machines.

PREPARE FOR THE FAIRS

Orange Judd Farmer Gives Good Advice Concerning Connty Fair Exhibits.

Farmers Should Commence Now to Prepare for Thier Exhibits

"Don't wait until just before fair season to get ready for exhibiting at fairs," says the Orange Judd Farmer. "Begin right now. Decide what farm crops you will want to take to the fair. Pick out the animals which are to compete for premiums. Give them the best of care and attention. If field crops, fertilize the land, cultivate carefully and select judiciously. Give the matter a lot of time and attention.

"It will pay, if you don't win a premium. More satisfactory results from your crops will be ample compensations If you are to exhibit farm animals provide the best of pasture, grain, feed, plenty of shelter when needed, and give a great deal of attention to having them halter broken, so that they may be properly exhibited.

"The fair season last year was highly successful. With an even break this season, the fairs ought to be very much more successful. They can only flourish when enthusiastically supported only when exhibitors get fair treatment and when visitors get the worth of their money, and when everybody works for the good of the fair, ignoring individual interests. We do not hesitate to urge exhibitors to do their best."

Laying Steel At Moose Lake

Moose Lake, Minn., June 17.—Robert Bros., steel contractors on the Soo line started today laying steel on the Brooten-Duluth line. The steel was laid two miles east of town last fall when the gangs were compelled to quit on account of the grade not being completed.

Construction on the Moose Lake-Thief River Falls line will begin this week. The contractors are here and their equipment will arrive in a day or two and it is expected the first dirt on this line will be moved next Monday. The line starts from the yards here and takes a northwesterly course, crossing the Northern Pacific at McGregor.

Mr. Murphy of Brooten has arrived and is getting his instruments installed so that telegraphic communication will be established from Moose Lake west in a few days. The depot building crew will arrive here Saturday and will immediately begin the erection of the depot, coal chute and water tank.

The depot will be of large deminsions, 21 by 88 with a platform 300 feet long, the other buildings will be of large size to take care of the large business that the Soo expects to conduct here.

Secured tne Contract.

A. H. Fasel last week was awarded the contract for building about $2,500 worth of cement sidewalk and cross walks in the village of Badger. There was considerable competition for this work by contractors from Minneapolis and Crookston, but Mr. Fasel succeeded in landing the job and the village of Badger will be guaranteed a first class job. Mr. Fasel also has secured contracts in Greenbush amounting to about $1,500.

Circus Is Coming.

The billboards are all covered with many colored advertisements announcing the coming of Gollmar Bros. Greatest of American Shows, Circus, Museum, Menagerie and Hippodrome. Judging from notices appearing in newspapers published in towns where the shows have exhibited already this season, the establishment is much larger than ever before. It is said that the free street parade is a magnificent spectale and that a larger number of wild animals are shown in open dens than with any other circus on the road. Our exchanges state that it is a fact that the Gollmar Bros. do exhibit a monster blood sweating hippopotamus in their menagrie and that their horses are perfect specimens and splendidly trained. They have a herd of trained elephants and in their immense zoological collection are to be seen the rarest wild animals, including the weird and mysterious vlack vark, the only specimen on exhibition in the world. The press is unanimous in endorsing the Gollmar Bros.' Shows as clean, free from graft of every kind and of the highest class in point of general merit. They will exhibit here June 29 giving two performances: doors open 1 and 7 p. m Free street parade at 10 a. m.

Julian Provincher, of the Hotel Evelyn, left last Saturday for Minneapolis to spend several days attending to business matters.

A Family Reunion.

There was a reunion Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Mc Crum of this city, of the children of Mrs. Elijah Wilcox. The children present were Mrs. Skales, of Salmon Ford, B. C.; Mrs. W. I. Mc Crum, of this city, Wm. Wilcox, of British Columbia, W. E. Wilcox, of Denver, Col., Matt Wilcox, of Boise City, Idaho, Mrs. Monkman, of Toronto, Mrs. Monkman, of Rockey Ford, Idaho, Mrs. Cling, of Berden, Manitoba, Mrs. Moore, of Weyburn, Manitoba, and the mother, Mrs. Elijah Wilcox, of Weyburn, Manitoba. The Wilcox family resided for years at Greemore, Ontario, and eight years ago Mr. and Mrs. Elijah Wilcox celebrated their golden wedding at Toronto. There was a partial reunion of the family at that time. Mr. Wilcox has since died and the mother is 81 years of age.

Wants a Sane Celebration.

Exuberant patriots who persist in making dangerous and disturbing noises in celebrating the Fourth of July will have to reckon with the police department this year. Chief of Police Lang has decided to rigidly enforce a safe and sane celebration according to the letter of the law. The use of explosives, firearms and other dangerous devices for producing noises and probabaly causing injuries will not only be discouraged but all persons caught handling them will be dealt with vigorously. In years past the number of injuries caused by the use of contraband devices has increased to such an alarming extent that the officials have decided to take a hand in the prevention. This point is thoroughly covered in the state law.

It is the intention of the authorities to go after the dealers who supply thoughtless persons with dangerous explosives, and the sale of potash, powder, giant crackers, or similar instruments of destruction and death will be punished with the extreme penalty. One particular form of celebration that is specifically prohibited is the exploding of cannon crackers tamped in mud cans where the effect assumes the proportions of an earthquake.

The penalty for all violations of the law either by premature celebration or the use of prohibited explosives on the Fourth, may be a fine of $5 to $100 or 90 days in jail.

Chicken Crop Will Be Good.

The prairie chicken outlook for the coming fall is bringing joy to the hearts of all chicken hunters for from all appearances there will be an abundance of these birds next fall. The young chicks are hatching fine and in a week they will be out of the meadows and up on higher ground where the rains will not harm them. The season is a good one for hatching, being dry and the birds are doing as well as dandelions in a weed patch. The late snows destroyed the early eggs, but the old hens are hatching the second settings and are doing their best to furnish the hunters with plenty of sport for the fall.

JOHNSON IS ELECTED

Named County Commissioner to Succeed Shaw on Last Suturday Afternoon.

Had a Majority on the Second Ballot and Was Not a Candidate.

Joseph Johnson was elected county commissioner last Friday to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Daniel Shaw. Although Mr. Johnson was not a candidate for the office he was the popular choice of the residents living east of here on the eleven towns, and as they had the majority of votes he was named. Nels K. Anderson of Sanders, and C. P. Quist, of this city, were also candidates for the office and on the first ballot the vote stood as follows: Anderson, 2, Quist 3; Johnson, 4. On the second ballot Johnson secured five votes and Anderson and Quist each two. Johnson having a majority was declared elected.

The new county commissioner needs no introduction to the residents of Thief River Falls and vicinity. For a number of years he was a wheat buyer here and when the eleven towns were opened he settled in the town of Star, and has been the leading spirit of that section ever since. He is aggressive and progressive and if the people of his district are not well represented it will not be Joe's fault.

The following had the naming of the new county commissioner:

Herman Ortloff, Sanders.
Ellef Gravlie, Norden.
H. P. Williams, North.
H. P. Rued, Silverton.
Edward Iverson, Clover Leaf.
E. H. Beaacon, Goodridge.
Oluf, O. Omlid, Star.
P. P. Hamre, Thief River Falls.
Lewis H. Roseland, Reiner.

Mr. Johnson went to Red Lake Falls Saturday morning and qualified as county commissioner.

Assessment Finished.

Assessor D. P. O' Neill last Saturday finished the assessment of personal property in the city of Thief River Falls. The city council will meet next Monday, June 28, as a board of equalization and review the assessment. All who have complaints should call and make them known at this time and not wait until next spring when it is tax- paying time

Joseph Jerome, the Battle River merchant and former Thief River Falls resident was in the city last week attending to business matters. Mr. Jerome states that he will remove his family to this city in the fall.

Married Last Week.

Last Thursday evening in Thief River Falls occured the marriage of Miss Caroline Nelson of Crookston and Mr. Louis Gonyea, Jr., of Boise City, Idaho. The cermony was performed at the residence of the bride's sister, Mrs. Robertson, Rev. Fr. Dingman officiating. The bride was charming in her beautiful bridal gown of soft messaline over soft taffeta. It was fashioned princess entraine and was braided in rich designs. A bridal veil completed the toilette Following the ceremony a wedding supper was served, the immediate relatives being the guests. Mr. and Mrs. Gonyea left on the evening train for Minneapolis where they will spend a few days before going to Denver, later going to their home in Boise City. The best wishes of a host of friends will accompany them to their future home where Mr. Gonyea is engaged in business. Mr. Louis Gonyea, Mr. and Mrs A. G. Sandberg, Mr. and and Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Geo. Gonyea were among the out-of-town guests.

St. Hilaire Farmers Organize.

A large number of the influential farmers of this vicinity met at the village Monday and after considerable discussion they decided to perfect an organization and start work on the farmers' elevator project. The new company starts out under more favorable conditions than did the creamery company a few years. Many of the men, who by their push and energy made the creamery the signal success today, are behind the new company and its success is practically assured from the start.

The following are the officers elected: President, Ed. Enright; Vice President, J. S. Roy; Secretary, N. A. Nelson; Treasurer, N. E. Beebe; Directors, John R. Goteis, Henry Starken and Ed. A. Aubol. The name of the new company is the Farmers' Elevator Company and the new officers have already begun work and they give it out cold that they will be ready as soon as the crop commences to move this fall.

The Spectator wishes to congratulate the progressive farmers of this locality on their decision on this matter and we will venture the prediction that success will attend and not only the farmers but the village and community at large will be benefitted.

An Old Timer.

Conrad Utzinger, who will be remembered by old settlers, died recently at Astoria, Oregon. Mr. Utzinger came to St. Hilaire in 1883 from Crookston and started a saloon. He built the store building now owned by E. M. Hoff, which was at that time the largest building here. It was built on the addition north town and afterwards moved.—St. Hilaire Spectator.

Supt. and Mrs. J. H. Hay left last week for Bemidji to spend a few weeks camping out. Mr. Hay will conduct the summer school there again this year.

James J. Hill is very pessimistic over the crop situation in the northwest. Mr. Hill concedes that things are looking well now but he says that we won't get the crop of grain that we expect to as the stuff is not in the soil to make it mature. He says we have been taking it out along and the elements to make the wheat have got to be restored to the soil before it will ever produce again. He used to think it would be 1920 before we reached a point where we could not send grain to foreign countries but he now believes that in 1915 the United States will need all the wheat it raises for bread and seed.

CROOKSTON IS COMING

One game will be played on Sunday afternoon of the 4th and two games on the 5th. The firemen's tournament is being held on this date.

Our Former Prize Fighter.

Duluth Herald: Curley Ulrich returned Sunday evening from his invasion of the East. What Curley says and what the Eastern papers say differs somewhat in substance, but of course, as Curley was there, he should know.

The Superior scrap artist states that he defeated Louis Golch before the Terminal club of Brooklyn. The battle went three rounds with Curley in the role of general punch administrator, according to the version of the scrap handed out by Curley. As to the Philadelphia fight, Curley says Willets was heavier and should have been able to trim him —which he did. Ulrich says that he was originally matched with Paddy Lavin, but the match fell through and the Willets boy was substituted. The latter was brawny and rough, and along in the fifth session Curley decided that he could not make any headway against such an inconsiderate man as the Willets party, so the fight was abandoned.

However, Curley made a great hit with the Philadelphia fight patrons, and will have opportunties in the future to return to the Sleepy City for further demonstrations. George Gunter, the Australian Kangaroo, is due to return to these parts in the near future, looking for trouble. He would like to meet a certain Mr. Whitehead and settle an ancient grudge. Mr. Ulrich announces that he is open to meet all comers, from 138 to 142 pounds.

Having Hard Luck.

Walter McAndrews lost a valuable horse on last Saturday night. He had been sick for some time and after his death he was opened, to see what disease he died of. His lungs and liver seemed to have been affected, but as there was no regular veterinary to examine him, it would be difficult to say just what caused his death. This is the second valuable horse that Mr. McAndrews has lost in the past year and the loss falls quite heavily on him. He always takes the best care of his horses and keeps them in first class condition, so it cannot be said that he died from neglect or want of proper care.—Sunbeam.

WILL BE HERE SOON

The Famous St. Olaf Band to Give a Concert in This City.

Band is on Its Way to Seattle to Play at the Exposition Out There.

The St. Olaf college concert band from Northfield, Minn assisted by Prof. Oscar Grounseth, solo barytone, will give a concert at the roller rink in Thief River Falls on Saturday and Sunday, July 3 and 4.

This band is composed of forty-five musicians and is on its way to Seattle where it has an engagement to play for the exposition. It is under the able direction of Prof. F. Melius Christiansen. For years it has been considered one of the leading musical organizations of the Northwest, and enjoys the singular repuation of being the only college band in America which has made a successful European concert tour and played before royalty.

This year's tour is the sixth annual American concert tour of the organization, while in 1906 the St Olaf band made an extensive concert tour through Norway. It has appeared in big concerts in Minneapolis, St. Paul, Chicago and New York, and judging by the numerous flattering press comments has completely captivated its heares everywhere.

Through years of thorough and conscientious systemic work on the part of the individual members, led and guided by the masterly musicianship of its director, this band has reached a stage of excellence seldom acquired by such organizations.

This year the band has a more complete instrumentation than ever before. The different sections are strong and well balanced, and with a word-wind section, are strong and well balanced, and with a word-wind section, including obos, flutes, saxophones, bass and alto clarinets, and the most marvelous orchestra effects are produced. The band numbers among its members soloists, and has a repertoire of classical, standard and popular music from the best band libaries of America.

Prof. F. Melius Christiansen, the director of the St. Olaf college band, has established his reputation as a true musician throughout the entire Northwest. He has studied music all his life and for years has been a pupil of the world-famous Reinecke, Hans Sitt, Gustax Schreck and Reckendorf, teachers at the Royal Conservatory of Music of Leipsig, Germany, of which institution Prof. Christiansen is a graduate. He has also spent one year at the above place, doing post graduate work in musical composition. His numerous vocal and instrumental compositions have met with success everywhere. Before he accepted his present position of director of the department of music at St. Olaf college he was at the head of the violin department of the Northwestern Conservatory of Music of Minneapolis. He has every qualification for the position that he holds, and is a master in the art of ensemble playing. Thorough his through work the St. Olaf College band has reached an ensemble seldom acquired by band organizations and pronounced nearly perfect by critics of American and European concerts in which the band has appeared. Prof. Oscar Grorseth, the solo barytone, assising St. Olaf college band on this, its sixth annual concert tour, is a man of experience and rare ability in his line. He has studied with the celebrated vocalist, Theodore Lammers of Christiania, Norway, and in this country with Mrs. Olund of St. Paul, Minn., at the Chicago Conservatory of Music under the direction of W. W. Hinshaw and with Dr. F. Median Ferrer of New York city, all of which speak of him in highest terms of praise. He has had years of experience as a soloist, operatic singer and teacher of voice culture, and at present is in charge of the vocal department of the St. Olaf college School of Music. Although he is a man tipping the scales at 330 pounds and has volume sufficient to ring over the whole band of fifty pieces he has also also the sympathetic and musical quality that won for him the unanimous praise and admiration of all who heard him as a soloist with the band on its tour last year.

Dr. Mellby, Oscar Spoohelm, J. A. Swore and Nick Nelson, who had been at Lake City with the local militia company, returned Monday morning. They report that all of the boys are well and are greatly enjoying camp life.

WILL NOT ISSUE NOTICES.

The United States Land Office at Crookston will not issue the notices to the settlers on the eleven towns who are delinquent in their payments. In a letter to the News, Hon R. J. Montague, register of the Crookston land office, states that he has been notified by the commissioner of the general land office, not to issue the notices pending the outcome of a bill which has been introduced by Congressman Steenerson and which is sure to pass. This means that all actual settlers on the reservation who are delinquent in their payments need have no fear of losing their land.

What Ma Said.

A gentleman and his son were walking down a street the other day. As they passed by the eye hospital the son said:

"What is that place, dad?"

"That, my son," he replied, "is the ophthalmic hospital."

"What's that for?" the little fellow inquired.

"Why," the father said, "that is for people who suffer with their eyes."

"Why don't you go there?" he asked his dad.

"I don't have any trouble with my eyes. Why should I go there?"

The son then answered:

"I heard ma tell the next door neighbor that you were nearly blind last night."

Now his ma won't let him go out with his father any more.—London Tit-Bits.

How She Traveled.

"How did the queen of Sheba travel when she went to see Solomon?" asked a Sunday school teacher.

No one ventured to answer.

"Could she have gone by the railway?"

"Yes'm," said a little girl.

"Indeed! Well, we would like to know how you found this out."

"In the second verse," responded the child, "it says she came with a great train."

GO UP TO WARROAD

Northern Minnesota Merchants Association Will Meet There This Week.

A Special Train Could Not Be Secured from Thief River Falls.

The members of the Northern Minnesota Merchants Association meet in Thief River Falls on Saturday morning of this week and proceed to Warroad, where they will remain until Monday morning. J. J. Ryan, secretary of the state association, is expected to be present and will deliver an address to the members of the association.

The Warroad Commercial Club is making preparations to entertain the visitors in royal style. A steamboat has been chartered and small boats with fishing tackle will also be provided. There will be a ball game, dance, and other amusements.

It had been the intention to run a special train from Thief River Falls to Warroad on Sunday, as a large number of citizens here desired to attend the meeting, but no satisfactory arrangements could be made with the Great Northern for a special train and so many from this city who had been making preparation to attend will not be present.

Strandquist.

Merchant Strandquist and family, were away last week for several days, visiting in Bemidji and Duluth, he having been called to the latter place on business.

Mrs Charley Anderson passed away Monday morning. The funeral was held on Tuesday, at their home. It is with a great deal of sorrow, that we had to lose her in this world. She is survived by her husband, and five children.

The W. C. Addy Merc. Co. gave a clearance sale on Monday last. Many people took advantage of the special prices.

A church fair was held at the west church, on Tuesday. A great many pretty things were sold. Dinner was served at noon, and refreshments all day long.

Strandquist is going to celebrate the Fourth of July, in the greatest manner ever done before, on Monday July 5th. The merchants, and all the other business men of the town have gotten together and a full day is assured to all. Games, races, everything, will be had for men, women and children. Watch for the advertisements. Every one plan and come.

Mrs. E. T. Houlatte of Newfolden, formerly Miss Nelson, was a visitor here over Sunday.

Mrs. J. E. Addy and daughter Dorothy is visiting her son W. C. Addy, for the summer.

Anton Jansen has erected a cow yard in the center of town, back of his famous Park Hotel. It is a big improvement to the Park, but not to the town. Ha, Ha, Anton better take that away.

Petrus Sundberg was a visitor in Warren the first of the week.

Mr. A. P. Lundstrom is wearing a new stiff hat these days, we can not say that it is an improvement on his former self, but it does show off his 320 pounds to a very good degree.

Miss Elfrezina Franzen has gone to Stephen to attend summer school.

LABOR STRIFE IN SWEDEN

Employers' Association Threatens to Proclaim a General Strike Unless the Workmen Agree to the Masters' Terms for Labor Contracts to Last Five Years—Men Object to the Proposition and if the Lockout Takes Place 50,000 Workers Will Be Made Idle.

SWEDEN.

The uneasy peace that has existed in the Swedish labor field since the great strike of last year is on the point of being exchanged for a state of open warfare. The employers' association has threatened to proclaim a general lockout unless the workmen agree to the master's terms for labor contracts. It is to avoid the frequent recurrence of strikes, which have become chronic, that the employers' association *has determined on demand*ing the acceptance all over the country of one common form of agreement, which shall hold good for five years. The men will not bind themselves for more than three years, and, although they agree to a working week of fifty-seven and one-half hours, they will not consent to this regulation being extended to places where the custom has hitherto been to work fifty-four hours per week. The lockout would effect at least 50,000 men.

Christina Nilsson (Countess de Casa Miranda) has arrived from France to her summer place in Smaland. She comes to her beloved Smaland every summer and says that she is after all always happiest when she is at her old home there. While en route to Sweden this time she stopped for a short time in Copenhagen and suddenly met King Frederick and the Princess Thyra, who were out enjoying their afternoon drive. The king immediately stopped his carriage, raised his hat and began to address the former diva. Christina Nilsson felt flattered to think that the king remembered her, as he has not seen her for over thirty-three years, rather in 1876, when she scored her first great success in the Danish capital.

Professor Otto Nordenskiold has published his plans for the Greenland expedition which he proposes to make this summer. His first aim will be to explore the Holtenborg district in West Greenland. He will try to ascertain the causes of the typical configuration of the Arctic countries by taking this locality as a good example. The latter part of the summer will be spent in South Greenland, where he will try to ascertain why the temperature is so high as to permit the growth of trees within a short distance of the inland icefields, while the extension of the ice is much smaller farther north. The expedition will return about Sept. 8.

"Omnischer Lloyd," a German paper which is published in Constantinople, recently published an article in which its author suggested that Sweden bestow the Nobel peace prize on Schevket Pasha, because through his prompt capture of Constantinople recently he prevented the loss of thousands of lives. The aim of this general was not, however, to save lives and had there been any resistance his soldiers of course had orders to shoot to kill. The Swedish Nobel committee is not likely to grant any peace prize to the aforementioned pasha on these very grounds.

Sweden gives large sums of money every year to the foreign missions. Last year a sum of 250,000 crowns was solicited and collected and sent to foreign mission stations. The Gothenburg diocese alone donated something like 50,000 crowns to foreign missions and the Lund diocese was a close second, giving something over 49,000 crowns.

Herman Lagerkrantz, Sweden's minister to Washington, was made a doctor of laws at the commencement exercises of Northwestern university in Evanston, Ill., a few days ago. The diplomat was present at the exercises and delivered a short address.

Svanberg, the celebrated Swedish runner, is now in America and has been winning one race after another. If he keeps up his present record he will beat everything in sight and return to his native land as the champion runner of the world.

Fredrik Bajer, one of last year's Nobel prize winners, is at present paying a visit to Sweden and is at present in Gothenburg. He is very much interested in the Swedish school system and is making a very close study of it.

A water tower 1,900 feet above the sea will be erected in the near future in Kiruna by the Elgstrom company of Orebro. The water tower will be the highest in Sweden and will have a capacity of 120,000 gallons.

The Swedish architects are now competing for the best drawing for a new Swedish church which is to be erected in the near future in Paris. The prizes are from 500 to 2,000 crowns.

Not less than eleven cars of bananas arrived in Stockholm the other day. There are comparatively more bananas consumed in Stockholm than in any other European capital.

Count Wachtmeister, the university chancellor, has received the honorary degree of doctor of philosophy from the Lund university.

NORWAY.

The following may be the last public utterance that Bjornson will ever make if the dispatches are true that he is not expected to live. The statement that Bjornson made at the time was in regard to his drama and was uttered some time ago in Paris, where he has been spending the winter and spring months. Said Mr. Bjornson: "As to the title of my work and its contents you are not going to find out anything. I have seen that Herman Bang, who was permitted by my son to see the piece, found one act to be of a very comical effect. This I do profess to understand. The comic features of the play lie in its composition; they rise from the underground structure, so to speak, but they do not wholly break through the surface in any particular scene. It is not a comedy in the ordinary sense of the word. It is not going to be published until it is played, October next, in the Scandinavian capitals and in Berlin. At the latter place it is to be put on the stage by my son, Bjorn. This is all that I am going to tell you. Maybe I better add that among the few who have read my work I have had joy from it."

King Haakon will soon pay a visit to the Czar of Russia and will then continue his journey to Rome and Vienna, where, of course, he will be the guest at the courts of these countries. This will be the first time, aside from a trip to England, that the Norwegian king has been abroad. The Norwegian king is very unassuming in his manners and will not travel in as expensive style as many of the other European monarchs. His simplicity of manner pleases his countrymen very much and they only have words of praise for their genial mannered king.

The conflict between the Norwegian admirals, Navy Chief Sparre and Chief of Staff Borresen, has precipitated a cabinet crisis, the immediate cause of which was an interpellation in the storthing on the question as to whether the storthing or the king and the cabinet should decide the dispute. The motion was declared inadmissable by Premier Knudsen, but a vote will be taken later, probably next week. The trouble is of long standing. Each admiral accuses the other of a serious military offense. The case has about the same importance here as in the Schley-Sampson controversy in the United States some years ago.

One million May flowers were ordered from Austria by the Women's Sanitary society in Norway. More than 600,000 were sent to the country districts, where they were sold almost as soon as they were shipped in. The proceeds from the sale of these flowers will go to the fund for fighting tuberculosis.

Dispatches state that Norway's beloved poet and playwright, author and political writer, Bjornstjerne Bjornson, is critically ill and that he has frequent sinking spells. The novelist suffered a paralytic stroke June 5 and is at present confined to his bed at his home in Lauervik.

Severe storms have been raging during the past few days in northern Norway and much damage has been done to the shipping and the growing grains. Several lives are reported lost, but reports in detail are lacking. Two fishing smacks are reported lost with all men aboard.

Among the late Jonas Lie's papers have been found a very interesting manuscript for a novel entitled "Troid." It will undoubtedly be published and it is certain that it will be read by thousands, for the name of Jonas Lie is much revered in Norway.

DENMARK.

The exposition at Aarhus was formally opened May 18 in the presence of the king and other members of the royal family. The king delivered a very forcible address, in which he emphasized the great importance of maintaining the country's defenses and its independence. That his remarks were appreciated was evinced by the prolonged and hearty applause that greeted all of his utterances.

Elinor van Hoose, the American tenor, is at present in Copenhagen, where he is making arrangements with the director of the Royal Opera to appear here at a later date. Mr. van Hoose goes to Stockholm, where he has arranged to take John Forsell's place. Copenhagen opera goers are anxious to hear the American sing and he will be accorded a most hearty reception when he appears in Copenhagen.

The new Tivoli music director is Schiedner Pedersen, who is considered Copenhagen's finest concert meister since Joachim Andersen died. Mr. Pedersen has been engaged for the season at a salary of 4,000 crowns a year and has already taken charge of the orchestra, which is considered among the finest musical organizations in Europe.

At a Marathon race held May 16, the Swede, Axel Hansson, from Malmo, defeated his twenty competitors easily amidst the cheers of the thousands who had gathered to see the race. Hansson was in good condition at the end of the race and did not show any fatigue to speak of.

The Danish sugar trust is this yea paying dividends amounting to about 25 per cent. The business of that enterprising business aggregation has proven immensely successful during the past year and only proves that the trust business flourishes as easily in little Denmark as elsewhere.

OUR BABY'S BOOK

MOTHER LOVE watches and mentally records every step of her baby's physical and mental growth, but the human brain is not always the most infallible recorder of events. Lest the passing years efface these memories a mother should keep a written record of her baby's history.

BABY RECORD BOOK

A book for this purpose, beautifully designed and illustrated, and containing no advertising, is yours practically for the asking. This book is a creation of the Graphic Artists. In size it is 8x10 inches, bound in mode shade cloth, decorated in gold, and contains thirty-six pages of which seventeen are full page drawings in colors of child-life, by Verona Busby Dobbin, famous as an illustrator and particularly known for her studies of children. The other pages consist of forms covering events of importance from birth on through babyhood, in which may be entered dates, data and memoranda concerning this interesting period of development. This book is a model of the bookmaker's and artist's craft. It is impossible to explain its superior quality here; suffice to say that such a book would cost at least $2.00 at any bookstore.

HOW TO OBTAIN IT

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the terms and conditions of that certain mortgage made, executed and delivered by George W. Harris and Clara A. Harris his wife to James Meehan Jr. as mortgagee covering the following described premises, to wit, lot seventeen and a strip of land six inches wide on the south side of lot sixteen extending east from the west line of said lot sixteen a distance of sixty feet, all in block fifty eight of the original townsite of Thief River Falls, County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, according to the map or plat thereof on file and of record in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County, and which said mortgage bears date the 19th day of February A. D. 1908 and was on the 18th day of March A. D. 1908 duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said Red Lake County, in book 10 of mortgages on page 67, and which said mortgage together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by the said mortgagee James Meehan Jr. to James Meehan by an instrument in writing bearing date March 25th 1908 and which was on the 15th day of June A. D. 1909 duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said Red Lake county in book 8 of Mortgages, on page 63.

That said default consists in the failure of said mortgagors to pay the sum of one thousand dollars due March 1st 1909 and interest thereon at the rate of six per cent per annum from March 1st, 1908, and the interest at the rate of six per cent per annum from March 1st, 1908 upon the sum of four thousand dollars and in the failure of said mortgagors to keep the building situate upon the above described premises insured for at least the sum of five thousand dollars, as provided in said mortgage, and whereas it is stipulated in said mortgage that should default be made in the payment of the principal or any part thereof, or the interest or any part thereof when due, or to keep the building situate on said premises insured for at least the sum of five thousand dollars, the said mortgagee or his assigns might elect to declare the whole sum secured by said mortgage immediately due and payable, and whereas the said James Meehan assignee of said mortgage has elected and does hereby elect to declare the whole sum secured by said mortgage now due and payable, and whereas there is due and owing upon said mortgage as principal and interest at the date of this notice the sum of five thousand three hundred and eighty seven and fifty one hundredths dollars to which should be added the sum of one hundred and fourteen and fifty one hundredths dollars paid by said assignee to secure the buildings situate upon said mortgaged premises to be insured making in all the sum of five thousand five hundred and two dollars due at the date of this notice upon said mortgage, and no action at law or in equity having been instituted or commenced to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given, that under and pursuant to the power of sale contained in said mortgage and the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the real property therein described will be sold at public auction by the sheriff of the County of Red Lake, and State of Minnesota, on Friday, the 30th day of July, A. D. 1909, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of said day, at the front door of the U. S. Post Office, in the City of Red Lake Falls, County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, to the highest bidder for cash to pay the amount that shall then be due upon said mortgage, including the sum of one hundred dollars attorney's fees as stipulated in said mortgage and the costs and disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the date of said sale as provided by law.

Dated June 15th, 1909.

Town Booming Helps

IV.—Rah! Rah! Rah!

Two Americans meeting in Europe, one of them said, "I am from Jones' Siding."

"And I," said the other, throwing out his chest, "am from Chicago."

"Seems to me I've heard of that place. About how far is it from Jones' Siding?"

The Jones' Siding spirit is the kind that helps a town. This man considered his own home THE FINEST PLACE IN THE WORLD. If there are many more there like him Jones' Siding will some day be crowding other places off the map.

He was the kind of man who spends his money at home, who patronizes home industries, talks up his home town and helps to build it up. HE WAS A DESIRABLE CITIZEN.

The mail order houses couldn't do business with him unless they were located in his own town, for he knows that, as far as he was concerned, Jones' Siding was the center of the earth.

Think it over and see if we can't work up some of that Jones' Siding spirit right here!

LET US GET TOGETHER AND MAKE THINGS BOOM.

Every letter that is posted here should be an advertisement for the town, even the love letters, for we want the right kind of people to come here and settle.

Let's advertise ourselves, our home industries and our good prospects IN EVERY WAY POSSIBLE.

FENCE THE LAND.

A man who generally keeps pretty close track of what is doing in business circles in the northwest tells the Herald that because of a fight among the producers of fence wire that commodity is now cheaper than it has ever been, and that fence posts likewise are remarkably low, and that for this reason the present is an excellent time for farmers to do fencing on a big scale. Those who have not followed the subject will probably be surprised to learn of the low price in posts, as the slashing down of the forests has made havoc with everything made of wood. But we are informed that the high prices of a few years ago led to the cutting of immense quantities of posts and also of cord wood in the northern Minnesota woods, and that the market was overstocked, the result being a marked drop in the prices.

That farms must be fenced is now admitted by everyone. There was a time when fencing was considered of very little use. A small enclosure was thought desirable for the work horses, but in many cases this was dispensed with, and the picket rope did duty instead. The cow was a rarity, and little attention was paid to her, and other domestic animals were about as little known as elephants.

Now all that is changed. We have skimmed the cream of the farms, and most of us understand that something must be done to retain the fertility that still remains in the soil, and to restore some part of what has been wasted. Crops must be rotated, and above all, stock must be kept on the farms. To keep stock the farms must be fenced, and there we are. By all means let the farmers take advantage of the present low prices and go into the fencing business.—Grand Forks Herald.

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD

The Red Lake Falls Gazette last week contains the following information:

> "There has been considerable talk this week that J. A. Duffy, mayor of this city, may become a candidate for representative in the legislature from the district of which Red Lake county is a part. Mr. Duffy has been out of the city all of the week so there has been no opportunity to ask him to speak up, and it's a little early for politics, anyhow. However, it may be said that the district would have a representative worthy the name should Mr. Duffy go to the legislature."

As the Gazette says, "it may be a little early for politics", but we would advise Mr. Duffy to make an early start—that is if he wants to get any votes.

New York's new law for the protection of its forests contains provisions which might well have been added to the otherwise excellent law passed by the Minnesota legislature, says the Pioneer Press. This provision empowers the governor to "suspend the hunting season" in times of unusual drouth. Of course, it is offensive to the hunters. But everyone of them carries to the woods an added peril of fire from his gun, from his cigar, from his matches and from his campfire; and, with such vast interests at stake his exclusion from the forest is only a reasonable precaution. Even the camera-hunter is not a desirable visitant at times when grass and schrubs are converted into tinder and when a flame "spreads like wild fire."

In 1907 the State of Minnesota produced an average value of $12.27 per acre of corn, wheat, oats, barley, flax and hay, against Illinois of $14.60, Iowa, 11.80, Nebraska $10.39, South Dakota 10.51 and North Dakota $9.59. Minnesota thus ranks next to Illinois in producing value per acre. But the average per acre of Illinois farm lands is $152.58 while that of Minnesota is 37.97 and of Iowa 70.03 an acre. These figures should appear strongly to homeseekers and investors.

Hawley Herald:—Persons who are in the habit of sending off to catalog houses for their goods should get an old catalog and compare former prices with those now in effect and see whether they are really saving as much money as they think they are. An employe of an Illinois paper, who during the past four years has worked on the making of catalogs for the city mail order houses, is authority for the statement that there has been a systematic and steady increase in the price of articles each year. This he says is made possible by the patrons of the mail order houses "getting the habit" and keeping blindly on never noticing the advance.

A New Firm

The Northern Adjustment company is the name of a new business enterprise in Thief River Falls. Attorney G. Halvorson, Mayor T. P. Hamre and W. J. LaBree are the members of the new firm and the latter named gentleman is to be the manager. The business of the concern will be to adjust claims, make collection, real estate and farm loans. All are well known residents of the city and that they will make a success is assured.

MILITARY SYSTEM.

The Way Germany Handles Her Reserves In Case of War.

Nobody who has visited Germany can fail to have been struck by the large official signboards at the entry to each town or village. These contain full information as to exactly which official in the community to apply to should the magic word "mobilize" be spoken.

Wherever the German reservist may chance to be when the order to mobilize is given—assuming, of course, that he is not out of the country—he has only got to ask the first inhabitant or walk to the end of the village and look at the directions on the signboard to find out his own particular place in the military scheme. He will see that he must go to Herr Schmidt, at 40 Schutzen street. Herr Schmidt will tell him exactly in which town he has to go in order to rejoin his own unit and, what is still more important, will give him the money and the railway pass to take him there.

Arrived at his destination, he will find his uniform, arms and accouterments piled neatly in a heap, with a label bearing his name and regimental number on the top of the heap. He has only to put it on and take his place among the comrades with whom he did his military service some years ago.

This destination was arranged upon many years back, and the exact time schedule for marching and railway journeys was compiled long since.—Pearson's Weekly.

THE BASQUES.

An Interesting People Who Are a Puzzle Among Nations.

The Basque provinces lie in the north of Spain, and, although for centuries students have tried to trace the real origin of the people and find a key to their language, they have failed to do so.

All other known tongues spoken by the sons of men have been shown to possess a common origin, traceable to the Arabic and Semitic. But the Basque language has entirely resisted the philologist. In some aspects the vernacular shows traces of a Chinese admixture. In others it is clear that North American Indian terms are native to it. It also shows traces of barbaric languages spoken on the east coast of Africa.

The people themselves bear physiological traits found in those who speak the said tongues. The native name of Basqueland is Eskuara, and their motto is "Iruracbat," or "Three In One." Nor is their political structure anything like that of any known political body, though they belong, of course, to Spain. Each Basque province is governed by a parliament composed of representatives—selected partly by election, partly by lot—among the householders of each country-parish or town. Their laws are essentially peculiar to themselves and are conceived on no known code either of ancient or mediaeval times. They are a puzzle among nations and number half a million all told.—New York World.

Paper Which Is Waterproof.

In Japan there is a paper made which is impervious to water, being made of bamboo fibers and eucalyptus mixed with the fibers of the gampi and some other shrubs. The fibers are first torn apart, made dry, cleaned and scraped, boiled in a weak lye and thoroughly washed in water, after which they are beaten and then mixed with certain roots made into a viscous state. A solution containing resin, caoutchouc and camphor is also added. A sort of pulp is thus formed and then made into sheets, which are run through a calendering machine heated to various temperatures. The result is that a paper is produced which is exceedingly tough, light and which may be washed. The Japanese use it for leather imitations and india rubber.—Pathfinder.

Northern Australia.

Australia's huge northern territory has a tropical, almost an equatorial, climate, and the heat is very enervating to Europeans. Its capital, Palmerston, contains more Chinese than Caucasians. The former are the ruling race and the employers; the whites are the servile and the employed. Large herds of buffaloes roam about the silent plains of this enormous territory, which would be a sportsman's paradise but for the wild natives, who are exceptionally fierce and treacherous and have killed a number of the hunters who came to hunt the buffaloes.

His Marathon Record.

"Colonel," asked the beautiful girl, "did you ever ride a horse ninety miles in three days?"

"No," replied the veteran of two wars, "but I once ran twenty miles in about thirty minutes, which, I think, was going some, considering the fact that the underbrush was thick, and I was in so much of a hurry that I forgot to throw away a knapsack that weighed nearly fifty pounds."—Chicago Record-Herald.

THE SETTLERS PROTECTED

Those Who Are Actual Settlers Need Have No Fear of Losing Their Land.

Further Light Upon Subject Is Given in Letter from Congressman Steenerson.

Much alarm has been felt by some of the settlers on what is known as the eleven towns who have failed to make payments as due on the land which they purchased at the opening or they would loose their land.

It is safe to say that all those persons who have made entries on the eleven Red Lake towns, who are complying with the law as to residence and cultivation, will not have their entries cancelled simply by reason of failure to make their payments as required by law, prior to the time congress meets next December at which time it is reasonably certain that the bill now introduced by Congressman Steenerson will pass, giving a further extension for such payments. Such persons as are still living on their land and complying with the law as to residence and cultivation need be in no way alarmed on account of any statements made or notices received.

Congressman Steenerson has interested himself in this matter and appears to be thoroughly in accord with the commissioner of the general land office and the secretary of the interior and there appears to be no reason to doubt that the general policy of the United States will be carried out in relation to this matter. That is, that no honest actual settler and occupant upon these lands shall lose this land merely by his failure to make the payments without having a reasonable time to make them.

Mr. Steenerson has already introduced a bill fixing the time within which such payments may be made as any time within the seven years after the time of making the entry and it is safe to say that no honest actual settler on these lands, occupying and farming them, will be interfered with by reason of failure to make payments until after congress meets next December, at which time we have no doubt Mr. Steenerson's bill for the extension of time will receive the favorable consideration of congress.

The following letter from Congressman Steenerson will explain the situation still further:

Washington, D. C.,
June 15, 1909.

Honorable R. J. Montague,
Register U. S. Land Office,
Crookston, Minnesota.

My Dear Sir:—

I have received your several letters and immediately went to the department to confer with them in regard to the matter referred to, and I sent you today the following telegram:

> Law officers of the Department hold the extension clause of June twenty-one, nineteen hundred six, to be retro-active and applies only to entries in existence on that date. Special agents will forthwith be instructed to limit the investigation to cases where there is default in one or more payments so that actual occupants may be saved from forfeiture until Congress can grant relief, and only cases where there is both default of payment and abandonment included in forfeiture.

I do not think there is any doubt about the construction of the extension clause referred to above. At least Judge Witten, who is chief of the law division, seemed to be clear on that point.

The Commissioner unhesitatingly agreed to modify the instructions to the special agent sent to investigate the settlers on the eleven towns, so as to limit the investigation to cases where there has been no final proof. He will be instructed to make a list of entrymen where there has been no final proof, and who are in default, to ascertain whether they are actually occupying their lands. The object being to re-offer for sale lands where the entryman is both in default and has abandoned his land, but the entries on lands actually occupied will be held in suspense to await action of Congress upon H. R. 10,321, which I enclose herewith. The Commissioner promised to have these instructions sent to the special agent immediately and I have no doubt they will reach him in the course of four or five days, and I hope you will co-operate with him to the extent of helping him to get out the lists at an early date.

A number of letters have been received here from persons desiring to purchase the abandoned lands in the eleven towns, and I presume you have received such letters, but no action can be taken to clear the record of these abandoned entries until it is known where they are.

The Department has agreed to take no action towards forfeiting any entries until this information is ascertained.

Yours very Sincerely,
H. Steenerson,

A Beatiful New Building.

The very handsome picture of Hart Schaffner & Marx's magnificent new building, now in process of construction in Chicago, which the Golden Rule is displaying in their western window is attracting much attention.

This building will in some respects be the most remarkable of the kind in the world, not in height and space—although it will be thirteen stories and will afford a floor space equivalent to eight acres—but in beauty and conveniences.

The floors on which clothing will be carried are to be absolutely dustproof. This is accomplished by sealing all windows and passing the air through water before it enters the room. A ventilating system of the same kind will also be provided for the health of the employes. A refrigerating system will cool the air and sterilize and cool the drinking water.

There will be pneumatic tubes for sending mail by compressed air from one part of the house to another; spiral chutes, 9 feet in diameter, from the top story to the basement, for dispatching shipments, both freight and express, automatic fire alarms and sprinklers, and other modern equipment.

The building will contain only the offices, stock floors and cutting rooms; no manufacturing will be carried on there, but will be done in other large buildings located in different parts of the city.

The new building is in the heart of the business district of Chicago, and when completed will be accessible to those who wish to visit it as one of the interesting points in the city.

Killed By Vicious Bull.

Ole Swenson was instantly killed at his home in Section 1, of Garnes township, on Sunday evening by a vicious bull. Mr. Swenson was working with his stock in the farm yard when the animal attacked him unawares. The bull struck Mr. Swenson in the breast with such force that the man's neck was broken and death was instantaneous. Members of the family who saw the beast's attack frightened him away at once and Dr. Clark was called out from here to see if anything could be done for the victim. When the doctor arrived Mr. Swenson had been dead for some hours and, beyond the broken neck, the body showed no marks. Mr. Swenson had purchased the bull a few months ago from Thos. Pugh, of Mayfield township, and while he knew that the animals was inclined to be ugly in temper, he was not afraid of him and had decided to keep him as he was quite well bred.

Deceased was a prominent farmer and has been engaged in the business of buying and shipping cattle. He was about 45 years old and leaves a widow and eight or nine children to mourn his sudden death. The funeral was held on Thurs.—Plummer Pioneer.

A Wrong Righted.

As would appear from a communication published in the Grygla Eagle, Mr. Jim Nomeland has been a recent visitor in Thief River Falls and this fact either worries Jim or the residents of Grygla for he has a communication in the last issue of the Grygla Eagle. It is as follows, and we publish it verbatim et literatim:

> It is said around here in this vicinity that I was arrested in Thief River Falls for mounting on soap box in the public square for Justice that is a confounded lie, truth compells me so not for myself solely but to save the honor of the citizens of said city, knockers of Grygla and now mud slingers said I was along and tapped a keg of beer and destroyed oranges and bannas but I was not with the boat the trip in was done, a socialist is an E. Z. mark eh. I chalange you all gentleman.

Notice to the Public.

The city board of review will meet at the city hall next Monday, June 28. The legislature contemplated that the individual judgement of one man could not be correct, hence they provide this means of correcting any errors of judgement or omission. Now, it is your duty to come to the meeting and see that the assessment is equal to all interests. Do not wait until next year until it has passed through many hands and errors creep in, and then when you meet the assessor accuse him of being partial or crooked, or both. Remember the assessor is part human therefore liable to err, but always willing to correct any mistakes made, so all persons who feel that their taxes are out of proportion to others in the same class of property, if you will come to the meeting, I will be pleased to look the matter up and make corrections, that justice may be done all.

Respectfully,
D. P. O'Neill,
Assessor.

Ditch Established.

At a special meeting of the board of county commissioners held on last Saturday, ditch No. 35 in town of Smiley and Silverton was established. Quite a number of famers from this vicinity were down and protested against assessments.

Grand Forks Won.

For the first time this year, the Thief River Falls base ball nine was defeated Sunday at Grand Forks. A few costly errors was the cause of defeat, otherwise the game would have been easily won. In the last half of the ninth inning the score stood 2 to 4 in favor of Thief River Falls, but Grand Forks succeeded in getting three men across home plate in this inning which resulted in winning the game. The attendance at the game was over 1200. On Sunday, July 3, the Thief River Falls team will again go to Grand Forks and play another game.

Two Circuses Coming.

The small boy of Thief River Falls is quite happy this year as two circuses are to visit the city in the near future. Gollmar Bros. will be here on next Tuesday June 29, and Cole Bros. will be here on Saturday, July 17.

Work to Be Rushed.

At the meeting of the Directors of the Red Lake Eastern Marshall Co. Farmers Telephone Co. held at Erie last Saturday it was decided to begin work on the line at once, contract will be let from Erie to Thief River Falls and the directors along the line, between here and Erie will have charge of the work. They are going to get as much as possible done on share and hire, the balance at the rate of 20 cts. per post for setting. It is expected that the line will be completed in about six weeks.—Grygla Eagle.

For Sale—Heavy work team, 1 driving mare and 1 Percheon stallion. Anybody requiring such horses would do well by looking them over before buying elsewhere. They are of the best type the market can produce. For further information inquire of P. H. Devany or at Stebbins' Drug store. 19-tf.

—Sand and gravel for sale by George Newberry.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

The state normal board has decided to appoint a medical adviser and examiner for each of the five normal schools. The medical adviser is to examine the students at the normal schools and if any of them are found to be in such physical condition that teaching would be dangerous to them, or if it might work harm to pupils who may come under their guidance in future years, then such students are to be informed of the fact and the school authorities are to have power to exclude them from the school.

The Morris Indian school, which has been turned over to the state by the federal government to be used as an agricultural school, will not lie idle next year, although no allowance was made by the legislature to maintain it. Representative L. C. Spooner of Morris has informed the state board of control that a contingent fund of $27,000, provided by the federal government, is available, to be drawn upon until the state is ready to take over the school and maintain it.

Severe criticism of St. Paul physicians for not reporting deaths from tuberculosis is contained in a statement by Dr. Christopher Easton, in charge of the anti-tuberculosis work of the state board of health. There were only 224 deaths from the white plague reported in St. Paul during 1908, while 315 were reported in 1907.

Judge Page Morris, in the federal district court, granted the discharge in bankruptcy of Fenton G. Warner, former state oil inspector, thus relieving Mr. Warner of the necessity of paying to the state $11,439.37, which he owed as a result of his failure to turn over fees while in the oil inspector's department.

A topographical survey of the state, which will provide data and maps showing all the watersheds, creeks, elevations, lakes and rivers in the state, will be made in the near future through the co-operation of the state drainage commission with the engineer of the department of geological survey at Washington.

Justice C. B. Elliott of the Minnesota supreme court has received his commission as associate justice of the supreme court of the Philippines. Judge Elliott will remain at work in Minnesota till the calendar of the present term is cleaned up, and will sail for Manila either July 20 or Aug. 7 from Seattle.

More than $42,000 will be paid into the state treasury by the H. C. Akeley Lumber company and the Namakin Lumber company of Minneapolis in settlement of suits instituted by E. T. Young, former attorney general. Judgment for that amount has been entered in the Hennepin county district court.

Parsonages, manses and any other kind of property owned by a church organization, but not used directly for church purposes, must pay taxes at the same rate as other property in the state, according to an opinion given to the tax commission by the attorney general.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

After leaping from the window of the day coach of the rapidly moving Oriental limited train of the Great Northern railroad near Fergus Falls Mrs. Betsey Braley, a young woman of Hanska, this state, lay on the tracks, either dead or alive, until a train following half an hour afterward ran over her body and cut it to pieces.

Mrs. Dudley Taylor of Minneapolis was painfully burned and the life of her daughter, Mabel, aged ten, was endangered when her gasolene stove exploded. In the subsequent fire the house sustained about $1,000 damage. The woman and child were rescued by firemen.

Helga Hemo of Minneapolis, twenty-five years old, committed suicide in the Tobiason & Sieverson hotel at Medicine Lake, Hennepin county, by drinking a large quantity of laudanum. The breaking off of a marriage engagement is given as the cause of the suicide.

Red Lake river claimed its second victim of the present year in Ernest Easthagen, the eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Godfrey A. Easthagen of Crookston. The little boy was playing on the boom in the river and slipped. He never came to the surface.

The epidemic of scarlet fever which has been raging at St. Paul during the winter is about over, according to city health officials. The number of scarlet fever cases during the winter months of this year was the largest that it has been for many years.

Ralph Shull, treasurer of the J. and W. C. Shull Lumber company of Minneapolis, was sentenced to serve five days in the Mill City workhouse, without the option of a fine, after being found guilty in police court of speeding his automobile.

Frank Holst, who shot and killed Lieutenant Frank McNamara of the Minneapolis fire department, was found guilty of murder in the second degree by a jury in the Hennepin county district court.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

John Lipke, who died at St. Paul recently, was a veteran and a son of a veteran of the Civil war, having served for a part of the time with his father in the Fifth Minnesota.

SHULL SERVING HIS SENTENCE

Minneapolis Lumberman Goes to the Workhouse for Five Days.

Ralph Shull, twenty-three years old, treasurer of the J. & W. C. Shull Lumber company of Minneapolis, is serving a five-day sentence in the Mill City workhouse for speeding his automobile on University avenue southeast. He was taken to the workhouse on a street car by Peter Neilson, clerk of the municipal court.

Mr. Shull is one of the most distinguished inmates the Minneapolis workhouse has had in many years. He was convicted and sentenced by Judge C. L. Smith of the police court after he had admitted he drove his automobile at a forty-five mile per hour clip on the avenue June 12. The policeman said sixty. The sentence has caused much discussion throughout the Twin Cities.

EVADES CAPTURE SO FAR

"Woman in Black" Terrorizes Residents of Brooklin.

Women and children living in that section of Rochester known as Brooklin are afraid to leave their residences at night and are in a continual state of fright. It is all caused by the "woman in black," who is supposed to be a man masquerading in woman's clothes.

The "woman in black" haunts dark places and lonely corners and accosts pedestrians, generally women and children and boys. He or she is described as being over six feet tall, dressed entirely in black and wearing a heavy veil.

Every night the past week the police and a posse of citizens tried in vain to catch the intruder.

AT MINNESOTA STATE FAIR

Federal Government May Authorize an Exhibit.

If a plan discussed by Secretary of Agriculture Wilson and Representatiy Tawney of this state is carried into effect the federal government will authorize an exhibit at the Minnesota state fair to be held the coming fall.

Up to date the central government has never officially participated in a function of this character.

It has participated in foreign expositions and in expositions of a national character held in this country, but has never taken part in a state fair such as is held in Minnesota every year.

DEAL IN MILLING PROPERTY

Twelve Flouring Plants and Eighty Elevators Involved.

The Russell-Miller Flour Milling company of Minneapolis has absorbed a string of twelve flour mills and eighty elevators, extending over the entire Northwest. Although full details of the transaction have not been announced by the company it is said that the deal represents a capital of $2,500,000.

The string of elevators covers the entire Northwest and includes several very valuable milling properties. The chief properties absorbed are at Beach and Billings, Mont., and at Bismarck, Dickinson and Mandan, N. D.

BURIED UNRER CONCRETE

Laborers Have Narrow Escape at New St. Paul Hotel.

C. H. Vrooman, Minneapolis, and A. Sampson, St. Paul, laborers, were buried beneath a mass of concrete and suffered injuries while working on the new St. Paul hotel.

The men were working on the third floor when a part of the floor gave way, crashing to the floor below, carrying the men with it. Neither was fatally hurt. Workmen rushed to the assistance of the men, and after an hour's work the debris was removed and the men rescued.

FRANK DAY NOW A FORESTER

Governor's Secretary Goes on the State Board.

Frank A. Day, private secretary to Governor Johnson, has annexed another office, being appointed by Governor Johnson a member of the state forestry board. He was recommended by the State Agricultural society and succeeds Dr. A. C. Wedge of Albert Lea, resigned. P. J. Russell of Bemidji, recommended by the university regents, was also named on the board, to succeed Frederick Weyerhauser, resigned.

Two Hurt in Wreck.

The Chicago Great Western passenger train from the south ran off the track near the Concord street station at West St. Paul, resulting in injuries to the engineer and baggageman. Charles Staebler, the engineer, who lives at Clarion, Ia., and George Day, the baggageman, who lives in Minneapolis, were badly cut about the head and bruised about the body.

Their Removal Recommended.

Because the indicted county officials in Beltrami county have not been arraigned or tried Public Examiner Anton Schaefer, in a report to the governor, recommends that they be removed. Governor Johnson said he expected to appoint a commission to give the accused officials a hearing. This is required by law before any officers can be removed by the governor.

Child Drowned in Cistern.

Emil Pagel, aged three, son of W. Pagel of South St. Paul, was drowned in a neighbor's cistern, and it was two and a half hours before he was found.

FIVE MEN PERISH

Fatal Fire Occurs In Livery Stable at Duluth.

ONE HUNDRED HORSES DEAD

Hostlers Lose Lives in Efforts to Save Animals.

Five men lost their lives and nearly one hundred horses perished in a fire which gutted the Board of Trade livery barn at Duluth, owned by Barrett & Zimmerman of St. Paul, and caused a property loss of $70,000. All of the men perished in an attempt to save the horses.

The fire originated from a brazier's torch in the rear of the barn. The blacksmith was brazing a wheel on a hack and the fire was communicated to the floor. The flames were confined to a small space and Captain James Sullivan, the proprietor of the livery, and one or two others started to put the fire out, but it spread with marvelous rapidity. The dead are:

WILLIAM NICHOLS, single, aged thirty-five years.

CHARLES DRYER, married, aged forty-five years.

ADOLPH ROCK, married, aged fifty years.

P. PETERSON, single, aged twenty-seven years.

A. GUSTAFSON, single, aged twenty-eight years.

The bodies were found in the front end of the basement, their position indicating that the men must have made a desperate effort to escape in the stampede of horses, but were caught like rats in a trap.

The fact that the hostlers had lost their lives was not known until after the fire had been subdued, when firemen in looking through the ruins discovered their charred remains near the rear entrance, through which they had tried to effect their escape.

STATE FEDERATION OF LABOR

President Howley and Secretary McEwen Re-Elected.

The State Federation of Labor, in convention at Red Wing, completed its work and adjourned. The constitution committee and the legislative committee in joint session at work on the resolution to abolish the state political committee, recommended that the committee be continued as in former years and that there be no change in the constitution, but that the powers of the political committee be more limited. This carried.

George B. Howley of Minneapolis was re-elected president. For secretary-treasurer there were two nominations, W. E. McEwen and J. J. McHugh of St. Paul. H. W. Goetzinger of St. Paul, who was a candidate, withdrew from the race at the last minute. W. E. McEwen, who was not looking for the office and made that announcement when nominations were made, was re-elected by a vote of 136 to 28.

MINNESOTA BOY IS KILLED

Supposed to Have Walked Off Train While Asleep.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Bratt of Wadena, this state, who arrived at Glendive, Mont., on their way to the Seattle exposition, took the first train back to investigate the disappearance of their eleven-year old son from the Northern Pacific train. A terrible discovery awaited them, for the boy, who had not been missed until the train reached the vicinity of Medora, N. D., had fallen from the train near Curlew, N. D., and his body was cut squarely in two. The parents say that the lad was addicted to sleep walking and probably walked off the train while in a somnolent condition.

NOW ON THE CARNEGIE LIST

Minnesota University Gets Foundation Fund Benefits.

The University of Minnesota has been formally admitted to the accepted list of the Carnegie pension fund. Word to that effect has been received by President Cyrus Northrop from Henry S. Pritchett, president of the foundation trustees. The action was taken June 4 and at the same time pensions were voted to Dr. Jabez Brooks and Professor Maria Sanford.

In regard to Dr. Brooks and Miss Sanford, the notice says that their pensions will be paid in monthly installments to the treasurer of the university.

Workman Crushed to Death.

Crushed and mangled almost beyond recognition and with almost every bone in his body broken Pearley Holmes of St. Paul, employed as an oiler by the St. Paul Crushed Stone company, is dead at the city hospital. While attempting to repair a belt on an engine Holmes was caught in the machinery and pulled through an immense pulley used to lift large pieces of stone.

Money for Minnesota Indians.

The sum of $20,000 has been forwarded from Washington to the Indian agent at Red Lake, this state, with instructions to distribute it to the Indians under his charge by July 1. The money was derived from the sale of dead and down timber at Red Lake.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

Mrs. Emma Kaufman, wife of a Sioux Falls brewer, on trial at Flandreau, S. D., accused of the murder of Agnes Polreis, a domestic, was found guilty of battery and was sentenced to pay a fine of $100 or serve fifty days in jail. The fine was immediately paid. The case had been in the courts for three years and the trial just closed was the third one.

The body of Elizabeth Sigel, daughter of Paul Sigel and granddaughter of the illustrious Franz Sigel, the German warrior who enlisted his services with the Union army during the Civil war, was found in a trunk in a room above a chop suey house in New York city. The murdered girl had been a missionary worker among the Chinese of Gotham.

The federal grand jury at New York handed down indictments against F. Augustus Heinze, head of the United Copper company; his brother, Arthur P. Heinze, and Sanford Robinson, Heinze's counsel, charging conspiracy and alleging an attempt to obstruct the administration of justice.

Patrick Crowley, marshal of the village of Gary, Ill., a quarry town near Chicago, was shot and killed while arresting Modest Lenzi, formerly mayor of the village and for years known as the "King of Gary." The murderer, whose identity is unknown, escaped.

Terminating in a disagreement of the jury, with ten men determined on acquittal and two steadfastly resolved on conviction, the trial of President Patrick Calhoun of the United Railroads ended at San Francisco. The trial began on Jan. 12.

Dr. Haldane Cleminson of Chicago was held to the grand jury by a coroner's jury at the inquest over the body of his wife, Mrs. Nora Jane Cleminson. The verdict of the coroner's jury implicated him in the death of his wife.

Called for sentence at Danville, Ill., on conviction of burglary a young man declared that he is the son of Congressman George A. Pearre of Maryland. He was sentenced to an indeterminate term in Joliet penitentiary.

Two men are dead, two were perhaps fatally wounded and three others slightly injured in a bloody street battle at Meadville, Miss., waged by parties to a bitter feud that had been previously marked with tragedy.

Farmers working in the fields near Taitsville, Mo., are doing so with rifles slung over their shoulders. This condition is caused by two assassinations, the victims of which were Clyde Hatfield and Henry Berry.

In a battle between officers and three train robbers near Bragg, Okla., Deputy Constable Johnson Kirk was killed and Paul Williams, one of the robbers, was shot through the breast and captured.

An unknown negro shot and killed Brakeman Lee C. Warner and fatally wounded Brakeman Alva C. Bechtel, both of Boone, Ia., during an altercation on a train at Vail, that state.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

One of the most important religious gatherings of recent years in the number of persons represented is that of the world's Presbyterian alliance, now in session at New York city. In it are represented five continents, ninety separate denominations and nearly 25,000,000 members.

Harry K. Thaw will have to wait in the Matteawan asylum until July 6 for a hearing to determine whether he is now sane and in a condition to be released from the asylum. The case came up before Justice Mills at White Plains, on a writ of habeas corpus obtained by Thaw.

TOO MANY BAD EGGS.

The egg and chicken business of the country during 1908 amounted to about $650,000,000, making it one of the most important items of farm revenue. But for many years past there has been an enormous loss, though small in any individual case, as a result of the inferior quality of eggs which were put on the market. With the purpose of finding out just what these losses were due to the bureau of animal husbandry of the agricultural department at Washington has the past year made a study of the problem and in a bulletin recently published gives a summary of its findings, which should be read carefully by every chicken raiser in the country. The investigator, Mr. Hastings, finds that of the eggs produced in the country in 1908 there was a loss of 17 per cent between nest and table, itemized as follows: Dirty eggs, 2 per cent; breakage, 2 per cent; chick development or heated eggs, 5 per cent; rotten eggs, 2.5 per cent; shrunken or held eggs, 5 per cent; moldy or bad flavored, .5 per cent. The loss from chick development seems to be the chief source of loss, especially in the south and west, where it amounts to 25 or 30 per cent during the heated season. To prevent this Mr. Hastings asserts that a campaign of education is necessary which will make every farmer's wife realize that when eggs are left in damp nests under broody hens or in hot kitchens there is a loss in quality which in the end means a money loss to herself and her neighbors, while a system of buying eggs should be adopted which will give each producer full value for just what his eggs are worth. The rule should be infallible to market eggs as soon as possible after they are laid. The greatest handicap in the egg trade is found to be the practice followed in the general store of bartering merchandise for eggs, in which transaction the merchant reckons his profit on goods as more than his loss on eggs. Under this arrangement he is unable or does not try to enforce improvement upon his patrons by buying on a quality basis, and so long as he does not and strictly fresh eggs fetch no more than stale the seller has no incentive to exercise care aside from his own conscience.

SPRING WITHOUT FLOWERS.

Many a home would be brighter and happier were there a larger recognition of the claims of religion and this given demonstration in attendance at the neighborhood church in at least one Sabbath service. There is in us all at best a good deal of the barbarian, and this tendency, coupled with continual occupation with things material, which so often vex and degrade and tend to obscure our perception of higher things that are really most worth while, makes it well nigh imperative that we should avail ourselves of such religious influence as we can if we would live the best life we may. Not only does religion give quality and meaning to the humdrum, everyday life, but it means much in the special crises of life—when a new life is ushered in, when new homes are established, when the curly head of a little child bathed in the fragrance of flowers or the toil worn hands of a faithful parent are laid to rest in "the low green tent." In such hours it gives hope of a life to be where we may clasp again the hands of those who leave us here and where there shall be no more sorrow or crying. Material interests are well and good, but ungraced by a wholesome religious influence they are as a day without sunlight or a springtime without flowers.

WORTH LOOKING INTO.

The very heavy fire losses from lightning which have been sustained by scores of farmers during the recent spring storms should lead to a consideration of the protection which would be secured by equipping the building with scientifically constructed lightning rods and conductors. It is true that when the lightning rod craze was on thirty or more years ago a good many unsuspecting folk got loaded up with twice or three times as many rods as they needed and improperly grounded to boot, which were in reality a greater source of danger than protection. Many had their stomachs still further soured by having to pay outrageous prices for this shoddy work or having notes which they gave turn up for amounts greatly in excess of the price agreed upon. But this era has passed, and there are today reputable lightning rod firms which will guarantee to rod buildings properly. This fact is recognized by many insurance companies which quote a much lower rate to farmers whose buildings are thus protected against lightning damage. In any event it is a proposition which farmers who own big red barns on open prairies should look into.

Any factor which tends to discourage grain raising and encourages a diversified agriculture in its stead can hardly be viewed in any other light than a blessing.

Bean weevils will give very little bother if the crop is not planted before June 15. Another advantage of this time of planting is the opportunity which it gives of swiping a horde of weeds.

The world's two-year-old butter record, the seven day period, is held by a Holstein heifer belonging to H. A. Meyer of Syracuse, N. Y., she having produced 24.48 pounds of butter in that time.

The husband who weathers the housecleaning period without losing his church standing and who is fairly attentive to the summer garden when there are periodical baseball games in the neighborhood should be put down as a pretty decent sort of fellow.

This is pre-eminently the day of specialization. In no field of activity does it fetch larger returns than in agriculture. The agricultural colleges of the country running full blast cannot turn these specialists out fast enough to supply the demand, and that at remunerative salaries from the start.

The mission which countless billions of earthworms perform in working soil over, mellowing and enriching it and in reducing raw natural fertilizers and decaying vegetable matter into a homogeneous and usable soil mass can scarcely be estimated. The use of them for the small boy's fish bait and as a food supply for bird life is a minor aspect of their value.

The North Dakota experiment station has been making a series of tests with the gasoline traction engine in farm operations and finds that with it and a gang of plows attached two men can plow from twenty-five to thirty acres of prairie per day at an average cost of 80 cents an acre. This is as much as would be done by twenty-five horses and five men. Such an outfit would be too expensive for the average small farmer, but a half dozen neighbors could without difficulty join in the purchase of it.

It is questionable if the court records of any other state furnish a parallel to Iowa's celebrated Jones county calf case, which was first docketed in 1874 and continued on the calendar for twenty-one years. There were seven prosperous farmers who lived in the southern part of Jones county. Six of them accused the seventh of stealing four six-dollar calves and brought suit, which resulted in the defendant's acquittal. He then brought suit for damages for malicious prosecution, and at the end of twenty-one years he secured a verdict, but not before all the defendants were bankrupt and most of them dead. The case was tried by 144 jurymen and nineteen judges, while the court costs aggregated $30,000. What the attorneys' fees were one can imagine. The case is said to have knocked land values within a radius of ten miles $10 per acre, interfered with the schools and played smash with the churches and all around has been worse than a pestilence.

The work on many farms where stock is kept could be made immensely easier and cleaner and a sight more sanitary and comfortable for the stock which have to frequent the barnyard if some plan were carried out to do away with the mire of mud and manure to be found within a good jump of the stable door. This muss is in part due to an improper handling of the manure, which should be put on a spreader at once and not allowed to accumulate, leech and lose its strength exposed in rain and shine. The mire is also the result of the fact that all the rain on the slope of the roof toward the barnyard runs into the mire and aggravates things many fold. This phase of the trouble could be remedied by equipping this slope of roof with spouts. If the mudhole persists when this is done the laying of a cement or flagstone floor in those parts of the yard where the travel is heaviest would do the business. If this plan is too expensive, from ten to twenty-five loads of gravel, with a top dressing of coal ashes, will make a satisfactory underpinning.

The Nebraska experiment station has lately issued bulletin No. 100, telling of crop production at the substation in North Platte, in western Nebraska, and the principles of cultivation which were followed in the experiments. The annual rainfall at this point for thirty-four years past has averaged 18.8 inches, which places it well within the semi-arid belt. On the experimental plots during the years 1907 and 1908 the yields for winter wheat ranged from 20.85 to 60.9 bushels per acre, of spring wheat from 22.6 to 40.5, of oats from 24 to 82.3 and of barley from 10.20 to 67.7 bushels per acre. Spring emmer yielded from 23 to 52.5 bushels and varieties of corn suited to the country from 25 to 50 bushels per acre. The methods of handling the land were surface cultivation, clean summer tillage or summer fallow and subsurface packing. By means of summer tillage it found that fully eight inches of water which the plants could use might be stored in the soil under average conditions. As a means of preparing the seed bed for winter wheat this method is highly recommended.

FIGHTING THE PLUM CURCULIO.

The chief enemy of the plum family is the curculio, one of a large family of beetles and weevils which makes a small, crescent shaped incision in the green plum when it is about as large as a pea and in this lays its egg. Here the little worm hatches and works toward the middle until maturity. Since the exterior wound makes the fruit defective, whether the worm survives or not, and the curculio does not in the process eat the flesh of the plum, the ordinary poison sprays, effective in the case of leaf eating worms and insects, are of little use. The method usually followed by plum raisers and one feasible for a few trees is to sew together sufficient white sheeting to equal the area of the fruit bearing portion of the tree, leaving a slit in it from one edge to the middle to allow for the trunk. This should be spread beneath the tree, and each morning during the period when the curculio is at work the trunk should be given repeated jarrings, which dislodge the beetles and cause them to fall to the sheet below. Being sluggish in the cool of the morning, they may be gathered and doused in kerosene or burned. Where the number of trees to be treated is larger, time may be saved by fastening the sheet on a circular and broadly funnel shaped frame mounted on wheels, so fixed as to permit of opening and closing on one side to admit the trunk. With such a contrivance a large number of trees may be gone over in a comparatively short time.

BRACE 'EM UP.

A good turn may be done orchard trees which show signs of splitting down the trunk by boring a hole with a three-sixteenth inch augur just below the point where the trunk divides and at right angles to the crack and inserting a bolt of the desired length and the size mentioned and screwing things up tight with a good sized washer at both ends. The thread end of the bolt should extend through the tree far enough to accommodate the washer and just catch the bur, which will make the bolt about the right length when the bur is screwed tight. The ends of the bolt will heal over in two or three years and the tree be as good as ever and proof against many a windstorm which it would not otherwise weather. The same plan, using a five-sixteenth or half inch bolt, works nicely on large shade trees.

THE CORN ROOT LOUSE.

The corn root louse is recognized as one of the worst enemies of the corn plant. Of themselves they could do but little damage, but it seems that they are used as "dairy cows" by a variety of ants, which place them on or near the roots of the corn plant and at intervals, by pressing the backs of the lice, extract from them a honeydew. One of the most effective methods of coping with this louse problem is to give the field in which the corn is to be grown thorough plowing and harrowing before the seed is sown and frequent cultivation during the growing season. In this way the nests of the ants are broken up and their operations in herding and placing their "dairy cows" greatly interfered with. In handling this, as a number of other problems, a system of crop rotation is a great help.

A COMMENDABLE CHARITY.

Acting on the sensible theory that the best way to aid the poor of the large cities is to give them an opportunity to help themselves, a benevolent organization in Chicago has purchased 120 acres of land near that city which it has allotted to 150 needy families, who are to plant and tend the garden stuff which it will grow, a small sum to be paid the board for the use of the land. An expert gardener has been hired to superintend the garden operations, look after the tools, etc. The families who take advantage of this opportunity will not only have something with which to stock their larders next winter, but will have had the advantage of sunshine and fresh air while at work, which should be a powerful factor in uplifting them.

GOVERNMENT WHITEWASH.

The whitewash which the government recommends for the interior of cow barns is made according to the following recipe: Take half a bushel of unslaked lime, slake with boiling water and cover during the process to keep in steam. Strain through a fine sieve or strainer and add to it a peck of salt previously dissolved in warm water. Add three pounds of ground rice boiled to a thin paste, stirring in while hot. Add five gallons of hot water to the mixture, stir well and let stand for a few days, covered as nearly air tight as possible. When ready to use the wash may be colored by adding ocher, lampblack or bluing to suit.

The reason why so many men never get used to wearing their sets of false teeth is that they put them in their vest pocket at mealtime, under their pillow when asleep and most anywhere when at work.

The next worst thing to occupying a lot in the cemetery is for the boy from eight to sixteen to get snagged with the cigarette habit. Fact is, he is a more useful member of society in the former than in the latter capacity.

Instead of driving around a wagon or cart with milk in large cans, the Italian milk vender drives his flock of goats from house to house and milks as much as his patron may want. Milk delivered in this way has the merit of being fresh and undiluted.

Milk production is had at cheapest cost when pastures are flush in the early summer. The recognized best and cheapest substitute for pasture grass is ensilage. If this is to be taken advantage of the coming winter the plans for the silo should be looked up now.

Destructive processes are always much more rapid than constructive. This is why a profane, careless and brutal hired man can do more harm with a herd of dairy cows or the farm horses in six weeks than the owner or a careful man can offset in twice as many months.

The jungle fowl of Australia builds a nest that is in a class by itself. It is in the shape of a mound, being often 15 feet in height and 150 in circumference at the base. The nests are usually placed in secluded, sheltered spots and are built of leaves, grass and twigs woven together.

The man who has a bunch of dairy cows which he is not milking just for the fun of it and won't invest a dollar a year in some good dairy paper is a good deal like the small boy who thinks he can get an education without going to school. In both cases there is a lamentable failure in the adaptation of means to end.

The cow can overload on most anything that is not in itself injurious and not have her digestive apparatus put out of whack. Not so with the horse, which often gets out of condition simply by the continuance of a hearty working ration into a comparatively short period of idleness. This difference suggests the wisdom of exercising an especial oversight in the case of the horse.

An interesting illustraton of what may be done in the line of plant development and breeding is found in the case of sugar beets, whose sugar content has been increased from 8 or 10 to as high as 20 per cent. Where a business is made of raising the seed all of the beets intended for seed are given the sugar test, and only those found to possess a high per cent are used in seed production.

A tendency which is bound to affect not only future wheat prices, but even more vitally the agricultural welfare of sections at present growing this staple, is noticeable in a material reduction of acreage in the wheat growing sections and the substitution of other crops in rotation which do not mean so heavy a pull on the fertility of the soil. With an ever increasing number of mouths to feed this means of necessity higher breadstuffs, but it also means a better type of agriculture where the change is effected.

A good many dairy states might well follow the example of Kansas, which has inaugurated a vigorous campaign against tuberculosis. An appropriation by the state legislature is to be used for the purpose, and the plan is to have all dairy herds in the state examined during the next two years. As fast as herds are examined all infected animals will be tagged on the ear with aluminium buttons, which means that the owner must either kill the animal or ship it to market at once for immediate slaughter.

Owing to the generally recognized truth that the average man will not work as well for another as he will for himself, he should aim as soon as possible to own the land which he works. On the other hand, many men owing to lack of ability to plan and manage never do so well when working for themselves as when under the supervision of another. In such cases one does better to continue in the employment of another, making his service as effective as possible, that he may get the best return possible for it.

Reliable makes of gasoline engines are coming more and more into favor as a substitute for windmill and tread power on the farm. Not only are they not at the mercy of windstorms, but they do not peter out in periods of calm. An additional advantage is that they can be moved from place to place and used for a variety of purposes. The oil consumption of a five or six horsepower machine should not exceed 50 cents per day of ten hours' continuous running. For farm uses the oil or air cooled cylinder machines are preferable in that there is no danger of a freeze up of the cylinder jacket in cold weather. A few additional dollars invested in the purchase of a first class engine in the long run effects a considerable saving in repairs and lessens the tax on a fellow's nerves and religion.

Men Past Fifty In Danger

Men past middle life have found comfort and relief in Foley's Kidney Remedy, especially for enlarged prostate gland, which is very common among elderly men. L. E. Morris, Dexter Ky., writes: "Up to a year ago my father suffered from kindey and bladder trouble and physicians pronounced it enlargement of the prostate gland and advised an operation. On account of his age we were afaraid he could not stand it and I recommended Foley's Kidney Remedy, and the first bottle relieved him, and after taking the second bottle he was no longer troubled with this complaint." THE THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS.
VOL. XXVI. THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, JULY 1, 1909 NUMBER 27

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

A FARMER'S RAILROAD

Farmers Living Along the Red River Have Organized a Company.

Will Build a Railroad Line to Connect With the Soo at Oslo.

The farmers of Kittson county, living in the vicinity of the Red River of the North, have formed a corporation and are planning the building of a railroad which will connect Oslo, in the southwestern portion of Marshall county, with St. Vincent, in the northwestern portion of Kittson county, and traverse one of the richest agricultural sections in Minnesota. The new railroad company is to be known as the Red River Valley & Hudson Bay Railroad company, and is to have a capitalization of upwards of $500,000.

The road will connect with the Soo line at Oslo and the Great Northern at St. Vincent. It is estimated by the projectors that during the first year the line of 70 miles will haul upwards of 5,500,000 bushels of wheat alone. The officers have already secured right-of-way through the towns of St. Vincent, Hill, Red River, Tulu, Eagle Point and Big Woods and they expect to experience little trouble in securing the remaining distance.

While the company has not been incorporated, several meetings have been held by those back of the project, and the first officers will be A. C. Towin, president; B. E. Herseth, secretary; E. Engelbretson, treasurer. The officers are all well known residents of the western section of Kittson county, and it is said they can get all the backing that is necessary to carry the project through. They are residents of the town of Robbin, Kittson county.

Halvor a Good Shot.

Washington, June 24.—"I am now prepared to defend my honor," said Representative Steenerson today. Mr. Steenerson had just returned from a two days' stay in the camp of the naval militia of the District of Columbia. While there he qualified as a marksman with a revolver, making more than 80 per cent of hits at twenty-five and seventy-five yards. Mr. Steenerson is chairman of the house committee on militia, and probably will attend the rifle meet at Camp Perry, Ohio, in August. He received an invitation to attend today.

Hon. R. J. Medicraft Dead.

Hon. R. J. Medicraft, pioneer editor and attorney of Roseau, died last week. The deceased was well known in this section of the state, having served as county attorney of Roseau county and also in the state legislature.

A Tribute to Shaw.

The Red Lake Falls Gazette pays the following handsome compliment to Daniel Shaw:

Outside of county-seat differences, among the people of Red Lake county, on both sides of "Mason and Dixon's line," there is but one setiment as regards the value of Daniel Shaw as a county commissioner. He is not only a thorough business man, with almost a technical knowledge of the science of county government, but he is a courteous gentleman, honest, capable and conscientious.

In the county seat contention Mr. Shaw was a tower of strength for his side of the argument, and the people of Red Lake Falls have no quarrel with him on that score. A man who will not stand by and defend his own town and his own people is lacking in the basic element of good citizenship, fit only for "treason, strategems, and spoils." Mr. Shaw, while loyal to his local interests was loyal to the larger interests of the county, and on numerous occasions has shown a spirit of large heartedness and broad comprehension. The Gazette, without desiring to minimize the ability and good qualities of his successor, is really sorry that Mr. Shaw has tired of the burden and lain down the cares and strifes of county-seat warfare. He was not on our side, but he was a good fighter, and a fair one. Some sweet day after the Appotamox we hope to see him again take up the reins of official life.

Ate Dynamite.

Perham Enterprise: Alfonso Lederman of Perham township decided to get rid of some stumps in his pasture and bought some dynamite last week for that purpose. He got rid of the stumps all right, but at the same time he got rid of four of his best cows. He had been blasting stumps during the forenoon and when he went to dinner he left two sticks of dynamite near one of the stumps. The cows examined the explosive during his absence. It tasted good to them, and they proceeded to eat it. When Mr. Lederman returned to work after dinner, four of his best cows were dead. He valued the cows at between $40 and $50 each, so that his total loss is nearly $200. Mr. Lederamn's experience should prove a warning to farmers to keep dynamite out of reach of [illegible], as it seems to be a deadly poison as well as a dangerous explosive.

A Bad Practice.

The introduction and use of the hand separator has resulted in our patrons keeping their cream too long before delivering it to the creamery. Conditions are apparantly growing worse and the quality of our creamery butter is suffering in consequence. Some creameries are offering premiums for cream delivered often. This should not be necessary. Good butter demands a good price in the market, and the patrons are the ones who benefit most. It is impossible to make good butter from cream which has been held upon the farm for several days.—Northwestern Agriculturist.

CROOKSTON DEFEATED

Fast Game of Ball Played on the Local Diamond Sunday Afternoon.

Score Was One to Two and Not Any of the Runs Were Earned.

In a fast game of ball played at the fair grounds in this city on Sunday afternoon, the Thief River Falls club defeated the nine from Crookston by a score of 2 to 1. There was not one earned run in the entire game. The attendance at the game was quite large, a special train bringing a number of people from Crookston, Red Lake Falls and St. Hilaire.

Mc Keg, the local pitcher, did fine work. He struck out twelve men and only allowed three safe hits. The Crookston pitcher struck out seven and allowed five safe hits. Three errors were made by each side.

The game was an exciting one throughout, and the rooters had lots of fun with Bob Hallet. Hallet, up to Sunday, had been one of the hired players in the Thief River Falls nine, and without giving the local team any warning he hired out to Crookston and played with that team on Sunday. He has the reputation of being the best batter in the northwest, yet on Sunday he fanned out three times and did not make a safe hit. This was very pleasing to the people of Thief River Falls, but the genial Bob did not take it kindly.

Next Sunday Thief River Falls goes down to Crookston on a special train and will remain until Monday, playing three games of ball with the team in that city.

Kills Quack Grass.

The discovery of a spraying solution that will eradicate quack grass is reported by George Welsh, state immigration commissioner, who, with Messrs. Webb and Wallace, publishers of a farm paper in St. Paul, visited Long Lake in Hennepin county Saturday and saw the result of the discovery.

Quack grass is one of the worse enemies the farmers in this state have. It has taken hold of many farms in the southern part of the state and its nature is such that cultivation instead of killing only helps to spread it and make it flourish. It is such a pest that many farms where it has taken root have been abandoned because heretofore there has been no method of fighting it. State experiment stations have been trying to find a remedy, but the best they could do was to spray which cost thirty-five dollars an acre, making it practically prohibitive.

The farmer they visited near Lake Minnetonka showed them a patch of land which had been completely covered with the grass a year ago, but had been sprayed with his mixture and this year the visitors were unable to find a living root on the whole field. The cost of the treatmnt is stated to be $5 an acre. His formula and treatment are the result of his own experiments.—Minneapolis Journal.

Indians Get Payment.

A payment of government funds was made to the Indians of the Red Lake reservation, at the agency, on Monday, when practically $20,000 has distributed among the band. This payment was $14.55 to every brave, squaw and pappoose who are members of the Red Lake band of Indians, and the payment was made by individual check. This payments differs from that made recently in that the last payment was made only to adults, while every man, woman and child comes in for an equal share, this time.

There are some 1,300 Indian inhabitants of the Red Lake reserve, all of whom received the amount specified.

The payment was made under the supervision of Agent Bishop, who was appointed agent to succeed Earl W. Allen, who was removed elsewhere several months ago.

There was considerable controversy over the present payment. The funds were deposited in a bank at St. Paul, with the intention of leaving the money there until after the Fourth of July being paid out, but the Red Lake braves became very much dissatisfied with that arrangement and demanded from the Washington authorities that the money be paid out immediately. Senators Nelson and Clapp were appealed to, with the result that the agent at Red Lake was ordered to make the payment as speedily as possible.

For exhilirating, healthful exercise spend the evening at the Monark rink. Competent instructors, good music. Admission 10 cents. Skates 15 cents extra.

Body Found Near Bagley.

Bagley, Minn., June 25.—Deputy Coroner Wager and Sheriff Anderson have returned from Mallard, where they were called to view the body of a man which was found, by a small boy, on the bank of Lake La Salle Monday afternoon. The officials state that the body was in a badly decomposed state and that there was nothing about it or in the pockets of the clothing to assist in identification and the name of the unfortunate is a mystery.

The body was clothed in a light gray suit, and a dark cap was worn on the head.

From what information the coroner was able to gather at Mallard and at the lumber camps, it is beleived that the body is that of a man who visited Mallard and the lumber camps last winter and was searching for work, during the month of February.

It was at first thought that the man might have met with foul play, but there were no marks on the body indicating violence, and from the manner in which the body lay that theory was abandoned, and the deputy coroner and sheriff deemed no inquest necessary.

Boats Must Carry Lights.

Thief River Falls launch and steamboat owners will undoubted be interested in the following law which was enacted at the last session of legislature and which went into effect June 1st:

Section 1. Every person who navigates any steam launch, gasoline launch or who permits any such boat owned by him to be navigated, at night, on any waters of this state without having such boat equipped with a suitable light, placed at the bow of such launch or at the mast of any such sailboat, and so arranged as to be plainly visible for at least one hundred yards, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars, nor more than one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment for not less than 10 days nor more than thirty days.

Section 2. This act shall take effect and be in force from and after June 1st, 1909.

Blew the Safe.

Some miscreants, number not positively known, effected an entrance to the Argyle postoffice Monday night, blew open the safe and decamped with what money they were able to find. They did not get much of a haul, the total amount of the spoils they secured being less than $10. The robbers are believed to have been two, possibly three in number, and they managed to make their getaway safely. A day or so later a postoffice inspector got on the track of a pair of strangers at whom the finger of suspicion pointed, and he took them into camp and escorted them to Crookston, to have them dealt with by the United States commissioner there.—Warren Sheaf.

Small Output This Year.

The machinery department of the prison manufacturing plant will deliver to farmers some twenty five reapers and as many mowers which represent the output to this time. There are many applications for the machines, but no more could be made for lack of time and facilities. Severe tests show that the machines can do the work, and it is expected there will be a big demand and out put next year, when the plant is in full running order.

ARPIN GETS THE CONTRACT

Local Man Secures the Contract of Digging the Big Germantown Ditch.

It Is the Largest Ditch Ever Built By a County in the State.

A. M. Arpin, of this city, was on last Saturday awarded the contract for building the large Germantown ditch, north of here in Marshall county. The ditch will be 58 miles in length and will cost in the neighborhood of $125,000. Mr. Arpin secures 11.88 cents for each yard of dirt removed and will also construct a highway along the south side of the ditch with the dirt removed from the ditch. There are thirty bridges to be built over the ditch, but the contract for this work has not yet been awarded.

Aside from the fact that Mr. Arpin is a local man, the people of this vicinity were greatly pleased over the fact that he had been awarded the contract for doing the work as it will be sure to be completed at the earliest possible moment and Mr. Arpin has the reputation of building the best of ditches. Work will be commenced this year and Mr. Arpin is in hopes to have enough of it built this fall to afford the settlers some relief next spring. The ditch will not be completed until 1910. The work will be done by walking and floating dredges.

Other companies who bid upon this job of ditching were: McWilliams, of Illinois, Standard Drainage company of Windom, and Forrestal & Feyer, of St. Paul.

This ditch will be the largest ever built by a county in the state of Minnesota, and very few state ditches are as large.

Hank Draper and a crew of men who had been employed at the outlet bringing piling for the T. R. Falls Lumber company, returned to this city last week. He reports that the river and lake is the lowest it has been known to be for many years.

A new band stand, built upon a wagon has been constructed the past week and will be used by the band this evening. Fr. Adolph is the architect of the new structure and Ed. Wertz the mechanical superintendent.

A party of surveyors arrived in the city last Saturday and at once proceeded up the Thief River where they will finish the survey of the river which is soon to be straightened by the state.

Moses Poleran, dishwasher in J. A. Ralston's restaurant, was given a sentence of 40 days in the county jail last Thursday by judge Bishop for assaulting Mr. Ralston.

Tobacco Culture in Minnesota.

The legislature appropriated a small sum for tobacco investigation and the experiment station at St. Anthony Park has provided a number of plants for free distribution among the farmers.

Any farmer in the state who desires to attempt the production of tobacco should apply to the experiment station for enough for an acre or less. Six thousand plants are considered enough for an acre.

The station has grown these plants in the eastern part of Sherburne county, hence any one in that part of the state could easily call for the plants. If the plants are to be shipped to any address they will be expressed, and the express charges (25 to 50 cents) must be paid by the one receiving the plants.

The tobacco culture is in its infancy in Minnesota, but experiment station officers say that it has been, and can be profitably grown in Sherburne, Stearns and Becker counties. Once tobacco growing becomes understood, its production will greatly increase, for it gives large net returns per acre.

Circulars are now being printed which give instructions in the various operation connected with the the culture of tobacco They can be obtained from the experiment station.

Horses Shot.

D. McDonald the state veterinarian, was here Tuesday to examine some horses belonging to Frank Wirkus west of town. Three were found to have the glanders and as a result they had to be shot. A few years ago when the stage lines were operated between here and Stephen this disease was widely spread throughout this section. By prompt work on the part of the state the disease has been practically wiped out, only a case here and there being reported. This is a hard blow to Mr. Wirkus, who seems to have been having a little more than his share of trouble of late, and he has the sympathy of the community.—Greenbush Tribune.

Suicide In Tabor.

Jacob Becker, almost a total stranger ended his life by hanging himself in the barn of Martin Dvorek, in Tabor, on Monday night. He had fastened a piece of clothes line to a rafter in the barn and standing on the manger had adjusted the noose around his neck and then swung off into eternity, his feet being several inches from the barn floor. The unfortunate man had worked for several farmers in the vicinity this spring. For some time he had been ill and very despondent. The Polk County coroner was notified and upon his arrival decided that an inquest was unnecessary, it being a plain case of suicide. The corpse was taken to Crookston for interment—Warren Sheaf.

To Celebrate the Fourth.

There is to be a Fourth of July celebration at the old John Myer's farm two miles north of Thief River Falls on the Thief River on Sunday. The gasoline launches, automobiles, etc., will furnish means of transportation for those from this city who desire to atted.

BRYAN CRITICISES

Says Governor Johnson Should Have Approved Tonnage Tax.

CORPORATIONS AGAINST BILL

Infers This Opposition May Have Swayed Executive.

The current issue of W. J. Bryan's Commoner contains a long criticism of the action of Governor Johnson in vetoing the tonnage tax. Mr. Bryan contends the tonnage tax was opposed by the corporations and he leaves the inference that Governor Johnson may have been swayed in his action by such opposition.

The tax, Mr. Bryan contends, was endorsed by the Democratic state platform and he reiterates his argument that a platform is binding and that if Governor Johnson was opposed to it he should have repudiated it at the time of its adoption, instead of waiting until after the legislature had carried out the platform pledge.

In discussing Mr. Bryan's article Governor Johnson said:

"I do not think Mr. Bryan understands the real situation, either the bill, my veto or the conditions surrounding it. In discussing our platform last fall before the people I said that I would veto any bill that would do harm to any particular section of the state.

"Mr. Bryan is undoubtedly in error in his conclusions as to this veto. He does not understand the matter and I think if he would take time to investigate it his views would change."

ST. PAUL ITALIAN MURDERED

Slayer Captured After an Exciting Chase.

Another chapter to the growing narrative of Italian tragedy in St. Paul was added when Dorrato Minnelli, an aged street sweeper, was wantonly murdered upon the very doorstep of his small home by Luigi Macini, who boarded with the countryman into whose prostrate figure he fired three shots after the first had laid the old man low.

And then followed a thrilling pursuit in which Macini was captured at the top of the South Washington street steps, exhausted from his desperate endeavor to escape, by John P. Kirk, treasurer of the Star theater, who sprang upon the fugitive from the rear and pinned him fast until assistance arrived.

The opinion of the police, after a cursory review of the incidents connected with the homicide, inclines toward the theory that the prisoner is insane. In his cell, however, the Italian protests against all hints at lunacy.

MINNEAPOLIS BOYS DROWNED

One Dies in Effort to Save His Companion.

Albert Larsen and Oscar Eide, two Minneapolis boys, fourteen years old, were drowned in the Mississippi river in that city. Fritz Slagle, a companion, also had a narrow escape while attempting to rescue the two lads.

The boys were swimming and playing on logs at Twenty-eighth avenue north, in the logging district of Minneapolis. Larsen fell from a log and was carried down with the current. The Eide boy immediately jumped in after him and was borne with the swift stream. Neither lad could swim to any extent and both were rapidly swept down the stream.

Seeing the predicament they were in the Slagle boy started to swim after them, but his efforts proved futile and he almost lost his life. Although he is a good swimmer he could do little in the swift current and reached shore with considerable difficulty.

DEATH OF JUDGE WILLISTON

Aged Red Wing Jurist Is Stricken Suddenly.

Judge W. C. Williston, aged seventy-nine, one of Red Wing's most prominent citizens, was stricken suddenly while addressing an old settlers' gathering at Goodhue.

About fifty residents of Red Wing, including Judge Williston, were among those present at the Goodhue celebration. They had gathered after dinner to tell of the early days when many of those present helped to lay the foundations of Goodhue county's present greatness. Among those called upon was Judge Williston. He had risen from his chair to respond and had spoken several sentences when he hesitated, faltered and sank to the floor. Those about him quickly carried him to one of the side rooms of the hall, where shortly afterward he died.

KILLS WIFE AND HIMSELF

Aged Minnesota Farmer Commits Double Crime.

Bendik Bendikson, a farmer residing seven miles from Preston, shot and killed his wife and, when the coroner and sheriff arrived at the house, shot himself and died instantly.

The suicide and his victim were both upwards of seventy years old. Bendikson is supposed to have suddenly lost his mind.

SEVERAL ARRESTS ARE MADE

Body of Missing Man Found Buried on His Farm.

The body of H. J. Leadbeater, a farmer residing near Mankato, who disappeared two months ago, was found buried in a potato patch. Frank Smith, a hired man, according to the authorities, has confessed, saying that Mrs. Leadbeater killed her husband with an axe, probably to put him out of the way that she might wed another man. Smith, Mrs. Leadbeater, and Mrs. Charles Swandt, sister of the woman, are under arrest. The police are seeking Charles Swandt, who, Smith says, helped him bury the body after the murder.

A mob of residents of Mankato and the country about Leadbeater's former home surrounded the jail and two or three wild spirits howled for the life of Smith, charging him with shattering a home.

So threatening did the demonstration become on the porch of the jail that Deputy Sheriff Eli Klughertz, in charge of the office during the absence of Sheriff Donahue in Montana on a requisition case, swore in four extra deputies. They were posted at different points of vantage about the jail to withstand any attacks that might develop.

BISHOP COTTER DEAD

Winona Prelate Succumbs After a Long Illness.

Right Rev. Joseph B. Cotter, aged sixty-five, head of the Catholic diocese of Winona, which is comprised of the entire southern half of the state, died at his home in Winona of a complication of heart trouble and Bright's disease. In the early eighties he was for several years president of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America. In 1887 he was a temperance lecturer, visiting practically every state east of the Mississippi river. As a result of his labors he secured about 60,000 pledges for total abstinence.

Bishop Cotter was one of the leading Catholic workers in the Northwest and was a figure in the councils of the Roman Catholic church throughout the Union.

His illness dates back several years. Early in April his ailment became so serious that it was deemed advisable to go to a sanitarium at Atlantic City, N. J., where he might inhale the sea breezes, but the change in climate rather aggravated his ailment and he was brought home a month ago, his case at that time being pronounced hopeless by eminent physicians.

TAWNEY IS NOT ASPIRANT

Denies He Will Run for Governor of Minnesota.

"I am not and will not be a candidate for the office of governor of Minnesota," declared Representative Tawney at Washington, in commenting upon the report that his name had been mentioned in St. Paul in connection with the gubernatorial nomination. While Mr. Tawney has authorized no announcement it is accepted as a certainty by his friends that he will stand for renomination to the house. The congressman from Winona has had two or three bitter contests in recent years; but his supporters contend that the climax of the opposition to him was reached in the last campaign.

SUICIDES IN MILL CITY

Two Men End Their Lives While Despondent.

Louis Mauer, a wealthy property owner of Minneapolis, committed suicide at his summer home at Medicine lake by shooting himself through the head. He had been despondent as the result of a paralytic stroke sustained two years ago.

Adolph Johnson of Melby, this state, twenty-three years old, committed suicide by slashing his throat with a penknife in the Lawrence sanitarium for inebriates.

Kissing Not Grounds for Divorce.

Holding that the bonds that unite husband and wife should be too highly regarded to be torn asunder for such trivial reasons as the mere kissing of old family friends by the husband Judge Oscar Hallam, in the district court at St. Paul, denied the petition of Maybelle A. Hirst asking a decree of divorce from William H. Hirst on the alleged grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment. Hirst's cruelty, it appeared from the evidence, consisted of his kissing proclivities.

Workman Crushed to Death.

Crushed and mangled almost beyond recognition and with almost every bone in his body broken Pearley Holmes of St. Paul, employed as an oiler by the St. Paul Crushed Stone company, is dead at the city hospital. While attempting to repair a belt on an engine Holmes was caught in the machinery and pulled through an immense pulley used to lift large pieces of stone.

Italian to Be Deported.

Francisco Tine, believed to be an organizer of the Black Hand society, will be deported from Duluth by Immigration Inspector Dean to Fort Frances, Ont., where he is wanted on charges of blackmail and intimidation. He is believed to be the head of a branch of the society which has been operating on the ranges.

INVENTION IS IMPORTANT

Two Swedish Engineers Evolve a Michrophone for Long-Distance Telephoning Which Is So Powerful That It Increases the Transmitting Power of the Average Telephone Over 100 Per Cent—Iron Wires Can Be Used Instead of Copper.

SWEDEN.

Two Swedish engineers, C. Egner, chief of the Swedish telegraph bureau, and J. Gunnar Holmstrom, have after several years of energetic research, invented a michrophone for long-distance telephoning, which is so powerful that it increases the transmitting power of the average telephone over 100 per cent. It was while conducting a series of experiments with wireless telephoning that the two engineers made observations, which led to their great invention and which almost immediately resulted in establishing wireless telephone connections with Stockholm and Berlin. On June 1 the two inventors conversed with the general director of the Stockholm Telegraph company and the results obtained from this experiment were remarkable. It established the fact that by means of the Egner-Holmstrom system it is possible to telephone a distance of 4,000 kilometers, whereas it is possible under the old method to telephone only half of that distance. It is further established that iron wires can be used instead of copper and that they prove equally as good transmitters. This means a great saving in the expenditure of conductors. The invention has aroused the interest of inventors all over Europe and Messrs. Holmstrom and Egner have received invitations to go to a number of European capitals and explain their wonderful invention.

About 450 men employed in the Stockholm cellulose factories are at present on a strike. They have been holding one meeting after another, but are unable to come to any kind of an agreement with their employers. The strike has lasted about five weeks and there is no sign of any cessation in hostilities. Indeed this year has been a bad one for strikes in many industries and one has reason to call Sweden a strike ridden country at present. The carpenters' strike has been partially settled, but there are indications that it will break out anew.

Five first class so-called "Bogie coaches" have been delivered to the Swedish state railways by the Swedish State Railway Manufacturing Supplies company. The new coaches are modern in every respect and are beautifully furnished. They are also made so that they can be used on foreign railways, so that if one of the aforementioned coaches are chartered at Stockholm one can travel direct from the Swedish capital to Paris without changing cars.

Cutting the nose off one's sweetheart is certainly a horrible way of manifesting one's affections, but that seems to have been the method adopted by Axel Hultmann. She was found in her bed the other day in a senseless condition in one of the shopping districts of Stockholm. Her nose had been cut off and she had besides been cut about her face and arms. Her sweetheart, Axel Hultmann, has confessed to the crime.

There is now every indication that the Olympic games will be held in Stockholm in 1912. Berlin does not seem to be bidding very actively for it and it is believed that she will yield to the Stockholmians. At any rate the Swedish committee has in the event that the games will be held there, invited the participants in the games to reside in Sweden during the period of training, should they desire to do so.

The christening of the little Smaland duke was solemnized at the Royal Palace June 6 in the presence of a large number of distinguished men and women. Bishop Billing was the officiating clergyman. The ceremonies were simple but impressive.

The British admiralty has decided to test Captain Unge's torpedo apparatus for carrying lines from one ship to another. The experiments will be conducted by Captain Unge himself on board the British warship "Excellence."

Down in Malmo the other day there was another labor demonstration. About 1,000 laboring men gathered in the streets and formed a procession, carrying a banner with the inscription: "Give us bread or work."

The value of Sweden's forests are at present estimated at not less than 100,000,000 crowns. The government owns about 10,000,000 crowns worth of this timber.

King Gustaf celebrated his fifty-first birthday a week ago last Wednesday. The day was generally observed throughout the entire country.

NORWAY.

The storthing has received the government's plan for the strengthening of the navy. It embraces an annual expenditure of about $7,500,000 a year. Of this amount about $1,500,000 will be utilized for the purchase of materials and the erection of new buildings. Through this arrangement the Norwegian navy would have six or eight new protected cruisers, with a respective tonnage of about 3,500 each, and having a far better and stronger equipment than the other vessels. There will in addition be not less than six new torpedo cruisers, to cost about 2,000,000 crowns apiece. There will in addition to these be built fourteen submarine boats and forty smaller torpedo craft. A submarine boat will cost about 1,100,000 crowns and the average torpedo boat will cost about 300,000 crowns. Thus it will be seen that the Norwegian government has elaborate plans for the improvement of its navy and when completed little Norway, much to the astonishment of the larger nations, will have one of the most formidable navies in the world for a country of so small a size as Norway.

The controversy between the head of the navy department, Admiral Sparre and the chief of the naval officers in the Norwegian navy, Admiral Borressen, has caused a cabinet crisis, which brought forward an interpellation last Friday in the storthing which brings forth the delicate question as to who is to decide the question, whether it shall be the king himself or his ministers. It is an interesting question that has been raised and will, when decided, establish a most important precedent. The motion was declared out of order by State Minister Knudsen, but there will be a vote on the question just the same one of these days. The same question was referred to in our last week's issue and it continues to be the uppermost topic of interest now before the Norwegian people.

The Norwegian-American line will after all be a reality and will if everything comes off as it is planned be in operation in the course of a year or more. The capital stock of the Norwegian-American line already amounts to not less than 10,000,000 crowns. The storthing has made an allowance of 50,000 crowns and may possibly make an additional allowance if the occasion should arise. The intention is to place in commission two or three modern steamers of a 7,500 capacity at the very earliest opportunity on the Bergen-New York route, which will consume about fourteen days. There is no question but what the new line will do a big business from the very start and thus far there has been no trouble at all encountered in raising the capital.

The Danish singers made a great hit in both Hamar and Trondhjem and arrived a week ago last Wednesday in Bergen, where they gave a concert in the afternoon to an audience of at least 2,000 persons. Their entire tour in Norway has been a splendid success and they have been most enthusiastically received everywhere.

Official statistics prove that in spite of the effective work of the temperance reformers in Norway the consumption of whisky is increasing in Norway while that of wine and beer is the same as before. This fact is used as an argument against closing the "samlag" saloons.

The Norwegian settlers who emigrated to Cuba some time ago and settled in the Coa valley are already beginning to leave their plantations there and are returning in large numbers to Norway. The little colony is reported to have lost in the neighborhood of 300,000 crowns.

Mme. Elsa Frolich has been engaged at the National Theater in Christiania with a salary of 4,000 crowns a month for the season. She is at present one of the ablest actresses on the Norwegian stage.

The "Norske Intelligentsedler" celebrated its 146th anniversary May 25. It is the oldest paper in Norway.

DENMARK.

A Danish exchange tells us that "the most significant feature of the recent election of a new folketing is that the everexpanding Social-Democratic party has been checked in its triumphant march and the party will keep the same number of seats in the folketing as before, viz., 24. Will the Danish people support the plan of the expensive and comprehensive military defenses proposed by the Neergaard ministry? This question was virtually answered in the affirmative. Neergaard's party proper is a small one, but his military plans will be supported by so many members of other parties that he can certainly count on a majority of the house on that particular issue. The campaign was an exceedingly energetic one and among the voters were 19,000 citizens who stayed at home at the elections of 1906. The Social Democrats lost two seats in Copenhagen, but gained two in the provinces. Four members of the cabinet were elected and three defeated. Former Premier Christensen had to witness that the number of seats held by his party in the rigsdag were reduced from 35 to about 25."

Colonel Fritz Holst, a well known military figure in Copenhagen, passed away the other day, aged seventy-five years. He took part in the war of 1864 and in 1866 he was appointed chief of the Eighth battalion in Viborg, a position which he held until 1855 when he retired from military service. He was also a man of great literary attainments and had composed several plays which were rendered with success in Copenhagen and which for a time were very popular.

The rebuilding of Christiansand's palace requires a whole lot of building stones. Up to date about 5,000 large stones have arrived at their destination, but the authorities state that they will need at least 3,000 more. Most of the stones have been shipped from Jylland and are far better than those that are received from other sections of the country.

SHAKESPEARE'S POISONS.

They Are Taken Too Seriously by Some Modern Chemists.

It is one of the penalties of Shakespeare's position as a great poet that his words are taken seriously.

A learned doctor in a foreign scientific review has been molding an inquisition into the poisons mentioned by him. He points out that the "juice of cursed hebenon," which Claudius is said to have poured into the ear of Hamlet's father, is incapable of piercing the tympanum of the ear and therefore could not have penetrated the body and poisoned the blood, as the ghost alleges. Again, the narcotic which Friar Laurence administers to Juliet was probably either Datura stramonium or mandragora root. The first is used by the convicts in New Caledonia when they wish to rob their companions, but its effects do not last forty-two hours nor anything like that time. A scientist who experimented on himself with mandragora found that intense sickness is caused on waking, and this did not happen to Juliet. As for the poison which was given to Romeo, it was probably aconite or one of those mixed poisons composed of vegetable alkaloids and ptomaine, since it was so remarkably rapid in its effects.

But that is the fault of too serious people. They will take everything seriously. Shakespeare probably knew nothing at all of poisons or of narcotics. He was a poet and not a chemist and might therefore be allowed the usual poetic license.—London Globe.

TWIN EARTHQUAKES.

Two Distinct Series of Shocks Are Felt Almost Simultaneously.

Among the most interesting earth tremors from a scientific point of view are those known as "twin earthquakes," where two distinct series of shocks are felt, separated by an interval of two or three seconds. In each series the vibrations increase to a maximum and die away, the whole duration, including the quiet interval, being eight to twelve seconds. In some parts of the earthquake zone the most powerful shocks are nearly always of this kind. When they occur, however, there is always a strip of country where only one shock is felt.

Apparently there are two distinct points of origin for these shocks, and the strip where a single shock is felt is that where the two sets of vibrations arrive simultaneously. The fact that this band is straight shows that the twin shocks occur together and that therefore one is not a consequence of the other. Probably there is an S shaped bend in some interior layer of rock and the twin foci are at the points of greatest displacement—namely, the bends of the S. The movement that causes such a twin earthquake therefore results in accentuating the form of the fold in the earth's crust.

HOWELL PLANER AND MATCHER

You no doubt find it a hard matter to sell your rough lumber to advantage because most of your customers want it finished. Furthermore you can get twice as much for your lumber by planing it, making it up into flooring, drop siding, window casing and mouldings, for which there is an unlimited demand at big prices. The Howell Planer and Matcher does all this work to perfection.

You can also make big money by working up all your slabs and waste material into Lath and Shingles. All you need for this purpose is our Lath Mill and Shingle Machine. We build the best and most up-to-date machines of this kind on the market which we can furnish you at manufacturers prices. Keep your plant running all the time. Remember we build complete Saw Mill Plants from top to bottom, all of our own manufacture. Our new Catalog B is just now out. If you have not received it, write to-day. Manufactured by

A BASHFUL LOVER.

The Professor Was a Shy Wooer, but Finally Got the Lady.

Dr. Haldane, at one time a professor of St. Andrews university, was a very shy man. This latter failing prevented him from asking any lady to become his wife until he was well advanced in life.

However, he plucked up courage one day, redecorated his house and went to call on the object of his affections.

The lady, seeing the doctor's embarrassment, opened fire. "Weel, doctor, hae ye got through a' your papering and painting yet? I'm told your new carpets are just beautifu'. They say the pattern o' the dining room chairs is just quite out o' the way. In short, that everything aboot the house is just perfect."

Here was a providential opening he was not such a goose as to overlook. He advanced his chair, sidled toward her, simpering the while, raised his eyes furtively to her face and said, with a gentle inflection of his voice which no ear but a willfully deaf one could have misinterpreted: "Na, na, Miss Jane, it's no quite perfect. It canna' be quite that so long as there's one thing wanting!"

"And what can that be?" asked the imperturbable spinster.

Utterly thrown on his beam ends by her willful blindness to his meaning, the poor doctor beat a hasty retreat, drew back his chair from its dangerous proximity, caught up his hat and in tones of blighted hope gasped forth his declaration in these words: "Eh, dear, eh! Weel I'm sure! The thing wanting is a—a—a—sideboard."

However, she married him after all. —London Answers.

What the Professor Wanted.

The professor steps into the barber chair and assumes an attitude of premeditation.

"Hair cut, sir?"

"Please!" The barber cuts his hair.

"Like a shampoo?"

"Um—please!" He gets the shampoo.

"Shave you, sir?"

"Um—yes!" One shave.

"Massage?" He nods assent and consequently is massaged. The barber removes the towel; the professor arises and mechanically takes the proffered check.

"What's this?"

"Your check, sir."

"My check?"

"Certainly, sir—hair cut, shampoo, shave and massage."

The professor rubs his hand over face and head.

"Did I get all that?"

"Surely, sir."

"It's queer—very queer—most extraordinarily queer! A most wonderful example of philosophical phenomena!"

"What's queer?" asks the barber in dismay.

"Why, the working of the human mind. What I came in for was to get my razor honed."—Puck.

AN ARCTIC TRAGEDY.

Heroic Self Sacrifice In the Cause of Science.

Surely the darkest side of arctic exploration was never more poignantly exhibited than it is in Lieutenant A. Trolle's account in Travel and Exploration of the death of Mylius Erichsen and Hagen and Bronlund, members of the Danish expedition to northeast Greenland. The indomitable energy of these men, their self sacrifice in the cause of science, are on the highest plane of heroism.

"For thirty days these men walked on with only one sledge and four feeble dogs, covering a distance of 150 miles, or five miles a day. Every morning they must have had only one wish, one craving—the craving for sleep, sleep and rest forever. And yet they crept out of their worn sleeping bags and faced a new day, because they would continue till they reached a place where there was some probability of our finding their bodies and Hagen's fine map sketches.

"Ten miles from the depot, on Lambert Land, Mylius Erichsen and Hagen died. Only Bronlund reached the depot, leaving his dead comrades behind and creeping along on his wounded feet alone in the dim moonlight. When he arrived at the depot he placed Hagen's sketches and his own last report so that the search party could not fail to find them and then, wrapping himself up in his furs, lay down and died."

ESCORTING THE COURT.

Official Pomp and Splendor In Old Colonial Times.

In colonial days York, Me., was the county seat to which the judges and lawyers from New Hampshire and Massachusetts often went, and the court sessions were attended with much official pomp and ceremony. In "Old Colonial Houses In Maine" Emma Huntington Nason quotes from a record left by John Adams, who as a young barrister went to York in 1774 and who made at that time the following entry in his journal:

"When I got to the tavern on the eastern side of the Piscataqua river I found the sheriff of York and six of his deputies, all with gold laced hats, ruffles, swords and very gay clothes and all likely young men who had come out to that place to escort the court into town."

This gives us a hint of the pomp and splendor affected by the court officials of those days, "when the judges wore robes of scarlet with large cambric bands and immense wigs and the barristers had gowns and also bands and tie wigs."

As the judges aproached the shire towns the sheriff met them with an escort and flourish of trumpets. Their arrival was announced by cannon, and the daily summons to the court before bells were introduced was by beating a drum.

A Patriot.

National and local characteristics come out oddly enough at school examinations. A subinspector, hearing a class of London Irish boys repeat Macaulay's "Horatius," inquired whether three soldiers would be likely nowadays to hold a bridge against a whole army.

"Would three Englishmen, for example?" he said.

"No, sir!" said the class.

"Would three Scotsmen?"

They again dissented.

"Would three Irishmen?"

"Please, sir," shouted an excitable little fellow, "one Irishman would do it!"

How She Secured Office.

Mrs. Mary East is said to have been the pioneer woman in England to hold some of the offices as to which women's eligibility is now in dispute, but she was elected because she disguised herself as a man. For thirty-six years this remarkable woman, while masquerading as a man and acting as landlord of the White House inn at Poplar, served assiduously on juries and in parish offices. In 1744 she was "head borough," in 1752 overseer of the poor. When her sex was finally discovered she retired to private life with the competence she had acquired as an innkeeper.

An Accomplice.

The doctor looked at the patient.

"I am very sorry," he said, "that you didn't let me send for Dr. Gookins some time ago. It's scarcely worth while to bring him here now."

"Oh, well, doctor," said the patient wearily, "perhaps you can make use of him as an accessory after the fact."—Cleveland Leader.

The Case of B. E. Wise

Wise was a big man on the "street."

His deals were larger and involved more money and brains than most men dared to invest.

Wise's wisdom lacked in but one particular—he failed to consider Nature's laws of compensation. The result—Wise gave out. Some said "Old Wise is all in." They were wrong.

Wise's physician said "DIGESTO for those wasted tissues and jaded brain cells."

The Fighting Maoris.

Some 300 Maoris were shut up in intrenchments at a place called Orakaw. Without food except a few raw potatoes, without water, pounded at by artillery and under a hail of rifle bullets and hand grenades, unsuccessfully assaulted no less than five times, they held out for three days, completely surrounded. General Cameron humanely sent a flag of truce, inviting them to surrender honorably. To this they made the ever famous reply: "Enough! We fight right on forever!" Then the general offered to let the women come out, and the answer was, "The women will fight as we." At length on the afternoon of the third day the garrison in a body charged at quick march right through the English lines, fairly jumping over the heads of the men of the Fortieth regiment as they lay behind a bank. Half of them fell; the remainder got clear away. The earthworks and the victory remained with us, but the glory was theirs."—"The Long White Cloud," by W. P. Reeves.

Forgot Himself.

Absentminded persons are not infrequently met among the medical profession, who of all men should always have their wits about them. It is related that a well known doctor was once present in a public place when an accident occurred and, seeing a wounded man, went about calling: "A doctor! A doctor! Somebody go and fetch a doctor!"

A friend who was by his side ventured to inquire, "Well, what about yourself?"

"Oh, dear," answered the doctor, suddenly recalling the fact that he belonged to the medical profession, "I didn't think of that!"

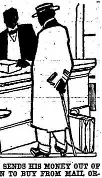
V.—Where Is Your Talent?

Remember the case of the man who took his talent, wrapped it in a napkin and buried it?

Not only did his master punish him for his folly, but his conduct has become a byword.

The world has progressed since his time. Modern conditions have developed a kind of man who is even more useless than the one who buried his talent. HE IS THE MAN



WHO SENDS HIS MONEY OUT OF TOWN TO BUY FROM MAIL ORDER HOUSES.

The man who buried his talent at least had the talent to show for it. If we all spent our money out of town in a short time we would have nothing to show for it except BANKRUPTCY NOTICES.

The man who patronizes home industries benefits the people he deals with and benefits himself. His conduct is like that of the good and faithful servant who so used the talents intrusted to him that they greatly increased. He is a good and faithful citizen who is worthy of the success he is sure to win.

The next time you see an attractive advertisement of a mail order house go to your local merchant and try to buy the article of him. IF HE HASN'T IT ASK HIM WHY. If he has it ask him why he never told you about it in your local paper.

That will be a boost for us. But we'll stand for it. And we'll boost back; remember that.

Do your share of the boosting and you'll get your share of the prosperity.

LET US BOOST!

LABOR ON THE FARM AND IN THE CITY.

James Wilson, secretary of agriculture, again calls attention to one of the most thought-compelling situations that periodically occur in this country—the parallelling of labor scarcity on the farms and the labor conjestion in the cities.

It is a big problem, and it is not to be settled—easily. Secretary Wilson says that "most of the men out of work will not leave the sidewalks." That may be true and undoubtedly is measurably true, but it is also true that most of the men out of work in the cities can't leave the sidewalks if they wish to. The farms are distant and though there are railroads to carry them very comfortably and speedily from the jobless city to the labor hungry country, the railroads want money for the service, and the man out of a job has no money, as a rule.

The problem thus divides itself into two sections: First, to create in the workless haunters of the city sidewalks the desire to go to the country for work; and second to get them there. The second is easier than the first, though no very brave attempt has ever been made to solve it. The railroads are interested in successful crop-garnering, because a large share of their business consists in the hauling of farm products. They can't give free transportation under present laws, but they could interest themselves to the extent of contributing to a fund for the purpose of emptying the cities of their jobless unfortunates and supplying the need of the farmer for help in gathering his crops.

There are always many among the cities unemployed that do not really wish work. Sometimes it is charged that most of them are that way, but we don't believe that.

Such men are vagabonds, and workhouses, where they are compelled to labor whether they wish it or not offer the only proper remedy for their cases. But the large proportion of men who really wish to work, and that may lose hope and degenerate into the vagabond and criminal class if—they don't get it, are deserving of sympathy and help.

One vital trouble in this situation is that the demand for the harvest labor occurs in each section only during a short period. It is true that throughout the country it exists most of the summer, the harvesting season beginning earliest in the South and ending latest in the North; but to meet that situation would require some elaborate scheme of first getting penniless men without jobs out of the city and then moving them in large bodies from the spring harvesting sections to the fall harvesting sections.

Yet to a very great extent the problem of help on the farm exists all the year around, though it becomes most acute in the harvest time. One farmer member of the Minnesota legislature, commenting last winter on scientific farming, said that what the farmer wants is not science but help. He was wrong there; the farmer wants both; but he knew what he was talking about when he spoke of the shortage of farm help.

It is a big problem, and an important one. The man that can solve it will be doing his country signal service.

AN UNDECISIVE DECISION.

The Supreme Court of the United States has again decided that the American people do not now their minds. A law passed by the House and Senate, signed by the President, and approved by ninety-nine per cent. of the people, has been declared, not unconstitutional—that was not necessary—but just meaningless.

Here is the plain, old story. Formerly a man could own a coal mine in Pennsylvania and ship over any railroad line. He could make a profit and life. Then the railroads hit upon a rate so high that the independent coal operator was squeezed out. The railroads organized mining companies, and charged their own companies, the same exorbitant rates they charged the independents. This was noble, but cheap, for the railroad company owned the coal company. It was simply taking money out of the trousers pocket and putting it into the vest.

After a dozen years of agitation, the people who wanted fair play, got a law on the statue books, in 1906, to this very case. It declared that it should be unlawful for any railroad to transport commodities produced by it or under its authority, "or which it may own in whole or in part, or in which it may have any interest direct or indirect."

The words seem rather plain, but the court has held that the railroad has no interest direct or indirect in the coal, even though it owns the company that owns the coal.

We are having a hard time regulating the railroads. When a law is constitutional, it does not mean anything, and long before a case is decided, the damaged is done. Would it not be wise for Congress to forbid interstate commerce to any railroad that does not take out a federal charter, and live up to its provisions. Our railway franchises should be on the same footing with dog licenses. If the dog is not vicious, its owner is allowed to renew the license each year.—Success Magazine.

Gollmar Bros. Circus.

Gollmar Bros. circus gave a very creditable perfomance under difficulties Tuesday. The circus train arrived here at 4 o'clock in the morning, but so severe was the rain that, they did not unload until 1 o'clock in the afternoon. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon they gave a parade and one performance at 7:30 in the evening. Few people from the country were present and the attendance was 3,000.

Meat, fish, fruit or vegetables preserved in tin cans should on opening be removed at once to some earthenware dish for the reason that very soon after being exposed to the air, if left in the tin receptacle, ptomaine poisons are likely to develop, resulting in the serious illness or death of those who eat the canned stuff.

Keeping the onion patch free from weeds will not only be the best possible thing for the growth of the onions, but will simplify immensely the job of pulling or raking them out when ripe. The writer has helped harvest a crop of onions in a field badly overrun with the late growing crab grass, and the force of the above suggestion was painfully apparent at the time.

It is little less than blasphemy to have "God Bless Our Home" worked with colored yarns in perforated cardboard and hung up in the parlor or dining room when a system of agriculture is being followed on the farmstead which can ultimately mean only soil destitution and bankruptcy. It would be well to get into the cow and clover business and take this motto down and put it up in the attic.

Many farmers in portions of some southwestern states would do well to take an inventory of the dilapidated condition of the soil in states farther east, the result of a continual cropping to cotton and other exhaustive crops, and before that soil prostration has been reached in their own case work into a system of crop rotation, including the soil renovator, alfalfa, which will make such catastrophe impossible.

It is questionable if there is any pet which will give a family of boys and girls more solid satisfaction than a Shetland pony. They are usually docile and entirely safe for children to handle and besides giving them many hours of solid enjoyment will be found a great aid in the hauling of small loads and the running of a great variety of errands. As soon as they are old enough the children should have the care of the pony, which will give them something to do as well as increase their sense of responsibility.

The daily papers of a short time ago contained the notice of the death of a two-year-old child from tuberculosis. In the family of neither parent had there been traces of this disease, and the physician in charge was at a loss to understand its appearance. After much speculation it was thought that the child might have contracted the malady from drinking germ laden milk. The five cows on the place were tested for tuberculosis, and two were found to be in bad shape from the disease. The reader can draw his own conclusions.

If the strawberry bed is in its second year this season it will be well to renovate it after the crop is removed. This can be easily done by cutting the vines off close with a scythe, or mower if bed is large, letting the leaves dry and raking them off and then going through between the rows of vines with an adjustable five, eight or ten tooth cultivator, gradually spreading the shovels as the soil is mellowed up. This should be continued until a strip of but six or eight inches wide is left of the original berry row. The roots will be undisturbed here and will send out runners enough to give all the plants needed for next season. If the bed is in its third season and foul with weeds it would be well to plow the whole thing up and sow it to any crop which will mature in the time remaining before frost, such as turnips, string beans or late celery.

While there are several species of useful birds whose diet consists in good part of weed seeds, the tiller of the soil who banks to any extent on the service of such birds in ridding his fields of weed pests may properly be charged with trusting entirely too much to Providence. The mourning dove, one of the most widely distributed of American birds, is also one of the most useful from the economic point of view. Examinations which have been made of the contents of many stomachs show that 99 per cent of its food consists of seeds. Wheat, oats, corn, rye, barley and buckwheat were found and constituted about 32 per cent of the total volume, but three-fourths of this amount was waste grain picked up in the field after harvest. In one stomach were found 7,500 seeds of the yellow wood sorrel, while another contained 6,400 seeds of the foxtail.

THE WORD "FELLOW."

Its Course From the Universities Into Everyday Life.

The word bachelor means originally "cowboy," a youth who looked after the cow, from the low Latin bacca and through the classical Latin vacca. In course of time the term was given in scorn to voluntarily unwedded men by ladies who had sharp tongues. The word was taken over by the universities in the middle ages, and the degree of bachelor was not supposed to be given to any man who had entered into the state of matrimony.

The word "fellow" has had a somewhat similar fate as far as the ladies and the universities were concerned. The universities of Oxford and Cambridge, to name but two, grant fellowships worth from $1,500 to $3,000 per annum at the various colleges to unmarried honor graduates of high distinction. If a fellow should enter into matrimony he still loses or forfeits his fellowship. As the "fellows" were generally men of apparent opulence or at least comfort in regard to living and dress, they readily attracted the attention of ladies who were thinking of settling down in life. When an acquaintanceship was formed between a "fellow" and a marriageble lady things usually went very delightfully until the fair schemer discovered the academic status of the man. Then the expression "Pooh, he is a fellow!" came very naturally to her lips. And so it crept into secular or lay life and begat its unkind meaning. But, of course, if the graduate was willing to sacrifice his fellowship and its emoluments for the sake of the fair lady's lovely eyes and favors—why, he became a "good fellow," which is a horse of a totally different color.—New York World.

Another Pitcher Engaged.

Manager Bird, of the local ball team, this week engaged "Billie" Cadreau, the Fosston pitcher, and he will be with Thief River Falls for the remaining part of the season. This will give Thief River Falls two pitchers and will strengthen the team considerable.

Have a Hot Game On.

They are having some hot ball games at Inkster, N. D., this week, a series of games being played there between different towns. The Thief River Falls ball club sent five of its players—Mc Keig, Cadreau, Roy, Christienson and Holstein—over to help out the Medford ball team. Medford pays our base ball club $70 and expenses for the use of five players.

Creameries Out East.

The Highlanding creamery is doing a good business this summer and there will be a large increase over last summer's business. This shows that the creamery is going in the right direction up and not down.

We paid a visit to the Kratka Creamery on last Sunday, and was pleased to note that it is in a prosperous condition. Buttermaker Henry Swenson is entitled to much credit for the neatness and clean appearance of the creamery, will undoubtedly prosper under such good management.

The farmers up here who are patrons of the newer built creameries should not get discouraged because they fear that some of the creameries in the older parts of the country are paying a little more for cream they are getting. Remember that those older creameries had to start the way yours are now starting, and in the future you will reap the benefit. Stay by your home creamery!—Sunbeam.

TOM WOOD INJURED

Soo Brakeman Had Both Feet Cut Off Just Above the Ankle.

Accident Occured in Minneapolis and No Particulars Have Been Received Here.

Thomas Wood, until recently a brakeman on the Soo line out of Thief River Falls, had both legs cut off just above the ankle, on Monday at Minneapolis. No particulars as to how the accident happened have been received as yet, the only information as to the matter being a telegram received by the local Order of Railway Trainmen, of which Mr. Wood was a member, to the effect that the accident had happened.

Up until the 10th of June, Mr. Wood was running out of Thief River Falls, but on that date went to Minneapolis to take a run out of that city. He is married, but has no children, and his wife just removed from this city to Minneapolis a few days ago.

An Illuminated Auto Parade.

With the idea of keeping abreast of the times, and appreciating the wonderfull popularity and growth of interest in the automobile, the State Fair Management have decided to make Saturday, September 11, "Automobile Day" with all that the name implies.

For the past three years, the last day of the Fair has been known as "Automobile Day," but the automobile features have been confined to auto races, held during the afternoon. This year a decided innovation is to be included in the program in the way of an illuminated and decorated automobile parade to be given on both the half mile and mile tracks at night.

In order to arouse interest in this part of the program, the Board of Managers has decided to offer a liberal number of prizes for the best decorated machines and the prizes will be so divided that the owners of automobiles of all classes will have an opportunity to win a cash prize or trophy as a result of their efforts to make this part of the great Fair a success.

Both the mile and the half mile track will be brilliantly illuminated with various colored fires, which with the present search light equipment and the new man-of-war light that is to be installed this year, will make both tracks as light as day.

Paper or natural flowers, flags, bunting or any form of decoration may be used, as awards will be strictly on the artistic merit of the decorations.

All machines will be charged an entry fee of $1.00 and entry must be made on regular blanks provided for the purpose by C. N. Cosgrove, Secretary, not later than August 25th.

A committee of five judges will decide on the awards, two will be selected by the Minneapolis and two by the St. Paul Automobile clubs, one to be appointed by the Board of Managers of the State Fair. Full particulars and conditions can be secured with entry blanks, by addressing C. N. Cosgrove, Secretary, State Fair Grounds.

There will be a number of special prizes.

Everything O. K.

F. C. Fairfield, the deputy public examiner who had been here the past week to examine the city's books, returned to St. Paul Monday. He reports that everything is O. K. and has no recomendations to make as to a new system of bookkeeping or anything else. He will make written report later.

Killed by Lightning.

Late Monday afternoon Alfred Gemarche, residing with his parents a short distance from Red Lake Falls, was instantly killed by lighthing. He was standing just outside the door of the family residence looking at the approaching storm when he was struck.

What makes the affair particularly sad is the fact that he is the third son who has been taken from the family since the first of the year, the other two having been carried away by illness.

Advertised Letters.

The following is a list of unclaimed letters remaining in the Post Office at Thief River Falls, Minn., for the week ending June 26, 1909. If not called for within two weeks from date will be sent to Dead Letter Office, Washington D. C.

Frank H. Kratka, Postmaster.

Don't fail to hear the St. Olaf College Band. Here on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon at the Roller Rink.

Assessment Equalized.

The city council held a meeting Mon as board of equalization. Not one person appeared to make complaint as to their assessment. A few changes were made by the council.

A Snap for Small Feet.

Just received a sample line of ladies' high grade shoes and oxfords, sizes 3½ to 4½ A and B. Shoes that are worth $3.50 and $4.00 will be sold for $2.50. Anton M. Langseth.

The Fourth at Kratka.

There is to be a grand Fourth of July celebration at Kratka on Sunday. Ira C. Richardson, of this city, will deliver the oration and a good program of sports has been arranged for.

Germantown.

June 28, 1909.

It is the opinion of most of our grain growers that we are in need of a good shower of rain, and a sprinkle would undoubtedly better the otherwise bright prospects for a beautiful harvest, but we are, from force of habit, loath to wish for much rain for fear of getting our wish fulfilled to overflowing as is known to have happened sometimes.

Some farmers are caught these days wondering if the potato bugs are going to devour all the potatoes this year. Perhaps they are; but it is well to remember that in such event 1909 is the first year on record for that calamity and in the meantime to let Paris Green do its duty.

Fourth of July is to be observed this year, next Sunday, by a picnic, planned and carried out by the Farmers Club in connection with which the Union Sunday School will render its regular Children's Day program. Lunch, ice cream, lemonade, etc., will be the refreshments, and a pleasant sociable time is guaranteed to all. Speakers for the occasion have been secured, among whom may be mentioned H. O. Berve, a rising young law student of this place who will deliver the oration appropriate for our nation's birthday.

Missionary E. W. Savage preached in the Union Chapel last Sunday and also Sunday and Thursday of week before last. Mr. Savage is an able and fluent speaker drawing large meetings.

Carl Severson came up from Buxton, N. D., some time ago to look after his farm near here.

O. J. Olson, of Twin Valley, spent a week here recently, the guest of his sister, Mrs. Henry Roller.

Miss May Quist came up from Thief River Falls week before last to hold down her homestead in the town of Moylan.

Miss Helen Strand, of Thief River Falls, visited with young Germantown friends last week, returning to the city Saturday.

The special agent sent out by the Government to investigate settlers on the Eleven Towns has been working in this vicinity for the last two or three weeks, we presume for the good of the country, etc.

Four new names were added to the list of creamery patrons last Friday.

At the Lutheran Church, on Sunday, evening, July 25, Olga Johann Saervold, B. A. will deliver a lecture, richly illustrated by moving pictures, on Norway, "The Land of the Midnight Sun," including the deposing of the joint King of Sweden and Norway and the coronation of Norways new king etc. The lecture affords a rare treat to all interested in Norwegian life and history. Admission 50 and 25 cents.

Conditions for road work have been ideal lately and the overseers have taken advantage by pushing it along with grim determination. The large grader is being kept warm building new grades and the little 4 horse grader bought last spring is a complete success for keeping old grades in shape.

Quite a number of people are planning to attend the circus at Thief River Falls on Tuesday.

Seraphine Rolland, who has stayed here for the last two months doing odd jobs on his place, left last week for—well France for convenience until particulars are obtained.

The crows and gophers are undoubtedly enjoying very much the respite following the ruthless war waged on them during the bounty season by all the kids of the town. The winged and clawed animals were brought down in large numbers by masterful campaign and steady aim of our boys, and however much enjoyable their summer vacation from now on may be it will never touch the month past in the way of profits.

Haying has been commenced in some places on a small scale. The grass is further advanced than ever at this time of the season and the work of laying in that crop will be in full blast immediately after the Fourth.

Henry Cook transacted business in Warren last Friday.

A deputy Sheriff was up from Warren last Friday in forclosure proceedings on the S. Simoneson place north of here.

Grygla is planning a grand 4th of July celebration to take place on Saturday July 3rd.

CRUELTIES IN CHINA.

Torture of Prisoners Carried to Point of Refinement.

HOME OF THE WATER DEATH.

A Worse Infliction Than That of Being Tied to a Beam by the Thumbs and Big Toes—The Bastinado and Flogging With Split Bamboo.

China is a land of contradictions and mysteries. It bristles with surprises. The phlegmatic nature of its natives is in marked contrast to their inherent cruelty.

"What a poor, weak looking baby!" you might say to a Chinaman about his offspring, and he will merely shrug his shoulders in reply. Meet him in a month's time and ask him how the youngster is getting on.

"The disease was a fatal one," he will answer, with another significant shrug. If the child were a girl you could safely draw your own conclusions as to its fate. John Chinaman has no use for deformed or very sickly children, particularly girls.

Torture of prisoners has been carried to a point of refinement. One of the most terrible was surely the cage in which a man was placed so that his head just protruded at the top, while his toes only touched the ground sufficiently to prevent dislocation of the neck.

His hands were bound behind him so that he could not relieve himself, and he was left to be jeered at by the public until hunger and exhaustion put an end to his sufferings.

The day of the bastinado, too, is by no means over. The prisoner is strung up in a reverse condition, and the naked soles of his feet are pounded with a cane, with the result that the victim seldom recovers.

But the more common form of flogging is to beat the thighs with the concave side of a split bamboo, which cuts at every stroke into the flesh.

China, by the way, was the home of that terrible death by water drops. The victim's head was placed on a low hard block, and drops of water at short intervals were allowed to fall from a height on to his forehead—a far, far worse infliction than that of being tied to a beam by the thumbs and big toes.

The cangue is regarded as a comparatively mild sort of punishment. This consists of a wooden collar, about four feet square and four inches thick, which is placed over the prisoner's head, so that its full weight falls on the shoulders.

A description of the offense is also attached to the victim's body, and as he cannot feed himself he has to rely on the public for sustenance.

Conservative to a degree, it is not surprising to find that the wheelbarrow as a passenger conveyance is still in vogue, as, too, is the ferry, consisting of a light canoe, towed across the water by a number of swimmers.

Machinery for the most part is despised, and the mill, still used for winnowing the staple diet, rice, is of the simplest and most out of date description possible.

The rice is placed in a cement basin, over which is a heavy stone at the end of a long lever. This is worked up and down by two boards, in the form of a cross, attached to the axle of a huge hand turned wheel.

For simplicity of keeping a city informed of the time Canton would be hard to beat. In one of the temples are four large earthen jars on successive shelves.

Water descends by slow drops from one to the other, a brass scale on a float in the bottom one indicating as it rises the hour of the day.

At 5 o'clock every afternoon the lowest jar is emptied and the upper one refilled. On the outside walls of the city are displayed boards with the number of the hour on them, so that all may see. And this has gone on without a break since 1321.

Funerals appear almost a mockery to the visitor. If money can be freely spent a manager is appointed, and from the highways and the byways street boys and beggars are collected, dressed up in amazing costumes, supplied with dazzling umbrellas, standards and boards, which are carried over their shoulders in a long straggle.

Others carry small houses and carts made of card paper, horses, men, women, etc., indicative of the dead one's treasures, and these, with heaps of paper coins and paper money, are burned at the grave so that they may be enjoyed in the life beyond.

Hired mourners with cymbals, gongs and wind instruments keep up a continuous series of howls and noises, to which is added the boohoo, boohoo, of an ear racking horn worked something like a garden hose.

Women are regarded as nothing in China. They are brought up in ignorance of the world outside, the one object of their life being to get married and have sons to follow the fathers. A girl is not even allowed to look upon her husband until she is actually wedded.—London Ladies' Field.

Not Very Neighborlike.

Dugald—Yon was not a verra neighborlike thing to be doin', Angus, when you was telling the whole toon that I was drunk aal the week that we was in Glescow. Angus—I never said no sich word oot o' my lips, Dugald Mackay. Aal I said was that you was perfect sober on the Sabbath day!—London Opinion.

Though you drive Nature out with a pitchfork, she always comes back.—German Proverb.

CENTRIFUGAL FORCE.

Some of the Wonderful Properties of Rapidly Revolving Bodies.

It is probably well known to our readers that by means of revolving soft copper disks, the edges of which are served with diamond dust by beating it in, diamonds can be sawed up. By means of sharp, rapidly revolving iron disks it is possible to cut through heavy steel armor plates of four to eight inches in thickness. These phenomena belong to a very interesting department in physics, the physics of revolving bodies, that doubtless still has a great deal that is remarkable to offer. The rotation of a wheel results in the phenomenon that keeps the wheelman or bicyclist without exertion free on his seat—i. e., the so called free axis. We can also observe it easily in a top, which, its equilibrium disturbed, as long as the rotation is rapid enough always resumes a certain position in regard to its axis without requiring pivot bearings. Rotation also exercises a tension producing effect on the substance of a revolving body, and it is this tension that imparts to the soft saws referred to their notable efficiency. If, for instance, a disk of thin cardboard is caused by a suitable transmission to rotate very rapidly on the lathe the rotatory tension causes the card to behave like sheet metal.

As the Naturwissenschaftliche Wochenschrift states, the cardboard can in such case no longer be bent and if struck with a hammer gives off a sound as though we were striking bronze. This is, however, only the beginning. If we place on the shaft of an electromotor a disk of good paper, cut into an exact circle about eight inches in diameter, this paper disk can be made at the highest rotating speed of the motor to saw through cigar box wood. At the cutting surface it acquires a fine brown polish. The publication in question shows other interesting experiments. We can, for instance, fit on the shaft of the rotatory apparatus a drum, about which may be passed an annular closed little chain in such a manner that at the highest rotatory speed of which the motor is capable it can be slipped off the drum. The chain will then behave like a solid ring, roll across the table and when it strikes the ground bounce up like a hoop. The active principle on which all these tension phenomena are based is centrifugal force.

BASEBALL STRATEGY.

A Bit of Quick Thinking and Good Play on the Diamond.

The quickest thinking I ever saw on a baseball field was done by Tommy McCarthy, the Boston outfielder of years ago. Tom Browne, one of the speediest runners that ever played baseball, was on second base, and New York needed one run to tie the score. Jack Doyle, then a great batter, was at bat, and it seemed certain that a base hit by Doyle would tie the score and perhaps win the game, as there was but one out, and Browne was so speedy he could score from second base on almost any kind of a safe hit. McCarthy crept closer to the infield on left, realizing that, although he could throw with wonderful rapidity and accuracy, the chances were all against throwing Browne out at the plate unless he was close and the ball came to him quickly. Doyle drove a hard line hit straight to the left field. Browne went scudding toward third base. Doyle raced for first, and McCarthy plunged forward at top speed. The fielder reached the ball on its first bound, grabbed it and without stopping or looking threw with terrific force and perfect aim across the diamond into the first baseman's hands. Browne had stopped at third base. Doyle, who had turned first with the intention of sprinting to second, was caught standing still ten feet from first. The next batter went out on a fly, and Boston won the game.

After the game I asked McCarthy concerning the play. "Well," he explained, "Browne is a quick thinker. He saw just how hard that ball was hit and knew he would be thrown out at the plate unless I fumbled. Doyle doesn't think very fast, and, knowing that he would turn first and stop to see if I was throwing home, I threw across to first and caught him."

He figured that out while the ball was screaming through the air toward him, probably reaching his conclusions and making the decision in four-fifths of a second.—Hugh S. Fullerton in American Magazine.

"Handle With Care."

In her assumed character of mother little Miss Dorothy, "going on five," spanked her new doll so vigorously that the eyes dropped out. This accident seemed to make quite an impression on the young lady, and when it came her turn to be reproved in the good old fashioned way a few days later she glanced up from her mother's knee as the exercises were about to begin and plaintively observed:

"Better not spank too hard, mamma. 'Member what happened to the doll!"—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Familiar Trait.

"After an absence of twenty years a Chicago man walked in on his wife the other day. She didn't recognize him. He sat down and kicked because dinner was late."

"Then she recognized him, eh?"—Kansas City Journal.

Daylight Only.

Mrs. Baker—Mrs. Smith is wearing light mourning. Bobbie—What is light mourning, ma? Mrs. Baker—It's the kind that permits you to go to matinees, but not to evening performances.—Lippincott's.

THE HARDY CODFISH.

It Will Live For Hours Out of Its Native Element.

A man who had stopped at a stand in Fulton market to buy a fresh fish pointed his finger at a fish that pleased his fancy, being about two feet long and weighing about five pounds.

"That looks like a nice fish to me," he said, whereupon the dealer picked the fish up to put it on the scale.

The moment he picked it up the fish began to wriggle, and the next moment it had slipped out of the dealer's grasp and fallen on the sidewalk.

As the fish went down the customer turned to the stand and picked out another, which the dealer picked up, and this fish stayed quiet until it had been put on the scale, but the instant it touched it it began to flop vigorously and finally flopped itself out of the scale pan, to fall on the stand below.

Codfish these two lively and vigorous fish were, the cod being a fish that will live out of the water three or four hours, a good deal longer than most fish. At Fulton market live cod can almost always be found. The dealers keep their stock in fish cars in the East river, just across South street, and for retail trade bring over maybe fifty or a hundred pounds at a clip, enough to last half an hour or an hour, and when the stock runs low they bring over another lot, fresh out of the fish car.

The cod, though a salt water fish, will live for hours in fresh water. An angler who goes occasionally to the fishing banks tells of carrying home a codfish caught in the afternoon and placing it in a bathtub, to find it alive the next morning.—New York Sun.

TOOK NO CHANCES.

Young Bessemer Was Cautious as Well as Inventive.

The most trivial incidents have often originated the fortunes of our richest men. Take, for example, the fortunes made out of Bessemer steel. This genius, young Bessemer, had some idea of making steel out of iron, but a poor, newly married young man has no means of experimenting on a large scale. The story I must tell as I have heard it from an intimate friend of Bessemer and is a true tale. After Bessemer had in his small laboratory experimented with the metals and at last obtained the desired result by blowing air through melted iron he found in the bottom of the crucible a little lump of the famous steel. Now the question was how to make the discovery public. He put the lump of steel into his pocket and made his way to Nasmyth of steam hammer fame. Placing the metal on Nasmyth's desk, he told him that he had made this extraordinary discovery, which would revolutionize the whole metal world. Then came a little incident which shows what wonderful heads these Scotch financiers possess. What do you think Nasmyth said to his excited inventor?

"Eh, mon, it's vary risky to show your wonderful invention. The world is vary dishonest."

To which the aspiring inventor replied:

"Right, Mr. Nasmyth. I just calculated whom I was coming to see, so with my last half crown I registered the invention on my way."—London Strand Magazine.

The Holdup Man In Mexico.

Now, as a matter of fact, life and property are as safe in Mexico as in Chicago, and one's life is a great deal safer. Mexico has her pickpockets and her sneak thieves, and burglars are not unknown, but the holdup man is an individual with whom the police are not well acquainted. This cannot be said of Chicago, Kansas City, St. Louis or New York. It may be because the criminal element in Mexico lacks the bravery necessary for following the holdup's profession, or it may be because the city is extraordinarily well guarded by police. It certainly is well guarded by the police; but, it matters not what the reason is, the fact is that the man who relieves you of your money in Mexico does so in the manner calculated to cause you the least inconvenience.—Mexico Record.

There Was a Limit In Liking.

Little Victor had been naughty and his father had seen fit to administer a spanking. A few minutes later, when his papa had left the room and the little fellow was alone with mamma, he exclaimed between his sobs, "I don't like papa." His mother, of course, told him that was very wrong and that he would have to be punished again if he talked like that. "Well," he added, looking up quickly, "I like papa all right, but I don't like his acts."—Delineator.

Cause For Haste.

"Wot are you breathin' so hard for, Dusty?"

"A shoemaker run me out o' town for most a mile."

"Wot r'iled him?"

"He runs a quick repair shop, an' he got mad 'cause I handed him a couple of boot heels an' a shoestring an' told him I'd call fer de shoes in half 'n hour."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Gund's Peerless Beer

"The beer that makes the world smile with you."

Men of well-balanced minds and keen perceptions are aware that they must eat and drink right in order to restore within themselves the continuous nervous and organic waste of body and mind. Medical science knows of nothing that accomplishes this as well as a pure barley malt and hop brew. Peerless is a favorite and ideal home beer. Sold everwhere. STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

C. G. Schulz, state superintendent of public instruction, is sending out notices to the county superintendents calling attention to the new compulsory education law passed by the last legislature and urging them to see that it is enforced by school officers. The new law requires all children between eight and sixteen and in cities of 50,000 between eight and eighteen to attend school during the whole term.

Six weeks of persistent detective work has resulted in the uncovering of the biggest wire tapping scheme ever discovered in Minneapolis. For months the quotations of the Minneapolis chamber of commerce, Chicago board of trade and New York Stock Exchange have been surreptitiously carried into the bucketshops of the Mill City financial district and all efforts to locate the leak failed until now.

Melvin Le Suer of Fergus Falls, who has a military record of which any one might be proud, has entered the Soldiers' home at Minneapolis to end his days among the veterans. Mr. Le Suer is eighty-one years old and is a veteran both of the Mexican war and the Civil war. He was always a regular and served in the three branches of the army.

Thirty-two members of the state senate met in St. Paul and after a long and heated discussion of the attack on the road and bridge bill adopted a statement to the people of Minnesota defending the appropriation and setting forth the damage that will be done if the supreme court sustains Senator Cooke's injunction.

John B. Galerneault of Aitkin has been named as the first state bank examiner of Minnesota under the new law creating a separate banking department. The new examiner is a practical banker and at present a member of the state highway commission. He will assume office on Aug. 1.

Laurits S. Swenson, vice president of the Union State bank of Minneapolis and former United States minister to Denmark, will be appointed to the post of envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Cuba.

Judge Williston, who died last week at Red Wing, had not drawn any salary from the state since 1905 and had $16,041.72 coming at the time of his death.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

The dead body of Carl August Forsberg, a laborer, aged sixty, was found hanging from a tree in a little grove near the new prison site at Oak Park. He had made a noose of a clothesline and, as his feet touched the ground, he must have slowly strangled to death.

East End Sunday schools in Duluth will be closed for the next three weeks for the purpose of aiding Health Commissioner Patton and the department in their fight against scarlet fever, which is rapidly becoming serious in that district.

Pining for a mother's love caused Patrick M. Murphy, twenty-five years old, to commit suicide in a room at Minneapolis. A letter addressed to his mother, who resides at La Crosse, Wis., gave the reason for self-destruction.

Joseph U. Barnes, convicted of larceny in the misuse of funds as president of the Minnesota Title Insurance and Trust company of Minneapolis, has been granted a new trial by the state supreme court.

Risking her own life to save that of her child Mrs. Martin Timlin, residing four miles west of St. Peter, rushed into a blazing house and was badly burned.

John H. Olson, a farmer, who was thrown from his wagon recently while returning to his home from Grove City, is dead as a result of his injuries.

Joseph Ciplar, a young man about twenty-four years of age, was accidentally drowned in Buffalo lake, near the village of Ceylon, Martin county.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

H. H. Brackett, seventy-five years old, pioneer citizen and first chief of police of Minneapolis, is dead at Elk River. Mr. Brackett had been a resident of Minneapolis for fifty-two years.

Patrick Callaghan, old settler, volunteer fireman and politician, known among the older residents of Minneapolis as "the king of Boom island," is dead.

Patrick Mangan, pioneer Republican leader and for many years postmaster at Fountain, is dead at the age of seventy-five years.

H. G. Page, a prominent business man of Fergus Falls and state senator from that district in pioneer times, is dead.

Frederick Theodore Wolterstorff, a resident of Minnesota for fifty-six years, is dead at St. Paul at the age of ninety-two.

Clarence B. Porter, county commissioner for six years from the First district of Anoka county, is dead, aged forty-four.

S. Parks McMurran is dead at St. Paul from blood poisoning caused by a slight abrasion of the heel.

Mrs. Annie L. Sheldon, who gave Red Wing its municipal auditorium, is dead from apoplexy.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

Emmett E. Roberts, in reality Robert Emmett Eastman, a failed broker of the New York Consolidated Exchange, suspected of the murder of beautiful Mrs. Edith Thompson Woodill at St. Michaels, Md., committed suicide when cornered by a posse near the scene of the murder. His self-destruction leaves untold the reason for the killing of a girl who had moved in the highest social circles of Baltimore, Washington and Los Angeles—a beautiful, talented girl who had been a protege of Lyman J. Gage and of former Governor Frank Brown of Maryland.

The body of H. J. Leadbeater, a farmer residing near Mankato, Minn., who disappeared two months ago, was found buried in a potato patch on his farm. Frank Smith, a hired man, according to the authorities, has confessed, saying that Mrs. Leadbeater killed her husband with an axe, probably to put him out of the way that she might wed another man. Smith, Mrs. Leadbeater and Mrs. Charles Swandt, sister of the woman, are under arrest.

Baited and intimidated by detectives Chung Sin, one time roommate of Leon Ling, told of Elsie Sigel's murder in New York city. Under the terrific pressure of the "third degree" the little Chinaman admitted that he had seen the body in Leon Ling's room, that he had touched it while it was still warm, that he had smelled drugs and had watched Leon Ling's preparations for placing the body in the trunk where it was found.

While mentally deranged W. R. Puryear, aged twenty-nine, a machinist in the engineering department of the Ohio state university at Columbus, shot his wife, killed his brother-in-law, Fred West, and then committed suicide. Mrs. Puryear will recover.

Sanford Robinson, personal counsel to F. Augustus Heinze, was convicted in the United States circuit court at New York city of impeding the administration of justice in advising a grand jury witness to evade the service of a subpoena.

George Gurney of Quincy, Ill., shot and killed his father, Dr. Seneca Gurney, aged seventy-nine years; wounded his sister-in-law, Mrs. Seneca Gurney, Jr., aged thirty-seven, and then killed himself by sending a bullet into his right ear.

Fifteen masked men took Albert Reese, a negro, from jail at Cuthbert, Ga., and hanged him. Reese attacked Miss Mary Taunton, chopped off one of her arms and inflicted other dangerous wounds which will cripple her for life.

After shooting and killing his six-year-old brother Theodore, Cecil Hopkins of Modesto, Cal., twelve years old, buried the body in a hog pen at his home after stuffing the boy's mouth full of sand.

Warrants have been issued at Detroit for the arrest of Cameron Currie and Louis H. Case of the brokerage house of Cameron Currie & Co., which failed last July with liabilities of about $1,500,000.

Two bandits entered the night office of the United States Express company at Green Bay, Wis., and at the point of revolvers compelled the man in charge to open the safe. They secured $5,000.

In a battle at Sumrall, Miss., C. McMellon, a justice of the peace and local Methodist preacher, was killed by Jake Bond, who was seeking to keep a companion from arrest.

Bendik Bendikson, a farmer residing near Preston, Minn., shot and killed his wife and, when the coroner and sheriff arrived at the house, shot himself and died instantly.

One man dead and another fatally injured and another dangerously wounded is the result of a race riot at Springfield, Ill., in which Turks and Syrians participated.

PUMPS AND GAS BAGS.

When one sees the stock in some bonanza enterprise which promises quick and unheard of profits provided the offer is snapped up at once advertised at about 30 cents per share it is well to analyze the thing a bit before taking the bait. In the first place, it is fair to assume that if said proposition were intrinsically so good a thing as its promoters give the gullible public to understand and meant wealth and affluence for all who took stock in it not a dollar of it would be for sale. This is the case with all bona fide money making enterprises, the stock of such concerns not being listed at bargain counter prices, but worth in the open market from $150 to $400 per share on a 100 unit basis. The only deduction possible in view of this is that such bonanza enterprise is, as a rule, a commercially unprofitable project which a group of fortune hunters propose to pump wind and water into by soaking the public just long enough to get the old hunk afloat, when they usually desert the pumps and gas bags and leave their victims to sink or swim, as chance may be. Thus it turns out that the only profits accruing from the organization of such enterprises and the sale of the gilded shares of stock are the grafters who hold the sack. The buyers are lambs which in most cases lose their fleece.

THE PESKY CRAB GRASS.

There are many gardens in many sections which are getting badly fouled with crab grass, the kind which is deep and wire rooted, roots wherever a joint of stalk touches the ground, has a five pronged seed head and laughs to scorn the withering heat of the August sun. One of the features which make matters bad is that this weed does not get started until about the middle of June, after the cultivation of many of the garden crops is nearly over and gets in its telling work after they are laid by. The only way out is to cultivate the garden as late as is possible, thus bringing to the surface, germinating and killing as many of the crab grass seeds as possible. Another help is to sow buckwheat just after the last cultivation, as this will come up and occupy the ground instead of the weeds. A fortunate thing in this instance is that crab grass multiplies by seed and lives but a season. Thus if it is kept from going to seed one season there will be none of it the next except from seeds dormant the year before.

KEEPING ACCOUNT.

A simple system of bookkeeping might be adopted with advantage on many a farm—not involved, yet enough in detail to show at the end of the year the chief items of income and outgo. This might include the work put in on and returns from the grain crops, the cost of running the dairy and the results obtained, the status of the pasture as a money maker, the income and expense with the poultry, money invested in new machinery and deterioration in the old, etc. In making up such items of expense account it will be necessary to talk with the good wife, the boys and girls and the hired men. The advantage of it would lie in the fact that it would show at the end of the season's operations where the leaks were, if any, and which of the farm resources had given the largest profits.

A VIRGINIA SNAP.

Alfalfa is proving the agricultural salvation of many a farm in the south Atlantic states which has been depleted as a result of the continuous growing of cotton for many years. In illustration of this may be mentioned the case of one Virginia farmer who now has 600 acres in alfalfa, which produces 3,000 tons of hay annually, worth $12 per ton. And he is on the point of installing a plant for grinding the hay into alfalfa meal, which fetches $34 per ton, or about the price of bran. This looks like a sort of agricultural graft that a good many owners of farms favorably located might work, not only to the advantage of their pocketbooks, but for the good of the land too.

THE PERSONAL EQUATION.

A point that is often overlooked in judging of the measure of success of this or that plan in farming, whether it be in the raising of blooded stock, producing record crops of corn or grain or using new and up to date machinery, is what may be termed the personal equation or the man in the case, the thinking and reasoning attachment, upon whom, after all, success depends more than upon any other single factor. It is because of this uncertain quantity that one man here falls down with pure bred stock, another there has no time for the silo, while a third may consider cream separators and Babcock testers a delusion and a snare.

Dampness should be done away, whether it be in the cellar, stable, poultry or hog house, as it stands for positive discomfort in some of these cases and an insanitary condition in all of them.

If buckwheat is sown in the potato patch shortly after the potatoes are laid by, the weeds will have some pretty hard sledding and the bees in the neighborhood a welcome pasture in a usually dry season.

The prospective young wife can get a pretty good idea beforehand of how she will be treated by her husband-to-be if she takes note of his conduct toward his mother. It is a criterion that seldom deceives.

Of the 22,000,000 dairy cows in the United States 18,000,000 are just scrubs—that is, having no particular dairy ancestry. A glance at these figures will show that the business of raising blooded dairy cattle has lots of room in which to spread.

Mrs. Taft, the new White House lady, has shown her good sense by buying a family cow, which, according to report, she has staked out on the lawn in the back yard. The Taft kids will be the better for this rustic adjunct to their household economy.

A chap in New Jersey has been relieving a lot of folks of some of their surplus cash by a graft worked under the guise of the benefit to be conferred by a spraying of their fruit trees. His plan is to spray their trees on a guarantee that they will be free from attacks of insect and fungous pests for a period of two years.

Secretary James Wilson of the department of agriculture estimates that in the twelve years in which he has been at the head of this department the farmers of the country have produced the enormous aggregate wealth of $60,000,000,000. In view of the fact that the value of all farm products last year was $250,000,000, this twelve year estimate would not seem to be overstretched.

The Bermuda islands are known chiefly for two products that from the aesthetic point of view are as nearly opposites as possible—their celebrated onions and the Bermuda or Easter lily, which was introduced into the islands many years ago from Japan by a traveler named Harris. So laden does the air sometimes become with the heavy fragrance of the enormous lily fields that the smell of the onion is said to be quite acceptable as a change.

If the lawn grass seems to be getting weak and thin or dying out in spots it may be in need of either more sunshine or fertilizing and maybe both. If it is sunshine, some of the trees should be cut away or the lower branches trimmed off; if fertilizer, a thin coat of well rotted stable manure should be scattered over it and after it has lain about three weeks and been soaked up with a couple of good rains all of it removed that can be raked up with an iron rake. While this will make it necessary to mow the lawn somewhat oftener, the sward will look much better for its tonic.

Any reader of these notes who is interested in giving his orchard or berry patch more intelligent care along the line of spraying to prevent damage from worm and insect pests and fungous diseases should write to his state experiment station for a copy of its latest spraying calendar, which will tell all about making the different spraying solutions, what to use on each and how and when to apply. If the address of the agricultural college is not known the editor of the home paper will be glad to look it up for you. The bulletins are furnished free of cost and should be kept for ready reference.

It is estimated that the blight caused a loss to the potato crop in South Dakota last year of between 30 and 40 per cent of the possible total yield. This pest, which is a purely fungous disease, usually appears early in July, sometimes a trifle earlier, and seems to spread most rapidly and do most damage in damp, muggy weather. Spraying with the bordeaux mixture, which has several times been described in these columns, is an effective preventive. It is well to give the first treatment when the vines are about eight inches high and to repeat at intervals of ten days so long as unfavorable weather conditions exist. Usually two or three treatments are sufficient. If bugs are bad at the same time they may be fixed by adding paris green to the bordeaux mixture at the rate of a pound to 150 gallons of the spray mixture.

Both string beans and sweet corn may be kept in perfect condition by preserving in salt at the rate of four parts of the vegetable to one of salt. With the corn it should be boiled on the cob for about twenty minutes, then sliced and scraped off, mixed with the salt in the above proportion and packed in a stone jar and covered with cloth and plate, as in the case of salted cucumbers. The juice in the corn should make brine enough to just about cover it, but if not a small quantity of water may be added. The beans should be prepared as for the table and cooked for twenty or thirty minutes and then mixed with a like proportion of salt and put down in the same way. Both vegetables should be put to soak the night before they are to be eaten, the water being changed three or four times to remove the excess salt. Kept in this way, both are crisp and tender and keep their flavor remarkably well.

The advantage of the two row corn plow lies chiefly in the fact that it enables one man with three horses to get over as much ground as two men with four horses. To do most satisfactory work with this cultivator the corn should be put in in the evenest rows possible.

The animal world lost a very sincere and devoted friend when George T. Angell, author of "Our Dumb Animals" and that fascinating book "Black Beauty," which has been read by hundreds and thousands of boys and girls, passed away a few weeks ago at his home in Boston.

The old saw "A stitch in time saves nine" finds illustration in a multiplied geometrical ratio in the destruction of pigweeds and purslane before they go to seed, a matured plant of the former producing as high as 50,000 seeds, while a purslane with room to branch out in leisurely fashion has been known to yield 175,000 seeds.

A fourteen-year-old boy—we wish that the news item gave his name—raised, fed and fattened for exhibition the champion Hereford steer at the recent Denver stock show. Get the boys on the farm interested in raising stock of this type, and there will be little need of writing articles on how to keep the boys on the farm.

The wisdom of adopting a more largely diversified type of farming, including dairying and stock raising, in the state of Minnesota is shown in the gradual decrease in the wheat yield of the state during the past twenty-five years until for 1908 it averaged but 12.8 bushels per acre. The fool on the run ought to be able to understand what these figures mean.

In a botanical garden at Philadelphia is a cypress tree which is said to have been set as early as 1750. Though dead, it is still standing. It has a diameter of eight feet at the base and is six feet through thirty feet from the ground, just below the point where it branches. It is estimated that it contains 10,000 feet of lumber, worth $50 per thousand, giving the tree a commercial value of $500.

Professor Cyril G. Hopkins of the University of Illinois, recognized as one of the great soil specialists in the United States, has expressed the following view, which ought to be framed and hung up beside "In God We Trust" in every farm home in the land: "To permanently maintain a profitable system of agriculture is our most important material problem, not only in Illinois, but in the United States."

All kinds of poor folks in the large cities sledding along on their marrowbones financially with little or no opportunity to get work, and a great horde of farmers all over the great central west also on their marrowbones begging for help to assist them in garnering bumper crops—first thought would seem to suggest that matter would be simplified all around if these two marrowbone delegations could be got together.

While the mole now and then makes an unsightly ridge across the lawn and often mellows things up in the garden, it is not for the purpose of making trouble. He is a relentless enemy of worms and insects, being especially fond of the white grub, which plays havoc in the strawberry bed or kills the roots of the lawn grass and garden flowers. Like some other much misunderstood members of the bird and animal kingdom, he should be viewed as a friend of man and not an enemy.

Several southern experiment stations have made tests of cotton seed and cottonseed hulls as a fattening ration for cattle. At the North Carolina station it was found that 784 pound steers made an average gain of 1.8 pounds per day for 100 days on a ration of five pounds of cotton seed and twenty pounds of cottonseed hulls. At the Arkansas station 700 pound steers made an average daily gain of 1.97 pounds during a ninety day feeding period, receiving a ration of three and a half pounds of raw cotton seed, eleven pounds of cottonseed hulls and nine pounds of cowpea hay.

The animal husbandry department of the Wisconsin experiment station has lately published some interesting statistics along the line of economies effected in the use of the silo as an adjunct in stock feeding and dairy operations. In the matter of economy in storage space it is cited that eight tons of silage can be put in the space occupied by a ton of mixed hay, 400 cubic feet, the former containing 2,500 pounds of digestible dry matter as against 900 pounds in the ton of hay. The cost of handling the crop of corn in the shape of silage was found to be less than with any other method used, $7 per acre on the basis of a twelve ton yield. In no way was the flow of milk of the dairy herd so well kept up during dry summers by the use of silage. In the feed lot it was found that silage fed steers sold at $4.95 per hundred pounds, while those fed no silage brought only $4.70. For every hundred pounds of gain it was found that 471 pounds of silage fed saved 15 pounds of grain and 136 pounds of alfalfa. At the close of the experiment the silage fed steers showed a profit of $4.10 per head, while on the same grade of steers fed no silage there was a loss of $1.47 per head.

CRUSHED IN THE ICE.

Thrilling Experience on Board a Sealing Vessel.

HOW THE SHIP WENT DOWN.

Smashed In Amidships and Powerless to Escape, She Was Swallowed In the Icy Deep—The Wild Rush of the Crew to Escape on the Floe.

Constant peril menaces the hardy crews that fearlessly sail into the icy northern seas and risk their lives in the dangerous work of hunting the seal. In Harper's Magazine George Harding, the author, writes dramatically of the sinking of the ship on which he sailed with the Newfoundland sealing fleet. His experience was uniquely perilous. The ship was crushed like an egg in the ice.

"On the bridge were the captain and watch anxiously awaiting the chance to head the ship out of the moving ice into the stationary pack of which the big sheet was part. The bowline lay on the barricade, ready for heaving when the crew should be ordered on the floe to haul the ship's head around. Aloft, the spyman searched the gloom for signs of a hull in the confused and tremendous waste.

"Then there came a terrific crush. The vessel, caught in the trench between the raftering sheets, was powerless to escape. The smash of breaking timbers rose above the gale as a great corner of ice crushed the vessel's side amidships. The captain and watch rushed to the engine room. It was filled with steam, the inflowing water having already reached the fires. A glance showed that nothing could stop the inrush of water. The firemen were retreating. The first of them, like a creature from another world, coal begrimed, undershirt clad, reached the ice sheathed deck, spreading panic in his path. Above the hailing of questions and shouts that no man could understand came the voice of the skipper; he knew the situation as no other man.

"'Men,' he shouted, 'the ship 'll go! Pack your clothes—save the grub!'

"Then it was confusion everywhere. The crew poured up the hatchway, hauling clothes boxes and bags, crowding over the side, colliding in midair as they half tumbled and half slid down the ropes, then back for food. Laboriously the heavy pork barrels were hauled by hand from the after hold, where men bravely toiled. Others fought their way aloft, where the sails were stowed. The canvas cut loose, bellying out in the force of the gale, was dropped to the deck. Punts were slipped from the davits. Some, hitting the ice with a crash, were stowed in. Throughout it all the captain shouted:

"'Haul them punts and grub farther off! Farther yet! Farther!'

"The water, rapidly rising, drove the men from the lower hold. They retreated to the deck. Then the inflow, level with the ocean, ceased. The ice for the time held the ship in its grip. Second by second passed, bringing no change. In that brief interval each man suddenly thought to save the thing he most desired. A wild rush was made to wheelhouse, to cabin, to the ship's storeroom—every man for himself—a scuffle to get the thing most coveted and escape to the ice. With one it was a rifle from the ship's armory to replace the antiquated muzzle loader at home; with another, the ship's compass or the barometer; with the after galley cook it was the cabin dishes. In the cabin a crowd surged to the medicine chest, scrambling for liniments and pills, smashing anything that was an obstacle in their way. Such was the scene when the cry arose on deck, repeated by fifty men and echoing throughout the vessel, "'Tis time to take to the ice!' Then a great rush to be clear of the doomed ship as the mass of men, some empty handed, others laden, defending their spoil from the unsuccessful, plunged on to the ice.

"The ship was sinking fast. It was but a short leap for the last man from her deck to the loosening ice. The men stood on the floe, looking the ship over from the bow, lifted high, to the stern, now below water.

"'A pity to lose the vessel,' they said. 'Wonderful hard to lose the trip o' fat.'

"Then came the final plunge. The mainmast, reaching over the floe, broke as the weight of the vessel pulled it under. The great anchors sliding from the bow added to the tumult, as everything not frozen solid to the deck crashed into the house and galley. For a second a flash of flame shot from the overturned stoves; then nothing save a few seal pelts and broken oars lay on the surface of the troubled hole in the floe where the Grand Lake had disappeared."

Parisian Amiability.

The mother-in-law question is as acute in Paris as in London, but there are ladies who do not seem to be always at loggerheads with their daughters' husbands. According to a witness in court, some sons-in-law are extremely tolerant fellows. A lady was giving evidence as to the disposition of her daughter's husband, and as evidence of his kindly nature she explained to the judge: "Oh, M. le President, the young man is of the completest amiability! Believe me, he has been married to my daughter eighteen months, and he has not once threatened to strike me!"—London Standard.

NAME CAN BE REGISTERED

New Law Passed at the Last Session of the Legislature Covers Matter.

No Two Farms Can Have the Same Name and Description Must Be Given.

Attention is called to a law that was passed at the last session of the legislature that may have escaped the notice of our farmer readers. The law is for the purpose of permitting the registration of the name of a farm with the Register of Deeds, this in order to properly designate the farm's name and also to assist in its description. The following is the law as it reads—"An act to provide for the registration of names of farms, designating the descriptions thereof. Be it enacted by the Legislature of the State of Minnesota:

Farm lands May Be Designated By Specific name,—Section 1. The owner of farm lands may designate a specific name of his farm lands and the name together with a description of said farm lands, according to the government survey thereof may be filed with the Register of Deeds of the county wherein the said lands or a part thereof are situated and the said name together with the description of said lands shall be recorded by the Register of Deeds in a book to be provided for such purpose upon payment of a fee of fifty (50) cents therefore, but no two names so designated and recorded shall be alike in the same county.

Section 2. This act shall take effect and be in force from and after this passage.

Approved April 7, 1909.

The registering of the name of a farm will be found a great convenience in describing it. Very annoying mistakes occur by reason that the town, range or particular part of the section where the farm is located is forgotten or incorrectly given. Such errors can be largely prevented by simply stating the name of of the farm and if same is registered any doubt about the description would vanish as the registery record would mention the exact description of the farm including the name designated.

Inasmuch as no two farms in the same county can have similar names, it behoves those who have some pet name for their farm to hustle around and have it registered before some one happens to select it.

It is a very pleasing and home like idea to name the farm. In after years the happy memories of youth will cluster round it and the old place will come to mean and be more. This will be true particularly if the name has been suggested by some of the natural beauty spots or characteristics of the place. If the name accents the landscape present ed, or the trees that ornament some corner or spot or the hills or the dales or the brooks or the meadow or whatever it is about the home that attracts or please the eye, it will be found that the energies of the family will be devoted, ofttimes unconsciously, but always persistently toward beautifying the farm to meet the suggestion of the name. Each passing year will witness the nearer resemblance of the place to the idea suggested in the name until by the time the young folks are ready to leave home or the old people are approaching the time to depart, the farm will in fact as well as fancy be a beauty spot, the memory of which will ever bring fond and happy recollections.

Railroad Turns Gardner.

The Canadian Pacific railway has gone into gardening. It has established on land it owns near Winnipeg has a model garden of 20 acres and has started in to raise flowers and vegetables.

The railroad is not going into the business for profit except indirectly. It has been in the hotel business for years owning and operating many hotels on its line across Canada. This garden at Winnipeg will supply flowers and vegetables for the hotel at Winnipeg and probably for others to which quick shipments are possible.

Greenhouses are to be erected before next winter, so that vegetables and flowers may be raised the year round. Bulb and plants will be propogated for the beautification of the grounds around the company's hotel and stations all along the line.

The New Coin.

The new Lincoln pennies will be distributed the first week in August, says an exchange. They will supplant the penny with the familiar Indian head upon it. The stock of the new coin is now being accumulated and as soon as it is large enough to supply all parts of the country at the same time, the pennies will be handed out to the public. Lincon sprang from the most numerous class—the common, the lowly people. It is appropriate that his portrait should be on the most numerous kind of coin, the common, lowly penny.

Roseau Creameries Increasing.

The Roseau Creamery is showing a decided increase in the output of butter this year. Farmers generally are improving on the class of cows kept and next year it is expected that the sale of cream to the creamery will almost double. Every farmer tributary to a creamery should patronize it, even if temporarily a small gain could be realized by selling cream elsewhere. The farmer should remember that he is building up a home industry for a future benifit to himself and the community.—Roseau Times.

And Still They "Mention" Him.

J. A. Duffy, of Red Lake Falls, is favorably mentioned as representative for the upper end of this district. The game seem to be opening up rather early —Twin Valley Times.

Charges Cruelty.

Lawrence H. Johnson, well known in Thief River Falls, having had the contract for building the bridge across the Red Lake river here, is having some domestic trouble. The following taken from the St. Paul Pioneer Press explains the matter:

The suit for divorce instituted by Lawrence H. Johnson, contractor and speaker of the house, session before last, and president of the Hennepin Bridge Co., will be bitterly contested, Mrs. Johnson having filed in district court, also alleging cruelty and, in addition, asking for custody of their son, Arthur, aged 15 and $100 a month alimony.

She asserts that her husband has beaten and even kicked her, and cites occasions and dates in support of her claim. She asserts further that when they were first married her husband was earning $100 a month, but that he did not support her properly. She adds that he has now $200,000 and that she is prepared to back the assertion with proof. She also charges that her husband has been attentive to other women and that he is now trying to secrat his property.

Mr Johnson in his complaint charged cruelty, alleging specifically that she spent money recklessly.

Crop Exposition.

The Third National Crop (corn, grains and grasses) Exposition will be held in Omaha, Neb., Dec. 6-18, 1909. It is up to the farmers of Minnesota to show the other states that we Minnesotans are the greatest agricultural people of the United States or the world. Last year, aside from taking many other prizes, Minnesota captured first sweepstakes prizes in Clover and Oat Club classes.

Wisconsin is going to offer a trophy for barley, why not show the people of the country that Minnesota can produce the quality as well as the quantity? We are the largest barley-producing state in the Union. What we can do with barley we can do with all the other farm crops—wheat, oats, flax, corn, the grasses, clovers and alfalfa.

Why not plan now to send something to the exposition to show what the state can do, to prove to the nation that Minnesota is not a country of everlasting winter, ice palaces, etc., etc., but is the garden spot of the nation, and has the most healthful climate to be found?

Farmers' Clubs.

In many localities farmers' clubs have been organized and great good is resulting from the activities of the members. Meetings are held from time to time at which such matters are discussed as are of particular interest to farmers in the locality Outside speakers are generally available free of cost for these meetings. A variety of propositions are engaging the attention of the members of these organizations in Minnesota. They not only hold meetings, but they buy supplies and market produce co operatively. Pure bred stock are brought into the community and new varieties of grains are introduced.

Great good may come to the community in which a live farmers' club operates, depending largely upon the kind of officers in charge of the work. Have you a club in your community? If not why not organize one? If you do not know just how to go about it to organize one take the matter up with A. D. Wilson, St. Anthony Park, Minn. He will furnish particulars.—Northwestern Agriculturalist.

New Citizens.

Twenty-four residents of Marshall county were granted naturalization papers at the term of court now in session here. Their names and addresses are as follows:

Edward Carlson, Viking; Gunner O. Roe, Bigwoods; Carl G. Lindgren, Randen; Britta Backstrom, Randen; Christian Burchland, Thief River Falls; Ole Greibrok, Thief River Falls; Gustav Anderson, Middle River; Helmer J. Fjorden, Gatzke; Magne H. Haukaas, Randen; John Anderson, Jonstad; Ole T. Sparby, Liner; Ingebregt P. Baknes, Rollis; Josef Wold, Liner; Karl Bjorling, Alvarado; Olaf Neset, Thief River Falls; John Barlow, Warren; Oscar L. Svenson, Warren; Edward Torguson, Grygla; Kittil G. Haukaas, Espiee; Thore Larson, Grygla; Daniel P. J. Hanson, Espiee; Peter A. Westberg, Randen.—Warren Register.

The Cigarette Law.

The following is the cigarette law which goes into effect in this state on the 1st of August:

"It shall be unlawful for any person, by himself, clerk, servant, employe or agent, directly or indirectly, upon any pretence or by any device to manufacture, sell, exchange, barter or dispose of or give away, or keep for sale any cigarettes, cigarette paper or cigarette wrappers, or any paper made or prepared for the purpose of being filled with tobacco for smoking and any person violating the provisions of this act shall be guilty of misdemeanor provided, that provisions hereof shall not apply to the sales of jobbers doing an interstate business with customers outside the state."

Hill Talks On Wheat.

James J. Hill in opening the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition at Seattle said some interesting things about the Patten corner and wheat in the United States in the future.

He said:

"It is a mistake to say James A. Patten cornered the wheat market. Here is merely a case of a man taking advantage of an opportunity. It has been only a few years since it was estimated that the average consumption of wheat per annum in this country was six bushels, but now experts argue that it is seven bushels and some pounds. The census of 1910 will show that we have a population of 90,000,000, which will mean that we will require for our own use 630,000,000 bushels hereafter.

"We raise now probably 650,000,000 bushels of wheat in the United States with good crop conditions. This will leave us only 20,000,000 bushels as a surplus for export while in the past we have exported about 120,000,000 bushels per annum. So you can see we will need our wheat to feed our own people. Within the next five years the wheat of Eastern Washington will be shipped eastward to feed the people of the East and Central West.

"And in considering these facts, it must be remembered that the number of live stock slaughtered last year was 1,000,000 less than the year previous. When farmers of Iowa, Minnesota and Nebraska can get 65 cents per bushels for corn at the country station, they will not endure the risk of hog cholera and the labor incident to hog raising, but will sell all their grain."

Work Will Be Rushed.

When in St. Paul last week the writer was informed by State Engineer Ralph that it would be only a question of less than thirty days until the dredges would be at work on the Thief River ditching project. And we know that Mr. Ralph knows whereof he speaks. The state drainage board mean just what they say in announcing that this work is to be pushed to completion at the earliest possible date. So there is full justification for a feeling of optimism on the part of the settlers. Eastern Marshall county is coming into its own and thousands of acres of heretofore unavailable land are speedily going to be converted into valuable farming lands.—Middle River Pioneer.

Savage Has Resigned.

E. W. Savage has resigned as the representative in this district for the American Sunday School Union, and has accepted a call to fill the pulpits of the Presbyterian churches at Angus and Euclid, assuming his new duties on Sunday, July 4th. Mr. Savage returned last week from a three weeks' trip to Grygla, Brunkeberg, Germantown and Kratka, and at Kratka and Brunkeberg organized new Sunday schools, simply holding services in the other places.

Veteran Engineer Has Resigned.

Engineer Thomas Majoseith, who has been running on the Great Northern on the Northern and Dakota divisions for many years past, has resigned and will shortly leave for the coast, where he will probaly resume railroading. He has been a widower for a number of years and has two children at Grand Forks, where they will remain until he locates permanently. He has a host of friends among the railroad boys who regret to see him leave. —Grand Forks Herald.

E. F. and C. H. Chandler, in the employ of the government, were here last week taking the flow of water in the Red Lake and Thief rivers.

The Big Show.

Cole Brothers' World Toured Shows, which will be here July 17 enjoy the proud distinction of being the one show that spares neither money nor experience in caring for their patrons. They have taken advantage of every modern appliance to do this and in every possible way have considered the comfort and safety of the thousands who daily visit them. The old time worn circus seats have been abolished and in their stead, roomy backed seats with easy foot rests. Every seat is so situated that an unobstructed view can at all times be had of the three rings and elevated stages and no act is given that cannot be seen from any part of the huge tent. Less than one quarter of the seating space is reserved and the grand stand section is provided with individual chairs, all of which are numbered and only tickets sold to correspond with these numbers. At no time is standing room sold. To see that every one is provided with seats, there are over fifty uniformed ushers in attendance whose undivided attention is given to the patrons and ladies and children may attend any of the performances unaccompanied by escorts or chaperones and feel assured that they will be courteously cared for. The uniformed attended in the menagerie, horse fair and others departments are under orders to answer all pertinent questions politely and intelligently and patrons may at all times seek information knowing it will be furnished them willingly and politely. At night the tents are all lighted with the show's own system of lighting, and are made as bright as when lighted by the sun's rays. Not only is this true as to the tents, but the streets leading to them and the grounds surrounding them. The show carries its own corps of experienced detectives who work in connection with the local authorities to keep objectionable charters away from the show grounds. This show is absolutely free from all games and gambling devices and patrons may fee as safe when in attendance as when seated by their own firesides.

Confirmation Services.

At the Swedish Lutheran Black River church there were confirmation services on Sunday July 4. The class which had been instructed by Rev. Sand for nearly a year consisted of the following fifteen members: Agnes Lindquist, Hanna Person, Lorisa Olson, Esther Moren, Isabella Moren Ernest Johnson, Edward Johnson, Henry Hallstrom, Axel Swenson, Arvid Person, Victor Mosbeck, Harry Johnson, Henry Melin, Victor Scholin Gustaf Peterson.

Married Last Week.

Earnest Yonke, youngest son of August Yonke, and Miss Gurtie Thorstad, daughter of J. O. Thorstad, were united in marriage last Wednesday at the home of the bride's parents in the town of Sanders. A large number of relatives and friends of the contracting parties witnessed the ceremony.

Cliff Mc Lellan, brakeman on Soo line, is taking a vacation three days. While out on the Wheatline last week he had the misfortune to sprain his ankle.

CELEBRATING THREE DAYS

People of Thief River Falls and Vicinity Celebrate for Three Days.

There Was No Celebration in Thief River Falls and City Was Deserted.

While there was no celebration of the Fourth of July in Thief River Falls this year, nearly every resident of this city took in one or more of the celebrations in the neighboring towns, and the city was deserted on Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

On Saturday quite a number of residents of this city were at either Strip or Holt where there were very creditable celebrations, the "Kid" band of this city furnishing music for the latter place.

On Sunday the band, the base ball team and many citizens went to Crookston on a special train to spend the day. Others drove out into the country to take in some of the numerous celebrations, and there was hardly a township in this vicinity that did not have a celebration.

On Monday the band and about 600 citizens were down to Plummer and celebrated. The Plummer celebration is said to have been a very good one. E. M. Stanton, of this city, delivered the oration, and made a great hit among the people of Plummer and vicinity.

Geo. L. Austin Resigns.

George L. Austin, buttermaker for the St. Hilaire Co-operative creamery, has tendered his resignation to the board of trustees to take effect on August 1st. Mr. Austin has accepted a traveling position with the Hazelwood Co., of Spokane, Wash., and will buy butter and eggs for that concern in this section of the country. His headquarters will be at Crookston but he will continue to live in St. Hilaire for the present at least.

During the five years that Mr. Austin has been buttermaker here he has carried on the good work so nicely begun by former buttermakers in the creamery here until concerns all the way to both coasts have made strenuous efforts to secure an option on the total output of its product and were willing to pay top-notch prices for it. At the convention of the State Dairymen Association held at Montevideo last winter Mr. Austin's butter took the first prize and he was awarded a gold medal. Mr. Austin has proved to be an efficient and conscientious workman and the Hazelwood Co. is the gainer in securing his services while the local creamery will be the loser. He has the best wishes of the commuity in his new field as well as their hearty congratulations in having secured so lucrative a position. —St. Hilaire Spectator.

BOTH NOW IN JAIL

Wife and Daughter of Murdered St. Paul Butcher.

ELDER WOMAN IS ARRAIGNED

Pleads Not Guilty and Case Goes Over to October.

Mrs. Minna Arbogast and Louise Arbogast, wife and daughter of Louis Arbogast, murdered St. Paul butcher, occupy cells at opposite ends of the top floor at the county jail, each charged with killing the husband and father.

The mother was arraigned before Judge O. B. Lewis in the district court and entered a plea of not guilty. Her case was then continued until October.

While Mrs. Arbogast is not yet a well woman she is as well physically as she ever will be, according to Dr. Arthur B. Ancker, save that the burns on her back have not completely healed.

Mentally she appears weak. She does not seem to realize the serious position she is in. While in the courtroom she stared straight to the front during the half hour that elapsed before she was called. She did not attempt to converse with any one, but appeared to be dazed.

LUNATIC ATTEMPTS TO KILL

Roseau County Farmer Shoots Two of His Neighbors.

Ingall Efta, living near Badger, assaulted two neighbors, Erickson and Julius Graff, with a shotgun and attempted to kill both while they were breaking in a field near Efta's house. Efta was arrested. It developed that Efta was insane and might have committed a horrible tragedy had not the persons assaulted been finally able to escape.

Efta lived alone and he entertained a delusion that the neighbors were trying to poison him and threatened to shoot any one who came near his place.

He was taken to Roseau immediately and consigned to the asylum at Fergus Falls by Judge of Probate Holm.

EXTRA SESSION POSSIBLE

Friends of Road and Bridge Bill Make Suggestion.

A special session of the legislature probably will be called if the road and bridge bill is declared unconstitutional, so that other means of giving state aid to necessary roads and bridges throughout the state may be devised.

Representative W. H. Westcott of Dakota county says that efforts will be made to have such a session called if the bill is knocked out, so that the good roads amendment submitted to the voters in 1908 could be resubmitted next year.

UNKNOWN MAN ENDS LIFE

Cuts His Throat and Jumps Into the Mississippi River.

An unknown man climbed the railing of the Wabasha street bridge at St. Paul, cut his throat and dropped into the river. He fell near the mouth of the sewer in the rear of the old Empire theater. When the body rose to the surface the current had carried it toward the West side shore. It sank again almost immediately and when it came up again it was near the West side shore. Then it sank again and that was the last seen of it.

Six Months for Using Set Gun.

George Peterson, who was arrested at Bruno, this state, a few days ago on a charge of setting a gun for deer, has been given a six months' sentence in the county jail, according to reports received by Carlos Avery, executive agent of the state game and fish commission. The man who found the gun came within an inch of being killed.

Four Hurt by Explosion.

Four people were injured at St. Paul by the accidental explosion of a ton of fireworks that were being set off at the union celebration of the people of Midway Heights, Merriam Park, St. Anthony Park and Desnoyer Park. The injured are: Mrs. Harry Fargo, George Brown, Miss Bessie Brown and Peter Schandecker of Chicago.

Duluth Men Drowned.

Arthur Rydholm, aged twenty years, and Jonathan Kelly, aged twenty-four years, both of Duluth, were drowned in Lake Superior. They were cruising in a canoe near the city, when in some manner the canoe was overturned. The young men were unmarried and both were employes of a Duluth department store.

Justice Lewis Is Injured.

Hon. Charles L. Lewis, associate justice of the supreme court, was struck by a freight train on the Milwaukee road at St. Paul and sustained injuries which will confine him to his home for some time. Mr. Lewis was badly bruised about the arms and right side.

BIRTHS DOUBLE THE DEATHS

Vital Statistics for Minnesota During the Year 1908.

There were 43,018 births in Minnesota during 1908, which is doing pretty well for a state with just a little over 2,000,000 population. The births during 1907 were only 39,277, but the officials of the state board of health, who have just completed the figures, believe that all the births were not reported in 1907 and previous years and that in 1908 the reports were practically complete.

The deaths for 1908 were less than half the births, or 20,715. In 1907 19,943 deaths were reported.

The new law, passed in 1907, requiring a death certificate before any burial permit is issued, is believed to be responsible for the increase in the number of deaths reported during 1908, although the increase in population is partly responsible.

REVISES HIS "CONFESSION"

Frank Smith Tells New Story of Ledbeter Murder.

Secret conferences in the Blue Earth county jail at Mankato, lasting off and on for forty-eight hours, have resulted in the almost complete breakdown of Frank Smith, the man who is the self-confessed accessory to the murder of H. J. Ledbeter, wealthy farmer, whose body was found by his brother and others buried beneath a potato patch.

In his new story Smith clears almost entirely Mrs. Grace Ledbeter, wife of the murdered man, and completely Mr. and Mrs. William Schwandt, who are under indictment with her. The efforts at secrecy made by the county officials have succeeded for the time being and the complete details of the new story of the crime are not yet forthcoming.

WORKS BLACK HAND GAME

St. Paul Youth Tries to Get Money From Business Men.

Caught in the act of taking a package supposed to contain $1,000, which had been left near a telegraph pole at the end of the Mississippi and West St. Paul car line at St. Paul, as directed by him in a Black Hand letter, an unknown youthful blackmailer braved a fusillade of revolver shots fired by four government officials and made his escape.

The young man had written letters to several business men recently, demanding $1,000 from each. The matter was called to the attention of the federal officers and the attempt to capture the alleged Black Hand member proved a failure.

WOULD IMPROVE POLITICS

Governor Johnson Favors the Ballot for Women.

Governor Johnson of Minnesota, delivering an address at Jackson, Mich., said:

"I hope to see the time when women will join with their husbands in political affairs. Where woman is the atmosphere is better and politics would be better with her refining influence."

GENERAL BOBLETER DEAD

Widely Known Minnesotan Dies After Long Illness.

General Joseph Bobleter, former state treasurer, legislator, adjutant general, Civil war veteran and mayor of New Ulm, is dead after a lingering illness of several months.

He was identified with the early history of Minnesota and was one of the most widely known public men in the state.

St. Paul Man Attempts Suicide.

Oliver Courtmanche of St. Paul, a barber, twenty-two years of age, attempted to kill himself on the lawn of his wife's father's home and was prevented from putting more bullets into his body by his mother, who wrested the gun from her son. The bullet narrowly missed the heart and lodged in the back. He was taken to the city hospital. His injury is not thought to be fatal.

Killed in Auto Accident.

James Corcoran, son of the late William Corcoran of Corcoran township, twenty-five miles west of Minneapolis, was fatally injured when his automobile turned turtle while on the way to the Mill City to celebrate the Fourth of July. The accident took place two miles west of Minneapolis.

Officers Stop Fight.

Mike Schreck of Cincinnati and Walter Whitehead of Duluth, prize fighters, met for a fifteen-round bout at Hibbing. Deputy sheriffs stopped the contest in the first round after Schreck was down for the count of eight from a right swing on the neck. A $5,000 house had assembled.

Landlord Given Sentence.

G. W. Smiley, proprietor of the Ramona hotel of Minneapolis, which was raided recently and nineteen arrests made, was sentenced to serve ninety days in the workhouse on a charge of conducting a disorderly house. Carrie Gray, landlady of the place, must also serve ninety days at the Camden Place institution.

Man and Woman Drowned.

Miss Frances Doerner, twenty-six years of age, and Guy Peterson, thirty-one years of age, were drowned in a lake at Clear Lake, this state. Miss Doerner fell into the water and Peterson tried to save her.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

Minneapolis is inadequately policed and the department must have more policemen, according to a statement made to Mayor J. C. Haynes in the annual report of the police department. One hundred more policemen are needed, as shown in the report, and unless the additional men are appointed Chief of Police Corriston says the city is not properly guarded and a certain amount of robberies and burglaries will continue.

R. A. Jacobson of Minneapolis, who will grade the Cuyuna Range railroad between Moose lake and the Mississippi river, is erecting his camps and will have the road graded by Christmas, he says. The road will cross the Northern Pacific at Rossburg and will have two branches, tapping the range both north and south of the Northern Pacific railway.

Notices advising country girls against coming to the cities alone in search of work will be posted by the state labor bureau in every railroad station of Minnesota. They will be in the form of large posters signed by W. E. McEwen, commissioner of labor, and by Mrs. Perry Starkweather, assistant commissioner and head of the woman's department.

The government engineers, who are co-operating with the state drainage board in making a topographical survey of the state, are at work in Otter Tail and Pope counties, where they started making a topographical map of the whole state. The Pope and Otter Tail region was selected on account of its many lakes and streams.

The question whether the $600,000 appropriated by the last legislature for the building of roads and bridges, in the so called pork barrel bill, held unconstitutional by Judge Brill of Ramsey county, can legally be expended and whether future legislatures can make similar appropriations is now before the supreme court.

The highest price paid for St. Louis county lands at the sale conducted by the state at Duluth last week was $17 an acre for one forty in section 36-52-12. Deputy State Auditor Brown and Theodore Nelson, a land clerk, conducted the sale and 5,300 acres out of a total of 23,000 were disposed of, mostly to farmers.

Friends of Hovey C. Clarke, the well known Minneapolis lumberman, are using his name in connection with the United States senatorship. Realizing that the candidacy of Frank B. Kellogg against Moses E. Clapp will divide St. Paul they think there is a good opportunity to land the plum for a Minneapolis man.

Cass Gilbert of New York, architect of the Minnesota state capitol, estimates that an expenditure of $3,500,000, exclusive of the cost of the grounds, will be required for the completion of the greater campus of the University of Minnesota.

The cash balance in the Minnesota state treasury at the close of business June 30 was $2,367,247.26, compared with $2,579,688.01 a year ago.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

The city council of St. Cloud will pay $225 reward for the capture of Lindsey Garlock and John Sullivan, formerly of that city, who are charged with a series of heinous crimes in that vicinity during the last year. The latest alleged victim of abuse at their hands is Miss Anna Swintek, eighteen years old, who now lies at the St. Raphael's hospital at St. Cloud in a dying condition.

After forty-seven hours of deliberation, the longest on record in Hennepin county, the jury in the Ferm murder case was dismissed by Judge Brooks. The jurymen reported that they were hopelessly divided. Ferm is charged with the murder of his nephew, John Arvid Carlsen, on the former's hog farm in Golden Valley township on Decoration day.

Alfred Erdahl, aged ten years, only son of Mrs. Jacob Erdahl, a widow, was drowned in Badger creek near Blue Earth while wading on the edge of the stream, which had overflowed its banks. He stepped off into the main channel of the torrent and immediately sank from view.

The body of Liola Degroat, nine-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Degroat of Marshall, was found in the Redwood river. The children were playing on a bridge when two of them fell into the water, but one caught a branch of a tree and was rescued.

Mrs. Lena Stal, an elderly woman, was instantly killed by the Great Northern Oriental limited, westbound, at Evansville. She was crossing the track and apparently failed to hear the train, which makes no stop at that station.

While swimming in the Cedar river at Austin Harry Pettingill, one of the most popular young men of that city, was drowned. The body was recovered two hours later. Pettingill was twenty-one years old.

The wife and daughter of Morell Duphena, a farmer living southwest of Faribault, were killed by a passenger train on the Rock Island road while crossing the track in a wagon.

George Gamache of Red Lake Falls, twenty three years old, was struck by lightning and instantly killed during a rain and electrical storm.

Frank Ralzer, a farmer of Forest Lake, was killed by the accidental discharge of a shotgun while shooting hawks on his farm.

In order to close out our line of gang plows, breaking plows, sulkey plows, disc harrows and road scrapers we will sell the same at greatly reduced prices. Now is the time to buy if you are in need of anything in this line.

A START IN ALFALFA.

With alfalfa proving the benediction it is in so many sections of the south and west, many located in the northern states where moisture and temperature conditions are not so favorable are nevertheless meeting with quite satisfactory if less uniform success in raising it. Certain working principles in the matter of getting a start in it have been worked out, and a repetition of the chief of these may be of help to some who have never had any experience with the legume. Land on which it is to be grown should be high and dry, while most any subsoil but coarse gravel or limestone will answer the purpose. The best time for sowing the seed is from the 1st to the 15th of August, a piece of land from which small grain has been removed being preferable, as the weeds have been held in check. This should be given a top dressing of eight to ten tons of barnyard manure per acre, and with each load a bushel or two of soil from an established alfalfa field or from a spot where sweet clover has grown should be mixed. If a spreader is available this may be put on after the land is plowed and then disked in, which will leave both manure and inoculated soil near the surface, where they will get in their work at once. Only seed from a reputable house and guaranteed absolutely free from the seeds of noxious weeds should be sowed at the rate of about twenty pounds to the acre and preferably with a disk drill, which will insure all the seed being covered and placed in moist soil at a uniform depth, an important consideration if the weather should be very dry at planting time. The field should not be cut next fall, as all the growth will be needed to give a catch for the snow.

DOPE FOR RODENTS.

During the past few years the department of agriculture has often been called upon for assistance in fighting prairie dogs and pocket gophers in the west and southwest and after trying many methods of destruction recommends poisoned grain put in or near their runways as the most effective means of killing them. Its recipe for making the poison is as follows: Dissolve an ounce of strychnia sulphate (a deadly poison) in a pint of boiling water. Add a pint of thick sugar sirup and stir thoroughly. The sirup may be scented with a few drops of oil of anise, but this is not essential. If kept in a closed vessel the sirup will keep indefinitely. This quantity is sufficient to poison half a bushel of corn or other grain (corn recommended). The grain should be steeped in hot water and allowed to stand overnight. It should then be drained and soaked for several hours in the poisoned sirup. Before using cornmeal may be added to take up the excess moisture. In the case of pocket gophers a runway should be located by thrusting an end gate rod into the ground a couple of feet at one side of the line of mounds and through this hole inserting a few kernels of the poisoned corn.

THE ROADSIDE GRASS.

There is hardly a section of land in any part of the country where grass or other herbage grows by the roadside which would not furnish pasture for 150 sheep on its highways. The having of such a neighborhood flock would mean better fencing for some farms. But this would be an advantage and not a drawback. In addition to there being the feed, which under usual conditions goes largely to waste, almost any such neighborhood has some old man who cannot stand a hard day's work who, with the help of a good dog, could nicely herd just such a flock. Were such a plan carried out the looks of the highways would be greatly improved, weeds cleaned up and a source of contamination to adjoining fields actually turned into profit. The plan may be communistic in a way, but it has much to commend it.

NO POOR MAN'S PARADISE.

A view which has been expressed by disinterested people who have given the matter some study and reiterated by delegates to the recent dry farming congress at Cheyenne is that any man who intends embarking in the dry farming business should have over and above the price he has to pay for the land $2,000 in live stock, machinery and household goods and enough ready money to pay his expenses for two years, about the period required to get the land in shape for crops. They also recommend the growing of live stock and suggest ten acres as the amount of land required to support one beef animal. It will be seen from the above that, whatever else the drying farming country may be, it is no poor man's paradise.

Two important points to remember in the care of the milk next to cleanliness in handling it are to cool it as soon as possible after it is milked and never to mix warm milk with that which is cold.

When this year's growth of canes in the raspberry patch get waist high or a little better the terminal shoot should be pinched off. This will cause the lateral shoots to grow more vigorously and give a much more sturdy bush.

Hogs will do better on the milk fed them if they get it sweet and fresh and drink it from troughs which are not reeking with filth. There is no economic justification whatever for the proverbial swill barrel with its rotten contents and unspeakable smells.

John Hill, an English live stock expert, in an article in a recent issue of the Breeder's Gazette on "Hereford Cattle Breeding" cites the case of a heifer of that breed which gave birth to twin calves at ten months old and of a cow which gave birth to and raised a calf at thirty years of age.

Breaking over onion tops to increase their size belongs in about the same category as planting taters in the full of the moon. Giving an onion patch this dose might cause the tops to dry up a little sooner, but would reduce the size of the onion in just the same way smashing potato vines would mean smaller tubers.

It is related of an independent grizzled old granger in a western town that for two or three years past it has not been an uncommon thing to see him coming to town barefooted and bareheaded. But appearances were misleading. Last spring he blossomed out in a $3,500 touring car and has money left to buy gasoline with which to run it.

The Pan-American and Autumn are two varieties of ever bearing strawberries that are raised by a number of plant fanciers. These varieties come into bearing at about the usual berry season and from then until freezeup produce blossoms and berries. While this bearing habit is an interesting one, it is questionable if it is of particular advantage from the commercial point of view.

The worst phase of this levying an excessive duty on agricultural products, cereals especially, is the fact that three-fourths of the crop is out of the hands of the farmer before serious attempts are made by speculators to boost prices to an excessive point. The result of this program is that the speculators are the chief beneficiaries, the consuming public having to go down into their jeans to dig up the price.

For the average person there is no flower which is easier grown or gives more satisfaction in beautiful bloom than asters. A wonderful size of flower and remarkably delicate and varied colors have been developed the past few years. Coupled with these good points is the fact that they have few insect pests to contend with, about the only one being the stalk borer, whose attacks can be greatly lessened if the bed is given frequent and thorough cultivations.

In going into a new country it is well for the home seeker to learn from reliable sources—the government reports—the rainfall of the new section covering a period of twenty-five or thirty years. Having done this, he should then plan so as to be able to carry on his operations on the basis of the shortest rainfall recorded. This will be playing safe, and should more rain fall he will be just so much to the good and uniformly pleased rather than counting on an average or a more than average rainfall to be half the time bitterly disappointed and possibly left in financial straits.

Among sheep raisers there is inclined to be some debating of the question whether it is better to market early lambs wool off or wool on. To settle this point to his own satisfaction one feeder near Chicago who was fitting a bunch of western lambs for market sheared one-half the number and at the end of a week sold them all. Sheared and unsheared averaged seventy-five pounds, the sheared gaining within the week enough to make up for the loss of six pounds of wool. The shorn bunch brought $6.90 and the wooled $7.50. As the wool sold for 23 cents, the feeder figured out a profit of about 80 cents a head more on the sheared than on the unsheared lambs.

Considering the fact that the long look ahead seems to indicate that a conservation of the country's agricultural resources is the most important material consideration which confronts the present and future generations, it would seem a farsighted policy to put all commercial fertilizers on the free list. This will not only tend to discourage the shipment of nitrates and phosphates to other countries, but to increase the importation of these products into this country, and if this trade assumed large proportions it would hardly more than offset the exportation of fertilizing elements in the shape of cereals, cereal products and live stock. The same rule holds with the country as it does with any individual farm in this matter of maintaining fertility resources.

PONDEROUS PLODDERS.

How Elephants Cross a River That Has Steep Banks.

It is a great sight to see a line of elephants crossing a river with steep banks. They go down slowly, striking the ground with their trunks before each step and never making a slip or a miss, although you feel every minute as if they were going to take a header into the water. Then they wade or swim, as the case may be, and they swim beautifully, not hesitating to cross half a mile of deep water if need be.

I must say, however, that the sensation of sitting on the back of a swimming elephant is the reverse of pleasant. You fancy yourself on an enormous barrel which may roll round at any moment and take you under. Besides that, elephants swim so low in the water that you are sure of a wetting, which in India means an excellent chance of fever.

Having crossed the stream, they must climb to the top of the bank, and this is the most peculiar operation of all. Down on their knees they go and with trunk and tusks dig out a foothold for themselves and so step by step work their way to the top, their position being sometimes like that of a fly climbing up a wall. As they reach the top they give a lurch sideways and shoot one leg straight over the bank, then give a lurch to the other side and shoot out the other leg in the same way, which brings them into the position of a boy hanging by his arms from the edge of a roof. Then they come to their knees and finally, with a great scrambling and kicking of their hind legs, bring themselves to level ground again.

In spite of these perilous ascents and descents I never knew an elephant to miss his foothold, although there was a case where one of the herd got stuck in the mud and sank gradually deeper and deeper until only his head and part of his back could be seen. The rajah ordered ten other elephants to be brought up, and they were hitched to the unfortunate animal and by pulling together at the given word brought their bellowing comrade out of the mud with a plomp like the pop of a thousand ton cork.—Times of India.

SITE OF MADRID.

Arid Now, It Once Abounded In Forests and Gardens.

Travelers find it hard to believe that Madrid ever abounded with water. The modern town stands on so bleak and arid an eminence, its surroundings, save in early spring, are so parched and dusty and the water peddler's cry of "Agua! Agua!" is so insistent and ubiquitous one fancies Madrid must have been thirsty from the beginning.

Yet its ancient coat of arms was a large flint half immersed in water, with steel hatchets striking it on either side, the ascending sparks forming a sort of canopy around it. Appended was the motto:

> I was built on water.
> My walls are of fire.
> Such is my emblazonment.

This device was emblematic only of the city in its early days before Charles V. had started it on its headlong career of greatness merely because he credited its climate with having cured him of a fever. He it was who first conceived the project of elevating it to the rank of capital. It was left, however, to his son, Philip II., to promulgate the decree declaring the town to be unica Corte.

At that time Madrid was a small town embowered in gardens and woods and meadows and with springs and wells lavishly supplied by nature. The Manzanares, now a melancholy, meager stream, was of a measurable depth. But with the apportioning of her territory into palaces and lodging houses for the royal hangers-on and the cutting down of the trees to swell the royal treasury the inevitable followed. The sun of well nigh 400 summers has burned and reburned the site of the old town and its bestripped suburbs and dried up the natural moisture. At present the climate of Madrid is nearly the most trying in all Europe.—From Calvert's "Madrid."

A City of Changes.

Cattaro, the Austrian sea gate of Montenegro, was held by Montenegro once for a little time. Montenegro acquired it in 1813 with the aid of a British squadron. Any inhabitant of Cattaro who was contemporary with the rise and fall of Napoleon must often have had to pause and think what country he belonged to, for, having been Venetian for centuries, Cattaro became Austrian by the treaty of Campo Formio and Italian in 1505 by the peace of Pressburg. It was absorbed in the French empire in 1810 and wrested from it in 1813, and finally in 1814 Russia compelled Montenegro to give it up to Austria.

Sheridan Made the Rhyme.

The prince regent, afterward George IV., once offered £50 to any one who could find a rhyme for "porringer." This was merely child's play to Sheridan, who happened to be present. With scarcely a moment's thought he said:

> The Duke of York a daughter had.
> He gave the Prince of Orange her.
> And now, by sounds, I'll take your pounds,
> For there's a rhyme to porringer!

IN A COPPER CAMP.

Its Divisions Known as "Drill Town" and "Slag Town."

A copper camp has its own characteristics peculiar and apart. It has two distinct classes of workmen—the skilled miners, who work under ground, and the smelter men, who range from experience and scientific training to unskilled day laborers.

More often than not they form separate camps within the camp—"Drill Town," as the "slag pushers" call the quarter given over to the men who "hit the drill," and "Slag Town" or "Little Hades" for the smelter men.

The smelter is the heart of the camp. In the community there is every variety of camp architecture, from the tent pure and simple and the "half breed house," which is a tent floored and boarded up along the sides to the turn of the roof and fitted with a "sure enough door" that will lock, to the hotel like a huge packing box with rows and rows of little, narrow windows set along the sides like polka dots on a shirt waist and a flat roof that does not reach an inch beyond the sides, the whole painted a faded green and jaundiced over with the red dust.

A great copper camp grows slowly. When there is a town above ground there is something like it below—tunnels, stations, stopes, workings reaching out like streets and alleys to follow the vagaries of the lead. There is no gutting of a rich ledge and going on, no careless search for "pockets" to be robbed and left.

With scientific skill and mathematical precision each yard of work is driven to open up the best road to ore still beyond and to leave a safe and convenient way by which it may reach the surface. Nature has rooted her wealth of copper deep in the earth, and no haphazard methods will release it profitably. It would amuse or bewilder an old time gold miner to see the care and economy practiced in modern copper mining—the small savings, the constant search for better methods of handling, the struggle to eliminate waste and utilize all the by-products.—Out West.

THE MARITIME EXCHANGE.

It Keeps Posted on Every Vessel Engaged In Commerce.

It is a fact not generally known that the arrival and departure of steam and sailing vessels engaged in commerce is reported daily from every port in the world. Sitting in the Maritime Exchange, you could tell at a glance just what had transpired in shipping circles of any port during the past twenty-four hours. There is a report on every ship that has cleared or entered. The report gives the name of her home port, how many days out, her cargo, the number of passengers, her consignors and consignees, her destination and her captain's name. The companies themselves and underwriters and forwarders station these agents all over the map, and the agents are like so many train dispatchers on land reporting the movements of every piece of "rolling" stock under the reign of maritime law. The number of men engaged on shore in the business of sailing ships is twice as great as the number managing those same ships on the ocean.

In any given company the organization represents a great pyramid of brains and brawn, authority percolating down through the maze of detail from the man who draws a princely salary studying the Mercator projection to the stevedore who shifts freight. Every man has his work cut out for him.

Every steamer that floats is considered as a unit. It is a semi-independent state the moment it leaves shore. It has its orders just the same as a battalion of soldiers on the battlefield, and on its bridge waits the captain, who holds almost arbitrary power over the destinies of his floating community.—Bookkeeper.

VI.—How Is Your Front?

A frontless man
Is an "also ran,"
But the man with the front,
He gets there!

The author of this poem is unknown.

He wasn't strong on versification, but he was long on horse sense. He knew that the winners in life are THE ONES THAT PUT UP THE BEST FRONT.

It's just the same with a town. IT MUST HAVE A FRONT. Everybody living in it or doing business in it should boost at all times and in every place.

One of the best ways to boost is to boom your own business by EVERY KIND OF ADVERTISING

THAT IS PROFITABLE. Other people will realize that you are living in a live town and move in.

We are doing what we can to put up a front for our town. Lend a hand, or, better still, let us help you do it.

The right kind of stationery will help your business front and the front of the town.

DON'T BE AN "ALSO RAN" in your business. Don't let your town be classed "among those mentioned." When a new business or the opening of a new factory is under discussion get up to the front.

Arranging and repairing business fronts is our specialty.

HOW IS YOUR FRONT?

Twin Valley Times: Congressman Steenerson has started a movement in the right direction. In a bill which he has introduced, relative to the pay of rural carriers, he has provided for a mileage basis for all routes in excess of twenty-four miles in length at the rate of $37.50 per mile up to thirty-four miles, and $18.75 for each additional mile. It is manifestly unfair for the carrier who must travel thirty or more miles every day, to receive no more pay than his fellow carrier on a twenty-four mile route. It entailes additional cost and labor upon the carrier for every mile added to his route and his pay should be increased in proportion.

An Owatona man who went to Seattle some time ago recently returned thoroughly disgusted with the whole country in that vicinity. He says there is absolutely no show there for the man without money and that the streets of Seattle, Spokane, Portland and other Western cities are filled with the great army of the unemployed. His advice to young men who are just now filled with a desire to go West is to get into some sort of business in their home town, for the West is being over flooded with men seeking to get quick work. "Minnesota is a pretty good state after all."—Owatona Tribune.

The sugar trust is a proven and convicted thief. It defrauded the government of some millions of dollars by means of doctored sales which on imported raw sugar. The fraud was discovered, and while evidence was not secured to convict any individual of complicity in the scheme, the shortage was discovered and paid over. The trust has also been shown to be a brutal oppressor. A few years ago by the use of underhanded methods it furnished funds for some of its tools to loan to a rival who was building a fine plant, and who hampered by lack of cash. Under the powers surreptitiously granted in connection with this loan the trust closed up the rival plant and kept it closed, sending its owners into bankruptcy, and causing at least one bank failure, and the suicide of a respected and honorable man. Nice business, isn't it?—Grand Forks Herald.

How to Make Good Roads.

A good roads meeting was held at Fergus Falls May 25, addressed by George W. Cooley of the state highway commission, and the farmers and others who attended, secured a great many valuable ideas in the valuable art of road making.

Mr. Cooley says that one thing the average road builder has not been aware of here is the fact that it is a serious mistake to mix materials on the surface of a road. "The way to make good roads," he continued, "is to put in the right foundation, to secure proper drainage and round them up properly. You can make good roads out of almost any material—clay, sand or gravel—but they must be properly built, and must be kept in repair after they are built. In the ordinary roadmaking, it is customary in a great many places, when a rut develops, to throw in a piece of sod to fill it up. This a serious mistake. The sod, or any other vegetable matter, is just like a sponge. It seems all right at first, but after awhile, when it ought to harden and make the surface level, it absorbs the rain and holds it, and the result is that you have a soft spot in the road which keeps wearing deeper and deeper. All vegetable matter should be carefully avoided in making the surface of any road, as all vegetable matter absorbs and holds moisture. Nor should the sod be used in the foundation unless it is covered to the depth of two or three feet with other material.

"Again, when a rut develops, it should not be filled with gravel unless the general surface of the road is of gravel. To throw in a load of gravel in an ordinary road frequently makes a hard spot, and there is sure to make a depression on each side of it in a short time, so that it will have two ruts instead of one. Surface the roads with gravel if possible, but have the surface even and of the same material all the way along, whatever that material is to be.

"After a road is built, it must be kept in repair, especially for the first two or three years. The years are the most important in the life of a road. Ruts are sure to develop, no matter how carefully the work has been done, and these should be filled up immediately. If stones appear they should be promptly removed. After each rain a split log drag should be run over the surface to keep it smooth and well rounded. In this manner the road will become hard and even, and in a few years you will have a first class road. One thing to remember is that it is not the water that falls upon a road that spoils it, it is the water that stays on it. Have your roads in such shape that the water will run off them immediately and you will have little trouble with bad roads.

A TRUE SERMON.

Speaking upon the subject "The Country Merchant and the Banker," at a Bankers' convention, Public Examiner Schaefer said: "I desire to say at the outset, that the country merchant is the most misunderstood, underestimated industrial force in the industrial world today. He is, in a sense, the catspaw used by the jobbers and manufacturers to pull their chestnuts out of the fire. He is honest and financially responsible, and is, therefore, used as a shield, so to speak, between the wholesaler and financial loss. He receives goods in bulk and deals them out in driblets, sometimes for cash, more often on time, which means months, seasons, and sometimes eternity, and knowing as he wraps them up and passes them over the counter that he will never receive his pay therefor. He is the benefactor, the consumer and especial guardian angel of the farmer who has no income until his crops are marketed, and stands between him and want and hunger, borrowing money from his banker and paying interest therefor, while the farmer pays no interest in return. He receives the farmer's produce often paying more than the market price, and turns it over to the commission houses of the big cities at a loss. He stands the loss for breakage, shrinkage, dishonest returns and failure of the commision houses. Thus he stands, solitary and alone, a benefactor to the jobbers and manufacturers on the one hand and the consumers on the other. And, my friends, he is the victim of both. He Assumes the responsibilities of both, makes their collections and stands their losses, and I assure you that it is a fact that the country merchant, generally, is not making much money. He grows well-to-do slowly, rich rarely and a millionaire never. Most of them would gladly exchange incomes with well paid commercial travelers. I said he was unappreciated and I am going to prove it. The wholesale interests have little sympathy for his position even though he has made them very great and mighty. When his benefactors to the farmer have crippled his resources, and the local bankers cannot extend his credit longer, the jobbers fasten upon him and suck his remaining vitality. Do the farmers, these that he has carried, come to his aid then? Well, go to the exchange office and see the vast sums of money in cash sent to the catalogue houses annually while their store bills wait and the merchant groans with anxiety. The farmer cannot do without the country merchant; he is the outgrowth of their necessities; he must be near his base supplies; hence the country merchant is here to stay, in some form or other. What shall it be? Shall he simply supply the farmer with staples in which there is little profit and the farmers send to the catalogue houses for those commodites upon which a fair profit is made? The crippling of the country merchant means that adversity will lay its heavy hand upon your villages and shrinkage in the values of both must follow. Would this be avoided? Then support home industries and home institutions instead of populating the cities with millionires."

ARAGO'S NOSE.

It Was Enormous In Size, but It Was Safely Anchored.

Emmanuel Arago, the French politician, was a nephew of the noted astronomer and was considered a handsome man, although his nose was extremely conspicuous. At one time he was traveling by train to Versailles when a child who was in the same car and who had watched Arago for some time with dilated eyes began to cry. In vain did the child's mother endeavor to calm the perturbed juvenile. The poor mother was in despair, and as the shrieks grew more and more piercing Arago felt bound to interfere and see what he could do. He said to the child:

"What ails you, my dear?"

Thus addressed, the child sobbed out, "Take off your nose."

Arago looked at the mother, who grew very confused and said:

"Ah, monsieur, excuse me—excuse my son."

"But, madame," said Arago, "what does he mean?"

The mother then explained that she had during the carnival taken her child to see a number of persons in masks and with false noses and he had become so excited that he could thing of nothing else.

"By an unfortunate occurrence," she added, "we got into the same carriage as you, who no doubt for some good reason are prolonging the carnival. But you see what a deplorable result has followed. Let me then beg of you to have pity on a poor mother and take off your nose."

"But, madame," said Arago, stupefied.

"A little more and my child will have convulsions," shrieked the mother. "Take off your false nose."

"But, madame," said Arago in despair, "that is impossible. This is not a false nose, but my own!"

"Impossible, impossible!" cried the agonized lady.

"Touch it," said Arago.

The lady gave a pull at Arago's nose, but it did not come off in her hand, as she had expected.

"A thousand pardons," she said, "but pray—oh, pray, hide it with your hat."

So Arago continued his journey with his nose in his hat, and the child's screams gradually subsided. Arago himself used to tell the story with much glee.

ROLE OF THE COCOANUT.

The Staff of Life to the Natives of Sea Washed Island.

It is more than a coincidence that the tree which furnishes a greater amount of available material to man than any other in the vast kingdom of vegetables is the first to spring up on the bare rocks of the newly arisen coral reef. The cocoanut, so formed that it may have floated halfway across the Pacific, is thus universally distributed throughout tropical islands.

It thrives best near the sea, seldom penetrating far into the interior. Its hard shell is a coat of mail for the embryo plant, enabling it to stand hard usage for a protracted period and locking up securely the precious life in miniature.

The fibrous husk which envelops it and is seldom seen on the market on account of the greatly increased bulk breaks the jar which would be inevitable should the hard nut fall unprotected from the tall tree to the ground sixty or ninety feet below.

Such a blow would scarcely fail to break the shell, occasioning the loss of the nourishing milk so necessary to the germ. The outer husk not only breaks the jar of a fall, but buoys it up on the water, while the tough outer cuticle is waterproof.

Thus is the tree which offers to man almost in the raw state all his necessities freely scattered where the warm seas and their borders offer a footing, and from it the humble native secures sugar, milk, butter, wine, vinegar, oil, candles, soap, cups, ladles, cordage, matting, thatch for roof and material for raiment, combining food, clothing and shelter in a single gift, continually making waste places habitable.—New Age.

Building Up a Speech.

Before making a speech Charles Dickens would decide on his various heads and then in his mind's eye liken the whole subject to the tire of a cart wheel, he being the hub. From the hub to the tire he would run as many spokes as there were subjects to be treated, and during the progress of the speech he would deal with each spoke separately, elaborating them as he went round the wheel, and when all the spokes dropped out one by one and nothing but the tire and space remained he would know that he had accomplished his task and that his speech was at an end.

Doing It.

Old Lady (to grocer's boy)—Don't you know that it is very rude to whistle when dealing with a lady?

Boy—That's what the guv'nor told me to do, mum.

"Told you to whistle?"

"Yes'm. He said if we ever sold you anything we'd have to whistle for the money."—London Fun.

Running Conversation.

Collector (angrily)—You know very well, sir, that this bill has been running several years. Now, I put it up to you, what do you want me to do with it? Debtor—By George, I'd enter it in the next Marathon race if I were you!—Puck.

What Did He Mean?

"Yes; I believe that every intelligent woman should have a vote."

"But, senator, I understand that you were opposed to women's suffrage?"

"I am."—Judge.

TO PURCHASE TWO PARKS

City Council Decides to Purchase Two Parks and a Site for New Auditorium.

Building Rented in Which the Poor of the City Will Be Kept.

The city council at a meeting held Tuesday evening rather "cut loose" and decided to purchase property to the amount of about $10,000 for park purposes and a site for the new auditorium and armory. The Lennon corner, Second street and Main avenue, was selected as a site for the armory, and the Ramstad and Moylan property near the bridge across the Red Lake river was selected as a park as was also the property in Porter's addition just south and east of E. E. Zeh's residence. Both are natural beauty spots, but it is the opinion of many that the council rather over-stepped itself in making a provision for two parks, as it does not appear that there is sufficient funds to buy two parks and fix either one up in a presentable manner. If one park was purchased and fixed up it would be much better than to have two poorly kept parks.

The matter of supporting the city paupers is fast becoming a big bill of expense to the city so the council decided to rent the old Purdy building out in Hemmingson's addition of Judge Bishop at an annual rental of $150 per year. It is proposed to place the building under the supervision of some competent person and all persons applying for city aid will be required to remove to this building.

After the Grafters.

The Beltrami county scandal promises new and startling developments this week. Under the direction of Attorney General George T. Simpson a new grand jury is to be impaneled at Bemidji, which will investigate the charges that have been made against three county commissioners, one former commissioner and County Auditor Wilmann.

Indictments already returned against the officials will not hold, according to the opinion of the attorney general. The indictments are mostly on technicalities for which it is believed convictions could not be secured even if the officials were found guilty. Mr. Simpson has been investigating the muddle and will be present at the impaneling of the new jury.—Minneapolis Tribune.

St. Olaf College Band.

St. Olaf College Band, a musical organization representing the St. Olaf College of Northfield, gave two very entertaining concerts in Thief River Falls on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon. This band is justly celebrated as a very proficient college organization and is enroute to the Seattle exposition to fill an engagment.

The band is composed entirely of college boys under the able directorship of Prof. F. Melius Christianson. It is surprising that so good a band can be maintained at the college, where the students are constantly coming and going, and the task of bringing along new players to take the places of those who leave school every year must be a difficult one for Prof. Christianson.

Sunday evening the band boys were entertained at the Antlers Club rooms by the Sons of Norway and the evening was very much enjoyed by all.

Space Will Not Permit.

Our ball team was down to Crookston Sunday and Monday and played three games with the team from that city. Lack of space prevents us from publishing an account of the games.

Germantown.

July 5, 1909.

The awaited rain fell on Tuesday last and was a great benefit to all crops, as a large part of the fields had suffered more or less from the extended drouth.

Indications are that there is to be a large crop of strawberries this summer, so that all who have time or can steal it may have ample opportunity to satisfy their appetite for the earth's products.

Miss Adelaide Holden spent last week in the city returning here Friday.

Miss Dorothy Dobner of Kalispell, Mont., came up from Thief River Falls last week for an extended visit with her aunt and uncle, Vaughan.

Henry Longevan returned Saturday from Fairdale, N. D., where he had been employed as brick layer since spring.

Mrs. Carl Klockman left here last week to attend the funeral of her mother in the southern part of the state.

A number of prospective land buyers have been looking over lands in this vicinity lately and it is as much probable as possible that we are approaching a revival of real estate conveyances. Few things if any would be more appreciated by the settlers hereabout than a large number of land purchases by actual settlers as an undesirable lot of vacant land has been the bane of the country quite long enough.

L. J. Foss of Thief River Falls, who last fall bought the Anton Gunderson farm north east of here, is reported to again have sold the place for a consideration of $4,000.

Credit is due all who assisted last Friday in grading up the right of way from the street to the Zion church lot. The job is O. K.

Road-overseer O. A. Rambec intends to grade up the line east of town next week with his threshing engine as motive power for the grader.

O. M. Evenson was up here on Saturday attending to business matters.

Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Blakkestad, Nels Moe and Albert Rohrer, as claimant and witnesses, were in Thief River Falls last Friday to make final proof on Mrs. Blakkestads homestead north east of here.

Thor Skaar of Clover Leaf township was a Germantown visitor Saturday, engaging help for haying.

Emil Hanson attended the Fourth of July celebration near Liner on Saturday, returning alive Sunday.

The glorious 4th was appropriately celebrated on Sunday in Wm. Vaughan's grove south of town, under the united auspices of the Farmers' Co operative Club and the Union Sunday School. Ideal weather prevailed and quite a large crowd turned out. Features well worthy of mention were, the Children's Day program, consisting of recitations, dialogues and songs, the Independence Day oration by H. O. Berve, who ably and eloquently covered his subject, and a number of boys', girls', women's and men's foot, potato and sack races, prizes being drawn by winners in each 1st, 2nd and 3rd.

Will Jones, who is at present with the Ihle well-drilling rig out near Brunkeberg, came home Saturday for a visit and to spend the Fourth in the good old town.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Edseth visited with relatives and friends up at Liner over the Fourth.

The next regular business and social meeting of the Farmers' Club is to be held at Henry Roller's place August 1st. No definite program has as yet been planned but that things of interest will be going on goes without saying.

A series of meetings conducted by Dr. Mead will be commenced in the Union Chapel next Sunday at 11 a. m.

The Germantown ditch contractor is making a prospecting tour of the ditch route examining the quality of the dirt to be moved, etc.

DRIVES ARE ALL HUNG UP

Water in the Red Lake River the Lowest It Has Been Known for Years.

Local Saw Mill Has About a Three Months' Supply of Logs on Hand.

Hugh Dean, who has charge of the Thief River Falls Lumber company's drives in the streams that flow into the Red Lake, returned to this city Tuesday with a crew of men. Owing the the fact that the water in the rivers in that country are so low, work of driving logs has had to be abandoned until it rains. There has not been a rain thus far this summer in the whole Red Lake country and the rivers and lakes were never so low. The Crookston and East Grand Forks Lumber companies have also abandoned their drives and are in a worse predicament than the local lumber company.

There is a supply of logs enough in the Red Lake river to keep the mill in Thief River Falls running for about three months, but unless rain comes the mill will have to be closed down before it freezes up. The Crookston and East Grand Forks Lumber companies have been able to get out but very few of their logs and the mills down the river will have to close down inside of a month unless rain comes at once.

Strandquist.

July 6 09.

Our Grand Fourth of July celebration came off yesterday, Monday, and a mighty fine time, we had too. There was fully eight hundred in town, and every one went away, feeling as happy as a bird. There were games for all people, and prizes for each. The men's tug of war, was the best of all. The citizens of Strandquist vs. the Farmers. The former winning, after fifteen minutes hard work. There were nine stands erected for the day, all made good at them.

J. T. Goodbar, our genial depot agent, spent Sunday in Alexander. He brot home a fine catch of fish.

E. T. Haulotet of Newfolden was a visitor in town on Monday, for a short while.

Ole Sjodine is in Warren this week, serving on the jury there.

C. Doss of Englund is very low.

The Strandquist ball nine beat a team originating some where near Karlstad to the tune of eight to two. We kind of feel sorry for the losers, as they had such good opinions of their ability to win. Karlstad please take notice and when ever you feel ready to play ball just say the word, and we will be on deck.

Mrs. Lathrop of Karlstad, was a visitor in town on Monday.

Nels Rood of Englund was in town Tuesday, he is still looking for his lost calfs.

Mrs. Andrew Johnson, and son Albert are away visiting in Holt. They are expected back this week.

Mrs. E. C. Raymond and son are staying at the Beckwell farm while they are away.

Sidney Simon of Marshaltown Ia. is visiting his uncle C. E. Higley of this township.

Announcement.

We are pleased to announce that we have engaged Mr. Ove Berge, as head salesman in our clothing department. Mr. Berge comes highly recommended, with many years experience in the clothing business. He is a gentleman, and will surely please our customers, and take care of their wants.

Confiscate Fish.

Considerable fish held to be unfit for food has been confiscated by the state dairy and food department at the Lake of the Woods and other points along the the northern boundary. An inspector is now kept there for that purpose.

According to reports from ten to twenty car loads of fish are being shipped weekly from the stations where fishing is permitted in the international waters. The catch consists large of sturgeon, whitefish and pike and is being sent East where it commands a fancy price.

The department inspectors say that if some restrictions are not placed on the annual catch of sturgeon this valuable fish will soon be a rarity as far as the international waters are concerned. One dealer is mentioned who has nearly 900 pounds of sturgeon roe, which is the caviar of commerce. The eggs net the dealer about $1.50 a pound.

To Vote Next Monday.

Next Monday, July 12, the people of Thief River Falls will vote upon the proposition of having the city purchase or install its own telephone system. There appears to be very little interest taken in the matter and it is hard to say what the outcome will be, although it is generally believed that the vote will be in favor of the proposition.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Whereas, default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage, executed and delivered by John C. Mathews, unmarried, then of Red Lake County, Minnesota, as mortgagor, to Peter Kiene, of Dubuque, Iowa, as mortgagee, upon and covering the following described real estate, situate in the County of Red Lake, in the State of Minnesota, to-wit:

The northeast quarter of section fifteen, township one-hundred fifty-one, north, range forty-two west of the 5th principal meridian and containing one hundred and sixty acres according to government survey;

Which said mortgage bears date March 10, 1905, and was recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for said Red Lake County on March 21, 1905, at 9 o'clock in the forenoon, in book 35 of mortgages at page 360, and

Whereas, the said Peter Kiene, by an instrument in writing, dated March 31, 1905, and recorded in the office of said register of deeds on April 5, 1906 at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, in book 32 of Mortgages at page 139, duly assigned said mortgage to B. F. Bean, and

Whereas, the said B. F. Bean by an instrument in writing dated June 1, 1909, and recorded in the office of said register of deeds on June, 12, 1909, at 5 o'clock P. M in book 3 of mortgages at page 615, duly assigned said mortgage to E. A. Fitz, who is now the owner thereof.

Whereas, there is due upon said mortgage at the date of this notice for principal and interest, the sum of one thousand nine-hundred and thirty-five dollars and eighty cents, and no action has been instituted to recover the sum or any part thereof.

Now Therefore, Notice is hereby given that under and pursuant to the power of sale therein contained, and the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the real property therein described will be sold by the sheriff of the County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota at public auction for cash, at the front door of the court house in the City of Red Lake Falls, in said county of Red Lake, and State of Minnesota, of Saturday, July 31, 1909, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, to pay the amount which shall then be due upon said mortgage and the cost of foreclosure thereof, including an attorney's fee of seventy-five dollars therein provided for, in case of foreclosure thereof.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

Whereas, default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage, executed and delivered by John C. Mathews, unmarried, then of Red Lake County, Minnesota, as mortgagor, to Peter Kiene of Dubuque Iowa, as mortgagee upon and covering the following described real estate, situate in the County of Red Lake, in the State of Minnesota, to-wit:-

The south-east quarter of the south-west quarter; the west half of the south-east quarter and the south-east quarter of the south-east quarter of section twenty-nine, township one hundred and fifty-one, north range forty-three, west of the fifth principal meridian, containing one hundred and sixty acres according to the government survey;

Which said mortgage bears date June 5, 1905, and was recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for said Red Lake County on June 14, 1905, at eleven fifteen o'clock in the forenoon, in book 35 of mortgages at page 474, and

Whereas, the said Peter Kiene, by an instrument in writing, dated June 29, 1905, and recorded in the office of said register of deeds on January 13, 1906, at 10 o'clock a. m. in book 32 of mortgages at page 211, duly assigned said mortgage to Rebecca Schmidt and F. W. Altman, trustees for Anna M. R. Schmidt, and

Whereas the said Rebecca Schmidt and F. W. Altman trustees for Anna M. R. Schmidt by an instrument in writing dated June 7, 1909 and recorded in the office of said register of deeds on June 12, 1909 at 5 o'clock P. M. in book 3 of Mortgages at page 616 duly re-assigned said mortgage to said Peter Kiene, who is now the owner thereof, and

Whereas, there is due upon said mortgage at the date of this notice, for principal and interest, the sum of two thousand twenty-two dollars and fifty-two cents, and no action has been instituted to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that under and pursuant to the power of sale therein contained, and the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the real property therein described will be sold by the sheriff of the County of Red Lake in the State of Minnesota, at public auction for cash at the front door of the court house in the city of Red Lake Falls in said county of Red Lake, and state of Minnesota, on Saturday July 31, 1909, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, to pay the amount which shall then be due upon said mortgage and the cost of foreclosure thereof, including an attorney's fee of seventy-five dollars therein provided for, in case of foreclosure thereof.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the terms and conditions of that certain mortgage made, executed and delivered by George W. Harris and Clara A. Harris his wife to James Meehan Jr. as mortgagee covering the following described premises, to wit, lot seventeen and a strip of land six inches wide on the south side of lot sixteen extending east from the west line of said lot sixteen a distance of sixty feet, all in block fifty eight of the original townsite of Thief River Falls, County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, according to the map or plat thereof on file and of record in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County, and which said mortgage bears date the 19th day of February A. D. 1908 and was on the 18th day of March A. D. 1908 duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said Red Lake County, in book 10 of mortgages on page 67, and which said mortgage together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by the said mortgagee James Meehan Jr. to James Meehan by an instrument in writing bearing date March 25th 1908 and which was on the 15th day of June A. D. 1909 duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said Red Lake county in book 2 of Mortgages, on page 53.

That said default consists in the failure of said mortgagors to pay the sum of one thousand dollars due March 1st 1909 and interest thereon at the rate of six per cent per annum from March 1st, 1908, and the interest at the rate of six per cent per annum from March 1st 1908 upon the sum of four thousand dollars and in the failure of said mortgagors to keep the building situate upon the above described premises insured for at least the sum of five thousand dollars, as provided in said mortgage, and whereas it is stipulated in said mortgage that should default be made in the payment of the principal or any part thereof, or the interest or any part thereof when due, or to keep the building situate on said premises insured for at least the sum of five thousand dollars, the said mortgagee or his assigns might elect to declare the whole sum secured by said mortgage immediately due and payable, and whereas the said James Meehan has elected and does hereby elect to declare the whole sum secured by said mortgage now due and payable, and whereas there is due and owing upon said mortgage as principal and interest at the date of this notice the sum of five thousand three hundred and eighty seven and fifty one hundredths dollars to which should be added the sum of one hundred and fourteen and fifty one hundredths dollars paid by said assignee to secure the buildings situate upon said mortgaged premises [illegible] making in all the sum of five thousand five hundred and two dollars due at the date of this notice and upon said mortgage, and no action at law or in equity having been instituted or commenced to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given, that under and pursuant to the power of sale contained in said mortgage and the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the real property therein described will be sold at public auction by the sheriff of the County of Red Lake, and State of Minnesota, on Friday the 30th day of July, A. D. 1909 at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of said day, at the front door of the [illegible] in the City of Red Lake Falls, County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, to the highest bidder for cash to pay the amount [illegible] on said mortgage [illegible] hundred dollars attorney's fees as stipulated in said mortgage and the costs and disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the date of said sale as provided by law.

Dated June 15th, 1909.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Whereas Default Has Been Made in the payment of the sum of Two Hundred and twenty and 22-100 Dollars, which is due at the date of this notice, upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by William J. Kelley, a widower, mortgagor, to Peoples State Bank of Thief River Falls, Minnesota, a corporation, mortgagee, bearing date the 27th day of October, A. D., 1906, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota on the 7th day of November, 1906, at 8:30 o'clock a. m., in book 31 of mortgages, on page 301; and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof, and that there is due on said mortgage the sum of Two Hundred twenty and 22-100 Dollars ($220.22), at the date hereof to which should be added unpaid taxes, if any.

Now Therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage viz: All that tract or parcel of land lying and being in the County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota and described as lot numbered thirty-six (36) in block numbered eight (8) of Knox's Addition to Red Lake Rapids, now a part of the City of Thief River Falls, Minnesota, according to the plat thereof on file and of record in the office of the Register of Deeds within and for the County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of said Red Lake County at the front door of the Post Office in the City of Thief River Falls in said County and State on Saturday the 17th day of July A. D., 1909, at one o'clock p. m., on that day at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay the said indebtedness of Two hundred and twenty and 22-100 Dollars ($220.22) and taxes, if any, on said premises, and Twenty five Dollars ($25.00) as attorneys fees as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the date of sale as provided by law.

SWEDISH CROP PROSPECTS

Weather Conditions Are Alarming at Present and Have Caused a Great Deal of Uneasiness Among Farmers —In Some Places Nothing Short of Fine Summer from Now On Can Insure Fair Crops—Small Returns Expected in the South of Sweden.

SWEDEN.

Says a Stockholm correspondent: The weather conditions are alarming in Sweden at present. At any rate they have caused a great deal of uneasness among the farmers generally. Even in the southernmost part of the country, where weather conditions are as a rule pretty stable, the grain is expected to give very small returns. In Kristianstads "lan" the prospects are pretty fair for an average crop, but in Blekinge and Halland nothing short of a fine summer from now on with the most favorable weather conditions, can insure even fair crops. In Smaland the oats are not expected to mature on the low ground and in Bohus "lan" the cold weather has injured the rye very badly. Gottland may have good crops, excepting rye and sugar beets. The latter cereals will be meager. In Sodermanland the rye is not expected to ripen early enough to be used for seed next fall, and this means that there will be an irreparable loss in that section. In Uppland the prospects for a crop are very poor indeed. Varmland may show up with a fair crop, but it is doubtful. In Dalarne the spring grain and the potatoes look very poor this season, but the farmers have not lost all hope and are willing to make the best of the situation. In Vasterbotten there is a fair chance and in Lappmarken the prospects for any crop at all look exceedingly dark. So taken right through the crop prospects for the season throughout Sweden are not at all favorable and there will be many of the farmers who will be in straightened circumstances as a result of this next winter.

A recent telegram from Stockholm states that the Swedish consul in New York warns his countrymen from coming to America because there are hard times all over the states. Undoubtedly the consul means well enough for his own country, but when he states, if it is true what the telegram says, that times are so hard in America, it occurs to us that he is not adhering very closely to the actual facts of the matter and they appear to be that times are rather good in this country at present. At least they have been infinitely worse.

Plans are under way for the electrification of the more important state railways of Sweden. It is expected that the line running from Kiruna, in the iron fields of Lapland, to the Norway boundary will be the first to change from steam to electricity. The change is made necessary by the increase of traffic over the line, which can be handled only by doubling the tracks if steam propulsion be still adhered to. It is believed that electrification would be much more economical than the construction of double tracks.

When King Oscar and Queen Sofia celebrated their golden wedding anniversary the city council of Stockholm appropriated 200,000 crowns for a home for the aged. It has now been decided that the home be erected out at Sabbatsberg at a cost of 300,000 crowns. Thus it will be seen that it will cost 200,000 crowns more than was expected and the city council has now set about to raise another 100,000 crowns.

A Stockholm dispatch tells us that the Swede who shot and killed Major General Beckman, chief of the coast artillery, June 27, shot himself the following day. The shooting of General Beckman created a shock in military circles, as the general was very prominent and highly respected officer.

The leading man in the Salvation Army in Sweden, Booth-Hellberg, died June 5 while returning to Stockholm from an extensive journey in Germany. Through his death the Salvation Army in Sweden has lost one of its most efficient leaders.

Stockholm is going to have a number of barber shops after this which are going to operate on the co-operative order. This is an entirely new stunt in Stockholm and everybody is interested in seeing how the plan is going to pan out.

The Swedish government has purchased the telephone lines east of Fredrikshald, Norway, which until now have been owned by the Norwegian government. They extend quite a distance on the Swedish side of Ide fiord.

The new army balloon arrived from Headinger's factory in Germany the other day and will immediately be placed at the disposal of the southern army, where it will be used in the army maneuvers during next month.

The "Drott," the royal yacht, which was King Oscar's favorite boat, is now undergoing a thorough renovation. It will, when completed, be sent to Stettin, Germany, to bring Queen Victoria back to Stockholm.

Not since 1904 has there been so much water in the Malaren as there is this season. The big spring rain and spring floods is what caused the high water this year.

NORWAY.

A dispatch from Tromsoe, dated June 27, states that the steamer "Arctic," carrying Walter Wellman's north pole expedition, returned there that day from Spitzbergen with her flags at half mast, bringing the news that Knud Johnson, one of the two men who remained at the Wellman camp last winter, had perished on the pack ice and that the airship shed had been destroyed by a heavy storm. On May 19 Johnson went with his follow watchman, Paul Bjoervig, on a hunting expedition over the pack ice. The ice was moving and Johnson fell through a crevasse into the sea. Bjoervig held out a long stick for Johnson to grasp, but he was unconscious. Bjoervig then ran back to the camp and secured a rope, but when he returned to the crevasse Johnson's body had disappeared. A strong gale from the southwest sprang up on Christmas day and lasted for eight days. Bjoervig, who has spent many winters in Spitzbergen and has been with Mr. Wellman on every Arctic expedition since 1894, says he has never seen such a fierce storm as this one. It reached its climax on the night of Dec. 26, when it entirely destroyed the airship shed. The whole roof, which was seventy feet long, was carried one hundred meters away and broken to pieces and then the remaining portions of the building collapsed. Anticipating the possibility that the airship house might be destroyed, Walter Wellman had sent by the "Arctic" timber and other repairing materials. Walter Wellman, who is now in command of the camp, reports that the work of rebuilding the house has already begun. Chief Engineer Vaniman has prepared plans for the erection of a new and stronger building. Additional timbers have been ordered from Tromsoe and a relay of workmen has been engaged and will proceed to Spitzbergen within a few days. The "Artic" will return immediately for another cargo. Messrs. Wellman and Vaniman say that the destruction of the airship house means a delay of four or five weeks, and they are uncertain whether it will be practicable to finish the new shed in time to make the voyage northward this summer. Many people in Norway believe that Mr. Wellman's plans are impracticable and that he will never be able to complete what he has set out to accomplish.

The first automobile exposition ever held in Christiania was opened last month and proved a splendid success and served to advertise the automobile business in no small degree in Norway. King Haakon took a deep interest in the exposition and was present at the opening and on another occasion. Many notables from all parts of the country came to take in the exposition and all pronounced it unique. As a result the number of automobiles are increasing in Norway at a rapid rate. The roads in Norway are excellent. They are wide and solidly built and are ideally adapted for automobiles.

The Norwegians of Baltimore, Md., have sent in a formal complaint against the Norwegian consul in Baltimore for failing to raise the Norwegian flag on May 17. The foreign department will act on the matter in the near future.

The members of the Danish Venstre association will make a tour in northern Norway during the latter part of next month. About sixty Danish journalists will participate in the excursion.

The customs receipts at the Christiania customs house during the month of May this year were 36,000 crowns less this year than last year during the same month.

DENMARK.

The London Daily Graphic and the London Daily Chronicle have recently contained long articles regarding the practicability of introducing the Danish agricultural system into England, stating that the Danish system of tilling the soil cannot be excelled anywhere in the world. Large delegations of British agricultural experts have during the past two years made a thorough study of the Danish system and they all unite in saying that it is the best in the world.

"Alabama" is the name of Einar Michelsen's new ship, which has just been completed and with which he contemplates to make a trip to the polar regions. The vessel was given its trial trip the other day and Mr. Michelsen expressed himself as being extremely well satisfied with it, stating that it is by far the very best polar ship that has ever been built in Denmark.

It is rumored that the Russian czar will pay a quiet visit to Copenhagen after paying his respects to King Gustaf at Stockholm. The date of his coming has not been set, but it is likely that it will be in the immediate future, as the czar was scheduled to be in Stockholm last Saturday.

Herman Bang's novels are in great demand all over Denmark at present and also in Germany. Just now Bang's best seller is entitled, "Hopeless Relatives," and this story has also been translated into the German language and is selling at a remarkable rate in that country at present.

MARION S. NORELIUS.

THE SOLDIER'S SLANG

Army Vernacular as Odd as That of the Navy.

MANY QUEER EXPRESSIONS.

A Man Just Enlisted Is Called "a Rocky," and Men Who Enlist at the Beginning of Winter and Desert In the Spring Are Called "Snowbirds."

The army has just as odd a vernacular as the navy. To the uninitiated some army expressions would convey little or no sense, as, for example, if a soldier were heard to say, "The top told me to report for kitchen police and help skin the spuds for slum for supper," the hearer would have several guesses before he would come anywhere near what this meant in the patter of the barracks.

In plain language, it means that the first sergeant (the ranking or orderly sergeant) had told him to report to the cook to assist him in peeling the potatoes to make the hash or stew for supper. Hash or stew is always "slum," and the first sergeant is "the top;" "kitchen police," a man who assists the cook in the preparation of meals and the washing of dishes, pans, etc.

A man who has just enlisted or has not yet been in the ranks long enough to be considered a full fledged soldier, having learned all his duties, is called "a rooky," and woe be unto the "rooky" who gets "fresh" before an old sergeant who has been in the ranks since before the fresh "rooky" was born! He will be told in any but gentle terms by the old timer: "Shut up and go about your work. Your name is not yet dry on your enlistment paper!" meaning that when he was sworn in and promised to serve for three years and obey the "orders of the president and the officers appointed over him" he had signed his name to this paper and the signature had not had time to get dry.

When a man says he is going to "take on" or "take to another blanket," he means that he is going to reenlist. The government, in the clothing allowance for each man, provides a blanket; hence the term to "take another blanket."

The guardhouse is called "the mill." Some ill behaved soldier away back in the past (the term is a very old one) no doubt thought his term in the guardhouse ground out toward its end very slowly, so he applied this now much used name to the prison of the garrison.

When "the top" says, "Get your blanket and go to the mill," the soldier knows he is in for a tour of duty in the guardhouse, and his blanket means one or more nights, for in that much to be avoided place nothing is supplied in the way of comforts, and each occupant carries with him his blanket, or more if he has them, to make his rest more comfortable.

All meals are called "chuck," and along toward mealtime the expression, "Is it not time for chuck call to blow?" is heard very frequently.

"Snowbirds" are men who enlist in the winter about the time snow begins to fall and the real snowbird puts in its appearance and desert in the spring when the robin appears. They "take on" only to tide over the winter with its discomforts.

The oldest man in the company is "dad" and the youngest "the kid."

Any deserter is called a "skipper."

Two men who share the same small tent or whose bunks are side by side in the barrack room are called "bunkies." This ancient term originated in the days of the very old army, when the bunks were "built for two" and two men slept side by side on a mattress filled with straw and one blanket apiece, much different from today, when each man has his hair mattress, pillow, sheets and blankets. A "bunky" always has a chew or filling for a pipe for his mate, when he might tell another man that he has not enough weed to "put under your nail."

All fines received from a court are called "blind," so that a man who received ten days in the guardhouse and a fine of $5 would tell his comrades that he "got ten days in the mill and five blind."

The commanding officer of a company or the post is always the "old man." If he is not liked other terms, not parlor talk, are used.

All field musicians are called "wind jammers" on account of their jamming of wind into the trumpet that calls the men to labor or rest.

Every man on the completion of his term of enlistment is given a discharge. At the bottom of his paper in olden times was a space in which the character borne by the man during his term of enlistment was written. If his service had been bad this part of the discharge was cut off, and it was called "a bobtail." In speaking of the length of time a man has to serve before he has completed his term of enlistment the term "butt" means less than a year. So to say he has a year and a little less than two years he would say "a year and a butt."

There are a number of men in the ranks who save their money and lend it to others. The rate is very high. If a man borrows $2 he must pay $4 at pay day. This is called "cent per cent." The term "one more shingle on the White House" means that the man has completed one more tour of guard duty consisting of twenty-four hours.

Many of these terms quoted are of very old origin, so old that if you ask the oldest man in an organization when he heard it first he will probably tell you, "Oh, it was used when I took my first blanket."—Major B. W. Atkinson in New York Tribune.

CHINESE JUSTICE.

Li Hung Chang and the Men Who Tried to Poison Him.

When Li Hung Chang was Chinese premier and was having a bitter fight with some of the more conservative members of the tsung-li-yamen he received as a present a magnificent cake which he had reason to suspect contained poison. He put the cake aside and set all his powerful machinery to work to find out who was at the bottom of the plot. The investigation was partly successful, the crime being traced to three men, of whom one at least was absolutely guilty. Li had the trio arrested and brought to his yamen. When they arrived they were ushered into his presence and were received in his courtliest manner. The cake was produced with the remark that politeness forbade his tasting it until the three generous donors had had an opportunity to enjoy its excellence. Li cut the cake, and one of his servitors handed it to the unwilling guests. Each took a piece and ate or pretended to eat it. One crumbled the pieces and let them fall upon the floor, but the other two ate calmly, without manifesting any emotion. Ten minutes and the two men began to show symptoms of suffering. Li smiled benignantly and said to the man who had not eaten, "Your wisdom is so great that I am compelled to preserve your head as a souvenir to transcendent genius."

The man was removed and promptly decapitated. To the other two the premier remarked: "The cake that you are eating is not the one you sent, but one which I had my cook imitate. The poison from which you are suffering exists only in your imagination. I know of no way to cure your present pain except by letting you share the same fate as your friend who has just left the room."

As they were led away the statesman said to his retinue, "It is a pity that a man who can eat a deadly corrosive poison with an unmoved countenance should so misapply the talent wherewith heaven has endowed him."

ICEBERGS.

How Those Found In the North Atlantic Are Formed.

The distance covered by an iceberg of the north Atlantic from the time it is formed until it reaches the banks is fully 2,500 miles. It may have been afloat for a year, exposed to wide changes of temperature, battered by ice floes, possibly other bergs and ceaselessly washed by the waves. Yet some of those seen 2,000 miles south of their starting point are nearly 300 feet in height and truly of majestic proportions, often 1,000 or more feet in length, while it is an established scientific fact that so much more of the bulk is under water than is visible that the largest bergs may extend into the ocean to a depth of over half a mile.

Their enormous size when they become detached from the glaciers is proved by the observations of explorers along the Greenland coast. A few years ago a berg was measured as nearly as possible around the edges. This distance was about five miles. It had several peaks, estimated to range from 300 to 500 feet high. Judging from its appearance, it was a solid mass that had separated in its entirety from the glacial edge of Greenland.

As arctic navigators who venture far north often see a score or more of great bergs in a day, the tremendous glacial activity in this region can be appreciated. The majority of these that drift to the Grand banks come from Melville bay. Some of the distinct glaciers that terminate the Greenland ice cap on this coast extend along it a distance of fully twenty-five miles. Their thickness or height can only be estimated, but in places near the open sea it is believed to be several hundred feet.

Recent examinations of this coast show that during the short summer the formation of bergs in the bay is almost continuous. The glacial movement keeps pressing the ice forward until a thick stratum often projects many feet beyond that beneath. After a time the great weight overcomes the tensile strength of the mass and it falls into the sea, and a berg is created.—Day Allen Willey in Scientific American.

A Frog's Nest.

In Brazil a species of tree frog constructs in the water a curious nest, or fortifications, to protect its eggs and young from the attacks of fish. Starting at the bottom of a pond, the mother frog erects a circular, tubelike wall of mud which at the top projects above the surface of the water. In the water thus inclosed the eggs are laid, and when they have hatched out the frog's young are secure from enemies until they are able to take care of themselves.

Puppies Both.

"I would give half my fortune to be in your little dog's place," said a "smart" young man in a railway carriage to a girl who had a toy terrier in her arms.

"And he would be the right place for you," she retorted, "for I am taking him to have his ears cropped!"—London Express.

A Natural Inference.

"Matrimony," said the lady who had just secured her third divorce, "is, after all, an uncharted sea."

"I take it, then," her friend replied, "that you have not engaged in your various ventures for charting purposes."—Chicago Record-Herald.

CLEVER ART FORGERS

They Flood the Markets Abroad With Their Wares.

PARIS THE CLEARING HOUSE.

The French Capital Is the Chief Mart For the Disposal of Imitation Antiques—Italy Leads In the Production of the Spurious Articles.

Italy has always been the classic soil for fabrications, but in some departments Holland and Paris run her close. Vienna has a specialty for rock crystal and thirteenth century gold work, Florence and Lucca for fourteenth century armor, London imitates the pate tendre of Sevres, Constantinople makes oriental weapons, Madrid Damascus swords, Dresden sculptured ivories, Aix-la-Chapelle pewter plate, Berlin Roman potteries, Amsterdam wrought iron, Rotterdam Indian porcelains, Odessa tiaras and antique jewelry, while Paris is the chief mart and clearing house for all these products.

Italian bronze statuettes, now so much sought, are turned out with dexterity and taste in Tuscany. It is said that it was from one of these foundries there issued the group of virtue oppressing vice, assigned to Gian Bologna, which is now the choice treasure of a celebrated French collection. Switzerland makes a specialty of Louis XV. repousse work.

As for renaissance and mediaeval jewelry, hardly a bit is real except what is in museums. It is not to be bought. In the disturbed epochs that followed the renaissance precious stones were broken from their settings and sold to meet urgent needs. The same need for extreme diffidence applies to the pretty bibelots of the eighteenth century, watches, chatelaines, bonbonnieres. Of modern fabrication, too, is the enameled jewelry of the sixteenth century. Vienna turns it out to perfection. And so cunning are the makers that, for example, they take care that the ring on which a locket is suspended should show signs of friction, well aware that the buyer who thinks himself cute will look for this indication.

As for the peasant jewelry, now so much bought and sought in Florence on the old bridge and elsewhere, the genuine is long ago exhausted, for, after all, peasants own but a limited stock. It all consists of clever copies or more often tasteful combinations of old designs. The stones, too, despite their fine designations, are rarely anything else but those marvelously clever tinted rock crystals so ingeniously made in Switzerland and sold by the ton if desired.

Venice is the great depot for ebony inlaid with ivory, and cabinets incrusted with tortoise shell, once its glory and now in their decadence, are still the joy of traveling Americans on the lookout for bargains. Buy if the object pleases you, but do not when you pay your dollars imagine you are exchanging new lamps for old. As for old clocks, grandfather or other, there is not one genuine in a hundred. Ware ivories! They are generally bone or, worse still, celluloid aged by the help of tobacco or of that invaluable handmaiden, licorice juice.

Nor does even glass defy the artificer. In the Museum of St. Germain can be seen Roman goblets, their outsides incrusted with dirt, whose iridescence has been obtained by fish scales fixed upon their surface. Sometimes real bits of iridescent glass film are transferred upon a modern framework. Cologne turns out lachrymatory vases by the gross, not even troubling to copy the old shapes, but using the long narrow bottles in which cheap sweets are sold. These are buried in dung after being smeared with some concoction of which the secret is guarded, and in a little time they issue from retirement patinated and iridescent. Old German and Bohemian glass is also excellently copied in Hamburg and Paris. Venice, too, has not forgotten its traditions and turns out its own old wares.

Sevres and Dresden innocently helped the counterfeiter by selling their not yet decorated pieces, if imperfect, for a trifle. On this genuine ground the forger worked with ease. This traffic has been stopped. Still the forger knows no obstacles or overcomes them, and false Sevres and Dresden are supplied by all dealers, and the purchaser rarely has the minute knowledge that will save him. In the eighteenth century oriental porcelains were openly made in England and Holland and sent to China for decoration, when they returned as real China porcelain, or the reverse process obtained. The porcelain was made in China and decorated in what was presumed to be the Chinese style in Europe. Paris at the present moment makes and exports old China porcelain, and many a tourist who buys a find at Hongkong or Shanghai merely brings back coals to Newcastle. Rhodian plates are made near Paris in absolute perfection. Except as a matter of sentiment there is no need to seek the old. Be cautious, too, in buying Greco-Roman pottery. It is mostly made at Naples.

Most of the genuine things were snapped up long ago or else are owned by museums or by the heirs of those for whom they were made and who do not need to part with them.—London National Review.

JARRED THE SULTAN.

Advice General Wallace Is Said to Have Given Abdul Hamid II.

When General Lew Wallace was the American plenipotentiary in Constantinople he saw Abdul Hamid II. at close quarters—too close for comfort really—but his involuntary inspection was decidedly convincing as to the sultan's timidity.

It seems that from the day of his presentation to the sultan the general had grown in favor at the court and was frequently "commanded" to attend merely from the personal liking of Abdul Hamid for the American minister and the enjoyment of conversation with him. In those days the sultan was particularly vexed over affairs in Egypt. He felt that Egypt was his personal property, yet England had taken the control of the country out of his hands entirely. She had hardly said "by your leave," but had "advised" him that for the good of Egypt he, Abdul Hamid II., had better let her and then had gone ahead.

He had accepted the advice because he had nothing to say "no" with. Without a fleet, what could any one say to England? This forced acquiescence worried the sultan continuously until he could not endure longer without madness. In his distress he summoned General Wallace and described to him in detail his humiliating condition.

The general listened with friendly sympathy, and the sultan, being relieved in thus talking in confidence to a man whom he knew to be sincere and altogether free from selfish interests, asked the minister what he could do under the circumstances. General Wallace said that he appreciated the trust and confidence of the sultan, but that, being the representative officially of the United States of America, he could not advise the ruler of another country as to what steps that ruler should take against a third power, especially when this third power was on friendly terms with his own country.

The sultan acknowledged the correctness of this position, but besought the general to make an exception, saying that there was no other man in the empire to whom he could go for one single word of honest, disinterested advice. But the general repeated that he could not be false to his duty as a minister and envoy from his government.

Then said the sultan, "Tell me as a private individual; tell me as a friend."

This appeal touched General Wallace deeply, and he said, "As a friend, then, and a private citizen, I will say this, that were I in the position you have described to me I should put myself at the head of my troops and fight to the bitter end."

At these words the blood left the sultan's face, and he fell to the floor in a dead faint. He felt their truth, and he knew, furthermore, that he lacked the strength of character, the force, the will power, to carry out such a program.

What would have happened had the sultan's heart been physically weak as well is not easy to conjecture. As it was, General Wallace did not leave the Yildiz kiosk until long after the hour he had intended, and Abdul Hamid II. never again sought a confidential interview with the author of "Ben-Hur."—New York Press.

Painfully Clean.

Amsterdam enjoys an enviable reputation for its cleanliness. Owen Feltham, who visited Holland in the seventeenth century, was particularly impressed by the spotlessness of its streets and houses. "Whatsoever their estates be," he writes, "their houses must be fair. Therefore from Amsterdam they have banished seacole, lest it soyle their buildings. Every door seems studded with diamonds. The nails and hinges hold a constant brightness, as if rust there was not a quality incident to iron. Their houses they keep cleaner than their bodies, their bodies than their souls. Goe to one, you shall find the andirons shut up in network; at a second, the warming pan muffled in Italian cutworke; at a third, the sconce clad in cambrick."

PAPER FOR MONEY.

Extreme Care and Secrecy Used In Its Manufacture.

The various great nations devote much study to the improvement of their secret processes of manufacturing paper for money and banknotes, the principal object being, of course, to render counterfeiting more and more difficult.

Our own government guards with extreme care every detail of the manufacture of this paper, laying special importance upon its secret of getting silk thread into the composition of the paper itself.

The efforts of this government, however, are not nearly so painstaking as those put forth in making the flimsy paper used for Bank of England notes, which are probably the finest paper money in the world. These notes are manufactured from fine Irish linen, and the peculiar properties of the Test water (so called from the river of that name) produce paper of a purity and texture unsurpassed. The secret of the security of the Bank of England note against forgery and counterfeiting is said to be entirely in the paper itself and not in the printing.

In addition, the notes show a watermark so cleverly devised that an expert from the mill can tell by a glance at the date of manufacture the very name of the employee who made it. The watermark is produced by a design countersunk in the woven wire bottoms of the trays in which the hot paper pulp is poured and dried. It has never been successfully imitated.

Extraordinary precautions are taken for the security of the mill where these notes are made, as well as of everything in the mill. There is, of course, a staff of police constantly in attendance and a private wire to police headquarters, nine miles away.

The watchmen who patrol the mill corridors every night must pass at each quarter of an hour clocks of wonderfully ingenious construction, the revolving dials of which are pierced with holes, which at the precise moment the watchman is due before them pass over a slot. The watchman pushes through a peg he carries, and the clock ticks on. Should he not present himself at the moment scheduled for him to appear, however, the timepiece immediately sounds an alarm.—New York Tribune.

ARAB SCHOOLS.

Their Peculiar Methods In Teaching and Studying.

"An Arab school," said a traveler, "is one of the most interesting places in Cairo to visit. The children, with the schoolmaster, sit upon the floor or the ground in a semicircle, and each has a tablet of wood which is painted white and upon which the lessons are written. When the latter are learned they are washed out and replaced by other lessons.

"During study hours the Arab schools remind one of the Chinese, for the children all study aloud, and as they chant they rock back and forth like trees in a storm, and this movement is continued for an hour or more at a time. The schoolmaster rocks back and forth also, and altogether the school presents a most novel appearance as well as sound. Worshipers in the mosques always move about while reciting the Koran, as this movement is believed to assist the memory.

"The desks of the Arab schools are old contrivances of palm sticks, upon which is placed the Koran or one of the thirty sections of it. After learning the alphabet the boys take up the study of the Koran, memorizing entire chapters of it until the sacred book is entirely familiar.

"A peculiar method is followed in learning the Koran. The study begins with the opening chapter, and from this it skips to the last. The last but one is then learned, then the last but two, and so on in inverted order, ending finally with the second chapter.

"During the student's progress it is customary for the schoolmaster to send on the wooden tablet a lesson painted in black and red and green to the father, who returns it after inspection with a couple of plasters pasted upon it. The salaries of the schoolmasters are very meager indeed."—Washington Herald.

Honest Answer.

The stories told of Snetzler, a famous Swiss organ builder, prove that he was a man of rare and incorruptible honesty. At one time the parish officers of a country church applied to Snetzler to examine their organ and make improvements in it.

"Gentlemen," said Snetzler after a careful examination of the instrument in question, "your organ be wort £100 joost now. Vell, I vill spend you £100 on it, and it shall den be wort £50!"—London Graphic.

Those Elaborate Defenses.

Dowries In India.

The custom of extorting dowries has grown into the very fabric of the social life and is a standing disgrace to the Bengali community, which has no justification to plead or apology to offer. The practice has now assumed alarming proportions of parents of boys extorting costly dowries as a condition of marrying their sons. The marriage of a daughter among Bengalis has become an expensive affair, and the amount in cash demanded by the father or guardian of the boy and paid by the father or guardian of the bride varies with the educational attainments of the bridegroom.—Indian Nation.

Self Tending Beacons.

The acetylene lighted buoys of the Swedish coast keep in action seventy days without renewal of the single tubes of fifty liters of dissolved acetylene. Ingenious automatic lighting makes this possible. A bright reflecting surface and a black absorbing one give unequal expansion by daylight, thus closing a valve and shutting off the gas, but at night this action ceases, the valve opens, and the gas, automatically lighted, continues burning.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Psychology of Dreams.

Dreams go by contraries, but they nearly always agree with what we eat.—Birmingham Age-Herald.

There is a place and means for every man alive.—Shakespeare.

Rations having a strong odor, like turnips, rutabagas and carrots, should not be fed until after the milking is done if one does not wish the milk to absorb the taint.

Every farm in the stock raising sections of the country should have its quota of sheep. If the place is not fenced so as to hold sheep, this should be done first, and one would be justified in borrowing money for the purpose.

Even little chicks will keep in a better condition of health and make a more rapid growth if they dig and scratch for the chick food, it being an easy matter to scatter it in a short, light litter. They get on to the scratching idea in a mighty short time and seem to enjoy the sport.

One farmer who was commending the excellencies of silage at a midwinter institute said that the ration was not only eaten with evident relish by all the farm animals, but that the ducks and chickens were red hot for it, while every now and then he caught the hired man nibbling it.

WHY PORK IS SO HIGH

City Packers Say That Reason Pork Is So High Is Due to Natural Causes.

It Is Predicted That Pork Will Go Even Higher This Fall.

We publish the following from the St. Paul Dispatch partly to show how the present high price of hogs is affecting the retail dealers and also to give our farmer readers the "other follow's" point of view in the matter of extra high prices for farm products:

"Not since the days of the civil war have farmers received so much for their hogs as they are at present. Packers are now paying $7.50 a hundred for hogs, which is $2 more than was paid a year ago. Even at this price, commission men, wholesalers and retailers, find it hard to get a supply, and all are of the opinion that the price is bound to rise still higher before fall.

"The reason for this is said to be merely an economical principle; that the supply does not equal the demand.

"It is said that for the past few years farmers have stopped raising hogs, preferring to devote their time to grain, because of the high prices it has been bringing.

"Those farmers who raised corn, preferred to sell it rather than feed it to their hogs, and those who did not raise their own fodder could not afford to buy it for feeding purposes.

"Last year at this time the hog receipts at South St. Paul were about 3,000 a day, while at present it is seldom that receipts are over 1,000. There are no hogs to be had. If there were any in the country, farmers would surely send them in at the prevailing high prices," said Malcolm McMillan of the McMillan Packing company, today.

L. Eisenmenger, the local retailer, said that there was nothing to the rumor that the packers had bought up the supply of hogs and boosted the prices.

"The farmers are getting all the best of it," said Mr. Eisenmenger. "What we need is some legislation in favor of the people, and less in favor of the farmer."

"He refused to state, however, what sort of legislation he had in mind.

"Continuing, Mr. Eisenmenger said: "We have been forced to raise our prices for pork and this has caused a falling off in sales. We would rather sell other kinds of meat, because there is no money in pork for for us.

I do not think there will be any reduction in the price until fall. People will be tempted to raise hogs for market, on account of the high prices. This ought to increase the supply by fall, and a drop in price would follow."

State Exhibit by Uncle Sam.

An announcement has been made by Secretary of Agriculture Wilson that his department has decided to participate in the Minnesota State Fair to be held the coming fall.

While the Department exhibit will not be as elaborate as originally contemplated, Secretary Wilson's decision is important, inasmuch as this is the first time the Department of Agriculture has ever co-operated in an official way the great State Fair held annually in Minnesota.

In his letter to Mr. Tawney, Secretary Wilson says that arrangements have been made to provide a good roads exhibit, a grain exhibit, such as was presented at the Corn Palace at the Omaha Exposition, and a practical demonstration as to the progress the department is making in helping the farmers to getting field crops.

Dr. Galloway, chief of the breau of plant industry, was called into conference by Secretary Wilson before the decision was reached to have representation at the Minnesota fair. As a result it was decided that Leslie A. Fitz, in charge of the grain laboratory at Fargo, N. D., should be sent to the Minnesota fair to illustrate what the department is doing to help grain producers of the Northwest.

From the bureau of good roads will be sent an official who will lecture at the fair on methods of road construction, and if possible a practical demonstration will be given at stated periods.

The suggestion that the federal government participate in the State Fair was made by First Vice President Furlong of Austin. Mr. Tawney brought it to the attention of the secretary of agriculture, with the result as outlined.

How Real Estate Men Do It.

A real estate agent in speaking of his business said: "Just notice what the land men have to do to keep business moving. For a few years we advertised Dakota land and got all we could to move there. Then we painted the glories of Canada and got thousands to move over the line, but that has played out. We then worked Texas land to the limit and now we have moved the scene of operation to Montana and the West. 'Raise fruit and get rich,' is now the cry. We can sell any land from Winnipeg to the Gulf and clear to the coast for fruit. There is always a big shifting population, those who are never contented and won't remain long enough in one place to make it pay, and they will all be on the move as soon as they get the flowery prospectus which will reach them as fast as they can be mailed. They will see apples quoted at $2 per barrel and count their wealth but will not stop to think that fruit is perishable and that they must be located with ready facilities for shiping and that the buyer will offer a flat price for the whole crop and the $2 per barrel is a dream to the real estate man."—LeRoy Independent.

Raising Alfalfa Up North.

An experiment in alfalfa raising on a small scale is being made by V. A. Greer. He sowed a small patch in his garden. It has so far made a fine growth, being six to eight inches high and a good stand. The experiment will be watched with interest, for if a small patch of it will do well, a large one will do equally well. But really alfalfa growing in this county is not an experiment. A. W. Clark has had an acre or two of it growing quite successfully for the past two or three years and others in the western part of the county have been equally successful with it. When farmers come to understand its immense yield and its value as a milk producing feed for cows, there will be hundreds of acres of it sown in eastern Marshall county. —Middle River Pioneer.

A Dozen Dont's.

Don't tell your troubles; other people have troubles of their own.

Don't be a snitch. A snitch is a man who will accept benefits and refuse to help secure them.

Don't think that having a "good time" is all there is to life.

Don't give advice that you are unwilling to follow.

Don't forget that wasted moments means lost hours.

Don't start anything you know you can't finish.

Don't forget that the reason you have only one mouth but two ears is that you are supposed to tell only half of what you hear.

Don't think your moral yardstick is the sole standard of morality.

Don't worry over things that may never happen.

Don't boast of being self-made until after you have examined thoroughly the finished product.

Don't boast of what you possess.

Don't complain because you haven't got what you want.—Ex.

Must Show Quality.

All kerosene and gasoline will be marked with its specific gravity in addition to the present marking showing the fire test.

The Standard Oil company asked the attorney general for an opinion on the meaning of the law, and he held it sufficient if they label oil with a statement that it has a specific gravity higher than the minimum, which is 43 degrees.

When oil is sold in barrels by the oil companies, each barrel must bear the label giving the specific gravity. When it is sold in tanks and delivered by the oil company to the retailer, the company gives the retailer a statement of the specific gravity.

The consumer who buys the oil in one-gallon or five gallon cans from the retailer will know nothing of the specific gravity which is the real test of quality, unless he goes peeping into the grocers back shed or asks the grocer and takes his word for it.

Annual School Meeting.

The annual meeting of Independent School District No. 18, will be held on Saturday evening of this week, July 17, at the city hall. The business to be tranacted will be the voting of funds for the purpose of conducting the school for the next year and the election of two directors for a terms of three years each. The directors where term of office expires at this meeting are Dr. G. A. Penny and Dr. F. H. Gambell. It does not appear that there will be any opposition to these gentleman if they decide to be candidates for re-election.

It Was a Dragged Road.

Austin Herald: "The best piece of road in Southern Minnesota is a mile or more of road running by John Christgan's farm in Dexter town," says an Austin citizen who knows a good road when he sees one. "That piece of road is as smooth and hard as the paving of this city. The splitlog drag has been used over and over again on that road untilit is a model. Every road overseer of them go to work on his roads."

The farmers of Minnesota never had a better prospect for big crops of all kinds than they enjoy at the present. Haying is on, and this crop is assured. Rye will soon be cut, and oats are heading out and will be over the danger line in a few days, and wheat is most promising. Corn is coming along finely, and is never a failure in Minnesota. Potatoes also promise a big yield. Prices will also be high and the farmers will soon be riding in automobiles, if they don't take a fancy to aeroplanes.

Lazie Lindberg has sold his telephone line from Roseau to Wannaska, to the Roseau Telephone company. This line is a good paying one and Mr. Lindberg receives a fair price. The Roseau Telephone Co., is branching out and in addition to the Wannaska line the company will have a line to Ross and Pine Creek.—Roseau Times.

One Vast Park.

Grand Recorder Miller of the Colorado jurisdiction of the A. O. U. W., has been spending some time in Minnesota and he gives some of his impressions of this beautiful state to the reader of the Colorado Record in the following glowing terms: "I have had the good fortune to spend the last eight months in the great state of Minnesota. Without a question it is one of the most beautiful and remarkable states in the Union. It is one vast park of beautiful trees and shimmering, silvery lakes. There are thousands and thousands of lakes, and a family that does not own one of their own is unfortunate indeed. Many of considerable extent and all are compellingly beautiful sheets of crystal, environed by undulating emerald hills and stately trees. Every country road is sylvan drive. When they want a park in Minnesota they simply cut pathways and roads thru forest and field and they have a natural product which an comparison with the average city park elsewhere makes the latter look like a poor imitation. "It is an empire. It has a lot of the raw material out of which an earthly Arcadia can be made. Within the border of this state a wealth of timber, mineral and agricultural resources remains as yet untouched. "Her people are aggressive and energetic. With an eye to the manifold advantages of this wonderland, a sturdy, red blooded and ambitious stream of Scandinavian emigration has poured in on the state —a marvelous people and a marvelous state—a combination that will make Minnesota one of the greatest states in the Union and will make Minneapolis and St. Paul the giant metropopolis of the Northwest.

Millions for Good Roads.

If the supreme court hold the omnibus road and bridge law unconstitutional, the next legislature will submit an amendment to the constitution which, if adopted by the voters, will provide for a general one-mill tax for road and bridge purposes to be expended as the legislature may direct. Such a tax would produce revenue of more than one million dollars annually. The opposition of the city press to the "pork barrel" may result in giving the state a splendid system of public highways. Such an amendment would undoubtedly be adopted by an overwhelming majority.—Princeton Union.

Words of Wisdom.

"The foundation of your business and of every man's business in the Northwest goes back primarily to the cultivation of the land, and it rests nowhere else, because we have no other resources. Our forests are practically gone, our mines will be exhausted within the active lifetime of the men who are now active. The whole edifice of your business and of all the business of this state rests primarily upon the man who is on the land with his feet in the soil.—James J. Hill.

The New Stamps.

The local postoffice has on sale a limited quantity of the new postage stamps designed for the purpose of commemorating the development of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific territory. This stamp is rectangular in shape and of the two-cent denomination only. Its color is red and at the top and bottom are panels containing respectively the words "U. S. Postage" and "Two Cents." In the centre the larger part of a circle rests on the lower panel and incloses a ribbon bearing the words "Alaska-Yukon-Pacific, 1909," and in the center of the circle appears a portrait of William H. Seward, who as secretary of state, conducted the negotiations for the purchase of Alaska from Russia. The name "William H. Seward" appears under the picture. The new stamp is not issued in book form.

Ready to Go Home.

While Gollmar Bros. circus was in town last Friday, Marshall Koester received a telegram from Ole Hotleli, of Fosston, requesting him to capture his son, Andrew, a boy of 16 years, who had concluded to try traveling with the circus.

Koester finally found the boy in the cook car, and found him ready to go home. He had already gotten all the circus experience he wanted. Koester kept him until Monday night, waiting for further instructions from Fosston then sent him home. The boy had a good look at the real life under the golden outside shine of the circus, and it was not what it looked like.—Park Rapids Clipper.

LENNON SITE PURCHASED

City Council Held a Special Meeting Last Friday Evening and Purchased Site.

New Armory and Auditorium Building to Be Completed This Fall.

At a meeting of the city council held last Friday evening, by unanimous action the Lennon property at the corner of Main avenue and Second street was purchased as a site for the new $20,000 armory and auditorium to be built by the city. The meeting of the council was attended by quite a number of citizens and some advocated the selection of the Moylan and Ramstad property near the bridge which is to be purchased by the city for park purposes, but the large majority were in favor of the Lennon corner.

Work of getting out plans and specifications for the new building is to be rushed and then the contract will be let. It is the intention of the council to have the building completed this fall.

State Prison Machinery.

Twenty-five Minnesota mowers, made at the state prison, were shipped out to farmers in different parts of the state, and 25 binders are being packed for shipment this week to farmers in time for the harvest.

P. M. Ringdahl, chaiman of the board of control, said that the demand for the new state made machinery was larger than the supply, so the machines were rushed out as fast as possible. The machines so far are largely an experiment. The few that were shipped out and used last year gave excellent satisfaction, but one year's trial usually is not considered sufficient and the machines will be given further tests this year.

The machines are sold to farmers direct and are not sold for less than the prices the trust charges. "We have to sell them at the usual price, although the first machines cost the state much more," said Mr. Ringdahl. "A good deal of the work of building had to be done by hand as we did not have the necessary machinery and are not rushing investments in machinery until we know that the harvesters will work perfectly.

"If the machines this year work as we expect then to do, we hope to put out a great many more next year. We will have more machinery in the factory then and be able to do it better. The only trouble is that we do not have enough room. The shops are crowded or we could have had more men working this year."—Minneapolis Tribune.

Julius J. Olson, the well known Warren attorney, passed through the city Monday evening enroute to Audubon, Minn., where on yesterday he was united in marriage to one of the charming young ladies of that village.

Owners of automobiles and bicycles who drive their machines after dark are request to have lights upon the same as required by the state law. Chief of Police Lang says that the law will be enforced.

Mrs. Nils Michelet, of Minneapolis, is in the city visiting her son, County Attorney Wilhelm Michelet.

Farmers are now busy haying and many of them are coming to town these days endeavoring to hire help but are not all successful.

Conductor Peter J. Keeley left yesterday for Kalispel, Mont., and other places in the west to register for the land soon to be opened out there. At Crookston he was joined by a brother.

Dr. Vistaunet and A. Halseth left yesterday for Seattle over the Great Northern to attend the exposition. They expect to be absent for about three weeks and will return by way of the Canadian Pacific.

Costs Money.

At the meeting of the board of county commissioners held on Tuesday, Charles E. Boughton, special attorney, hired by the county commissioners, presented the following bill and it was allowed:

May 29, services at hearing before Comissioner Johnson at Thief River Falls	$50 00
May 20-29, Preparing demurrer, authorities and argument	25 00
June 1-11, paid for type written copy of authorities and decisions bearing on case at issue	2 50
June 1-11, briefing case	25 00
June 11, to services at hearing in Crookston before Judge Watts on motion to vacate temporary injunction	50 00
Total	$152 50

Inasmuch as the people of Red Lake county elected an attorney to look after the county business, it would appear that it is a waste of money to hire additional legal help. This case now goes to the state supreme court and Mr. Boughton's charges will probably be much more before the case is finally decided.

Married Yesterday.

Yesterday forenoon at 11 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother at Fertile, occured the marriage of C. E. Russell to Miss Alice Christienson. Both are popular and well known young people of Thief River Falls. The bride has made her home in this city for the past several years with her sister, Mrs. Albert Huseth and is a young lady possessing many accomplishments and has a large circle of friends here. The groom is one of the popular employes of the Soo Line. After a short wedding trip they will return to this city to make their future home.

The Mahnomen ball team will be here Sunday to play a game of ball with the local team. The Mahnomen players and a number of others are coming up on the local which arrives here at 11 o'clock in the the morning in order to attend the circus and it is probable that a game will be played on Saturday evening. Mahnomen has a good team and the game will be a good one.

On Sunday, July 25, the Thief River Falls nine will go to Grand Forks on a special train and play a game with the club in that city.

For the Fair.

D. P. O'Neill was down to Red Lake Falls the first of the week and succeeded in securing a donation of $250 for the Red Lake county fair from the county commissioners.

The commissioners also decided to expend $[illegible] in having Red Lake county make an exhibit at the state fair and named Ed L. Healy, of Red Lake Falls, Julius Pieth, of Plummer, and Daniel Shaw, of this city, as a committee to have charge of the exhibit.

PROPOSITION IS LOST

Voters on Monday Did Not Give the Council Authority to Amend Charter.

The Vote Was a Tie and It Required a Three-Fifths Majority.

The proposition to give the city council authority to amend the charter so that it could either condemn, purchase or build a telephone exchange in this city and operate the same was defeated by a vote of the people Monday. Only about one-third of the voters of the city expressed their preference, and the vote was a tie, 153 being in favor of the proposition and the same number against. The law requires that the majority must be three-fifths in favor of the proposition, so that it was lost by 30 votes. The First ward gave a majority of 23 and the Second ward a majority of 4 in favor of the proposition, and the Third ward, which comprises all of that territory on the East Side of the river, gave a majority of 27 against.

There had been absolutely no discussion of the question prior to the day of the election and everyone took it for granted that the proposition would carry as there is a strong sentiment in favor of the public ownership of public utilities in Thief River Falls and past experiences have proven very successful and beneficial to the city. The electric plant and water works system have proven big revenue producers for the city and there is no question but that the telephone system would be far better. At least the Tri-State company is very anxious to hold on to what it has here.

The unpleasant feature of the election was the circulation of circulars, presumably done by some person connected with the Tri-State Telephone company, which were all lies, gross exagerations and scurrilous insinuations, and in the long run will do the Tri-State Telephone company a great deal of harm in this city and section of the state. While these circulars may have resulted in winning a temporary victory for the telephone company, it is going to be only temporary. A large number of people who voted against the proposition have become better aquainted with the facts and are now urging the members of the city council to call another election and this will probably be done. If this election is called, there will be a full discussion of the matter and the voters will have an opportunity to learn the true facts and the Tri-State company will not be allowed to misrepresent matters.

The Cow With a Record.

The agricultural press has lately been giving wide publicity to the extraordinary performances of individual cows. Many writers have held up these records as standards to which dairymen are urged to try to attain in their dairy work. We believe this is a mistake. It discourages rather than enthuses the man whose cows are producing only a fraction as much butter in a year. These almost phenomenal records demonstrate the possibilities of the dairy cow. Further than this they can accomplish nothing in the effort that is being made to increase the average production per cow in this country.

As a general rule we believe in getting high standards, but we don't believe in fixing a standard so high that it creates an incredulousness instead of enthusiasm.

Colantha 4th's Johanna produced about 1,200 pounds of butter in twelve months but she is incapable of producing a calf. What would a dairyman want with a herd of barren cows, be they ever so good?

The dairyman whose cows average over 300 pounds of butter in a year can rest assured that his cows are good dairy cows and that he is a good dairyman. He is making money in the business and should not be discouraged because his cows will not produce three or four times as much. We believe that more can be accomplished by exploiting the 300 pound cow than by giving so much attention to the 1,200 pound cow.—Northwestern Agriculturalist.

Special Meetings.

Special meetings at the Salvation Army hall Monday and Tuesday, July 19th and 20th, conducted by the Y. P. Secretary, Major Milsaps, of Minneapolis. Subject for Monday evening will be, "The Resurrection of Life." Tuesday at 3 p. m. Children's service. Evening at 8 p. m., subject: "Jacob's Blessings". Everybody cordially invited.

Chief Gives Warning.

Chief of Police Lang desires to notify all of the residents of the city that it would be wise for them to keep the doors of their residences locked next Saturday when they leave the house to attend the circus. There is always a number of crooks following the shows and it is best to take no chances.

BOY BEATEN BY HIS UNCLE

Medford, N. D., People Get Up a Purse to Send Lad Back.

Man Fined and Put Under Bonds for His Brutal Action.

Harry Palmer, aged 12 years, passed thru Thief River Falls last Saturday evening on his way home to Sauk Center Minn., where he was being sent by the citizens of Medford, N. D., enraged over the way the boy had been treated by his uncle, Thomas Williams, a farmer, 26 years of age, residing with his mother five miles west of the town. According to a passenger who talked to the boy and the Medford citizen the lad came to Medford some days ago to visit with his grandmother on the farm. The neighbors noticed the other day that the boy was being terribly mistreated by his uncle and Friday he was hauled before Justice George.

The boy's body was found to be terribly bruised and beaten and he claimed that his uncle attacked him at the least provocation. The man was fined and put under $500 bond. The people of the town, however, were not satisfied and took up a purse to send the boy back to his home.

Sentiment in Medford was running high when then train left according to one of the passengers, and there was considerable talk of a visit to the Williams farm with tar and feathers. The man on the witness stand was sullen and refused to tell why he beat the boy. The boy says the trouble first started over his failure to find a washer for a mowing machine that he was sent for.

Death of a Pioneer.

Last Sunday at the home of her daughter, near St. Hilaire, occured the death of Mrs. Francis Reidl, of Excel, a pioneer resident of Red Lake county, at the ripe old age of 88 years.

Mrs. Reidl was born in Austria in 1821, and came to this country in 1881, shortly after which she settled in this county, where she has made her home ever since.

Mr. and Mrs. Reidl both lived to see a healthy old age, they having celebrated their golden wedding some two years ago, shortly after which Mr. Reidl passed away.

Mrs. Reidl is survived by a son and daughter, Mr. John Reidl and Mrs. H. T. Cuno, the only remaining of a family of twelve children.

The funeral services were conducted on Tuesday afternoon from the Catholic church and interrment taking place in the Catholic cemetery.

To Advertise for Bids.

The city council will hold a special meeting today and instruct the city clerk to advertise for bids for the construction of the new armory. The architect will be here, altough the plans have not yet been completed. It is the intention to have the building completed this fall.

Tracy Given Banquet.

Red Lake Falls, Minn., July 13—J. L. Tracy, who has been the Great Northern agent in this city for the past six years, left yesterday for Fergus Falls, where he will be the company's agent. This is a deserved promotion and the business men with whom Mr. Tracy has been associated are glad that it has come to him. Mr. Tracy was tendered a banquet by the Commercial club. Mayor Duffy presided and in the respences to toasts many compliments were paid the guest of honor and regret expressed that the local job is not big enough to hold the man.

To Have a Slow Race.

If you have a slow horse or mule, bring him to the county fair and you may secure a prize. The management of the fair association has decided to have a slow race this year and the horse or mule hat comes under the wire last will win the first prize. There will also be a second and third prize. No person who enters a horse will be allowed to drive his own animal, for the drivers will be changed, and whips, spurs, etc., will be barred.

After New Ditches.

H. A. Halvorson, of Reiner, was in the city the first of the week having been over to Warren where he had prepared petitions for three judicial ditches. The three ditches will be in the towns of Reiner and Goodridge and will empty into the Germantown ditch in Marshall county.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to sincerely thank our many friends and neighbors for their kind assistance during the sickness and death of our beloved mother.

Mr. John Reidl
Mrs. H. T. Cuno.

A MIGHTY GAME OF BALL

Fats and the Leans of Thief River Falls to Meet Upon the Diamond July 30.

A Stupendous Free Street Parade Before the Big Show Starts.

On Friday afternoon, July 30, there will be a mighty game of ball in Thief River Falls. The fats and the leans will meet on the diamond at the fair grounds and play a game of ball for blood—and incidentially for the financial benefit of the band. There will be a grand free street parade before the big show commences headed by the band. The opposing teams dressed in their uniforms will be the principal feature of the parade.

It is not possible to give the personal of the two teams in this issue, but next week the players and the position each will play will be given.

Water Now Pure.

Pure water from the city's deep well is now being pumped into the water mains. After experimenting for several days and at a cost to the city of only $75 Mr. Espy, an expect well digger found what was the trouble with the well and had it repaired. Mr. Espy states that there is enough water in the well to supply a city twice the size of Thief River Falls. The water now furnished the city is pure and people need have no fair in drinking it.

Out Seeing the World.

Chief of Police Lang yesterday took in charge Ernest Hay, a fourteen year old boy from Dominion City, Canada, upon the request of the boy's father, A. Hay, and is looking for another fourteen year old boy a companion of young Hay. The two boys left their home in Dominion City, Canada, which they say is rather a slow town, and started out to see the world. They had been in Thief River Falls for three days and were without money. One of the boys has secured a job with a farmer living near town and the other boy was looking for work. He says he does not want to return home, but wants to get a job and make his own living. His father is expected to arrive here today and take him home.

THE HORSE.

He Is So Stupid That He Can Be Taught Any Habit.

There have been on exhibition at various times horses that are apparently prodigies of mathematical insight—that can do anything with numbers that the trainer can do. Yet we absolutely know that the animal can so much as count at all. Furthermore, it is always the horse that performs these marvels, though the horse is the most utterly stupid of all the dumb creatures that man has made his friends.

That is precisely why the horse is always taken to be made into an arithmetician. He is so stupid that he can be taught anything—any habit, that is—and, having no mind to be taken up with his own affairs, can be relied on to do exactly as he is told.

All these arithmetical fakes, whatever their details, are worked in essentially the same way. The horse is taught, by endless repetitions, some mechanical habit. A given signal, and he begins to paw the floor. Another signal, and he stops. Press the proper button, and he takes a sponge and rubs it over a certain spot on a blackboard or picks up a card lying in a certain position. That is all he does. The meaning of the act exists for the spectator only. The pawings count the answer to a problem in addition, the card bears the reply to a question, but the horse does not know it. He merely follows a blind habit, just as he will stop when you say "Whoa," though you interpolate the word into your recitation of the Declaration of Independence.—McClure's Magazine.

MATHEMATICAL SIGNS.

Origin of Plus, Minus, Multiplication and Division Symbols.

The sign of addition is derived from the initial letter of the word "plus." In making the capital letter it was made more and more carelessly until the top part of the "p" was finally placed near the center; hence the plus sign as we know it, was gradually reached.

The sign of subtraction was derived from the word "minus." The word was first contracted in m. n. s., with a horizontal line above to indicate that some of the letters had been left out. At last the letters were omitted altogether, leaving only the shore line.

The multiplication sign was obtained by changing the plus sign into the letter "x." This was done because multiplication is but a shorter form of addition.

Division was formerly indicated by placing the dividend above a horizontal line and the divisor below. In order to save space in printing, the dividend was placed to the left and the divisor to the right. After years of "evolution" the two "d's" were omitted altogether and simple dots set in the place of each. As with the others, the radical sign was derived from the initial letter of the word "radix."

The sign of equality was first used in the year 1557 by a sharp mathematician, who substituted it to avoid frequently repeating the words "equal to."—St. James' Gazette.

UNCLE SAM.

The Way Our Nickname Is Said to Have Originated.

This familiar nickname for the United States is said to have come about in the following manner:

During the war of 1812 the United States government entered into a contract with Elbert Anderson to furnish supplies to the army. Whenever the United States buys anything from a contractor it appoints an inspector to see that the goods are up to the specifications. In this case the government appointed a man by the name of Samuel Wilson. He was a jolly, whole souled man and was familiarly known as Uncle Sam.

It was his duty to inspect every box and cask that came from Elbert Anderson, the contractor, and if the contents were all right the cargo was marked with the letters "E. A.—U. S.," the initials of the contractor and of the United States.

The man whose duty it was to do this marking was something of a joker, and when somebody asked him one day what these letters stood for he said that they meant Elbert Anderson and Uncle Sam.

Everybody, including Uncle Sam himself, thought this a very good joke, and by and by it got into print, and before the end of the war it was known all over the country, and that is how the United States received the name of Uncle Sam.—Des Moines Register and Leader.

Worshiping a Turtle.

At a place called Kotron, on the French Ivory Coast, the natives believe that to eat or destroy a turtle would mean death to the guilty one or sickness among the family. The fetich men, of which there are plenty, declare that years ago a man went to sea fishing. In the night his canoe was thrown upon the beach empty. Three days afterward a turtle came ashore at the same place with the man on its back alive and well. Since that time they have never eaten or destroyed one of that species, although they enjoy other species.

If one happens now to be washed ashore there is a great commotion in the town. First the women sit down and start singing and beating sticks; next a small piece of white cloth (color must be white) is placed on the turtle's back. Food is then prepared and placed on the cloth, generally plantains, rice and palm oil. Then, amid a lot more singing, dancing and antics of the fetich people, it is carried back into the sea and goes on its way rejoicing.

Too Much Expense.

"Yes," said Mr. Tyte-Phist, "I was just stepping on the car when the conductor gave the motorman the signal to go ahead, and the car started. My foot went out from under me, and I sat down on the muddy crossing, ruining a twenty-two dollar suit of clothes."

"Then you sat there, swore like a trooper and gnashed your teeth in rage, I suppose," remarked the sympathizing listener.

"No," said Mr. Tyte-Phist. "I may have sworn a little, but I didn't do any gnashing. My teeth are new and cost me $30."—Chicago Tribune.

Waked Them Up.

Dr. Hans Richter, the famous conductor, while supervising a rehearsal in a London theater once was much annoyed at the calm way the players were taking the impassioned music.

"Gentlemen, gentlemen," said he, suddenly stopping short, "you're all playing like married men, not like lovers."—Westminster Gazette.

Not His Fault.

"Oh, yes. He quits work."—Detroit Free Press.

HELD TO BE VOID

State Supreme Court Passes on Road and Bridge Bill.

VIOLATION OF CONSTITUTION

Injunction Issued by Lower Tribunal Sustained.

The state supreme court has declared the so called "pork barrel" bill unconstitutional without a dissenting vote. The court held that the bill was in violation of the article in the state's constitution which forbids the state being a party to the carrying on of internal improvements. Chief Justice Start wrote the opinion.

The attack on the appropriation of $600,000 for roads and bridges, made by the last legislature and divided among the different counties of the state, was made by Senator L. O. Cooke of Wabasha.

With the state road improvements now up in the air and no chance to relieve the situation until the next meeting of the legislature two years hence the possibility of a special session of that body was put up to Governor Johnson, but he would not commit himself. He said he did not intend to cross any bridge until it was reached.

At the time the bill was passed he objected to it and stated that he thought it unconstitutional. After the legislature had adjourned he retained W. B. Douglas, former attorney general, and petitioned the district court for an injunction restraining State Auditor Samuel G. Iverson from issuing warrants for the money appropriated. The district court granted the injunction and the case was then taken to the supreme court on a writ of mandamus.

NORRIS BEHIND THE BARS

Manager of Insolvent Minneapolis Concern Captured.

Sherman R. Norris, general manager of the Minnesota Grain Indemnity company of Minneapolis, has been landed in jail after a search of three days. He was found in a Mill City boarding house by detectives.

As far as the financial conditions of the firm are concerned the authorities are as much at a loss as ever. Attorney George B. Leonard, acting for a number of shareholders, has made a hurried examination of the company's books and reports that he is of the opinion that there is but $28,000 missing in place of $100,000 as first surmised from Norris' report.

Mr. Leonard figures that Norris received $148,000 from his clients during the year ending July 6, when Norris disappeared. Of this amount $119,000 was paid to investors as principal, but in most cases as dividends. Norris says that a $3,000 loss in the grain market precipitated his fall.

The books, Mr. Leonard says, tended to show that dividends were paid to favored ones. The amounts of dividends were fixed according to the situation. The assets amount to little. Mr. Leonard does not believe the concern can pay 1 cent on the dollar.

MAKES 667 PER CENT PROFIT

Charges Filed Against Great Northern Express Company.

The Great Northern Express company is making 667 per cent net profit on its investment and its rates should be cut in half, according to James Manahan and States Senator B. E. Sundberg, who filed with the state railroad commission at St. Paul a complaint asking that the rates be reduced. The complaint names as defendants the Great Northern Express company, the Lake Superior company, limited, and the Great Northern Railway company.

It is alleged that the Lake Superior company owns $997,500 of the $1,000,000 stock of the express company and that the Great Northern in turn owns the Lake Superior company; that the general officers draw large salaries from each of the three companies simultaneously and the result is an unnecessary and unreasonable operating expense placed ultimately on the shippers.

Minnesota Editors on an Outing.

Leaving behind them the shears and paste pot and casting dull care to the winds sixty-five members of the Minnesota Editorial association left St. Paul for a seven-day junket, the thirty-seventh annual excursion of the association. The junket will include a tour of the Great Lakes in the steamboat Harmonic, the largest and fastest boat on the lakes.

Body Found in River.

Only a deeper hue was added to the mystery which envelops the manner in which Harry R. Cowell of Minneapolis came to his death when the body of the young man was found near the St. Paul Boom company's boom in the Mississippi river by logging men. There were no marks on the body of the man, who had started on a canoe trip.

Swallows Acid by Mistake.

James A. Walsh of Minneapolis, forty years of age, swallowed a quantity of carbolic acid by mistake and died from the effects of the poisoning before a physician could reach him.

PROBE VALUE OF HILL ROADS

Government Experts Examining Companies' Books.

Though little is permitted to leak out there are those who say that the expert examination now being made at St. Paul by the interstate commerce commission covering the valuation of terminals and properties of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific roads will be a revelation when it is completed.

Eleven experts in all, under the direction of Dwight C. Morgan, are at work on the books and nothing is being neglected. Every voucher is examined and, when these fail to give the information desired, the vaults and book shelves of the two concerns are further invaded.

Where a value of nearly $80,000,000 was given the big St. Paul and Western terminals of the roads the figures compiled, it is asserted, do not show a valuation greater than $12,000,000. The same is the case with the various branches. Testimony was offered in the rate cases by the roads to show a cost of many millions, but the books in the majority of cases give, it is said, a mere fraction of the figures claimed.

The examination now being made is in connection with the Pacific coast lumber rate cases and its success may cause inquiry into the value of other lines. The state railway and warehouse commission is interesting itself in the examination in the belief that the figures secured may be useful in the state freight rate injunction suits now before the federal court.

CYCLONE KILLS FOUR

Score of Others Are Injured at Ortonville, Minn.

A ninety-mile cyclone, with such central energy that it sucked water high up out of Big Stone lake, hurled itself fiercely across that body of water from the northwest, venting its destructive forces among the railroad yards in the eastern part of Ortonville, leaving behind four known dead and twenty-one seriously injured. The dead are:

JOHN DE GRIFF, an old settler, living along the shores of Big Stone lake, caught beneath ruins.

THREE ITALIANS, names unknown, buried and mangled beneath railroad cars and debris of the St. Paul road's roundhouse.

The property loss will reach $150,000, partly confined to damage to railroad and commercial property, private losses aggregating about $75,000.

The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul depot, roundhouse, the coal supply building, the warehouses and the other warehouses which crowd that section of the city caught the full brunt of the cyclone and crashed with frightful detonations before the blast, their splintered lumber rising in a cloud through the gyrating atmosphere. Cottages along the lake were completely demolished and residences in Ortonville and Big Stone, S. D., were blown from their foundations. The farmhouse and large farm buildings of William E. Chamberlain near Ortonville are a total wreck.

WILL BE DIRECTOR OF MINT

Former Congressman McCleary Slated for Position.

A Washington dispatch says there are strong indications that J. T. McCleary of Minnesota, former representative in congress and later assistant postmaster general, will be appointed director of the mint, succeeding Frank Leach, who has resigned to accept a business position in California. Mr. McCleary is the choice of Secretary MacVeagh and presumably of the president and his nomination is expected before the expiration of the present session of congress.

NEGRO PORTER USES A GUN

Shoots Two Men on a Great Northern Train.

Following an affray over a beer bottle opener on a Great Northern coast train near Lake Minnetonka Thomas O. Rogers of St. Paul, negro porter on the car, drew a 38-caliber revolver from his pocket and shot William Ganzer, a traveling man for an Owatonna (Minn.) nursery, in the head, a second bullet missing Ganzer and inflicting a severe scalp wound on Henry McGill, eighty-four years old, of Morlett, Mich.

Koch Elected Commander.

Hugo V. Koch of St. Paul was reelected commander of the Minnesota department of the United Spanish War Veterans at the fifth annual encampment at St. Paul. Other officers elected were: L. H. Dibble, Faribault, senior vice commander; M. J. Murray, Duluth, junior vice commander; A. J. Rick, Winona, inspector; J. W. Finehout, St. Paul, judge advocate; Dr. L. French, Duluth, surgeon general; R. L. McKinnion, Minneapolis, chaplain; G. Koschel, Winona, marshal.

Bandits Held Up Saloon.

A saloon at Hopkins, a suburb of Minneapolis, was held up by two masked men. There were seven men in the place besides the bartender. The bandits compelled the men at the point of revolvers to line up against the bar while they went through their pockets, taking money and jewelry. The till was also raided. The robbers made their escape and left no clue.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

Life insurance companies had a profitable business in Minnesota during 1908, according to the preliminary report issued by the state insurance department. It shows that 52,561 ordinary and industrial life policies were issued during the year, amounting to $31,460,000. This left a total of 193,600 policies in force, amounting to $207,767,000. The premiums paid during the year aggregated $7,199,000 and the losses paid $2,861,000.

Bank resources of the state banks of Minnesota have increased from $89,027,899 on May 6, 1908, to $94,305,853 on June 23, 1909, according to the summary of the statements submitted to Public Examiner Anton Schaefer by the banks for those dates. There were 627 banks reporting, as against 600 a year ago. On June 30, 1899, there were only 170 state banks, with resources of $36,615,570.

An attempt is being made to move the Chippewas from the Mille Lacs reservation to the White Earth reservation in accordance with such privileges granted under the Nelson act of 1889. About 800 Mille Lacs Chippewas have taken allotments on the White Earth reservation, but 300 are remaining on their old holdings and the Indian commissioner will try to move these.

The supreme court has ruled that a contract between a layman and a lawyer by which the former undertakes and agrees, in consideration of a division of the fees received by the latter, to hunt up and bring to the attorney persons having causes of action against railroad companies for personal injuries is contrary to public policy and void.

Lorin W. Collins and A. E. Cutler, both of Minneapolis; James M. Elder, Crow Wing county, and A. H. Reed of McLeod county have been named by Governor Johnson as a Lake Superior and Mississippi canal commission. They will represent the state in the agitation for a canal from the Head of the Lakes to the Mississippi river.

Governor Johnson and his staff will be at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition at Seattle and participate in the ceremonies on Minnesota day, Aug. 3. Adjutant General F. B. Wood is arranging the itinerary and the party will leave over the Great Northern on the evening of July 28 and return to St. Paul Aug. 10.

A. B. Kelly of Northfield will be named as census supervisor in the Third Minnesota district. The recommendation for his appointment was filed by Representative Davis. Mr. Kelly has been chairman of the Republican congressional committee in the Third district for several years.

Judge Frank C. Brooks of the district court of Minneapolis has handed down a decision declaring that the tuberculin test for cattle and the Minneapolis milk ordinance prohibiting the sale of milk from cattle that have not been officially inspected is valid.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

The Northern Pacific North Coast limited train was derailed near Northtown Junction, Minneapolis. The engine, a baggage car and an express car were thrown on their sides and 100 lives were placed in imminent danger. All passengers and employes of the road escaped injury, the fireman and engineer escaping by climbing out of the cab window after the mammoth iron monster lay steaming on its side.

A belated Fourth of July celebration caused the death of Clarence Everett, aged eight of Hibbing, who was shot by his five-year-old brother. The boys were playing with a pistol and firing what they thought were blank cartridges. A ball cartridge was among the blanks and when the younger boy fired it Clarence was instantly killed.

Alexander Collier, employed at the Shevlin-Mathieu Lumber company near Spooner, was accidentally drowned while trying to jump on board the steamer Itasca, which was at the mouth of Rapid river. Collier had previously left the boat to assist a man who had stepped off the dock.

Francis T. Bennett, four-year-old son of Oscar Bennett of Red Wing, while playing with matches, was fatally burned. The little fellow's waist caught fire and his chest, abdomen and right hand were terribly burned, so that he died shortly after.

The steamer America of the Booth line was wrecked on the rocks at Flood bay, near Two Harbors, in a dense fog. The passengers are all safe. Many walked to Two Harbors and took the train to Duluth.

Edward Pascoe, fireman for the Rogers Brown mine at Cuyuna, was drowned in Rabbit lake by the capsizing of a canoe.

Howard Stevens, eleven years old, was drowned in the Rock river at Anoka while wading.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

P. C. Peterson, vice president of the First State bank of Tyler and ex-county treasurer, is dead at Mounds Park sanitarium, St. Paul, from a stroke of paralysis.

Clara Muehlberg, wife of former Adjutant General H. Muehlberg, is dead at Carver. The deceased came to Minnesota in 1856.

Peter Ripp, hermit, eighty[illegible], was found dead in bed at Mankato.

The Wise's Kept No Maid

This was economical and satisfying to Mrs. Wise. Things seemed right only when she did them.

It worked fine—everybody satisfied. Busy hands are happiest;—but the strain told—physically first, then mentally. One day she gave out—had to quit—"All run down" she said.

The facts were—complete physical exhaustion and ragged nerves, due to never-ending monotonous tasks.

The Wise's doctor said "DIGESTO"—a wine glass three times a day.

That did it.

The doctor made good, DIGESTO made good and both made Mrs. Wise good, and equal to her tasks with energy to spare.

Moral: Don't wait—take DIGESTO now. A perfect liquid food and body builder.

NOT ANNOYED.

The Directors Were Rather Pleased at the Barrister's Refusal.

Mr. Reader Harris, K. C., was once offered a brief marked 50 guineas on behalf of a railway company that wished to obtain a refreshment license for a particular railway station. He returned the brief on conscientious grounds, but later on it was sent back to him with a fee of 100 guineas marked on it. This time he returned it with a note in which he explained that his refusal was due to a matter of principle. Subsequently he met one of the directors of the company and expressed a hope that he and his colleagues were not annoyed at his conduct.

"Not at all," said the director. "I'll tell you all about it. So-and-so, the big brewer, was sitting on the board for the first time at the meeting at which the solicitor reported that your brief marked 50 guineas had been returned. 'Who's this psalm singing humbug?' he asked. 'Mark the brief 100 guineas and I'll bet you anything you like he'll take it.' 'Oh, you will, will you?' asked the chairman. 'You see, we all knew you, Harris. We took the brewer on at 5 to 1 in five pound notes. He booked the bets with every one of us, and he has paid up."—London Scraps.

A Curious Receipt.

Hanover's registrar discovered a very curious document some time ago as he was looking through a bundle of papers that date back to the eighteenth century. The document is a receipt—probably the only one of its kind in existence—which was given to a Hanoverian captain by a canon of Duisburg during the Seven Years' war.

"I, the undersigned," it reads, "hereby acknowledge that I have received fifty blows of a stick, which were inflicted upon me by a lieutenant of Captain B.'s regiment as a punishment for the stupid and frivolous calumnies which I have uttered in regard to the regiment of chasseurs. For my imprudent words I now admit that I am profoundly sorry. I received my punishment lying on a heap of straw and held by two men, and I bear testimony to the fact that the officer struck me as vigorously as he could with a stick that was as thick as my finger.

"In proper form and with due gratitude I sign this receipt and avow that all therein is true."

Hard to Kill.

A crocodile's tenacity of life is most remarkable. "I remember one time," says a traveler in India, "I was with a shooting party on the Ganges when the natives brought in a six foot crocodile. They hoped some one would want to buy it, but no one did, so it was determined to kill the creature. It was hauled out of the tank and tied to a tree. Bullets from a small rifle or an ordinary gun seemed only to irritate the saurian, nor did he seem to care very much when a native thrust a spear down his throat. Finally they were obliged to dispatch him with axes. Even then the tail thrashed about for no little time after."

Not That Kind.

"Once in a Bible lesson," said a Sunday school teacher, "I repeated the text, 'Arise and take the young child and his mother and flee into Egypt.' And then I showed the children a large picture that illustrated the text in bright colors.

"The children studied this picture eagerly. Then they all frowned; all looked rather disappointed. Finally a little girl said:

"'Teacher, where is the flea?'"

Where to Sing.

"I will sing something restful to you, dear," said a lady to her morose husband. "Shall I sing 'Far, Far Away?'"

"I wish you would," was the bitter reply. "It would save the trouble of apologizing to the neighbors."

CURING THE DISEASE OF CRIME.

Pennsylvania has just become subject to a new law for the regulation of criminals from which penologists and students of sociology expect big results, and proceedings under it will be watched with interest. The old plan which practically limited criminal proceedings to carrying out the ideas of punishment, was blind, vindictive and cruel, and it made more criminals than it headed off by its warning of severity, an idea which was secondary to that of punishment. Thousands of first offenders who might have been saved to lives of usefulness by proper treatment have been turned into confirmed criminals by severe punishment and by association with hardened criminals with whom prison and jail sentences brought them in contact. So, by a similar process, thousands of men arrested for drunkedness for the first time have had their pride crushed and their hope of redemption destroyed by a jail sentence, when treatment of a more civilized sort might have turned them, by the force of this warning into good citizens.

The new Pennsylvania law provides for probation, the indeterminate sentence and parole for convicted criminals. There is much virtue in the idea of probation, and in the hands of wise and kind judges it is becoming a very useful factor in the reform of men who have entered upon dangerous ways. Those wedded to the old ideas look upon it as a mistaken leniency, growing out of mollycoddish sympathy, but they are wrong.

New Zealand has had a law embodying this idea since 1886, and France passed one in 1891. Nineteen States of the Union now have it in some form or another, and in every case the plan has worked out much better than the old way.

In first convictions—except for murder, poisoning, kidnapping, rape, arson or burglary of an inhabited dwelling house—Pennsylvania judges are now empowered to suspend sentence and place the convicted on probation under such conditions as suit the case. Where the punishment is a fine with an alternative of imprisonment in case of default, the judge may still place the prisoner on probation, providing for the payment of the fine in installments. This reaches one of the worst inequalities of the law, under which offenders with money can escape jail and offenders without money must go to jail. When the judge deems it advisable he may appoint some discreet person to serve as probation officer to watch the case at a salary to be fixed by the court. The period of probation is subject to the discretion of the judge, except that it cannot exceed the maximum term for offense involved and cannot exceed the minimum. Violation of the terms of the probation render the criminal subject to treatment as an escaped convict, and imposition of the suspended sentence.

The new Pennsylvania law is a wise one. Minnesota has some of its provisions, but this state could profit by increasing the decretionary powers of the judges in criminal proceedings.—Duluth Herald.

Churches will be required to pay tax on residence property owned and used for a manse or parsonage, under a construction of the law made by Attorney General George T. Simpson, in his opinion given the state tax commission, says the Minneapolis Journal.

Church property includes not only the edifice with the land upon which it is situated but also includes personal property, the primary or principal use of which is in connection with public worship, and therefore does not include a parsonage or manse. As the extent that real property upon which is situate a church edifice shall be exempt, I beg to advise that there can be applied no fixed rule, but that the same must be determined by the facts each instance. As a general rule it may be said that only so much of the real property upon which is situated a church or house of worship is exempt as is reasonably necessary for the proper enjoyment thereof.

The people of the villages and cities could do much to help their trade by putting in a little volunteer work each year, with a little money, to make better approaches to the village or city on the country roads. This would be money well expended and would create a friendly feeling among the farmers that would mean much in the way of business.—Fargo Searchlight.

The knocking out of the so called "pork barrel" by the state supreme court will be a great disappointment to the people who live outside of the large cities. Minnesota is rich enough to appropriate $300,000 each year for the purpose of building county roads, and the money could not be spent for a better purpose.

While there is all kinds of opposition to Senator Clapp, we believe that he is stronger with the people of the state right now than ever before. He is making an honest fight for tariff revision, and so are the other representatives in congress from Minnesota.

There seems to have been a dull thud in the neighborhood of Frank Kellogg's senatorial boon, says the Elk River Star News. Yes, indeed; almost as equal to the noise heard when Eberhardt's gubernatorial boom struck the ground.—Walker Pilot.

Goes To Seattle

Attorney Chas. E. Boughton and family will go to Minneapolis next Wednesday and will there join a party going to the exposition at Seattle. There will be nine people in the party and those whom the Boughton's will meet in the city are Mr. Boughton's brothers and sisters. Enroute they will stop at Denver and Salt Lake City. There is no doubt that they will have a most enjoyable trip.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

Sunset In "the Red City" of Bavaria.

The numerous entrances to the old town of Rothenburg are guarded by beautiful watchtowers, which are inhabited by impoverished old women, who rent their airy lodgings for a nominal sum. The red twinkle of their lamps high over the dusky streets of Rothenburg at night—for it is as mediaeval in its lighting as in many other ways—is very charming in effect. The walls of Rothenburg are a constant delight to visitors, who, by dint of much squeezing through narrow passageways and groping in darkness, are able to make a circuit of the city, getting glimpses on the way through loopholes of the green country outside. Wondrous views of the town are also to be had from many of the distant hills. At sunset the sight of its graceful towers and clutter of red roof tops is like a fair vision of romance. The city blazes for a moment in a fiery mist, then suddenly melts, mirage-like, in the gathering dusk, leaving a sense of something born of dream, the illusion of an enchanter's wand.—Rothenburg Letter to Vogue.

Thought She Had Arrived.

"I have moved into a perfect gem of an apartment on the sixth floor of one of those new houses," said the woman who paints china, "and am reveling in its liberal supply of fresh air and sunlight."

"But don't you find the stairs an overbalancing disadvantage?" asked an acquaintance.

"The thought of the cozy quarters at such moderate cost colors my climb with the roseate hue of optimism," laughed the artist, "but one of my customers, middle aged and filled with good food and the joy of living, evidently found it a harrowing experience.

"It seemed ages that I waited in the hall after the ringing of the lower bell, and upon hearing the labored breathing of my ascending visitor I ran back for the smelling salts.

"When I had administered all the means of resuscitation at hand she managed to articulate between gasps:

"'I thought St. Peter always opened the door.'"—New York Times.

Food of the Chinese.

In the Revue d'Hygiene Dr. Malegnon, who lived for many years in China, gives some curious details of the food of the Chinese. This is what he says of the sons of heaven and the way they eat eggs: "The Chinese are great eaters of eggs, which they take hard boiled. One finds them in all the roadside places for refreshment. The Celestials have an expression, 'Eggs of a hundred years.' The eggs are not always a century in age, but one is able to get them of many years' standing. The Celestials have a preference for the egg of the duck or goose. They are placed with aromatic herbs in slaked lime for a period, the minimum time of treatment being five or six weeks. Under the influence of time the yoke liquefies and takes a dark green color. The white coagulates and becomes green. The product of the eggs, which has a strong odor, from which a stranger betakes himself quickly, the Chinese eat as hors d'oeurres, and it is said to have the taste of lobster."

Expense No Object.

During an inclement spell of weather a lady of the order of the newly rich was so unfortunate as to contract a painful affection of the throat, and she accordingly accepted the advice of a friend that she consult a great London specialist noted for his expensive fees.

"Your ailment is not a serious one," said the specialist after examination. "You'll soon be all right. I'll just indicate to your family surgeon precisely where to touch your throat with nitrate of silver, and I think that will meet the case exactly."

"Oh, doctor," protested the wealthy matron in a tone of mingled surprise and indignation, "do order him to use nitrate of gold! Expense is a matter, I assure you, quite immaterial to me!" —London Answers.

Spontaneous Combustion.

Spontaneous combustion can only occur when oxidation causes the temperature to rise to the ignition point of the material. Spontaneous combustion of the human body is impossible on account of the heat regulating effect of the 75 or 80 per cent of water contained. The enormous heat necessary to dry the tissues sufficiently would destroy life long before ignition could take place. An old idea was that the alcohol in a confirmed drunkard might promote combustion, but Liebig showed that even if the body could give off inflammable vapor and this could become ignited the body itself would not be set on fire.

Her Proposal.

"You've been courting me now for a number of years, George," remarked a girl to a young man, "and I want to make a little leap year proposal."

"I—I am not in a position to m-marry just yet," stammered the youth, "but"—

"Who said anything about marriage?" interrupted the girl. "I was going to propose that you stop coming here and give somebody else a chance."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Man's Superiority.

"Woman," exclaimed the suffragette "is the equal of man in every respect."

"Oh, I don't know," replied a man in the audience. "It takes a man to put an anglewurm on a fishhook."—Detroit Free Press.

Wasted All Three Wishes.

An Irish legend has it that a good fairy once visited an old couple and promised them that any three wishes they would make would be granted. After racking their brains for some time in an endeavor to discover what they desired most, the couple decided to visit the county fair to see if something there would suggest what they wanted. They did so, and, after rambling around all day and not seeing anything that exactly suited them, toward evening they found themselves before a display of kitchen utensils. Among them was a soup ladle, cheap, but likely to appeal to a woman, so the old woman in an absent moment said, "Oh, I wish I had one of those," and immediately she had it. The old man was so enraged because his wife had thoughtlessly thrown away one valuable wish that he retorted, "I wish that was stuck down your throat," and immediately this was done. Thereupon he was at once sorry at what he wished, and the only thing left to do was to wish the ladle out again. So all three wishes went for naught.

How Snakes Get Over Ground.

Although the snake appears to have no legs or feet, it may be said to be practically supplied with upward of a hundred pairs of them. In fact, each joint of the backbone bears a pair of ribs, which are mobile and have their points attached to the inner surface of one of the large transverse, platelike scales which clothe the undersurface of the body. Thus by the movements of the ribs attached to it each plate can be drawn forward and its margin applied to the ground. By the successive application of these multitudinous plates the body can be drawn forward in a straight line without its being thrown into undulations from side to side. But rapid movements are also effected by such undulations, and serpents can by pressure and appropriate muscular action climb trees and sometimes spring forward. They also swim easily by lateral flexures, but no serpents advance by vertical bendings of the body, though they are so often drawn in such an attitude.

Bolivia's Electrical Storms.

Owing to the peculiar topographical formation of Bolivia, electric and other phenomena are of constant occurrence, the principal zone where such disturbances take place being the Altiplanicie, or grand plateau. As the atmosphere is heavily charged with electricity both in summer and winter, dry or electric storms are of frequent occurrence both on the plateau and in the valleys. Before the rainy season sets in electrical accumulation becomes considerable on the plateau region, its most violent manifestations taking place toward the eastern section of the tablelands. An electrical storm in these regions is always a most imposing spectacle, as the tremendous force of the wind, almost equal to a hurricane, and the heavy electrical accumulation in the clouds produce terrible atmospheric explosions and violent detonations, while the surface of the ground sparkles and crackles.

Vacation by Think.

Make a compact with your soul to take a vacation and the way is simple. There are portions of your time over which you have control.—Probably your evenings and your Sundays are your own. Set apart a month or so. Eliminate the self assigned tasks for those hours out of business and give yourself up to the pursuit of pleasure. Get others to join you. Call a vacation club. Adopt a real vacation spirit and go in for a good time. Resolve never to speak of work out of business hours, but to fill to the full that time which is your own with recreations which most appeal to you. Did you ever sing? Sing now. Did you ever paint? Paint now. Remember nature's gifts to you and find occasion to praise nature within as well as without.—Exchange.

He Got It Wrong.

A lady while going downstairs to dinner had the misfortune to step slightly on the dress of a lady in front of her. The man on whose arm the former was leaning said aloud, rudely, so that the couple in front might hear:

"Always getting in the way, like Balaam's ass."

Upon which the lady whose gown had been trodden on, turning round, replied with a sweet smile:

"Pardon me! It was the angel who stood in the way and the ass which spoke."—Tit-Bits.

W. G. Schilling, the Northfield Dairy Expert, Gives Valuable Pointers.

Tells How the Dairy Farmer Should Keep an Account With His Cows.

Alexandria Post News: "W. F. Schilling, of Northfield, the breeder of pure Holstein cattle, was in Alexandria Friday afternoon of last week and made this office a pleasant call. Mr. Schilling was on his way to Glenwood from Fergus Falls, where he spoke at the dairymen's meeting in that city on Thursday. He is president of the state dairyman's association and an enthusiastic dairyman. He breeds nothing but Holsteins and the very best to be had. He farms scientifically, making no guesses. The milk from every cow is tested and weighed regularly. Where a cow does not come up to the required standard she is weeded out from the herd. In this way, and by keeping sires which have made a record for producing performers in the dairy, Mr. Schilling has secured a herd of thirty or forty prize winning cows. In the herd are seven cows that have an average official test of over twenty-one pounds of butter in seven days—three pounds per day each.

Mr. Schilling said that he was the first man in his section of the state to build a silo. Now he does not worry whether his corn gets ripe or not. He has a large quantity of silage and clover hay on hand now and his new crop of clover is ready to cut. He has fifty-two acres of corn and about the same number of acres of timothy and clover, thirty acres of the latter being clear clover. This he cut, run through his ensilage cutter at once, blow into the mow, back away closely and close the mow. "The reason clover burns in a mow," said Mr. Schilling, "is that it is not packed closely. The doors are left open so that air can pass through. If packed away closely and closed up tight it will keep." Mr. Schilling belives in keeping his cows in a warm barn, and feeding and milking regularly.

"He ships all his milk to St. Paul when it is used in the hospitals, his barn and system of caring for his cows having been inspected with that object in veiw."

A Sad Accident.

Last Friday afternoon there was a frightful accident near Gary, when Myrtle Gunderson, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Gunderson, had both of her legs cut off just above the shoe tops by a mower, which was being driven by her brother.

The little girl, 9 years of age, was picking strawberries at the time and did not think she was so close to the mower. Her brother did not see her till too late and both of her legs were cut off before he could stop the team.

He leaped from the mower and hurried the girl home. Dr. Peterson, of Twin Valley, was at once summoned and he accompanied the little girl to Crookston, were she was taken to the Bethesda hospital, where she is now being treated with good chances of recovery, though she is very weak from the loss of blood.

Her brother is frantic with grief, though no blame is attached to him, as the said affair was accidental purely.

Goes to Halstad.

Dr. P. S. Vistaunet was at Halstad over Sunday, where he had called to look over the town for the purpose of locating there. Halstad has been without a doctor for some time and as the opening there for the practice of medicine appeared especially inviting, Dr. Vistaunet decided to remove to that place and left on Thursday for his new location. During his short stay in our little city Dr. Vistaunet made many friends who were vary sorry to see him leave, but wish him success in his new field of labor.—Badger Herald-Rustler.

A Peculiar Mother.

Bemidji reports a peculiar case of transfer motherly affection among animals. A female dog owned by a gentleman of Blackduck, has adopted as its off blooded woodchuck. The dog gave birth to a litter of puppies which she cared for in true motherly fashion until a young woodchuck appeared on the scene. The mother dog at once took unusual interest in the young woodchuck and soon she cared nothing for her puppies and finally killed them all and devoted her entire time to the young woodchuck.

EXPERT WITH THE GUN

George E. Trent, an Expert Shot, Gave an Exhibition in Thief River Falls.

Broke 100 Clay Pigeons Straight and Did Not Dust a One of Them.

The members of the local gun club enjoyed a rich treat last Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning. George E. Trent, of Brainerd, an expert marksman who is sent out by the Union Metallic Cartridge Co. and the Remington Arms Co. was here and gave an exhibition of shooting. Out of 100 clay pigeons, Mr. Trent succeeded in breaking every one and what is the most remarkable part of the feat is the fact that every pigeon was hit squarely, and broken into thousands of pieces. Mr. Trent has been an expert shot for a number of years, but until recently he has never been in the employ of any cartridge or powder company. He states that he is improving in his shooting every day, and if that is the case he will make an excellent record before fall.

Ed Ashley made the second highest score, breaking 62 out of 75.

Goes to Find Brother.

Chas. Sall, of Equality, was in town Thursday on his way to Crookston to consult Atty. Loring on matters connected with the disappearance of his brother, Oscar. Some time ago, Oscar Sall left for Valdas, Alaska, where he had extensive mining operations that demanded his attention. After some time letters failed to arrive at home and the relatives began to worry about the strange silence.

Mr. Sall has finally decided to make a personal investigation and left on Thursday with that end in view. He goes from Crookston to Spokane and will be met there in a few days by Mr. Loring and the two will proceed from there to Alaska in search of the missing brother. —Plummer Pioneer.

When you spend money why not buy money. We sell it, and good old U. S. A. at that. If you admire U. S. A. and a handsome ornament, get a piece of it. Ask to see it, we enjoy showing it. The only place you will find it is at the City Drug & Jewelry Store.

Suffered Bad Accident.

Miss Sophia Steen, daughter of Knute Steen, residing north of Plummer, suffered a very painful accident Monday evening while returning to her home from the celebration. In company with several friends, she was walking up the track, a short distance from town. In attempting to pass the other members of the party, her foot became wedged between the rail and the ties, and she lost her balance. The result was a bad fall in which the foot was badly bruised and twisted. The accident will confine Miss Steen to her home for several weeks.—Plummer Pioneer.

Roseau Defeated.

Thief River Falls defeated Roseau Sunday by a score of 11 to 6, although it looked at the start of the game as if the Roseau boys would be victorious. The game was interrupted by a rain storm and conditions were not the best for good ball playing.

A special train brought a large number of visitors to the city from Roseau, Warroad, Badger, Greenbush, Middle River and other points on the north line.

Ole Geving was in town from Brunkeberg last week.

F. F. Satre was up to Roseau the first of the week attending to business matters.

KING AND EMPEROR MEET

Rulers of Sweden and Germany Inaugurate the Ferry for Passenger Trains Between Sasnitz, Isle of Ruegen, and Trelleborg—King Gustav Entertained on Board the Hohenzollern by the Kaiser at Breakfast.

SWEDEN.

A recent dispatch from Berlin says: "Emperor William, on board the imperial yacht "Hohenzollern," met Gustaf, king of Sweden, at Sasnitz, Isle of Ruegen, on Tuesday, July 6, to inaugurate the ferry for passenger trains between Sasnitz and Trelleborg, Sweden. The German emperor was accompanied by Ministers von Schoen, Von Brietenbach and Von Brietenbach and Von Moltke. A number of Swedish ministers were also present. The two rulers, accompanied by their suites, inspected one of the ferry boats, after which Emperor William entertained King Gustaf on board the "Hohenzollern" at breakfast.

Says an exchange: "Now that the Social Democratic labor unions are losing ground in some of their strongholds the employers who have been dealing with them are encouraged to speak more freely. In many cases employers who got into trouble with the labor unions prevented their men from striking by paying certain sums of money to the leading officers of the labor unions. An employer in Malmo has published receipts, showing that he has paid $135 to avert a boycott against him, and the files of the organ of the labor organization show, too, that at the same time it was officially announced that the man who paid the money was "in good standing."

The Grand Duke of Baden will in the near future pay a visit to Sweden and will during his visit to Stockholm be a guest of King Gustaf at the Royal Palace. It is also rumored that Archduke Frans Ferdinand will return King Gustaf's recent visit to Vienna on behalf of Emperor Franz Josef. In September the Archduchess Elizabeth Feodorovna of St. Petersburg, will be the guest at the Royal Palace in Stockholm.

There are about 1,017 registered automobiles in Stockholm. Their number is increasing every day. The automobiles in the Swedish capital are nearly all imported from France and chauffeurs are closely guarded and are arrested at once if found practicing reckless driving. There have been comparatively few accidents all on account of the stringent automobile laws.

The sanatorium for consumptives at Soderby, which is maintained by the city of Stockholm, was totally destroyed by fire the other evening, entailing a loss of 100,000 crowns. The senatorium had only been erected some six years ago and was regarded as one of the best in the country. Since its completion hundreds of consumptive patients have been treated there.

The exposition in Stockholm this year is drawing large crowds from all parts of the country as well as from foreign countries. It is a very expansive exhibit and as an industrial exhibition it is the best that has ever been held in Sweden. The value of the different exhibits is estimated at not less than 3,000,000 crowns.

Two hundred emigrants departed on the steamer "Rollo" for America June 16. Still the Anti-Emigration society represents that Swedish emigration to America is abating. These emigrants started from Gothenburg. From Malmo there were not less than 554 persons who left for foreign ports during the month of May.

Madame Anna Lundberg, prior to her departure for America for an extended concert tour, has completed a series of successful concerts in southern Sweden. She will arrive in New York during the early part of next month, where she will give her first concert prior to continuing her tour through the western states.

Charitable societies have sent out about 1,700 poor children to the country districts for the summer. A number of them have been housed in summer cottages along Lake Malaren, while many children have been sent up to picturesque old Jemtland.

Much to the joy of the poor people there will be lots of wild berries this year. This has in other years proved a great help for the poor people, who can thus have an opportunity to earn a little extra money besides securing some berries for themselves.

The Queen of Sweden will during the month of August pay a visit to some of the coast cities in Sweden. She will travel on board the "Drott" and will visit a number of cities in which she has hitherto not been.

Both Zorn and Larsson, the leading Swedish portrait painters, have been awarded gold medals at the international art exhibition in Munchen. Emerik Sternberg has been awarded the second class medal.

The net income of the state railways for the month of April show an earning of 5,684,038 crowns. This is a fine showing and is a great increase over the same period last year.

Dowager Queen Sofia departed from Sweden the other day from Castle Segenhaus, in Neuvid, Germany, where she has spent the last month.

NORWAY.

Norway has explained her position in full on the question of jurisdiction of Spitzbergen and Bear Island in a note to Belgium, Denmark, the United States, France, Holland, Russia, England, Sweden and Russia. The note is intended as a program for the diplomatic negotiations, which are said will take place in Christiania in the near future. The Norwegian government adheres to the principle that the present political status of the islands ought to be maintained, that is, the islands sholl not be looked upon as the property of any particular country, but shall be open to citizens of all countries. The time for the conference cannot, however, be fixed until the foreign governments have had time to become acquainted with the Norwegian vote. The governments of all the countries mentioned have consented to take part in the conference.

The announcement has now been made by Consul General Ravn, of New York, that the proposed line of mail steamers between New York and Bergen, Norway, has been arranged for. Only Norwegian and Norwegian-American capital will be used. The sum to be raised is $2,700,000, of which half has already been raised in Norway. The Norwegian government has also pledged an appropriation of $135,000 and the prospects for a profitable operation of the line are said to be excellent. Consul E. H. Hobe, of St. Paul, Minn., and R. With, of Christiania, are at present in New York to complete arrangements. The proposed line will make travel possible between New York and Norway in less than nine days instead of eleven as at present.

Now is the time when every hotel and inkeeper in Norway is busy. The country is full of tourists, especially from America, England and Germany. There are also a large number of French tourists in the country this year. The tourist steamers are crowded and everywhere in the northern section of the country you are sure to encounter a foreigner. The fiords and fjells continue to be a great attraction from year to year and Norway's tourist traffic is increasing to immense proportions.

Much to the surprise of thousands of Christianians, the Verdens Gang, which for the last thirty years has been the most popular paper in the Norwegian capital, dropped the old Gothic style type the other day and turned out a paper in Latin type. The improvement proved electrical and the paper almost immediately secured several hundred new subscribers.

Marit Swensen, a well known old Christiania lady, celebrated her one hundredth birthday the other day. She is still enjoying excellent health and can see to read and even write and enjoys her constitutional every day. She is a great believer in the fresh open air and can often be seen on the thoroughfares in the down town districts.

The Swedes of Christiania have organized a reading club. There are at present in the city about 300 Swedes. Prior to the dissolution of the union the Swedish population in the Norwegian capital was about 2,000.

DENMARK.

A special dispatch from Copenhagen dated July 5 says: Aarhus was a mass of Danish and American colors in honor of the celebration of Independence Day under the auspices of the Danish-Americans. Even the poorest buildings were covered with bunting. The Danish-American headquarters, which were elaborately decorated with American flags, were opened and thronged with visitors. Over 3,000 persons were registered from all parts of the United States. The leading Danish weeklies issued special American editions July 4 and the daily newspapers printed American extras the day following. By special permission a thirty-foot American flag floated from the exposition building flagstaff, there being only one Danish flag on the grounds. Fire crackers were sporadically discharged in the streets and there was an extensive pyrotechnic display in Aarhus bay in the evening. A resolution signed by 10,000 Americans of Danish descent, expressing their love for the mother country and their pride in American citizenship, which was read at the official ceremony, was considered next in importance to President Taft's message, which was also read.

Recent reports state that the cold weather did not hurt the grain nearly as much as was reported during the past month. The winter grain all over Denmark stood the strain well. Wheat suffered worst, but even that is now fast recovering. The oat and potato crop is looking very fine indeed and farmers are well pleased with the present outlook.

A Danish correspondent from Iceland states that there was much warmer weather on the island a few days ago than in Paris or London. Not for many years have they experienced such heat in Iceland and it will soon earn the reputation of being both the coldest and the hottest spot on earth.

Danish sugar factories had last year a surplus of 5,023,000 crowns and the various stockholders received a dividend of 25 per cent. This shows that the sugar beet industry is in a very healthy condition in Denmark at present and that it is one of the most important industries of the country.

ALL NIGHT BAKERIES.

Where New Yorkers Can Have Wants Supplied at Any Hour.

Among the many places of business of one and another sort that in a great city are kept open all night are bakeries.

The bakery is a peculiarly domestic business establishment, supplying mostly home wants, and as most people work days and sleep nights it might be supposed that there would be no occasion to keep bakeries open nights, but here, where with the city's manifold industries there must be a large number of people working at all times to keep things going, there are bakeries that do keep open and find trade at all hours.

Some of these all night bakeries have lunch room attachments, where people stop in to eat going to or from work, while others do a bakery business only. At either customers come in at all hours of the night to buy things to carry away, just as people do at any hour of the day, for the people who go to work at midnight or at 1, 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning want bread and bakery stuff before they go, just the same as do those who begin their labors at 7, 8 or 9, and there is likely to be in their neighborhood an all night open bakery where they can regularly supply their wants.

From 2 to 5 a. m. are the hours that mark low ebb in the all night bakery trade, but customers are dropping in all night long.—New York Sun.

ANCIENT GUNS.

Remarkable Weapons That Were Used by the Turks and Chinese.

At the siege of Rhodes the Turks constructed mortars by hollowing out cavities in the solid rock at the proper angle, and in the arsenal at Malta is a trophy of the long and glorious defense of Valetta in a Turkish gun, about a six pounder, composed of a copper tube coiled over with strong rope and "jacketed" with rawhide. In the same collection are some antique "quick firers," breechloaders, with small bores and immensely long barrels, like punt guns. The Malay pirates put great trust in the long brass swivel guns called "lela," and in Borneo these lelas were used as a kind of currency, large sums being estimated in guns.

The Chinese cast excellent bronze guns (there is a fine specimen of them in Devonport dockyard), but so little did they understand gunnery that in the so called "opium war" the forts of the Bocca Tigris, defending the Canton river, had the guns built immovably into the walls. The Sikh gunners opposed to England in the two Punjab wars, though they loaded with amazing recklessness, shoveling in the powder from open boxes, stuck to their guns to the last. The blood of the first man killed was smeared on the gun, and the whole detachment died beside it sooner than retreat.—Chambers' Journal.

Too Much of a Tonic.

When Mr. Chinchin returned home from Chinchin & Chinchin's the other day he found his wife lying worn out upon the sofa.

"Nothing wrong, I hope!" he exclaimed.

"I'm afraid I shall have to stop that tonic the doctor prescribed for Tommy," Mrs. Chinchin faintly murmured.

"Why? Isn't he any better?" asked Chinchin.

"Oh, yes, but I think the tonic must be too invigorating. Why, he has slid down the banisters six times this morning, broken the hall lamp, two vases, a water jug and a looking glass, tied a tin can to the cat's tail and scribbled his name on the drawing room paper. Of course it's very gratifying, but I don't feel I could stand much more, so I think I—I'll stop the tonic."

"Something Good to Drink" and something good to eat, and some good friends around the table add immensely to the pleasures of being alive, in this most beautiful of worlds. Hence it is not unusual to find in best American homes a few dozen bottles of some fine mellow malt and hop brew like safely stored away in the ice box for daily use, and the entertainment of visitors. In the brewing of "Peerless," the finest and most costly bearded barley is used that can be grown in the rich, fertile plains of the Northwest.

Gund's Peerless Beer

"The Beer that makes the world smile with you"

Peerless is brewed by the Gund Natural Process—"The Old German Method." The result is a beer of unsurpassed excellence. A splendid beer for the home and family circle. It aids digestion of solids, thus promoting health. Let us send you a case.

HOWELL PLANER AND MATCHER

We Also Have Second-Hand Machinery

Established 1879

You no doubt find it a hard matter to sell your rough lumber to advantage because most of your customers want it finished. Furthermore you can get twice as much for your lumber by planing it, making it up into flooring, drop siding, window casing and mouldings, for which there is an unlimited demand at big prices. The Howell Planer and Matcher does all this work to perfection.

You can also make big money by working up all your slabs and waste material into Lath and Shingles. All you need for this purpose is our Lath Mill and Shingle Machine. We build the best and most up-to-date machines of this kind on the market which we can furnish you at manufacturers prices. Keep your plant running all the time. Remember we build complete Saw Mill Plants from top to bottom, all of our own manufacture. Our new Catalog B is just now out. If you have not received it, write to-day. Manufactured by

R. R. HOWELL & CO., MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

IN order to close out our line of gang plows, breaking plows, sulkey plows, disc harrows and road scrapers we will sell the same at greatly reduced prices. Now is the time to buy if you are in need of anything in this line.

POTASH.

Potash or potassium is one of the three indispensable elements in the soil required in the growth of plant life, the other two being nitrogen and phosphoric acid. Scientists have estimated that fertile soil contains 2 per cent of potassium, and in an acre of arable soil one foot deep and weighing 3,500,000 pounds this would amount to 70,000 pounds. Therefore, theoretically, a crop which would remove fifty pounds of potash yearly could be grown on the same land 1,400 years before the potash would be completely exhausted. In spite of this showing, however, this element is coming into quite general use as a commercial fertilizer for soils which have been heavily and continuously cropped. By far the largest known deposits of potassium are near Strassfurt, in Germany, where there is a bed varying in depth from 50 to 130 feet and extending over a large area. The bed was found in an effort to learn the source of mineral springs in the locality and has been worked on a commercial scale since 1851. The company which owns and works it at the present time is the Kali syndicate, which is capitalized at $200,000,000, has 28,000 miners on its payrolls and sells $25,000,000 of its product annually. This famous potash deposit seems traceable geologically to a prehistoric age when the region about Strassfurt was covered by the seas. It is supposed that later volcanic action heaved up the mountains on either side, inclosing a large inland sea. High temperatures resulted in the rapid evaporation of the water which was replaced by water from the sea. Later the sea receded and the inland sea dried up, leaving the deposit of salt potassium, gypsum and salt, which were gradually covered with vegetation and soil.

SOME CEMENT MISTAKES.

A well known authority on the manufacture and use of cement in commenting on the causes of so many failures in the use of cement attributes them largely to two things—the use of weak or poor cement and improper sand. The correction of the first trouble is relatively simple if only that cement is bought which is guaranteed fresh and good by a reliable dealer. In the matter of the sand used, it should always be sharp and rather coarse and as free as possible from soil of any kind, whether clay or loam. Sand of the right kind when rubbed between the fingers should leave little or no discoloration on them, while a handful of it run through the fingers into a pail of clear water should not discolor it enough so that the sand may not be seen at the bottom. If the water is muddied so the sand cannot be seen it is unfit for use. Another cause of poor cement work comes from a shortsighted economy in not using enough cement to give a strong and permanent mixture. Different proportions of cement to sand are used for different purposes, but the amount of cement prescribed in each instance should be used.

TWO KITCHEN IMPROVEMENTS.

The kitchen in every home which pretends to be civilized should be equipped with a drainage system which will carry off all of the waste water, while one good sized pail will accommodate all the solids which will accumulate in the course of a day. A just moderately industrious housewife has enough steps to take in the course of her work without being compelled to empty every little dab of slops that accumulates a dozen times a day in any kitchen. A drainage system of the kind mentioned is a simple and relatively inexpensive matter and should be installed as a necessary labor saving device. Another household convenience that is possible where there are a power pump and an elevated water tank on the place is a water system with pipes leading to the house and coupled on to the tank beside the kitchen range. This does away with the reservoir and pumping nuisance, insures a convenient supply of water day and night and lightens the kitchen work immensely.

BLESSINGS IN DISGUISE.

Things that at the time seem curses are often blessings in disguise. This appears to be proving true of the green bug and Hessian fly pests, which have attacked the winter wheat fields in south central Kansas and some other sections. Owing to the risk thus attached to the growing of wheat many farmers are going extensively into the raising of corn and alfalfa, which are safer crops, give better returns and leave the land in better shape from the standpoint of fertility. And with these two winning crops more live stock is being fed, which serves to still further help the good work along. In future years the Hessian fly and green bug may be considered among man's benefactors.

Mildew on the gooseberry and currant bushes may be remedied by sprinkling flower of sulphur on the leaves when the dew is on in the evening or early morning.

One of the attractions that are listed for a Pennsylvania fair circuit this season is a trotting race between horses and a four-year-old Durham bull which is broken to sulky and is expected to make a mile in about 2:30. This should be a winning card.

Even in the bovine world it pays to amount to something. At the Missouri Agricultural college a few weeks ago a Jersey cow fell into a ditch and was so injured that she had to be killed. The fact was heralded all over the country. Her name was Pedro's Estella, and her butter record was 725 pounds per year.

A curious thing noted in connection with the black walnut tree is that when near apple trees it seems to be, in effect, a poison to them—at least they usually die out—where if it is some other kind of forest tree the only effect seems to be a stunting of growth due to lack of sunshine, air, moisture and plant food. Just what the cause of the noxiousness of the walnut tree is due to we have never seen stated.

The value of many pure blooded chickens is often greatly lessened as a result of the trip they make from raiser to buyer and especially of the care given in the week or two after arrival. Much could be done to prevent this slump in condition if the purchaser would ascertain from the shipper just what ration had been fed prior to shipment, with a suggestion or two as to the care of the birds until adjusted to their new environment.

Poultry raisers, whether in town or on the farm, might often save themselves heavy losses through disease if they would establish a sort of quarantine quarters where individuals that begin to look dumpy for one cause or another could be isolated and given special care and treatment. Not only would this be better for the sick fowls, but it would prevent their befouling the feeding places, drinking fountains and sleeping quarters. Many diseases of poultry as of other animals are highly contagious, and handling sick fowls in the above manner would be a simple yet valuable preventive.

At North Yakima, Wash., where the business of growing and packing apples is done as scientifically as anywhere else in the world, the plan has recently been adopted of having a school of instruction for apple packers. The school is held for six weeks, there being two sessions each week. At the end of the course of instruction examinations are held, covering both the theory and practice of apple packing, and those making a satisfactory showing are given certificates of proficiency. The move would seem to be a very commendable one, that will greatly facilitate the work of packing when the rush is on.

In sections where the winters are such that a cover crop should be grown in the orchard during the latter part of the summer to catch the snow and give protection during the winter months cultivation should cease about the middle of July and a cover crop grown, which will do best in one's locality. Buckwheat and oats will answer the purpose nicely if conditions are not right for cowpeas or soy beans. In all these cases the growth of the cover crop tends to check late growth in the orchard trees by absorbing surplus moisture, keeps the soil from baking in the August sun and smothers a host of weeds, while the soil is left in a fine, mellow condition for putting in clover or other crop the following spring.

Landowners in several sections having thin and washed patches of land are wondering if the common wild sweet clover does not offer something which may be grown advantageously on such land. The ability of this legume to shift for itself, as seen in its occupation of unpromising spots along railroad rights of way and other inhospitable places, coupled with the fact that it is entirely hardy and a soil enricher, like other clovers, seems a strong point in its favor. It is true that as a pasture stock have to "learn" to eat it, when they seem to do well on it. The hay it makes is not of high grade—somewhat woody—yet is nutritious. It is at least worth a trial on soils which will grow little or nothing.

At the bottom of this question of the importance of the policy of forest preservation is involved the problem of whether the lumber business of itself and mining, which has little concern for that doing on top of the ground, are really more important sources of national wealth than agriculture. Especially does this point arise in arid or semiarid sections, where the flow of water in irrigating canals depends very largely upon the preservation of the forests upon hill slopes and mountains in the same drainage areas. An impartial view of the matter would seem to suggest to the people of any such section the folly of a policy which will slight or overlook the enormous economic importance of the agricultural interests involved. In central and eastern states, where rainfall is abundant for crop needs, the same question arises in a slightly different form—the preservation of forests as moisture reservoirs, which will regulate stream flow and in this way prevent the recurrence of wasteful and destructive floods, which through excess rather than shortage of water work havoc to agriculture.

A peculiarity of the Ben Davis as grown in the mountain states of the west seems to be a susceptibility to collar rot, a fungous disease which is killing out a great majority of the trees in many orchards.

A shallow cultivation of the field of corn during a dry spell with single horse and five shovel plow after it is head high has often resulted in an increased yield of from six to ten bushels per acre. With corn at from 60 to 70 cents per bushel it is an easy matter to figure out whether this extra tilling pays.

An instance has lately been cited in which an insane patient in a western hospital was cured by caring for the hospital poultry flock. He was not so deranged but that he was able to look after them, and in some way the interest he took in his charges and the diverting of his attention from his own condition had the desired curative effect.

In fighting pocket gophers, as in coping with many another rodent, insect or weed pest, the best results can only be obtained when there is co-operative effort among the neighbors of the infested locality. It is a discouraging proposition, this trying to clean up a fellow's place of gophers or other noxious things, when the man across the fence doesn't manifest a like interest in doing the same good work on his own place.

Along with the preaching of a gospel for better seed should go an even more emphatic teaching of the necessity of so rotating crops and handling the land that the use of better seed will not ultimately mean a more complete exhaustion of the soil, as a bumper crop takes just so much more fertility from the soil than a poor one. Scrub seed is plenty good enough for the chap who would only provide scrub soil conditions for that which was thoroughbred.

It is during the dry spell of the latter part of the summer, when the blue or lawn grass is at low ebb, that other grasses, chiefly crab grass, are likely to come in. The matter of eradicating this pest is not simple, but much can be done by adopting a course with the lawn which will keep the blue grass growing at full vigor. This will include frequent waterings and, if the soil is poor, the scattering of a light top dressing of fertilizer. This, together with frequent clipping, will keep the lawn thrifty and will do much toward smothering the crab grass out.

The Kansas City Stockyards company has inaugurated a plan of giving public demonstration of the use of antitoxin as a cure for hog cholera. The work is to be under the supervision of the city veterinarian in co-operation with an animal husbandry expert from the Missouri State Agricultural college. Since about 4,000,000 hogs pass through the stockyards at Kansas City annually and a good many of these are infected with cholera a fine chance will be afforded to test the efficacy of the new remedy, the work done being informational and helpful to hog raisers everywhere.

One method of disseminating information and instruction among the farmers of the country that might be extended with material advantage is that of correspondence courses conducted by the agricultural colleges of the several states. Good work is being done by the demonstration trains, the traveling short course schools and the publication of bulletins, but under most favorable conditions but a relatively small per cent of the tillers of the soil are reached by these means. Very practical work is done in correspondence courses in fitting young men for mercantile pursuits, and there would seem to be an exceptionally good place for it in the field suggested.

Profit in fruit growing depends upon two things chiefly—the raising of fruit of a quality to meet the trade requirements and the picking, packing and marketing of such fruit in a proper and satisfactory way. The grower often meets this first requirement of success as he should and when it comes to the second falls down through not knowing how to pack or not being alive to the demands of the particular market to which he ships. Packing and marketing of fruit are coming to be a business by themselves which is not as simple as one would suppose. On this account careful attention should be given to it and a definite effort made to understand it as fully as possible.

Nature has a very definite and emphatic way of protesting against the abuses which are practiced in following crop systems which rob the soil of its fertility. One of these is noticeable in the tendency of noxious weeds to get a foothold on poorly cultivated or depleted lands. The working of this law is noticed again in the pests which attack corn, wheat, potatoes and other grains and vegetables grown on the same land without cultivation, but no attempt made to restore to the soil in fertilizers what is taken from it in the shape of crops. It seems clear from the above that crop rotation is a mandate which must be heeded by the tiller of the soil if he is to realize a satisfactory and generous return from his efforts. Any other way he is virtually butting his head against a pretty solid stone wall.

Bats Inside Bamboo.

The cutting down of a clump of bamboos in the royal botanical gardens, Singapore, shows that the hollows in the stems of these plants may afford a dwelling place for bats. On the splitting of a joint three bats flew out, and it was perceived that others were within. Care was taken to prevent further escape, and later examination of the joint revealed the presence of twenty-three bats in the hollow. Four of these were adult females and nineteen young ones. Other bamboo joints were also found to contain a number of bats. The species is known as Vesperugo pachypus.—London Scraps.

The Proper Question.

The man with the glassy eye and preternaturally solemn demeanor put down a sovereign at the booking office at Charing Cross and demanded a ticket. "What station?" snapped the booking clerk. The would be traveler steadied himself. "What stations have you?" he asked, with quiet dignity.—London Globe.

A Criticism.

"He said this skirt of mine was a perfect symphony."

"Maybe, but it's not well conducted."

"What do you mean?"

"It drags."—Cleveland Leader.

The Real Want.

"What we want is a square deal."

"Oh, we'll compromise on that in a pinch. What we really want is a shade the best of it."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Insincere.

RACE WAGERS IN INDIA.

Native's Method of Choosing a Winner and Making Bets.

The native of India wagers his money according to the colors worn by the jockeys and takes no heed of the merits of the horses, or he will back a horse ridden by his favorite jockey, no matter whether the animal is a rank outsider or not.

His ideas of gambling, in fact, are distinctly novel. Some of the more wealthy Indians form rings and back every horse in the race, thus gaining the satisfaction of getting a winner every time. It is really only of late years that the native of India has become a habitual gambler on the turf, and nowadays the bulk of the betting of the various racing centers in India is done by natives. Indeed, the authorities are somewhat concerned about the growth of the betting which takes place among Indian natives, it being asserted that as many as thirty lacs of rupees (about £300,000) is lost and won in the course of a season.

The ignorant masses have not a great deal of actual money to wager, but so badly bitten are many of them with the craze for betting at race meetings that they frequently wager what little property they possess on a horse, and if they lose they simply replace their loss by stealing a neighbor's goods. The consequence is that when the racing season comes around the police are kept very busy dealing with cases of petty larceny and other crimes involving loss of property.—London Tit-Bits.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the terms and conditions of that certain mortgage made, executed and delivered by George W. Harris and Clara A. Harris his wife to James Meehan Jr. as mortgagee covering the following described premises, to wit, lot seventeen and a strip of land six inches wide on the south side of lot sixteen extending east from the west line of said lot sixteen a distance of sixty feet, all in block fifty eight of the original townsite of Thief River Falls, County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, according to the map or plat thereof on file and of record in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County, and which said mortgage bears date the [illegible] day of February A. D. 190[illegible] and was on the 18th day of March A. D. 190[illegible] duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said Red Lake County, in book 10 of mortgages on page 67, and which said mortgage together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by the said mortgagee James Meehan Jr. to James Meehan by an instrument in writing bearing date March 25th 190[illegible] and which was on the 15th day of June A. D. 190[illegible] duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said Red Lake county in book 2 of Mortgages, on page 53.

That said default consists in the failure of said mortgagors to pay the sum of one thousand dollars due March 1st 190[illegible] and interest thereon at the rate of six per cent per annum from March 1st, 190[illegible], and the interest at the rate of six per cent per annum from March 1st, 190[illegible] upon the sum of four thousand dollars and in the failure of said mortgagors to keep the building situate upon the above described premises insured for at least the sum of five thousand dollars, as provided in said mortgage, and whereas it is stipulated in said mortgage that should default be made in the payment of the principal or any part thereof, or the interest or any part thereof when due, or to keep the building situate on said premises insured for at least the sum of five thousand dollars, the said mortgagee or his assigns might elect to declare the whole sum secured by said mortgage immediately due and payable, and whereas the said James Meehan assignee of said mortgagee has elected and does hereby elect to declare the whole sum secured by said mortgage now due and payable, and whereas there is due and owing upon said mortgage as principal and interest at the date of this notice the sum of five thousand three hundred and eighty seven and fifty one hundredths dollars to which should be added the sum of one hundred and fourteen and fifty one hundredths dollars paid by said assignee to secure the buildings situate upon said mortgaged premises to be insured making in all the sum of five thousand five hundred and two dollars due at the date of this notice upon said mortgage, and no action at law or in equity having been instituted or commenced to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given, that under and pursuant to the power of sale contained in said mortgage and the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the real property therein described will be sold at public auction by the sheriff of the County of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on Friday, the [illegible] day of July, A. D. 1909, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of said day, at the front door of the U. S. Post office, in the City of Red Lake Falls, County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, to the highest bidder for cash to pay the amount that shall then be due upon said mortgage, including the sum of one hundred dollars attorney's fees as stipulated in said mortgage and the costs and disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the date of said sale as provided by law.

Dated June [illegible], 1909.

A breeder of blooded cattle whom we came across the other day in giving a description of a bunch of young bulls which he had for sale said that with the pedigree of each animal will be given a certificate of health, signed by a veterinarian, stating that the animal is free from tuberculosis infection. This is a sensible plan and one that should be universally adopted by breeders of full blooded stock, as they more than the scrubs seem to be subject to the disease.

The most effective blow can be dealt Canada thistles that may be on the place if they are allowed to grow and get well into blossom, but mowed down before any seeds develop. This takes them off guard, as it were, the plant being engaged in a supreme effort to reproduce itself and the root systems being taxed to furnish the necessary plant food for the process. Any shoots appearing after the patch is mowed should be dug out root and branch and burned.

Kansas has recently organized a state Audubon society, her residents, farmers and others having come to a realization of the value in dollars and cents of bird life to horticulture and agriculture and an appreciation of the need of protecting them from destruction in every way possible. Kansas is the thirty-seventh state to organize Audubon societies, while there are thirty-five which have adopted the model bird law recommended by the federal department of agriculture.

ENFORCING FIRE LAWS

State Had the Great Northern Railway Company Arrested and Convicted.

Charged With Not Having Proper Spark Arrester on Engine.

According to a news dispatch from Bemidji the state intends to vigorously enforce the new forest fire law in Northern Minnesota as just demonstrated in Nymor, a small village near that city. The Great Northern Railway company has been convicted of a violation of the new law before Justice J. B. Hook and fined $50 and costs.

The forestry department claimed that the Great Northern Railway company failed to use an efficient spark arrester on one of its engines, June 17, thereby causing a small fire in the village of Nymore, a complaint to that effect being sworn out against the company by Mrs. Gertrude Mathers. The complaining witness had seen heavy sparks emitted from the engine and a fire start up almost immediately afterwards on the right of-way.

The prosecution on behalf of the forestry department was conducted by Attorney John P. Coleman of St. Paul, while W. L. Clift of St. Paul, assistant council for the Great Northern company, defended the corporation. It is understood that the railway company will take no appeal to the district court.

Before Justice Pendergast, of the town of Grant Valley, the same railway company was fined $75 and costs on the charge of not maintaining patrols along its right-of-way in that town, as is required by the state forestry law. The railway company thru Attorney Clift, claimed that this provision of the forestry law is class legislation, and therefore unconstitutional. Justice Pendergast held differently and found the company guilty, as charged.

Nay May Puck's "Book."

Nay May Puck is chief of the Ojibwas at Warroad, and has an allotment of 130 acres of land from Uncle Sam adjoining the townsite of Warroad. The chief cannot sell his land, but he collects ground rent from about twenty men who have erected dwellings on his land.

But what we were going to talk about is the novel system of bookkeeping the chief has. For each of his renters he has a piece of stick of a shape peculiar to that particular account. The chief puts a notch in each tenant's stick for the first month, and if the account runs into the second month, a second notch is made. The chief never gets mixed on his sticks, but always has his records straight. The other day he went into the office of a notary public in town to have some bills made out, and before attempting to give the notary the items he dumped a lot of sticks upon the table from a sack he carried, and proceeded to consult his "books." The notary made out the bills according to the stick record, and Nay May Puck went forth on his collection tour.—Warroad Commonwealth.

Rules of the Road.

"When a driver gives the road to a vehicle to pass to rear, he should turn to to the right, leaving the passing space to the left." The laws covering such cases are found in the "code" on page 200 and are as follows:

"Section 1258—Vehicles meeting turn to right—When persons meet on any road or bridge, travelling with vehicles, each shall reasonably turn to the right of the middle of the traveled part of such road or bridge, so that the vehicles may pass without interference."

"Section 1259—Passing—turn to left—The driver of any vehicle passing another vehicle traveling in the same direction shall drive to the left of the middle of the traveled part of the road, and, if such road be of sufficient width to permit such passing, the driver of the leading vehicle shall not obstruct the same.

Visiting Her Brother.

Arriving here recently was Mrs. Marshall of Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, and Mrs. C. C. Jackson, of Thief River Falls, also in Minnesota, who are at present visiting with Mrs. Marshall's brother, L. M. Klepper, the well known monument dealer of the city.

The two ladies, who are close friends, have been traveling for some time and will continue to travel extensively before returning to Minnesota.

They first visited Los Angeles after arriving on the Pacific coast, then San Francisco and Eureka. After leaving here they will proceed to Portland and the Seattle exposition, before they will return to their Eastern homes.—Eureka (Cal.) Daily Times.

FINE HERD OF CATTLE

Carlson Bros., of Erskine, to Exhibit Their Cattle at the Fair.

Have the Finest Herd of Dairy and Beef Cattle in the Northwest.

C. O. Carlson, of Carlson Bros., the well known dairymen of Erskine, was in the city last Thursday, having been in attendance at the creamery picnic held up at Holt. The Carlsons have the finest herd of dairy cattle in the Northwest, one of their cows being the champion dairy cow of the North congressional district.

Mr. Carlson was induced by Daniel Shaw, secretary of the fair association, to bring a car load of his stock here during fair week and place them upon exhibition. This should be a great treat for the farmers of this section. The Carlsons do not have any full blooded cattle in their herd, but it has been brought up to its present high state simply by selection. A record of what every cow upon the Carlson farm is doing is kept, and the poorer cattle are disposed of every year for beef. They have a number of cows that are giving over 10,000 pounds of milk each year.

Rocksbury.

That heavy rain of Sunday evening put a stop to haying for a while.

Una Miller spent Sunday with Mable Foss.

Last Sunday the Rocksbury boys played the St. Hilaire nine.

A number of people in this vicinity attended the circus Saturday

Mr. and Mrs. Meehan took the early train Tuesday morning for their trip in the west.

What Our Farmers Are Doing.

Red Lake county farmers are prospering with milch cows and the creamery industry of the county furnishes them big incomes. Farmers there are fast paying off mortgages on their farms and it is also getting to be a common occurrence for a farmer to have a fat balance in the bank. A good example that dairying is a great industry.—Ada Index.

New Proprietor of Laundry.

B. Dan Bjorkman has leased the Star Steam Laundry and from now on will conduct this business. Mr. Bjorkman is a hustler, and is well qualified to conduct a first class laundry, and that he will make a success of the business goes without saying.

Notice.

All parties indebted to me are requested to pay said amount at the People's State Bank, Thief River Falls.

(30 4t.) W. M. Lindsey.

State Auditor Iverson, who has been holding land sales all over Northern Minnesota says: "In my opinion, northern Minnesota offers greater farm land opportunites for people with moderate means than any other part of the United States."

Cole Bros. Circus.

Cole Bros. circus gave two very creditable performances just outside of the city limits of Thief River Falls last Saturday afternoon and evening. The circus proper was well worth the price of admission, but there was such a bunch of grafters with the show that it does not speak well for the management. The circus being located outside of the city limits of Thief River Falls prevented the local police from having any jurisdiction and a large number of farmers were robbed of their hard earned cash.

Local Club Wins.

By a score of 9 to 0, Thief River Falls defeated a ball team of Indians from Mahnomen and the White Earth reservation on Sunday. The Indians were not in their usual good form and it was an easy victory for the local club.

On last Friday evening a club from Bronson was here and were defeated by a score of 5 to 3.

Low Price Predicted.

Low potato prices are predicted for this fall and winter, says the Anoka Free Press, one of the papers in the Minnesota potatoe belt. Charles Larkin, a big byer of that place, has returned from a trip through Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas to get at the pulse of the Irish apple market and reports a bountiful crop in the south and unusually low prices. The market opened at $1.05 but soon took a slump to 30 cents which is the prevailing price at present. Mr. Larkin does not look for high prices when the local market opens. Fred Larkin, George Morrill and other big byers in this state hold the same view of the potato question.

Advertised Letters.

The following is a list of unclaimed letters remaining in the Post Office at Thief River Falls, Minn., for the week ending July, 17 1909, if not called for within two weeks from date will be sent to Dead Letter Office, Washington D. C.

J. Strand, owner of the farm adjoining L. G. Carr's on the south, is taking his summer vacation on his farm. He is a teacher by profession, being employed in the Grand Forks College. But with his wife and five children he is living in a tent on the farm. He says he is doing it to build up his muscle and to get his boys out of the city for the summer. Mr. Strand is enthusiastic over the climate and the prospects of the country. —Middle River Pioneer.

TWO DIRECTORS ELECTED

Annual Meeting of Independent School District No. 18 Held on Saturday.

Dr. G. A. Penney and Dr. F. H. Gambell Each Elected for a Term of Three Years.

At the annual meeting of Independent School District No. 18, held last Saturday evening in the city hall, Dr. G. A. Penney and Dr F. H. Gambell were each elected for a term of three years without opposition. There was a very small turn out due to the fact that both Messrs. Penney and Gambell have given excellent satisfaction as school officers and there was no opposition to either.

The sum of $15,000 was voted for the schools for next year, this being an increase of $500 over the amount voted last year. The following is the report of expenditures and receipts as given by Dr. G. A. Penney, secretary of the board:

With the present crop conditions and prospects and with the extraordinary number of special attractions offered this year the board of managers of the Minnesota State Fair firmly believe that the opening day's attendance will be over 100,000 and that the total for Sept. 6 to 11 will be more than half a million.

There is an unusual number of tough characters passing through the city of late, and they are causing the police department considerable trouble. Last week three suspects were arrested and weregiven a sentence of ten days in the county jail. It is thought that these men are wanted for crimes else where and their photos have been taken and mailed to police departments in various cities.

The bridge across the ditch just south of St. Hilaire went out last week. It has been decided not to put in another bridge, but instead a culvert six feet in diameter is to be placed in the bottom of the ditch and the road way will be filled in with dirt. An improvement of this kind will last for ever and is far cheaper than building a bridge.

The St. Hilaire creamery paid out $10,000 for cream during the month of June. Farmers received 29 cents for butter fat and the reason for this large price is due to the fact that a large proportion of the cream received at the St. Hilaire creamery was shipped to Fargo and manufactured into ice cream. The ice cream dealers paid a higher price than could have been secured if manufactured into butter.

Olaf Ramstad returned to this city last Friday from Montana, where he purchased three car loads of western horses. One car load was brought to this city and the other two taken to Norman and Otter Tail counties. Mr. Ramstad says that it rained nearly every day while he was out in Montana and much damage has been done to crops by too much rain.

The directors of the Farmers' Cooperative Elevator company met Wednesday and elected Hans Hanson agent for the company. Mr. Hanson has worked for a number of years for the Red Lake Falls Milling company and is a man perfectly competent to take charge of the new business institution.—St. Hilaire Spectator.

After a year's experimentation the government department of agriculture finds that the plan of manufacturing denatured alcohol from the waste products of farms for the purpose of furnishing cheap power is a failure. "So far," says Prof. Sawyer of the bureau of chemistry, "it has been found impossible to produce alcohol at as low a price as gasoline is produced. As a commercial product denatured alcohol may some day compete with gasoline, but as for each farmer having a small still and making a fuel with which he can secure power to thrash, shell corn, grind feed, churn or light his farm, the day is not in sight." The manufacture of denatured alcohol has, however, proven a success in Germany, but then the laws governing its production are different from ours.

"Leads Them All"

Giving the Bride a Tip.

"Here's a little pointer for you," said the bride of last year to the bride of this year. "I'll tell you my own experience, and you can judge for yourself what to do. When we returned from our wedding trip and I began to rummake through George's belongings I found six or seven pairs of gloves and at least nine pairs of silk hose, things that he had never had on. They had been tucked away in all sorts of places. Most of them I at once recognized as presents I had given to him from time to time. Besides them, I found a lot of handkerchiefs still unused, handkerchiefs that I had embroidered his initial on with my own hands.

"What do you suppose I did? Foolishly I gathered them all together and spread them out on the bed where he would see them when he came home and feel ashamed of himself for never using my presents. Just think what a lack of forethought I showed! Consider what a saving of pin money it would have been if I had put the things away and then doled them out to him for Christmas presents or birthday presents one by one. It would have served him exactly right too."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Are You a Beggar?

All the beggars are not holding out a hand to passersby in the street. You probably know the man who is ever whining for help. If a farmer, he thinks his neighbors should help him get in his grain or do his plowing. If in business, he is always trying to borrow or wanting some one to boost him or drum up customers. He never seems to think of relying on his own efforts. There is a well known fable about the larks in a grainfield. As long as the farmer depended on his neighbors and relations to come and cut his grain the larks felt perfectly safe. When the man determined to cut the grain himself the larks knew it was time to seek safety elsewhere.

There are times when every one needs help, but help should be asked only when one has made every possible effort for himself.

Too much help given a man weakens his character.—Milwaukee Journal.

A Quiet Rebuke.

An "object admonition" like the one described by Warren Lee Goss in his article, "Campaigning to No Purpose," published in Johnson's "Battles and Leaders of the Civil War," is often more efficacious than storms of reproach.

One day the colonel of the regiment noticed a soldier on parade wearing a badly soiled pair of gloves.

"Corporal," said the officer, "why do you set the men such a bad example as appearing before them in dirty gloves? Why is it?"

"I've had no pay, sir, since I entered the service," returned the corporal. "I can't afford to have them done up."

The colonel drew from his pocket a pair of gloves, spotlessly white. Handing them to the corporal, he said quietly: "Put these on. I washed them myself."

It was an unforgotten lesson to the whole regiment.

Von Holstein's Dress Coat.

Prince Bulow once invited Herr von Holstein to dinner, telling him that it was to meet the emperor. "But," replied Holstein, "I don't believe that I have a dress coat at present. I will try, however, to get one made in time, and if I can't perhaps the emperor will take me as I am." This, the Times says, was reported to his majesty, who said that Herr von Holstein was to appear in any garb he pleased.

When the meeting took place Holstein was in his usual frock coat, and the emperor laughingly tapped him on the shoulder and said: "I see that dress coat wasn't ready. It doesn't matter."—London Standard.

HOWELL PLANER AND MATCHER

You no doubt find it a hard matter to sell your rough lumber to advantage because most of your customers want it finished. Furthermore you can get twice as much for your lumber by planing it, making it up into flooring, drop siding, window casing and mouldings, for which there is an unlimited demand at big prices. The Howell Planer and Matcher does all this work to perfection. You can also make big money by working up all your slabs and waste material into Lath and Shingles. All you need for this purpose is our Lath Mill and Shingle Machine. We build the best and most up-to-date machines of this kind on the market, which we can furnish you at manufacturers prices. Keep your plant running all the time. Remember we build complete Saw Mill Plants from top to bottom, all of our own manufacture. Our new Catalog is just now out. Services next Sunday as follows: In Immanual Congregation at 10:30 A. M. In Zion at 3 o'clock P. M. cordial invitation to all M. L. Dahle Pastor.

Held Up a Farmer.

About fifty Indians from the Red Lake arrived here the first of the week and have been camping in this vicinity. Four Indians on Monday evening held up Hans Skog, a farmer living seven miles east of town and relieved him of $4.25. The hold-up took place about two miles east of the city and two of the Indians are now in jail charged with the crime. They wanted the money to purchase whiskey with.

County Commissioners Vote to Fake $55,000 for Ditch Fund to Build a Court House.

Pay a Generous Sum for a Site for the Proposed New Court House.

At a meeting of the board of county commissioners held this week, there was a disposition upon the part of three of the commissioners—Lindquist, Pigeon and Denom—to be very reckless with the county funds, and they are being strongly condemned by residents of all parts of Red Lake county.

A resolution was passed to levy a tax of four mills against all of the property in Red Lake county for court house purposes. This will raise a fund of about $20,000 this year. Johnson and Auble voted against this resolution.

Another resolution was passed transfering $35,000 from the ditch fund to the general revenue fund to take effect at once. Johnson and Auble voted against this resolution also.

Fremont D. Orff, a Minneapolis architect, was employed to have supervision of constructing the proposed new court house and will receive a commission of 2¼ per cent upon the cost of the building. A Red Lake Falls architect who wanted to submit plans was ignored.

To cap the climax, however, the commissioners voted to trade the four lots on which the old court house was located and give $4,000 in cash for eight lots adjoining the county jail buildings. The four lots on which the old court house stood are in the business center of Red Lake Falls and while they have little or no value, they are certainly worth twice as much as the eight lots that the commissioners traded for.

Commissioner Johnson and Auble vigorously fought the purchase of these lots and wanted the county attorney to examine the title to property before the purchase was made, but the other three did not appear to care whether or not the title was good. They were anxious to part with $4,000 of the county's money in a hurry.

It was also decided to advertise for bids for the construction of a court house and the contract will be let on the 14th of August.

It is quite evident that the county commissioners have abandoned the idea of bonding the county for the purpose of building a court house and intend to use the money from the ditch fund for this purpose and let the farmers pay the interest. This week the commissioners sold $50,000 worth of ditch bonds and only $15,000 of this amount can now be used for the purpose for which the bonds were sold.

THE TOWN THAT PUSH BUILT

II.—The Sensible Grocery Man

HERE is the grocery man who got
The money for things the workman bought.
And while he still was feeling glad
He read the local butcher's ad.
He quickly hurried down the street
And bought a good supply of meat,
For which a settlement he made
With the money the honest workman paid.

BAD WASH OUT ON SOO

Cloud Burst Between Wenger and Waubun and Caused Big Wash Out.

Traffic on the Winnipeg Line Had to Be Abandoned for a Time.

There was a bad wash out on the Soo line south of here between Wenger and Waubun, caused by a cloud burst Monday evening. The whole country down there was afloat and in several places the grades were entirely washed out. Supt. Michalls, of this city, at once went down to take charge of the track repairing and three special trains with all of the available men that could be hired in Thief River Falls and vicinity went down Tuesday, and the road is now in fairly good condition.

All freight and day passenger trains had to be abandoned, but trains No. 109 and 110—the Winnipeg flyer—run over the Northern Pacific tracks from Detroit to Glenwood and there changed to the Great Northern and run by way of Crookston to Erskine where connections were again made with the Soo line. The trains were many hours late.

To Grand Forks Sunday.

The base ball team will go to Grand Forks Sunday to play a game with the Grand Forks Pickets. A special train will be run to accommodate the people from this city who desire to attend the game.

The Planet Mercury.

Though Mercury is one of the smallest of the planets, it is perhaps the most troublesome to the astronomer. It lies so close to the sun that it is seen but seldom in comparison with the other great planets. Its orbit is very eccentric, and it experiences disturbances by the attraction of other bodies in a way not yet fully understood. A special difficulty has also been found in the attempt to place Mercury in the weighing scales. We can weigh the whole earth, we can weigh the sun, the moon and even Jupiter and other planets, but Mercury presents difficulties of a peculiar character. Le Verrier, however, succeeded in devising a method of weighing it.

He demonstrated that our earth is attracted by this planet, and he showed how the amount of attraction may be disclosed by observations of the sun, so that from an examination of the observations he made an approximate determination of the mass of Mercury. Le Verrier's result indicated that the weight of the planet was about the fifteenth part of the weight of the earth. In other words, if our earth was placed in a balance and fifteen globes, each equal to Mercury, were laid in the other the scales would hang evenly.—"Story of the Heavens."

When Her Turn Came.

The Journal had taken on a "woman editor," whose duty was to look after the "woman's page." Space being scarce in the "local room," a desk was given her in the managing editor's room, directly adjoining. For a week or two no fault was found with her work, but one morning the managing editor said to her:

"Miss Penfield, your style of writing is a little too terse and epigrammatic for the needs of your department. You must study expansion."

"Very well, Mr. Ringgold," she answered. "I will try."

Thereafter her work appeared to give entire satisfaction, for there was no further criticism. About six months later, however, the managing editor after a morning spent in working at his desk suddenly wheeled in his chair and said:

"Miss Penfield, I want a wife. I want you. Will you marry me?"

"Mr. Ringgold," she responded, with a mocking smile, "that is rather terse and epigrammatic. Don't you think you ought to study expansion a little?"—Youth's Companion.

A Word of Warning.

"You never proposed to her on your knees!" cried the veteran married man in dismay.

"Sure I did; sure," the youth repeated, a glad, proud light shining in his eyes.

"Well," said the veteran, "you'll regret it about twice a week for the rest of your life. After you get married the slightest argument, the first impatient word, will cause your wife to say, 'You weren't like this when you went down on your knees and begged me, with tears in your eyes, to marry you.'

"It's pretty bad to have an angry wife read out your old love letters reproachfully," said the veteran, "but that is nothing to being reminded of your kneeling proposal every week till you are a great grandfather."

"You proposed on your knees yourself?" the youth hazarded.

But the veteran frowned and made no reply.—Los Angeles Times.

USE SIGNALS OF INDIANS.

Army Experts Adopt Many Ideas of the Aborigines.

Just as the fighting men of the United States army many years ago took lessons from the Indians and from their methods of warfare devised and perfected the system of extended order or skirmish drills which have proved so effective, so the signal corps of the army has followed to a large extent the red men's methods of conveying information from point to point where there is not time to string telegraph or telephone lines or where wireless telegraph is unavailable.

As the Indians since prehistoric times have used columns of smoke in various combinations to signal the approach of an enemy or to transmit other messages, so the army signalmen have found most effective what are known as smoke bombs or smoke rockets. The former are fired from a small mortar, the latter in the same way as Fourth of July fireworks. Each when reaching a desired height, regulated by a fuse, bursts and liberates a picric acid compound, which ignites and burns colored fires, one after the other, so arranged in the cartridge as to convey a message to those who may be watching for it. These cartridges are made in sections, each containing its own different colored fire, and threaded to screw together in a fraction of a minute.

These military fireworks, as they might aptly be called, are packed in hermetically sealed cans, much in the same manner as tinned meats, with the same sort of thumbscrew attachment for opening them quickly. In this way they keep indefinitely in any climate and have been found particularly effective in the campaigns in the Philippines.

While the navy does not employ so complicated a system of rocket and bomb signaling as does the army, every warship carries a supply of powerful rockets, which liberate on bursting a series of brilliant white stars for the purpose of calling attention to other signals which are transmitted by a system of combinations of colored electric lights strung from a masthead and operated from a switchboard much on the plan of a typewriter, called the Ardois system. But both branches of the service employ an odd sort of pistol, the invention of a naval officer, which shoots from cartridges "stars" similar to those of a roman candle of any color. The combinations which can be made in this manner practically are numberless.—Popular Mechanics.

FATE OF THE BRAAKE.

A Treasure Ship That Lies Buried Off Cape Henlopen.

Somewhere in deep water off Cape Henlopen lies over half a million in British gold, and how much more in gold and silver bars and plate and other treasures can only be guessed at. In 1798 the British privateer Braake sailed for the west Atlantic bearing enough gold to pay off all the English troops stationed in various parts of the new world. As the soldiers had not been paid in many months the sum was a large one.

Whether the captain of the Braake decided to turn pirate or whether he merely was showing excessive zeal in making war on all the enemies of England that he met on the high seas and intended to turn over his loot to the crown on his return will never be known, but the fact that the Braake took no prisoners and sank every prize goes a long way toward proving the piracy theory. The Braake captured a Spanish merchantman coming up from South American ports laden with rich tribute from the Spanish colonies there, transferred the precious cargo to her own hold and burned the vessel. Another Spanish ship bringing a church service of richly jeweled gold plate to a new world cathedral encountered the privateer and suffered the same fate. The next to fall a victim to the Braake's rapacity was a Frenchman carrying silks, spices, brandy and bars of silver. That, too, was sent to the bottom after it was despoiled.

The Braake was overtaken by a hurricane when nearing the American coast, was blown far out of her course and sank off Cape Henlopen. Several of the crew escaped in a small boat and reached land. Their tales of the treasure on the sunken ship caused several expeditions to be fitted out the following year, but nothing was brought up save pieces of the anchor chains and a cannon or two. During the last hundred years every effort to raise any part of the treasure has failed.

The last attempt was made by Captain Charles Adams, who fitted out a ship under the auspices of the navy department, but was unable to locate the wreck, which is probably by this time deeply submerged in the ooze and mud of the ocean bed.—New York Press.

Respect For Old Age.

"Jonas, did you beat that rug accordin' to orders?"

"No, S'manthy; I just didn't."

"Didn't! What's the reason, I'd like to know?"

"'Cause, S'manthy, when I got it out on the line there an' saw how frittered an' feeble it was I didn't have the heart to lambaste it. I know I have a shortage of virtues, S'manthy, but I want you to know that respect for old age isn't one of 'em."—Boston Courier.

A PERILOUS PERCH.

Two Nights on a Ledge of a Lofty Peak In the Tyrol.

In the northeastern corner of the Tyrol is the best skee ground in Europe, writes W. A. Baillie-Grohman in "Tyrol." The region has many lofty peaks, which make mountain climbing of interest. The author gives one of his adventures on a peak near the village of Kitzbuhel.

On one of these peaks occurred to me many years ago a little adventure which gave me an opportunity of admiring the grand view rather longer than was pleasant.

I was out stalking chamois, and, having some unoccupied hours in the middle of the day, when stalking is practically useless, as the beasts are resting, I thought I would ascend one of those pinnacles upon which at that time few human beings, I suppose, had ever set foot.

The very last bit was a smooth faced rock not more than twelve feet high, but absolutely unclimbable if unaided by rope or another man upon whose shoulders one could get and so obtain a hand grip of the top and thus draw oneself up. As I was alone I had recourse to a short length of rope I had in my rucksack. Making a slip noose, I threw it upward till it gripped some projection. Then I drew myself up.

While looking about me an unfortunate movement of my legs, which were dangling over the brink as I sat, caused the rope to slip and fall down to the small ledge on which I had stood when flinging it upward. This ledge or band of rock was uncomfortably narrow, not wider than thirty inches, and the abyss below was a perpendicular wall four or five church steeples in depth.

At first it did not seem such a serious fix to be in. By letting myself drop to the ledge, my extended arms gripping the top, the distance between the soles of my feet and the ledge was not more than four feet or so—nothing to speak of if that yawning gulf had not been there and I had had boots on my feet. But, having taken these off and left them below, together with my coat and rifle, I should have to drop on to sharp rocks barefooted and hence would be very apt to lose my balance.

The more I considered the position the more I funked that drop, and, to make a long story short, I stayed on that pinnacle two nights, until the morning of the third day, before hunger drove me to risk the drop, which I did in safety.

How I got down the remainder of that descent, "shinning" down chimneys and creeping along narrow edges, was a mystery to me afterward, for I was faint with hunger and my knees trembled and shook under me. When I reached the first habitation where I happened to be known the peasant woman at the door hardly recognized me.

A BUSINESS EXTENDER.

The Kind of Man For Whom There Is a Big Demand.

"I am looking for a clerk, a man with a personality, a man who can do things and increase my business. Money is no item. I will not take salary into consideration. I will pay $100, $125 or whatever he is worth. I want the man." That is what a successful merchant said some days ago.

Let us pay our respects to the merchant who is looking for a clerk of this kind. A good clerk deserves a good salary and usually gets it. This matter of good pay for good services is the basic principle of the relations between employer and employee. While all merchants are not willing to pay enough salary to their clerks, there are more merchants who are glad to pay all a clerk is worth than there are clerks who are glad to be worth all they are paid.

Every village, town and city is looking for the man who can "increase business." The man who will work for the interests of his employer is wanted the world over. The world of business is crying out for such men, for men whom it can trust and in whom it can place confidence that a thing will be done when the "boss'" back is turned. This man is wanted in every store, factory, at every post and in every great business in the land.

If you are attempting to avoid responsibility and as much work as possible you will, unless by great mistake, escape promotion or increase in salary. There are two kinds of clerks, and only two kinds. One the entire business world is anxiously searching for, and the other the entire business world is anxiously waiting to get rid of.—Twin City Commercial Bulletin.

Where Women May Not Pray.

In some parts of the world the women are not even allowed to pray. Certain Hindoo congregations deny their women this privilege, and among the Ainus women can pray only in very rare cases as the deputies of their husbands. The natives of Madagascar, however, stretch a point and permit their women to intercede with the powers of evil, but prayer to their supreme being is strictly a masculine prerogative.

Expensive.

"Yes," said the young wife proudly, "father always gives something expensive when he makes presents."

"So I discovered when he gave you away," rejoined the young husband.—Exchange.

ROCKEFELLER'S WEALTH.

John D. Rockefeller, the founder of the Standard oil company, and by many believed to be the richest man in the world, reaches the biblical "three score and ten" years Thursday and celebrated the event quietly and with accustomed frugality by playing golf on the recenty completed new golf links on his magnifient estate, Forest Hill. At 60 Mr. Rockefeller was an old man of rather feeble health; but careful diet and exercise did wonders for him and now, at 70, he is almost as fresh and rugged as other men at 50 and his physician, Dr. Paul Allen, has expressed the opinion that Mr. Rockefeller has every prospect of reaching the age of 100 years.

Fortunes, properly and indiciously invested, have the peculiar habit of increasing at a rate which increases in proportion with the increase of the fortune. Mr. Rockefeller's fortune is not an exception The largest portion of it is invested in Standard Oil stock, which is worth now in the neighborhood of $700 share, while the rest is invest in railroad, steel and bank stocks of the most profitable discription. His holdings of Standard Oil stock alone are estimated at $175,000,000 about 25 per cent of the total amount of stock of the company. How profitable these holdings alone are may be inferred from the facts the total net earnings of the company in 1908 reached a total of about $80,000,000, nearly one-half which was paid out in dividends to the stockholders, while the rest was added to the surplus, which is now estimated at about $275,000,000.

Accepting $700,000,000 as a conservative estimate of Mr. Rockefeller's present fortune, investigtors with a mathematical turn of mind have made some interesting calculations concerning the probable wealth of Mr. Rockefeller on his one hundredth birthday, should he really live until July 8 1939. They have computed that in case the present ratio of increase should be maintained—and there seems to be no reason why it should not—Mr. Rockefeller's fortune on his one hundredth birthday will have reached the respectable sum of $25,732,000,000, or in round figures, about twenty-six thousand millions, almost three times as much gold and silver as there is in circulation, in banks and in all the treasure houses and mints on earth to-day.

It is impossible for the human mind to grasp the vastness of such a sum of money. If the whole sum were in $1 bills and someone should want to count them, he would find it a hopeless task. Were he to count steadily at the rate of $3 a second, day and night, without stopping for a single moment until the task was ended, it would take 295 years, five months, two weeks, sixteen hours, thirty-five seconds to complete the work.

In 1904, when Mr. Rockefeller did not have much more than $500,000,000 to his name, his income was a little more than $3 every second of the day, for seven days a week. Should Mr. Rockefeller reach the century mark, his income then would amount to nearly $9,500 a second, which is more than a great many men succeed in accumulating in a lifetime Even should Mr. Rockefeller continue to give away a few millions every now and then, it is safe to assume that he would not have to spend his 100th birthday at the poorhouse.—Advocate.

MINNESOTA REPUBLICANISM SAFE.

Senator Aldrich's attack upon the western senators who opposed his high tariff revision will have a far different effect then that intended. Instead of reading them out of the republican party he has but written in bolder characters upon the party's roll of honor the names of those who through the thick of the fight remained true to the best traditions of their party and to the people they represent. Their position placed them in a very small minority in the senate but with the western people they stand with the great majority which will not soon forget the services rendered. The states of Indiana, Kansas, Nebraska, Minnesota, South Dakota, Iowa and Wisconsin will approve of the stand taken by Senators Beveridge, Bristow, Brown, Burkett, Clapp, Crawford, Cummins Dolliver, La Follette and Nelson; and the press of those states, irrespective of party affiliation, united in commending their attitude. These criticisms of the majority called forth one of the most dramatic scenes that have been witnessed during this long, tedious debate. Senators Clapp and Nelson's defense of Minnesota republicanism has given this state a place in the party's ranks which neither disaffection nor democratic opposition can shake in future elections. As Senator Nelson declared in his closing remarks,"it takes more than Rhode Island and the Senator from Rhode Island to read the state of Minnesota out of the republican party." At a no distant day will we see fulfilled his prophecy that "when the little state of Rhode Island has perished from the map of the country the state of Minnesota, with its 3,000,000 people and its 100,000 republican majority, will be uppermost in the ranks of republicanism and republican progress." Only false political seers like Private Secretary Day can find portents of evil to Minnesota republicanism in any possible disposition of tariff problem.—Alexandria Post News

A leading banker of Chicago points out that the great mass of people between rich and poor earn at times more money than they spend, and what they do with this surplus is a matter of prime importance. Much is put in banks, and to make banks secure is the object of constant governmental care. Some is wasted in various forms of vice, and the Government continually exerts itself to suppress these vices. But an important amount is lost through swindling "investments," and the Government does not take an obvious and effectual step to prevent that waste.

A police officer who has given much attention to the subject calculates that a hundred and fifty million dollars are lost annually by the people of the United States through these fraudulent "investments"—meaning only those schemes which are gotten up to swindle. He calculates further that not less than twenty out of the hundred and fifty millions go for newspaper advertisement by which the victims are lured in. Whether or not his calculations are accurate the amount lost in this way is certainly great.

Why does the Government turn its back on this waste? Why does it treat the newspaper that prints an advertisement which any well-informed person would know for a swindle as different from any other kind of bunco-steerer?—Saturday Evening Post.

The legislature certainly made liberal appropriation for fighting forest fires and it is understood that Col. Frank A. Day who was recently placed on the forestry board has reorganized and perfected the service He has fire fighters scattered all over the state and if the fires are raging in the Duluth country as alleged he should forthwith direct Gen. C. C. Andrews, his chief staff, to extinguish the fires. He has a well equipped office right there in the capitol almost at Col. Days' elbow. He has a stenographer, typewriter, and a large number of photographs and bulletins and if the forest fires are allowed to rage the next legislature should investigate the matter. It is to be hoped that Col. Days' Fire Fighters will arise to the occasion so that no one may say that the money appropriated by the last legislature was not wisely appropriated.—Fergus Falls Journal.

The New Educational Law.

The new compulsory education law becomes operative August 1st and school officers and teachers should inform themselves of its provisions.

The new law requires that all children between eight and sixteen and in cities of 50,000 between eight and eighteen to attend school during the whole term.

Only four excuses for non-attendance may be given; that the parent is unable to properly clothe the child; the child's bodily or mental condition is such that he cannot attend school or apply himself to his studies, or that there is no school within a reasonable walking distance.

To see that the new law is enforced, where there are no truant officers, clerk of school districts are compelled to make lists in triplicate of children of school age in the district for which they are to be paid at the rate of 3 cents a name. One list is to be given to the county superintendent, one to the teacher and the third retained by the clerk. After the teacher has received this list and the list of excuses granted by the board, he must send the county superintendent a list of all the children who are absent.

The superintendent in turn shall give this list to the county attorney, who shall notify the parents, and if they neglect or refuse to send the child to school within ten days, criminal proceedings may be started and the parent or guardian fined $50 or sent to jail for thirty days. The fines are to go to the school district where the offence is committed.

BALL GAME ON JULY 30

The Fats and the Leans of Thief River Falls to Play a Mighty Game.

C. C. Jackson to Be Captain of the Leans and Mayor Hamre of the Fats.

According to the wise ones, there is not going to be much excitement to the ball game to be played in this city on July 30, between the Fats and the Leans. The old skin and bones aggregation has not a ball player worth mentioning, while on the other hand the fats have some star players. Barring accidents, the line-up for the two nines is complete.

H. G. Dobner and Judge Bishop are to be the battery for the fats. It may not be generally known, but Judge is a ball player of national reputation—down in Iowa where he came from. He was a catcher in the Iowa state league for years and a ball has never been known to pass him. He is just as good at the bat as old Hans Wagner and can run bases like a wild man from Borneo.

H. G. Dobner, the pitcher, was formerly one of the old league players, but quit playing professional ball when he was sold to the White Sox of Chicago. He expects to salaamend the lowly dyspeptics and if they get a man to first base they will be lucky.

E. M. Stanton will play first base for the Fats. Mr. Stanton is a ball player with a reputation. He was formerly with the Wisconsin state league and can always be depended upon in case his side gets into close quarters. He is one of those players that when the bases are all full and two men are out always knocks out a home run.

Mayor Hamre, the captain of the Fats, knows the game from A to Z. He has played ball in every state in the union and nothing proves his ability better than the men he has selected.

John Morgan is to be the short stop for the Fats. He is a swift base runner and is in the pink of condition.

F. J. Stebbins will hold down third base and that insures that there will be no errors made in that part of the field.

George Williams will play second base. While George is a good all-'round player his strong suit is at the bat and as a base runner.

Bob McGinn will play somewhere out in the field. Bob is considered a weak player because he has no professional record, but those who have seen him play ball in the past say that he is a wonder.

Capt. Wiste is a star batter and also a good base runner.

W. J. LaBree, J. W. McGinty, O. A. Westine, Chris Porter, Andy Erickson and George Jarman, other players for the Fats are so well known that it is useless to comment upon their aiblity as ball players.

Capt. Jackson, of the Leans, is quite optimistic and without any good reason. He believes that if he can get his dried-ups "all het up"—something impossible—that they will play a great game of ball. As a matter of fact Mr. Jackson should save the wind that he and other slims are letting loose and buy anchors, for if it happens to be a windy day his skin and bone aggregation will never be able to stay on the ground, but will go floating through space—and it would not be a bad thing for this country if it was a windy day.

Capt. Jackson has selected fourteen slims to play on his side, not knowing that nine is all that is allowed to play. Here is his list: Joe Jenson, Emil Zeh, Dan O'Neill, Ed Nelson, John Myrland, Carl Korstad, Emil Sedlacek, Billie Warner, Oscar Carlson, Frank Mousley, Dr. Booren, Dr. Gambell and Mike Burns.

Billie Warner is to be the pitcher for the lean aggregation. All of the old timers know that Billie never could play ball, although he was always trying to convince the people of this city and St. Hilaire that he was a wonder. It did not take them long, however, to get onto Billie and for the past dozen years he has been playing on the bench.

Capt. Jackson doesn't know how he is going to line up his other players, but if he has Warner for pitcher it might be a good scheme to have about half a dozen behind the bat. Mr. Jackson selected Joe Jenson on account of the ability of his dog as a retriever, not knowing that the corpulent gentlemanly opponents will refuse to play against dogs. Mr. Jenson's dog would make the best player on the Lean's side, if allowed to play, but Joe is simply bum. We haven't any idea why Capt. Jackson selected Emil Zeh and Dan O'Neill. Zeh never did or could play ball, and O'Neill, who was born in the back woods of Canada, never knew there was such a game until he came to this country six years ago. John Myrland and Carl Korstad might be all right at ping-pong, but it is really a shame to ask them to play ball. Emil Sedlacek has had some experience in driving an automobile and in driving wells, but it is safe to say that as a batter he could not drive a ball as far as short-stop. Dr. Booren never did or never will know how to play ball. He simply can't even play a game of checkers, so there is absolutely no use in taking him out to the ball grounds. Just why Mike Burns was selected is hard to understand, but perhaps it is because Mike is an old timer and Capt. Jackson did not want to slight any of his old friends. Mike played in a game twenty years ago when Old Chief Moose Dung was in his prime, but since that day has never been asked to take part in any ball games. As for Oscar Carlson, Frank Mousley and Dr. Gambell, they are simply impossible and the least said of them the better.

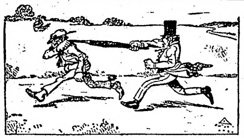
The gate receipts at the game will be given to the band, and everyone in the city are urgently requested to attend. It will be safe to bring the ladies, as good order will be maintained throughout the game. The militia company will be in attendance to keep order and the umpire is to be kept in a cage. There is to be a grand free street parade.

Mayor Hamre, captain of the Fats is busy these days getting substitutes.

George Williams, the fleet base runner for the Fats, is trying to master the la Morgan slide.

Captain Jackson of the Slims is confident and chesty.

Dr. G. A. Penney is to be the marshall in the grand free street parade.



After the ball game there will be a foot race (fouls and strangle holds barred) between John Morgan and Ole Torrison.

All of the Fats and the Leans in the city will be in attendance.

Quack Grass Investigations.

Prof. Andrew Boss, in charge of the Agricultural Division at the College of Agriculture, University of Minnesota, is making some important investigations of the quack grass problem that is interesting to many farmers throughout the Northwest. That quack grass has spread very rapidly during the last two or three years cannot be doubted. The spread has been particularly rapid on account of the abundant rainfall of the past few summers and the fact that there has been carelessness in cleaning farm seeds.

Steps have been taken to secure for a period of five years the use of one of the worst quack grass farms in the state. This farm is valuable for experimental purposes for it grows, in fact nothing but quack grass. For experimentation, it will be divided into small fields and a number of different experiments will be tried to discover if possible the best means of exterminating the quack grass. Studies will be made of the comparative cost of different methods of eradication and those advised which involve the least loss of use of land, combined with greatest efficiency in eradication.

Thousands of farmers will watch the results of this experiment with great interest. To aid in gathering data from parts of the country having different soils and different conditions, all farmers having had experience with this grass are invited to write of their experiences to Prof. Boss.

A Valuable Work.

The last Minnesota legislature appropriated $5,000 for a period of two years for extension work to be carried on by the Dairy Division of the State Experimental Station.

The first work undertaken is the organization of cow-testing associations in different creamery localities in the state. An expert dairy man is now in the field organizing those associations and giving instructions for carrying on the work.

The general plan is as follows: Each patron supplies himself with a small spring scale and bottles for taking composite samples of the milk from each cow. The Experiment Station furnishes all necessary blanks and necessary results.

The milk from each cow is weighed once a week, samples are taken for the composite test and each cow's feed is estimated. At the end of the month, the composite samples are tested, either at the local creamery or at the Station laboratory, and the records are sent to the Dairy Division at the University Farm.

In this way results will be obtained which are sufficiently accurate for all practical purposes, and the patron, who is supplied with a copy of the record, will have learned which cows in his herd are returning him a profit. The only expense to the patron is the cost of the scale and bottles.

Dairymen wishing to organize a testing association should make application to Prof. T. L. Haecker, University Farm, St. Paul Minn.

A Homesteader Arrested.

Cass Lake Minn., July 15.—S. M. Schaak, a homesteader, living on Kitchi lake has been fined $100 for having in his possession some cow moose meat.

A few days ago the deputy game warden from Bemidji arrived here after being sent for by someone living in the vicinity of Schaak. The game warden made his way to Kitchi lake and soon got acquainted with Mr. Schaak. Before very long he received an invitation to dinner and his host spread before him a nice meal of moose meat the game warden finished eating and The host presented him with a nice sized piece to take home to his wife. When things were all fixed the game warden disclosed his identity and caused he arrest of Mr. Schaak taking him to Bemidji, where he was fined $100.

A FATAL FRIENDSHIP.

Devotion of Princess Lamballe to Marie Antoinette.

SLAIN BY A PARISIAN MOB.

The Assassination of the Princess, Who Escaped and Returned to Comfort Her Friend, Was One of the Worst Acts of the Reign of Terror.

It was in the historic Carignano palace at Turin that the Princess Lamballe was born. Her father was Louis Victor of Carignan, of the royal house of Sardinia and Savoy.

Her childhood was spent in Turin during the period that followed the defeat of the French through the brilliant military tactics of Prince Eugene of Vienna. At eighteen she was married to Stanislaus, son of the Duke of Penthievre of France.

The chief place of this duchy was the town of Lamballe, about fifty miles from Rennes. The Prince de Lamballe died in one year, and as soon as etiquette allowed a marriage with Louis XV. was contemplated. This did not go into effect, however, and the princess withdrew from the court.

She met Marie Antoinette when that princess first came to Paris, and they were mutually attracted and became friends. The Princess de Lamballe saw the dangers to which this young foreigner was exposed, and when Marie Antoinette became queen of France in 1774 and appointed the princess superintendent of the royal household she entered upon her duties with the sympathetic understanding of a loyal friend. The closest ties of affectionate regard drew these two young royal personages together. Through the careless gayety of court life the Princess de Lamballe was the judicious friend. When illness came to the queen she was faithful and devoted.

When the storm of adversity broke over the royal family and it was arranged that an escape should be effected Mme. de Lamballe got safely to England, going across from Dieppe, but the royal family were arrested at Varennes and declared traitors to France.

Mme. de Lamballe's devotion was so true she at once hastened back to Paris to be with the queen. Her friends urged and implored her to think of the danger to herself and pointed out that she could be of no real service at such a critical time. But she knew better than they did what a comfort her presence would be, and her heart was entirely occupied with the sorrows of her sovereign. She was allowed to become a prisoner with the royal family in the temple, and for one week she was a cheerful and helpful companion, full of affectionate arts to make the hours less bitter and giving to Marie Antoinette the loving, devoted care that only a friend so loyal could give.

When those about the prison saw what an influence of joy Mme. de Lamballe brought to the royal prisoners an order was issued for her removal to the prison of La Force. From here she was taken for a mock trial and offered her life if she would take oath against the monarchy. With scorn she refused to do this.

Then came one of the most terrible acts of the period of the reign of terror. She was delivered to the people, wild with the desire for blood, and was killed in the courtyard of La Force prison. They stabbed her with sabers, cut off her head, tore her heart from her body while it was yet palpitating and then dragged her body through the streets to the temple.

On the way there they stopped at a hairdresser's and made him rouge the beautiful face and friz and powder the hair. This man nearly died with fear while at this awful work. When it was done and the head set on a pike, the long, fair curls of her pretty hair fell about the neck. Those of the mob who suggested this hideous work upon the head said, "Antoinette will now recognize her friend."

The heart was also put on the end of a pike and the route to the temple resumed. The royal family were together, and Louis was reading to them, when they heard the sound of the mob and loud, high voices. Suddenly the door was opened violently, and as they all started to their feet some men pushed themselves past the guard and shouted to the king: "The people have something to show you. If you don't wish them to bring it up here you had better go to the window."

With the deadly fear in their hearts they did as directed and looked into the dead and painted face of their devoted friend and also saw her tender heart and her poor body, hacked by the sabers of these wretches.

With a cry of horror and despair Marie Antoinette fell into a state of stupor. Mme. Elizabeth forced her into a chair, and her children clung to her and cried with fear. Louis tried to control his voice as he said with pathetic dignity, "You might have spared the queen the knowledge of this frightful calamity."—Boston Globe.

To Make a Hit.

"You send me violets every morn," said the beautiful girl.

"I do," responded the ardent lover, "no matter what the cost."

"Quite so. Now, why not send up a bunch of asparagus tomorrow instead. It would be just as expensive and would make a big hit with pa."—Pittsburg Post.

THE "BREAK" IN THE GAME.

Baseball Almost as Much Psychological as Athletic.

Nearly every baseball game is won and lost on one play—a play that comes at the psychological instant. Among the players who do not study psychology the crucial moment is known as "the break," a phenomenon which no one has analyzed and which the players themselves do not understand. Twenty men on the bench are watching closely and intently every move of the pitcher, every swing of his arm. The tide of battle rises, ebbs, and then suddenly at the start of some inning something happens. What it is no one outside the psychic sphere of influence ever will understand, but the silent, tight lipped, watchful, alert fellows on the bench see something or feel something, and the mysterious "break" has come.

"One ball!" The players on the bench suddenly stiffen and prepare for action.

"Two balls!" Two players jump for bats and begin swinging them; the coachers, who have yelled only because it was their duty, suddenly begin raging, screaming and pawing the dirt, and the manager, who has appeared half asleep, makes a trumpet of his hands and leads his men, bawling loud orders and wild taunts.

The spectators do not understand anything has happened. Other batters have had two balls called many times, and it looks the same to the spectator who is beyond the mysterious "break" sphere. In two more moments the players' bench is a madhouse, with twenty men shouting, screaming, ordering, moving. "Three balls!" and a madman rushes out to the "deck." "Four balls!" and the spectators join the players in the demonstration. The madness is spreading. Crack—a base hit, a bunt, a wild throw; another base hit, screams, shouts, imprecations, a roar of frantic applause, a final long fly. The manager reaches for his glove, spits into it and says quietly, "Four runs—we've got 'em." The "break" is over, and the players' bench is again the quietest part of the grounds. The surge of enthusiasm, confidence and noise subsides, and the game is won.

Baseball is almost as much psychological as athletic. Why one team can beat a stronger one regularly and lose to a weaker with the same regularity, why one batter can hit one pitcher and is helpless before another, why one pitcher is effective against a strong team and at the mercy of another that cannot bat half as hard, are psychological problems.—American Magazine.

A MISER'S END.

Meanness of M. Vandille and the Way He Hastened His Death.

M. Vandille was chief magistrate at Boulogne and by miserly habits left a fortune of $4,000,000. His usual diet was bread and milk. The bread cost very little, and after eating his loaf at home his habit was to become his own public milk inspector, whom as chief magistrate he had the right to appoint. And so, as he declared, to protect the inhabitants from being imposed upon by an inferior quality of milk he took his walk immediately after eating his loaf and demanded to taste the milk of every salesman he passed, thus saving himself from purchasing any. Misers are generally strong men—they have to be so in order to live a life of privation—but eventually Vandille, like other misers, was seized with illness, and the surgeons had to be called in. In those days they bled their patients. The surgeon asked Vandille half a livre for the operation, but the millionaire ordered him at once out of his sight and sent for the apothecary. The apothecary refused to cut the price down, so Vandille sent for a poor barber, who undertook to open a vein for three sous a time.

"Aye, but," said this worthy economist, "how often, friend, will it be necessary to bleed me?"

"Three times."

"And what quantity of blood do you intend to take each time?"

"Eight ounces."

"Well, but why can't you take the whole twenty-four ounces at once? You want to make a job of me, you scoundrel! Here, sir; there are your three sous. Take the twenty-four ounces immediately." The barber was generous to obey. M. Vandille lost the twenty-four ounces of blood and died in a few days, leaving all his vast treasures to the king, whom he made his sole heir.—Strand Magazine.

The Oldest Bridge In Paris.

The Pont Notre Dame is the oldest bridge in Paris. It was first built in 1413 in the reign of Charles VI., but it was carried away, together with the houses which lined it, by ice floes when the frost broke in 1499. A new bridge was begun at once under the direction of Jean Joconde of Verona and was ready for traffic in 1507. On that bridge stood the famous picture shop of Gersaint, which had a signboard specially painted for it by Watteau.—Westminster Gazette.

Ancient Greek Training.

The manner in which the Athenians brought up their children is worth remembering. At seven years of age the Athenian lad entered the palestra, which was essentially a playground. All the first and better half of the day was spent in gymnastics, dancing, games and play. In the afternoon there were singing, some writing, some reading, all in the open air, and then came a long period of play again. Such was the schooling of the Greek lad up to the age of ten or eleven, and it did not differ essentially up to the age of sixteen, except in the severity of the exercises. And yet the world has not ceased to marvel at the results of the Greek education. It produced the highest type of man, physically and intellectually, that the world has ever seen, which Galton says was as far in advance of the modern Englishman as the modern Englishman is in advance of the native African. In physical beauty, courage and patriotism, in philosophy, literature, architecture and art, the Greeks have been the unsurpassed models of the ages and are still the inspiration of our schools today. But they placed the emphasis upon hygiene, exercise, games and play, which are too much neglected in these days.—Kansas City Star.

Geographical Knowledge In 1492.

But very little was known in regard to the extent of the world in Aristotle's day, in the fourth century before Christ, and but very little more was known about it 1,800 years later, in the time of Columbus. In 2,000 years the world had in reality retrograded rather than advanced. It was the popular belief in the time of Columbus that the world was flat, though many contemporary scholars thought differently. The great civilizations of the world at that time were grouped around the Mediterranean sea, although England was a considerable power and the Scandinavians were a great maritime people. But Europeans at that time knew but little of Asia and but little of Africa, and America, of course, was undreamed of. Even after Columbus had discovered the latter continent he was perfectly oblivious of the fact. He thought Haiti was Cipango or Japan and for a long time regarded Cuba as a part of the mainland of Asia.

A Famous All Potato Banquet.

One of the most remarkable menus ever drawn up must have been that of the feast in Paris to which Benjamin Franklin, Lavoisier, the founder of modern chemistry, and other distinguished men sat down as guests of Parmentier. Every dish at this banquet was made of potatoes, and even the brandy and liqueurs were the product of the same vegetable. This was Parmentier's final proof to his skeptical fellow countrymen that potatoes were not poison, as they persisted in believing. Louis XVI. himself was one of Parmentier's earliest converts, granted him land on which to grow his plants and did not disdain to wear the potato flower as a buttonhole. Then Parmentier cleverly posted guards round his potato fields by day and withdrew them by night, so that people were tempted to come then, steal, eat and be convinced. The all potato banquet was the climax of the great campaign.—Chicago News.

Horses In Pantaloons.

"Equine sunbonnets are very well," said a veterinary, "but what would you say to equine trousers? You'll see them in Guayaquil. There the mosquitoes and greenhead flies are so thick that horses and donkeys, unless their legs are cased in cloth, become unmanageable with the pain. Guayaquil is in Ecuador. It is directly under the equator. The heat there is insufferable. Up and down its narrow and foul smelling streets in bluish clouds of buzzing insects walk horses and donkeys in sunbonnets and pantaloons."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

No Accent.

Many stories are told of a former Canadian bishop who had passed his youth in Scotland, but flattered himself that not a hint of his origin could be gained from his speech or manner.

One day he met a Scotchman, to whom he said at last abruptly, "Hoo lang hae ye been here?"

"Aboot sax years," was the reply.

"Hoot, mon!" said the bishop sharply. "Why hae ye na lost yer accent, like mysel'?"

It Didn't Work.

"Neither have I," he replied. "Let's stay at home."

The Coughing Bean.

To the ordinary housemaid the falling of a house plant into a violent paroxysm of coughing is naturally disconcerting. Yet there are plants which will do this when the broom or the duster begins to make dust fly. This singular plant is the "coughing bean," known to the botanist as the Entada tussiens. It is a native of warm and moist tropical countries and cannot and will not stand dust. When dust settles upon the breathing pores in the leaves of this plant and chokes them a gas accumulates inside the leaves and when it gains sufficient strength forcibly "blows off," clearing the pores of dust and making a sound exactly like coughing. At the same time the leaves tremble and the plant actually "gets red in the face" through the sinking of the green chlorophyll grains and the appearance of red particles on the leaves. This plant is sometimes used as a house plant, and sweeping the room sets it coughing, to the intense astonishment of persons not familiar with its peculiarities.—London Chronicle.

Paid For the Kiss.

Lord Northcote was once made curious use of while governor general of Australia, says London M. A. P. Strolling one night through an avenue of somber trees to a friend's house to dinner, he was suddenly pounced upon by a maidservant, who kissed him effusively and pressed a little parcel into his hand. "Here's a sausage for you. I can't come out tonight, as master has company," she whispered and as mysteriously disappeared. When he got to the house he found one of his servants loitering by the gate. "What are you doing there?" asked Lord Northcote. "I'm waiting for my sweetheart," the man stammered. "Where is she?" "In service here." "Ah, then, I am right. Here is a sausage from your sweetheart, and she wishes me to tell you that she cannot come out tonight, as her master has company." Seeing that the man looked nervous, he added kindly: "She also gave me a kiss for you, but perhaps you would rather wait until you see her. Here is 5 shillings instead."

Round About Dorking.

The neighborhood of Dorking, where George Meredith lived, has many literary associations independent of its connection with that famous novelist. It was at Burford Bridge, near Dorking, that Keats completed "Endymion" in November, 1817; close by, at the Rookery, was born Father Malthus, the popular economist, and at West Humble Frances Burney, after her marriage with General d'Arblay, built Camilla cottage with profits of her novel of that name and settled down. Sheridan resided at Polesden and John Stuart Mill at Mickleham, while other illustrious residents in the locality in earlier times were John Evelyn and Daniel Defoe. To most people, however, the chief literary association of Dorking is with Dickens, for was it not at the Marquis of Granby's, variously identified with the White Hart and the Old King's Head, that Mr. Weller, Sr., made the fatal blunder of proposing to a "vidder?"—Westminster Gazette.

English Difficult to Pronounce.

The difficulty of English for strangers does not lie in its orthography, but in its pronunciation. Abroad people will constantly say that they can read and write English readily, while unable to utter a word or to understand a word of the spoken language, as, of course, vice versa, a great many English and Americans can read and write French long before they can understand or make themselves understood. The other languages are just as difficult for them to pronounce as English is for others. The only difference is that English stands alone with its system or lack of system of pronunciation. When a Frenchman knows how to write German he is at the same time able to speak the language, if not beautifully, at least so as to be understood. The same holds for a German speaking French.—Professor Albert Schinz in North American Review.

The Battle of the Nations.

The conflict called the "Battle of the Nations" was the battle of Leipsic. It was fought on Oct. 16-18, 1813, between the soldiers of Russia, Prussia, Austria, Sweden, Denmark and Holland, under Schwarzenberg, on the one side, and Napoleon's army of allies, on the other. It was one of the greatest battles of modern times. A half million of men were engaged, and the casualties on both sides were 94,000. It resulted in overwhelming defeat for Napoleon and the liberation of Germany. Troops from every nation of Europe participated in it, hence the "Battle of Nations."

ORCHID HUNTING.

The Terrors and the Dangers of a Tropical Forest.

It is not a pretty story, this narrative of a trip up the Orinoco, but you may understand orchid people better if you read it.

"It began unluckily," said he. "I took a partner because I'd learned that the dark places of earth are hard upon a man by himself. I met him at Port of Spain, and he was eager for the adventure because he had just absconded from a British mercantile house in Havana and the Orinoco sounded to him like a haven.

"We hired a few negroes. Our real guides we would pick up at Angostura. One day while waiting for the stores to be packed I took my partner out to show him what an orchid was.

"Near the Pitch lake I saw one in a tree and ordered one of the negro boys to shin up and get it. He would not. A deadly snake dwelt in that tree, he declared. He was afraid—afraid of snakes! Nice, efficient, helpful boy to take into tropical forests, wasn't he?

"It was insubordination before the expedition had even started. So I cuffed him and handed him my hunting knife. 'Bring down that flower and also the snake's head,' I ordered, and, whining, trembling, he went up the trunk. He was detaching the orchid from where it clung when a thing like a spear, as black as his own skin, suddenly struck at the boy's wrist. He screamed with terror and, toppling down, writhed with pain. He died, and I felt a gloom settle on my spirits.

"Well, at Angostura we took rafts and six guides upstream. First one guide died of fever; then another was bitten by poisonous insects. One fell in with—or into—an alligator. We needed meat, and the skin was worth a good deal, so half in revenge, half in curiosity, we went out and plugged holes in the monster. When the guides cut it open they stooped and drew things out—the bones and the cotton clothes of the guide this cannibal reptile had swallowed. The very knot was still in his sarong. Oh, don't squirm! This is orchid hunting.

"We had three guides left at the end of the second month, when, paddling along one day where the vines overreached and let snaky tendrils draggle down, we came to a fifty yard clearing. We saw there the sides of three canoes, half smothered with rapid growing vegetation, and 1,500 alligator skins well salted, but decaying. Hanging to the roof of what had been a kind of lean-to were 100 orchid plants—withered and dead. On the floor lay two rusty rifles and two skeletons. Out by the ashy place where the fire had been was a third skeleton. Up between the ribs were cheerfully growing some gay weeds."—Everybody's Magazine.

Aroused Her Curiosity After All.

"Don't want any," said a housekeeper from her second story window to a street vender whose covered wagon was standing a few steps away and who had just pulled the bell.

"Don't want any what?" gruffly asked the vender, who hadn't had even a chance to tell what his wares were.

"What have you got?" asked the housekeeper, whose curiosity was getting the better of her annoyance.

"Oh, never mind. You don't want any. Git up, Bob!"

"Now, I wonder what that exasperating man is selling, anyhow!" she exclaimed as the wagon disappeared around the corner.—Exchange.

Silenced Him.

The young man in the barber's chair had been annoyed by suggestions of the white coated artist, although he had said clearly enough when he sat down that he wanted only a hair cut and a shampoo. Singeing, facial massage and hair tonics had been offered vainly.

Finally the barber perpetrated what is with barbers the crowning insult. Passing his hand over the young man's face, he said contemptuously:

"Shave yourself, don't you?"

"Sure," said the young man. "Don't you?"

And there was silence.—Washington Post.

The Descent.

"Father, do men descend from monkeys?" asked an inquisitive lad.

"Yes, my boy."

"And what do monkeys descend from?"

"The monkeys descend—ah—from the trees!"—London Telegraph.

Not Guilty.

It is said that within 400 years gold aggregating $2,000,000,000 has disappeared from circulation, and the government would like to know who has it. We learn that the members of the newspaper fraternity are not suspected.—St. Louis Republic.

MANNING THE STATIONS.

Discipline Aboard Ship at Sea in Times of Emergency.

At no time is the perfect organization aboard ship so well illustrated as in the time of an emergency. The slightest scent of danger in the wind must find every man ready. And every man is ready. Every man has a number. Every man has a station. A bell tap may send your dining room steward off at a run just when he is serving your soup. At the bell tap he is no longer your steward. He is "No. 78" in the ship's emergency organization, and when he gets to his station he finds Nos. 54, 45, 230, 117, 248 and some others there to act with him like a machine. Aboard a big ship there are sometimes as many as sixty stations about the vessel, and at the sound of an alarm bell thirty seconds have not elapsed before every man has responded to his number at his station and is ready to act, to fight fire, to man the lifeboats, or what not.

Up in the wheelhouse is further exemplification of what system will do. Within reach of the officers are a dozen contrivances of machinery that connect with every part of the ship. A touch of one lever closes a bulkhead in this or that compartment of the hold, a touch of another mans all emergency stations, a lever here mans lifeboat so-and-so, and a lever there mans any one or all. Here is a telephone, its wires extending to every part of the ship, and an officer's voice carried to a distance station in the bowels of the ship is so magnified by mechanical means that it can be heard twenty feet from the receiver and fairly bellows its orders.

A sailor or steward never knows at what minute, day or night, he may be called to his station. At the sound of the signal bell he must be at his post. There is a drill of some kind every day aboard ship, but the men never know whether they are running to a real fire or only a drill. Boats are uncovered, falls overhauled, davits swung out. Every boat must have its compass, night signals, fresh water and provisions ready for immediate action. From the chart room the captain can start a squad in the most remote part of the ship simply by pressing a button, and the flashing of tiny electric lights faithfully record how every detail of the drill is being carried out. A chart gives the location of all bulkheads, and a tiny light sparkles when this or that water tight compartment is closed. In case of a collision every bulkhead below the water line is closed by a turn of a lever in the wheelhouse, making the modern ship practically unsinkable.—Van Vliet Adling in Bookkeeper.

He Dazed Lew Wallace.

Shortly after the first success of "Ben-Hur" Lew Wallace had occasion to go over to London and one day picked up a pirated copy of the novel at a railroad newsstand. To his amazement he found the subtitle left off, a preface interpolated and one of the chapters rewritten. Of course he boiled with rage, and as soon as possible he called on the publisher. That gentleman coolly admitted his crime and told Wallace he thought the amended form better adapted to the British taste, doncherknow. His gall was so stupendous that the novelist was awed and went away without spilling his gore.

It Was Good Advice.

A wildly turbulent peasant was once a witness in a trial before Chief Baron O'Grady. The counsel, after pestering him for some time, put a question to him which reflected on the witness' character.

"If ye ax me that again I'll give ye a kick in the gob!" was the answer.

The counsel appealed to the court, stating that an answer was necessary to his client's case, ending up with the query, "What would your lordship advise me to do?"

"If you are resolved to repeat the question," replied the court, "I'd advise you to move a little from the witness."

The Poultice Is a Barbaric Relic.

The poultice is a barbarous relic of the days of witch burning. The typical home poultice is made of flaxseed. It is a soggy, unsavory, germ infested instrument of torture. Clapped upon the suffering baby's chest, it interferes with the poor child's breathing, infects his skin with the germs that cause pimples and boils and makes him unbearably uncomfortable and unhappy. The heat in the poultice is its only valuable feature. The dampness does damage, and the flaxseed is as inert as so much sawdust or breakfast food. Why not use hot water bags or, better still, hot cloths?—Delineator.

He Got the Teacher.

A man called at a grammar school in a large city to see one of the teachers and, uncertain just which was the room he wanted, noted the bell buttons in the main corridor. He pressed one of them. His surprise was great when soon after the sound of the gong children and teachers fled forth from the various rooms, all in orderly line and with no excitement or crowding. The visitor had pressed the button which called for the fire alarm drill practice.

Useful to Flirts.

A young man called on a patent expert and showed him an idea he wanted protected. It was in the form of an engagement ring.

"But," said the expert, examining the very ordinary looking circlet, "what is there patentable about this?"

"It is adjustable, sir," said the inventor proudly.—London Answers.

THE FLY PEST.

Incessant warfare can be waged against the common housefly without any compunction of conscience on the part of even the most chicken hearted. There is not a good and redeeming word that can be said in its favor. It makes a bad start by hatching in the horse manure pile, and its career is a filthy one from this on. It frequents swill barrels, masses of foul smelling and decaying vegetable and animal matter and cesspools, and from these, reeking and germ laden, it seeks refuge in the house, befouling paint and paper, dish and glass and contaminating any foodstuff that it has access to. It is recognized by health authorities everywhere as a prolific spreader of typhoid and other filth disease germs. One of the best ways to reduce the numbers of the pest is to keep the manure pile cleaned up and spread on the fields, and if this is not practicable the same result may be accomplished by scattering small quantities of air slaked lime over the compost pile as it accumulates. Swill barrels and moist piles of refuse should be moved from the kitchen door, and in the latter case the lime treatment will have the desired effect. In the house the good work may be continued by having tight fitting door and window screens and the keeping of fly paper in convenient places.

ORIGIN OF BORDEAUX MIXTURE.

Like many another useful preparation, the bordeaux mixture, which has been used as a fungicide since 1883 and is an invaluable aid to orchard and vineyard owners, was discovered by mere chance. It is said that near the town of Bordeaux, France, owners of certain vineyards by the roadside were in the habit of sprinkling them with verdigris to give them the appearance of having been poisoned in order to prevent depredations. Later a mixture of copper sulphate and lime was used as a substitute for this. When the mildew made its appearance in these vineyards it was noticed that the vines which had been given this treatment were freer from the disease, and thus by a very simple deduction the mixture, later called bordeaux, was given the credit for the good work. From that day to the present it has held first place as the most valuable and effective of fungicides.

THE ROUND BARN.

Some who plan to build barns are debating whether the round or more common rectangular structure will be the more satisfactory. Some points in favor of the round barn as well as some disadvantages are worth noting. The round barn is the more substantial in case of storm, and the stable work in some respects is more easily done, particularly if the silo is in the center. On the other hand, the round barn is more difficult and expensive to build, while the interior space cannot be so economically used, owing to the segmental rather than rectangular spaces. As to the silo advantage in the round barn, it is no longer considered necessary that the silo should be included in the barn structure, and hence its location at the center of the round barn, except for convenience in feeding operations, would seem to be a drawback rather than a point in its favor.

GROUND THE WIRES.

Death of stock during thunderstorms is in a majority of cases the result of their nearness to wire fences, which have become charged with electricity during thunderstorms. It is a characteristic of the electric current to readily leave the overcharged wire for any object within a short distance. Losses from this source may be almost entirely done away with if the fence wires are grounded. This may be done by running short pieces of wire down the fenceposts at intervals of from six to eight rods, attaching them to each of the two or three wires and having the ends extend into the ground a foot or more. When this is done the overcharge is diverted into the ground, which is an excellent conductor, instead of into cattle, horses or other objects which may be near by.

DOING ONE THING WELL.

The boy just starting out in active, eager life would do well to remember that more than all else success in life depends on doing some one thing better than others do it, whether preaching a sermon, sawing a board, painting a rose, digging a ditch, being a college president or running a farm. There is plenty of opportunity at good wages for men in these and other lines who understand their business and do it exceptionally well. To fit oneself for this kind of service depends upon selecting the occupation one likes best and is best suited to, making thorough preparation for it and, lastly, devoting one's energies to the object in view with patience and enthusiasm.

Every well regulated home should operate its own curfew ordinance and not look to the town to herd the boys and girls off the street when they ought to be home and in bed.

If the feeding schedule carried out with the dairy cow—so many pounds of feed for milk given—were applied to a good many men and boys and so many ounces of food given for hours' work done, there would be a big bunch of them scratching gravel or reduced to a fare of cheap toothpicks and water.

In sections of the country which are likely to be visited by heavy windstorms during the summer season, when the silo is empty, there seems to be a considerable advantage in the cement or brick structure over those built of wood. Where the wooden one is on the place it should be stayed with three or four strong guy wires, which will enable it to withstand most anything short of a tornado.

Sorghum hay is a roughage ration that may be grown late and makes an excellent feed. After being cut, which should not be done until there has been a good hard frost, it should be piled in good sized cocks and allowed to lie thus until fed. If put together in large quantities, as is cured hay, it will spoil. Stock relishes the sorghum fodder and seems to do well on it.

One resourceful chap we read of the other day—a Missouri man it was—has hit upon the plan of attaching a small sized road drag to his empty wagon on trips to and from town. In this way one side of the road is leveled off going and the other returning. In such good condition has this stretch of road been put that merchants of the near by town as well as the farm owners are adopting the scheme on other roads.

Following one line means success in a majority of cases, but did not with the Illinois farmer who got fine homestead land at $1.25 per acre sixty years ago, has grown nothing but wheat and corn on it since and today gets but two bushels of wheat and ten of corn per acre, and even to get this paltry return has to let his land rest part of the time at that to get its breath. He was one of your practical fellows who followed in the agricultural ruts of his forefathers and had no time for lead pencil farmers or experiment station bulletins.

The pasture should be one of the best assets on a well managed farm and if properly handled should give as large a return with as little outlay of work as any other acres on the place. One way in which its efficiency may be increased is to give it a light top dressing of fertilizer with the spreader, paying special attention to the spots where the soil seems to be the thinnest. In this way an effective disposal can be made of much of the manure which accumulates about the stables during the summer months, which if not carried out would lose about half of its fertilizing value from exposure to rain and weather.

A discerning contributor to a well known dairy paper in accounting for the financially strapped condition of so many dairymen in sections of New York which he visited finds the chief reasons for their unenviable condition to be poor cows, the buying of much feed that ought to be raised on the farm, failure to utilize to their full value the crops that are produced, especially corn, and waste of money in extravagant personal habits when it ought to be spent for supplies for the home and feed for the dairy cows. The causes cited by this investigator would seem to be sufficient to account for a good deal of low ebb dairying and farming.

It is a fact conceded by all dairymen and feeders that pasture grass is as nearly a perfect feed as it is possible to have. There are several reasons for this. One is that it is juicy and succulent and, entirely apart from its nutritive properties, is eaten with keen relish by all domestic animals. Added to this is the fact that it contains in nicely balanced proportions the several nutritive elements required for meat and milk production. Another point is that it is not eaten in stuffy, ill ventilated and poorly lighted barns, but in the open, where with every mouthful of grass taken into the stomach a breath of sweet fresh air is taken into the lungs, purifying the blood, aiding the heart action and increasing to a maximum the animal's power of assimilation, which in turn makes possible the consumption of still larger quantities of food and an increased production of milk and meat.

By way of showing that the west does not have a monopoly in the opportunities it offers for home seekers may be cited the case of a colony of Italians who a short time ago settled in Chautauqua county, N. Y. There were 400 men in the colony, which numbered 2,000 with women and children. They bought up 1,736 acres of land at $35 an acre and put it into vineyards, and the same land is today valued at $150 an acre, an increase in value of more than 400 per cent. The same thing on a smaller scale is being done by other foreigners in this and other New England states, the land being used for the production of a great variety of early vegetables and other staple food crops. Bred to an almost painful thrift in the old countries, they have come to the new and by applying the same methods in the sections mentioned are becoming well to do, where the less thrifty American is scarcely able to eke out a living.

There are still sections in the south where geese are driven long distances to market. In order to keep them from getting footsore the birds are driven over a spot smeared with tar and then over fine sand, which gives them a patent footgear.

Only the marauding hawks or owls seen raiding the poultry yard and actually caught with the goods should fall victims to the shotgun. When they develop the chicken stealing habit they belong to the same class as the cat which kills little chickens or the egg sucking dog, and it is then all right to dispatch them.

A remarkable instance of the increase in value of Washington fruit lands is told in conection with one orchard proprietor in the Hood river valley who nine years ago advised one of his workmen to buy a forty next his own. The latter closed the deal at $15 per acre. The tract was set to apples and is today valued at $2,000 an acre, or $80,000. This smacks of the days of '49, only the gold is picked off the trees instead of being washed out of the ground.

Beet sugar men who have looked the section over believe that beets can be grown successfully without irrigation in the Arkansas valley in Kansas between Dodge City and Great Bend, and an experiment will be made along that line this season. If it is shown that beets can be grown in the valley without irrigation it is possible that coming years may see beet raising extensively carried on along the old Santa Fe trail from central Kansas to the mountains in Colorado.

Owing to the lateness of the spring a good many northern feeders ran badly short of rough feed, and as a result both dairy cows and steers in the feed lot went on pretty short rations, with a distinct loss in both instances. The time to provide for next winter and spring feeding is now, and enough should be secured to leave a margin for just such a contingency. This will not make it necessary to turn the stock on to the pastures two or three weeks before it is time, which does stock little good and is a distinct injury to the pasture through the whole season.

A hog raiser who reported his case in the "trouble" department of a late issue of an agricultural paper states that he fed his brood sows on a ration of corn and cob and oil meal and many of the pigs were born dead. This was about what might have been expected, the ration being badly out of whack, heating and fat forming rather than cooling and bone and muscle forming. The oilmeal should have been replaced with barley, beans or peas, while oats and bran should have taken the place of the corn and cob meal. The feeder simply made a mistake and got the ration for the fattening shotes into the brood sow trough.

In England there are farms which have been cropped continuously for hundreds of years which are today giving larger crop returns than at the beginning, in some instances two and a half times the yield. This has been possible as a result of the Englishman's recognition that the soil is a crop manufacturing plant and that to give generous returns it must be supplied with the necessary fertilizing elements from which to give returns. It would be just as reasonable to expect a steam power plant to give effective pressure without fuel or water as the land to produce crops without conserving the fertilizing elements it contains and supplying such as are consumed in the crop growing process.

In the life of many a girl there comes the trying hour when she meets her first affinity. She is usually from fifteen to nineteen when this happens. She tries to make her mother believe that if she does not accept the proffer of this first knight she will die of a broken heart—she just knows she will. Of course it would not be considerate to view her mood lightly, but it is more than likely she will survive if she doesn't take up right away the work of washing dishes and darning socks for this first comer. This dear girl should realize that there are as good fish in the sea as ever came out of it; that at twenty-two the bait will be just as good, and better, while at that age she will know what fish are really worth catching.

In a majority of sections one of the foes most destructive to the life of the orchard trees is the little white borer which is laid in some crevice in the bark near the ground in latter May or early June and soon disappears, boring and working damage as it goes. The borer works in the tree two full seasons, emerging from it as a mature borer beetle two years from the time the egg is laid. The presence of the pest in the tree is often shown from the brownish wood dust which it throws out, usually at the point at which it enters the tree. A sharp jackknife and a pliable peeled twig are the equipment needed to exterminate them. The bark should be cut away carefully—just enough to locate the culprit—when he can be jabbed to a finish. Trees are often nearly girdled below ground with little exterior evidence that anything is the matter. For this reason it is well to keep all grass and weeds away from the trunks of the trees and in the trips of inspection to scrape the earth away from close to the trunk to the depth of two or three inches.

WOES OF THE PURSER

He Has Troubles of His Own on the Trip Across the Atlantic.

MUST HAVE A GOOD TEMPER.

His Time Wasted by Foolish Questions and Trivial Appeals, Mainly by Women Passengers, Yet He Has to Be Always Polite and Agreeable.

"Yes," said the purser on one of the big liners recently to the writer, who happened to be taking a trip from Liverpool to New York, "we have our own troubles, I can assure you, and I sometimes envy the captain his solitary enjoyment of the bridge, even during a sixty mile gale. Passengers seem to think that the purser is put on a ship simply to answer foolish questions.

"Of course there is a good deal which we have to put up with as being part of our legitimate duties, though when a passenger brings us a hundred dollar yellow back and asks to have it changed into English, French, German and Spanish money and stipulates that there must be twice as much French as German and half the remainder in English silver coins, presumably for tips, is it any wonder that we occasionally lose our tempers?

"And then, again, the purser is always appealed to for the most trivial things. A woman passenger comes to the window, and if it is closed she will bang on it till it is opened, no matter if the sign is there as large as life that the office hours are from 11 to 2 and 4 to 6 o'clock and she is honoring me with a call at 3 p. m. Then, when the window is raised for fear she will smash it to smithereens, she says, with a sweet smile: 'Oh, Mr. Purser, I am so sorry to disturb you. I know it is not your hour of business, but could you tell me if we will really land next Thursday, as I told my brother we would, and I know he will be waiting for me on the dock.'

"Of course I am polite, but I have some difficulty in persuading her that I am not running the ship, and neither can I control the elements. She goes away with an expression that clearly shows she thinks I am keeping something back and it will be my fault if we do not arrive at the time appointed.

"I remember on one trip when the weather was particularly stormy a woman passenger knocked at my door—after office hours, of course—and begged that she might speak to me for a few minutes. I politely asked her to enter, and then, her eyes starting out of her head with the excitement of suppressed emotion, she implored me to draw up her will. I protested that I was not a lawyer, but do you think she would be satisfied with that excuse? Not much! There and then I had to draw up a document in the best legal phraseology I could muster.

"When it was finished and I and my assistant had signed it she gave the young fellow a sovereign for his trouble, and as for me—well, she took off a very handsome ring and insisted on my accepting it. I have that ring yet, but what became of the donor I never knew, for when the storm abated and we were safe in port she never so much as bade me goodby, though I had repeatedly asked her to take back her ring. She was a very rich woman evidently, and the 'bequests' in that will I drew up made my eyes bulge.

"Most passengers when we have been a day or so out bring the purser all their valuables, for which they receive a receipt. Some nervous women seem to think that a 'strong room' at sea is not a very secure place for their jewels, and they insist on seeing their treasures at least every day. One woman passenger made my life a burden during a recent voyage by taking her valuables out and putting them in again three times a day until I told her that the next time she called for them I would not take them back again, whereat she told me, with a sour look, that I was impertinent and she would inform the captain. I believe she did so, but the captain gave her a word or two of advice regarding the implicit trust which should be placed in a purser, and this quieted her. In fact, she afterward came to me and apologized for her seeming rudeness.

"As a rule, I conduct church service on board, as the captain does not enjoy the work, but prefers to remain on the bridge. Many a funeral service also has fallen to my lot, and I have even officiated at a christening. I am usually the one to whom a passenger flies when he is dissatisfied with his cabin, though the duty of changing a stateroom really rests with the head steward. Then, again, it is the purser who is appealed to when the passengers elect to hold a concert, and the young folks usually rush to him also when they want to have a dance on deck. A purser can be very popular or the reverse, and unless you have an excellent temper you stand a good chance of being the reverse.

"The funniest experience I had was on a recent trip, when there was on board a little girl about twelve years old. She struck up a warm friendship with me and would walk the deck for miles if I would only accompany her. She fell very ill during a storm and refused to be comforted. Her mother asked her if there was anything she could do which would ease her suffering, and the young imp said there was if she would only 'skidoo' and let the purser read a book to her she would feel better. And the indulgent mother came to me, stated the case, and—well, I complied with her request and read to the child for a little while each day until she was well enough to come on deck again."—London Tit Bits.

BILL LANGE'S FEAT.

One of the Famous Old Outfielder's Sensational Catches.

The greatest individual feat ever performed was one by which Bill Lange saved a game for Chicago and $200 for himself in Washington in 1895. There is an odd story connected with the play. Lange had missed a train in Boston two days before, failed to reach New York in time to play there, and Anson had fined him $100. Thereupon he missed a train to Washington—arrived on the grounds after the teams had practiced and just in time to play, and for that Anson fined him another $100. The game that afternoon went eleven innings, Chicago scoring one run in the eleventh. There were two men out and a runner on the bases when "Kip" Selbach, then one of the hardest hitters in the business, smote the ball a terrific blow and sent it flying over Lange's head toward the center field fence. The hit seemed a sure home run, but Lange, a man weighing 225 pounds, turned and without looking sprinted desperately straight out toward the fence, racing with the flying ball. At the last instant, as the ball was going over his head, Lange leaped, stuck up both hands, turned a somersault and crashed against the fence. The boards splintered, one entire panel crashed outward, and out of the wreckage crawled Lange, holding the ball in his hand, and the crowd went mad. Lange came limping in, with the crowd standing on seats shouting, and he said to Anson, "Fines go, cap?" "Nope," said Anson, and the catch had saved the big fielder $200.—Hugh S. Fullerton in American Magazine.

THE FIRST ALMANACS.

They Attempted to Foretell Men's Destiny From the Stars.

The almanac, properly so called in its origin, is not merely a device for keeping people in mind of the progress of the year. It is an attempt to show what destiny has in store for us as indicated by the position of the stars in any particular year, and as, according to astrological lore, the destinies of men are ruled by the different aspects of the planets, so also the human body is subject to the influence of the constellations through which the sun appears to pass in his yearly course. A French almanac of 1610 gives a diagram of the human body surrounded by all the signs of the zodiac and indicates the various organs and members over which these signs have power, and this for a guide pour les saignees, or to show at what period blood may be let with safety. But the same almanac also gives directions sensible enough for the avoidance of the plague which would not be found fault with by a modern fashionable physician:

Who would keep his body in health
And resist the infection of the plague,
Let him seek joy and sadness fly,
Avoid places where infections abound
And cherish joyous company.

A few examples exist of almanacs of this character before the invention of printing, although none, it is believed, earlier than the twelfth century. But some of the earliest specimens of printing are black printed German sheet almanacs, which are chiefly concerned about blood letting.—Westminster Gazette.

Wasted Time.

Mrs. Newrich was growing accustomed to power. She enjoyed it and was irritated when any one presumed to differ from her in opinion. When the sailing party of which she had been a member landed on the shores of the lake rain soaked and frightened, Mrs. Newrich was the only one who cared to talk.

"It could all have been avoided if that captain had done as I told him," she said between the chattering of her teeth as the party stood huddled under a small shelter.

"When I saw that cloud coming from that corner of the lake I said to him, 'I think you'd better make straight for home and not spend any more time tacking,' but he paid no more attention than as if I hadn't spoken!"—Youth's Companion.

He Didn't Bet.

"A man in my county," said a Kansas congressman, "was always anxious to bet on his game of checkers. One time he was about to play a game for $10 with a fellow called Three Fingered Jack. Suddenly one of his friends exclaimed:

"'Don't bet, Charlie. Don't you know that fellow wore off two fingers playing checkers? That's why he's called Three Fingered Jack.'

"That settled it. The bet was never made. A man who had worn off two fingers by brushing them up and down the checkerboard was too much for my friend."—Kansas City Journal.

A Bitter Disappointment.

"When I was in Paris," remarked the collector of curios, "I discovered in a bookstall a volume which I knew at first glance to be of extraordinary value. I could scarcely believe my good luck. Breathless, I inquired the price of the dealer. Just think of it! I could have had that treasure for a song!"

"Well, why didn't you get it?"

"Never could sing a note in my life," cried the collector, bursting into tears.—New York Times.

The Audience Moved.

He had been trying to start a revival fervor, but the audience was unresponsive. "O ye of flinty hearts," he cried, "will nothing move you?" "Pass the hat, boss," answered the gamin, "and we move immediately."—Florida Times-Union.

When a business man suffers from overstrain or a student from overwork sometimes, instead of taking to bed, he disappears. Suddenly he is missing, all trace of him lost. His family and friends invariably fear the worst. They imagine he has met with accident and is lying unconscious in a hospital or has parted with his wits and is confined in an asylum or has even taken his own life.

These things are all possible, but the probable thing is none of them. The probable thing is that the overwrought man has yielded to a natural impulse and instinctively has sought a cure by becoming a wanderer for the time. He has put the cares of the old life behind him and with them the people that recall the old life and has given himself up to the healing of the road. To drift with no well defined object, to see strange places and faces, ever to answer the call of the beyond—"die ferne," as the Germans call it—is more than a dream lying somewhere in the back of every man's mind, where it was lodged by some ancestor of the nomad period; it is one of nature's own remedies for the worries of life.

For the man with a great sorrow, for the man with a troubled conscience, for the man whose nerves are not treating him right, travel, change of scene, is one of the things the wise physician will prescribe. If it be a veritable tramp afoot the cure will be speedier and more complete and may work physical regeneration into the bargain.—New York Mail.

A FLOWER AND A WISH.

The Romantic Marriage of De Lesseps of Suez Canal Fame.

Sir Henry Brackenbury tells in Blackwood's Magazine the story of the romantic marriage of M. de Lesseps. A Frenchman living in Reunion was compelled by the illness of his wife to take her to France. He sailed with his wife and two young daughters, but the wife died on the voyage. Some time afterward the Frenchman called on M. de Lesseps, told him of his misfortunes and of his sufferings on the long sea voyage and expressed the wish to dedicate the remainder of his life to the furtherance of the construction of the Suez canal. De Lesseps gave him an appointment at Ismailia, and employment was found in one of the workshops there for his daughters.

One day De Lesseps' attention was attracted by these two girls, with whom he entered into conversation. He came again next day and gave to each of them a flower, saying that they should frame a wish the last thing at night and that if in the morning they found that the flowers had opened the wish would be granted.

On the following morning he went to their house and found one of the girls smiling, the other in tears. He asked the cause of the latter's sadness.

"My flower has not opened," she replied.

"Tell me your wish, so that if possible it may be granted," responded M. de Lesseps.

"Ah, to you least of all men I can tell it!" was her answer. The great engineer married her.

Chinese Dramatic Crudities.

Here is a sample of one of the naive bits of Chinese stage craft. Hom Ling, leading tragedian, playing the part of the younger son, renders a solo which means that the widow and orphans are going to the temple to celebrate funeral rites. The property man sets on the stage a little box for an altar and throws over the widow's head a white veil, symbol of mourning. Then Hom Ling, as the younger son, waves his hands and kicks his foot like a man punting a football. This signifies that the rest of the family is out of his sphere of action. The scene has officially changed from a house to a temple. So, while the rest of the family kneels before the altar, Hom Ling strolls over and chats with one of the musicians who happens to be resting.—Everybody's Magazine.

What Forty Poles Make.

A good story is told about a certain professor whose business it was to lecture to a number of students on surveying. During one of the lectures the professor said that in his opinion the pole was of little or no value. To the astonishment of those present a Polish gentleman arose and after accusing the professor of insulting his countrymen demanded an apology.

The professor thereupon explained that the pole to which he referred was merely a term of measurement. The Polish gentleman, seeing his mistake, asked the professor to forgive his apparent rudeness. To this the professor smartly replied:

"You could not be rude, sir, even if you tried, for it takes forty poles to make one rood!"—London Mail.

The Amazon River.

Although not the largest or longest river, the Amazon is the most wonderful river in the world, with a mouth 150 miles in width and with a force of water that repels or at least overlays the ocean to a distance of more than fifty leagues. Yet in spite of the weight of the river the tide makes its influence felt for 500 miles from the coast. The easterly trade winds blow almost invariably upward, so as to be ready to help the vessel against the adverse currents.

In Disguise.

"Do you mean to say that you flirted with your wife all the evening at the masked ball and didn't know her?"

"That's right. But she was so deuced agreeable how was I to know her?"—Exchange.

HISTORIC SOCIETY

THE THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS.

VOL. XXVI THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, JULY 29, 1909 NUMBER 31

BIG GAME TOMORROW

The Fats and the Leans to Meet on the Diamond Tomorrow Afternoon.

Game to Be for the Benefit of the Band and the Fats are Sure to Win.

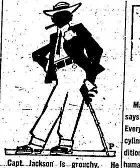
Citizens of Thief River Falls who are at the fair grounds tomorrow afternoon —from present indications the whole populace will be there—will see the mightiest game of ball ever witnessed in the Northwest. The Fats and the Leans will meet upon the diamond and it is the intention of the Fats to shut the Leans out without a score. Dr. G. A. Penney is to be the umpire and that insures a square deal for all, as "Doc" is noted all of the way from Stephen to Thief River Falls as being the fairest man that ever umpired a ball game. The one lung crowd, however, is strongly opposing "Doc" as umpire, but they refuse to name anyone to take his place, although they have suggested the name of Capt. Jackson. Mr. Jackson never knew there was such a thing as a game of ball until he was selected as captain of the Leans and of course could not be expected to do justice, and being biased he would not.

The game is to be played for the benefit of the band, and it is for the purpose of supporting so well-merited an institution that the corpulant gentlemen have consented to subject their weak and helpless fellow beings to a few hours of torture. It is not at all probable that there will be any fatalities, for there is not a live wire among the one cylinder crowd, and it will not be necessary to wear rubber gloves. As a matter of fact there is kind of a gentlemanly understanding among the Fats not to let the Leans down too hard.

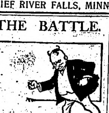
Being an old and experienced base ball manager, Mayor Hamre would not consent to go into the game unprepared and has had his colts out for practice a few evenings. They have made an excellent showing and are in good condition. It is not really necessary for them to do any practice work, but Mayor Hamre always wants to be sure.

The insistance upon the part of the Fats of enforcement of one of the rules has thrown consternation in the ranks of the Leans. This rule is that only married men be allowed to play. Capt. Jackson was engaging all of the young and unsophisticated men of the city to play on his side—not for their genuine worth, but in the hopes that the Leans would thus secure the glad hand of the young ladies of the city who are looking for a husband. As the average age of the Fats is above 40—all married men—they are not looking for applause—unless well merited—from the young girls, but they want an equal show with the Slims. The News is going to have several special reporters upon the ground and the names of all marriageable girls who applaud the Slims when there is no occasion for such applause will be published.

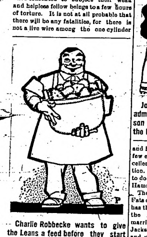
JUST BEFORE THE BATTLE.



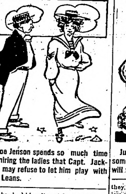
Capt. Jackson is grouchy. He knows his men can't win but refuses to acknowledge it, and puts up a very fair front for a man with a lot of one-lung dispeptics behind him.



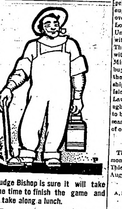
Mayor Hamre, captain of the Fats, says that his men are sure to win. Everyone of them are running on six cylinders and are in the pink of condition, and unless stopped by some humane society will keep the Lean aggregation chasing all over the fair grounds until long after dark picking up the ball.



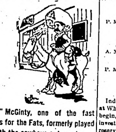
Charlie Robbecke wants to give the Leans a feed before they start to play ball.



Joe Jenson spends so much time admiring the ladies that Capt. Jackson may refuse to let him play with the Leans.



Judge Bishop is sure it will take some time to finish the game and will take along a lunch.



"Bill" McGinty, one of the fast fielders for the Fats, formerly played ball with the cowboys out west.

Your correspondent has been busy for the past week.

A heavy rain fell last Tuesday, so haying will be stopped for some time.

Emil Sigrud brought home a hay loader some time ago. It is the first hay loader in this vicinity.

Miss Tena Anderson and Elga Sigrud drove to the town of Moylan last week to visit Mr. and Mrs. George Wold. They returned home on Sunday.

A ditch meeting will be held tomorrow at Torgeson Bros. store to see if people will agree on getting three judicial ditches running east and west, and run them two miles west into the town of Goodridge and then north to connect with the Marshall county ditch north of the county line.

T. Thunheim of Newfolden was out here buying cattle.

At the school meeting last saturday Emil Sigrud was elected director, and M. M. Anderson district clerk.

The wire on the telephone line from Grygla is expected here most any day so we will have connection to that place soon, and the poles are set to Erie so we expect the whole line will soon be ready so we can stand home and talk to friends far away.

F. J. Stebbins was up to Greenbush, Roseau and Badger last week doing optical work.

Big Flood at Fertile.

Fertile, Minn., July 22.—The Sand Hill river in the southern part of Polk county went on a rampage and a considerable portion of the towns of Fertile, Reis, Liberty, Garfield and Garden have been flooded. The two large power dams at Fertile went this morning and the surrounding territory is flooded and the result has been a considerable loss to crops and stock.

The river is six feet higher this year than ever before. The Northern Pacific bridge at Fertile is in danger, and is expected to be washed away but the citizens are making every effort possible to save it. A number of smaller bridges along the river have also been washed away. A number of narrow escapes from drowning have been reported. The people have been forced to take refuge in trees and on the top of buildings.

The streets in the towns of Beltrami are filled with three feet of water. The crop and property loss in this section cannot be estimated until the water goes down, but will be in the vicinity of $500 000.

Prices to be good.

Andrew Law, a flour and grain importer of Glasgow, Scotland, who has been visiting in Minneapolis, says that in his opinion, the farmers of Minnesota and the Dakotas are certain to get good prices for their wheat, because of the supply conditions existing the world over. From Glasgow, Liverpool and London the big importing firms for the United Kingdom are in constant touch with India, Australia and Argentina. They are in daily cable communication with New York, Chicago, Montreal, Minneapolis and Winnipeg, and they buy where best advantage appears at the moment of purchase, and direct shipment to any ports of the British Isles. From Glasgow headquarters Mr. Law has sounded the situation so thoroughly that he is convinced that there is to be no cheap grain in the world this season, because of the near exhaustion of old crop supplies.—Warren Register.

Investigating Matters.

Indian Inspector Moorhead has arrived at White Earth Indian Agency and will begin, according to the Tomahawk, an investigation of the sale of land on this reservation since the Clapp amendment. In speaking of his proposed work the Tomahawk says:

"There are some strong influences at work to offset whatever Mr. Moorhead may accomplish, and these have employed some of the members of the reservation to circulate among the full bloods and misrepresent to the latter what the government is endeavoring to accomplish by the investigation.

Mr. Moorhead is evidently in earnest in his endeavors to get all the facts in each case.

Lost Sheep in Rain.

It is reported that during the heavy downpour of rain Monday night Ole Groven living a half mile south of Winger lost sixty-nine sheep by drowning in the pasture. The strong wind and storm had driven the sheep into a low part of the pasture and in attempting to drive them out Mr. Groven and his son only succeeded to save nine head of the flock, the other sixty-nine being carried away with the torrent of the Sand Hill river.—Erskine Echo.

Barn Burned.

During a heavy Electrical storm Sunday night lightning struck the large barn on the Sam Miller farm three miles east of town and the building was burned to the ground. The barn was a large one and nearly new. Thirty-five tons of hay and some pigs and chickens were also burned. Mr. Miller estimates his loss at from $1000 to $1,200 and the property was insured for $700.

Death of Mrs. John T. Bundy.

Twin Valley Times: Sunday morning our citizens were pained to learn of the death of Mrs. John T. Bundy, which had occurred the previous night at 12 o'clock, although it was not a surprise to a large number of her friends as she had been troubled with Brights disease for about three years, no medical aid giving her relief.

Deceased was married at Fertile eighteen years ago, where they resided about a year when they moved to Twin Valley, and have made this their home for seventeen years. She was 37 years old at the time of her death, and leaves a husband and eight children—five girls and three boys—to mourn the loss of a loving wife and mother. Mr. Bundy, who is in the employ of the International Harvester Co., arrived here Friday night and was with her at time of her death.

The funeral occurred yesterday from the United church, Rev. Huus officiating. Interment was made in the Twin Valley cemetery. A large number of relatives and friends of the deceased followed the remains to its last resting place and the tribute of flowers was many and beautiful. The husband and children have the sincere sympathy of the entire community in this their hour of trouble.

New Citizens.

Judge Watts held a special term of court in Red Lake Falls last week at which time thirteen residents of the county became citizens of the United States.

Following are the names, native countries and present places of those to whom papers were granted: Olaf T. Barnstadd, Norway, Smiley; John O. Larson, Norway, Hickory; Peter Refsnes, Norway, Goodridge; Oskar Ostrom, Norway, Silverton; Joseph K. Enobs, Norway, Star; Ole A. Dahl, Norway, Kratka; Tobias Erdum, Norway, Kratka; Torkel L. Chalard, Norway, Silverton; Aslay Thoreson, Norway, Goodridge; Xavier Clement, Canada, Louisville; Herman Moline Sweden, Goodridge; Hjalmar H. Fredrickson, Sweden, Gervais; Joseph Novak, Bohemia, Star.

Mrs. Steenerson Injured.

Washington, July 21.—Mrs. Halvor Steenerson, wife of Congressman Steenerson, of Crookston, was knocked down by a bicycle ridden by an unknown man last night, while she and her husband were out walking. Mrs. Steenerson ran from the middle of the street toward the pavement to escape an automobile and was struck by a bicycle coming in an opposite direction. There were some contusions of the right shoulder, thigh and knee, but no bones were broken. It is expected that Mrs. Steenerson will be about in a few days.

Died Last Week.

The seven and one-half months old son of Mr. and Mrs. O. Tessum died last Thursday evening. The funeral services were held on Saturday afternoon. The parents have the sympathy of the community.

BIG FAIR NEXT WEEK

Red Lake County Fair to Be Held on the 4th, 5th and 6th of August.

Will Be a Bigger and Better Fair Than Ever Before Held Here.

The Red Lake county fair to be held in Thief River Falls this year on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, August 4, 5, and 6, promises to be by far better than ever before. A large number of farmers and others are figuring upon making exhibits and these will all be well cared for.

For the free amusements this year, the fair association has made an extra effort and has secured the services of the Chicago Amusement company, said to be one of the best companies on the road. There will be four big and sensational free street acts and everyone of them will be worth coming miles to see.

Perhaps the most sensational feature will be the ascending of a man and an African lion in a mammoth balloon. Each will make a parachute leap to earth in separate parachutes.

Already some fast track horses have arrived and will remain until after the fair to participate in the races, and many more have entered and will arrive the latter part of this week or the first of next week. The races this year will be unusually good.

Owing to the interest being taken in the fair, some special events not already advertised have have been added to the list of attractions. The following special events will be for Wednesday, August 4, the first day of the fair.

Gentlemen's driving race—1st prize, $15, 2nd prize, $10.

Slow race—change riders and last horse wins—1st prize $10; 2nd prize, $10 3rd prize, $2.50.

Commission Plan Lost.

After one of the bitterest fights in the history of Fargo, the commission plan of the city government lost out in the vote cast there last Thursday by the narrow margin of 99 ballots. The total vote cast was 1,835 and is considered very good. The first and second wards were the ones that killed the inaguration of the new movement. These wards known as the Kennedy wards gave a majority of 190 against the plan making it very evident that in the better districts of the city sentiment favored the adoption of the plan.

Don't Move Government Survey Marks.

It is strictly unlawful for any person to destroy, deface change or remove any section corner, quarter section corner or mender post; cut down any tree blazed to mark the line, or any other mark on a government survey. Any person found guilty offending against this provision may be fined $250 or imprisoned not more than a hundred days.

Lake's Water Poisonous.

Lake Emily, a body of water about twenty-five miles east of Pine River in Cass county, is becoming poisonous. The fish are dying in large numbers and stock and poultry that drink the water, have been affected. It is believed by some that a deadly parasite with more than the usual destroying power, has invaded the lake. Others express the opinion that a vein of copper has been unearthed by the recent rains and that it has infected the water. Copper, mixed with water, forms a deadly poison, and it would not be surprising if the latter belief was the correct one.

Strandquist.

Sheriff Forsberg and wife visited here last Thursday, with P. Shilberg.

There was a dance in town last Saturday evening, many were present, and everybody seemed to have enjoyed a very pleasant evening.

Blueberries are ripe around here now. A great number of people were down on the sandridge picking last Sunday. Among those there were Mr. and Mrs. Erick Lefroth, John Erickson, Rasmi Nelson, Anton Janson, A. Dura, and W. C. Addy; his mother, and sister Dorothy.

Mrs. Ole Sjodine, who has been in the hospital at Warren for medical treatment is expected home this week.

Mrs. Saul is visiting Lewis Anderson this week, Mrs. Saul formerly lived near here.

Mr. Fred Anderson has left for the west, he intends to file on different land entries out there.

Miss Ottinne Rocks was called home on Monday evening on account of the sickness of her brother.

Merchant Strandquist is baying three days. Judging from what he has accomplished to-day, he will have a lot of hay under roof before very long.

Mr. Charley Carlson is working on the section now.

Mr. A. P. Lundstrom, our heaviest citizen is limping around these days. He having hurt his knee, in the famous tug of war on the Fourth of July.

Mr. Nels A. Johnson, clerk at the Addy Merc. Co. store is on his vacation this week He has gone to Canada to visit his brother.

Strandquist is to have the greatest market day ever given. There will be horse racing, cash prizes, free auctioneer, tug of war, Base Ball game, and many other features to numerous to mention. Every one plan and come, and visit the coming town of Marshall county. Monday August 9, 09.

Married at Glenwood.

The following, taken from the Glenwood Herald will be of local interest, the bride being a sister of Mrs. George Williams and Emil Griebstein: A wedding of considerable importance and interest citizens of Glenwood was consummated Saturday afternoon when Boyd O. Werdin and Miss Annie Griebstein were united in marriage, the cermony performed at the home of the afternoon by Justice Frank E. Reed, in the presence of immediate members of the family.

The bride is a very estimable young lady of twenty summers. Her native town is Thief River Falls which she continued to make her home till three years ago when she came to Glenwood. Since then she has made her home with Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Smith. She has by her pleasing disposition won a large number of friends who wish her well in her married life.

The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Werdin and is one of the popular young men of the village. He was the first child born at Boyd, Lac qui Parle county, and received his name from that village. He is twenty-four years old and came to this village with his parents thirteen years ago. He attended the public schools and graduated from the Commercial Course at the Glenwood Academy. Four years ago he accepted a position with Siebrlz Brothers and Craig and had charge of their elevator at Borilla, S. Dak. A year later he entered the employ of the Gackel Grain Company and managed its elevator at Kulm, N. Dak.

He is an enterprising and responsible young man who is in every way worthy of the splendid young lady that he has won as his bride.

Germantown.

The heaviest rain of the season and of about all other seasons we can remember fell here Sunday and Monday a week ago and as a result a great part of the country has been wetter than wet ever since, altho the flood caused by the downpour has receded quite noticeably from the high mark at the time of this writing. Crops are reported to be dam aged to some extent in places, but the largest damage seems, from present indications, to be on the potatoes and other vegetables which will be next to a total failure. Roads that were in the pink of condition were also rendered impassable in many places on account of washed out bridges, etc. Haying had been well commenced but has been at a stand-still since and at best operations will only be generally resumed the first or middle of this week.

State Evangelist of the American Sunday School Union, A. D. Mace commenced a two weeks series of meetings here week before last, but was hindered from continuing last Monday on account of sickness, and left for his home in the southern part of Minnesota.

School election on July 17th was a decidedly tame affair in every way. There was a very small turn-out and only regular business was transacted at the meeting. There will be eight months of school the present year, and a first grade teacher will presumably be employed. Martin Olson was elected clerk for a term of three years to succeed William Vaughan who would have been re-elected, but for the reason that he could not accept.

J. W. Rambeck, of Stephens Point, Wisconsin, is here for a visit with his son, Oscar Rembeck.

Hans Skogstad was a Germantown aller from Silverton last week.

Prof. O. J. Sarvold's lecture on Norway was received by a packed house in the Zion church Sunday evening. It was well worth the price of admission and then some, and no one went away dissatisfied.

From the broad and fertile plains of the town of Moylan, checkered with meadows, fields and pastures, dotted with innumerable sparkling crystal lakes, has come the first faint vibrations of the wedding bells, and if the wise ones are as wise as they should be, perhaps we can incorporate a real announcement in a later correspondence.

Miss Adelaide Holden left here last week for a visit to her old home at Ada.

Nels Jacob drew the largest check from the local creamery for the month of June, being some over $72.

Neighborhood Quarrel.

There is all kinds of trouble in the neighborhood south of the Red Lake river in the town of Smiley and the matter will now have to straightened out by the courts. Last Saturday Lewis Johnson appeared at the home of Charles Helm and demanded a mower that Helm had purchased from another person for $5. Helm insisted upon removing some extras that he had purchased for the mower and this resulted in a discussion in which more than words were used and the result was that Helm sustained a broken collar bone, being struck with a board by Johnson.

Helm came to this city and caused a warrant to be issued for the arrest of Johnson, charging assault in the second degree. The case will be tried on the [illegible] of August.

The largest tobacco plantation in the world is near Amsterdam, Ga., and contains 25,000 acres. On this tract is grown about one-third of all the Sumatra tobacco used for cigar wrappers in the United States.

It is but a short step from the prize game of cards in the parlor to the poker game in the haymow or in the joint downtown. The boy sees the connection and draws his deductions, whether milady is able to or not.

It is a fine thing that women as a class are as religiously inclined as they are, but it would be still better if the men were held accountable for about half the piety in the home and the matter not left as one sided as it is at present.

Many attach importance to the badger sign in the location of a place for a well, the theory being that this homely animal has a water instinct which causes him to dig his burrows in low places where it is but a few feet to water.

A small colony of Mormons in the desert country south of Tucson, Ariz., dry farmed 200 acres in beans last year and sold the crop for $13,000. Beats all what can be accomplished when thrift and enterprise are hitched up under the same neck yoke.

May 14 best grade Colorado lambs in fleece brought $9.50 on the Chicago market, the highest price on record up to that time. Native lambs in good condition brought $8 to $8.10. These prices make the sheep business look like a pretty safe and satisfactory proposition.

The yield of wheat in Russia for twenty years past has been eight and one-fourth bushels per acre, the land lying fallow every third year and a famine appearing about once every five. It is little wonder in the face of this showing that anarchy and misery run riot in the czar's domain.

Last year Canada had 500,000 acres of land devoted to the growing of potatoes, which produced a total of 71,511,000 bushels, or an average of 142 bushels per acre. The average market price was 50 cents a bushel. The above yield is about twice per acre that reported for the same period in the United States.

A good many Wisconsin farmers had their eyes opened on this tuberculosis question when attending the short course classes at Madison the past winter. Not only was the subject of tuberculosis discussed, but animals shown to be affected with the disease by the tuberculin test were slaughtered before the class and the effects of the disease demonstrated.

Those farmers who rather incline to the dual purpose cow will read with satisfaction and interest of the record recently completed by the registered Shorthorn cow Lulu, owned by the Missouri Agricultural college. Her showing for a week was 19 pounds of butter, for a month 77.8 pounds and for a full year 605.6 pounds. Her milk yield for the year was 12,341 pounds, testing 4.17 per cent butter fat.

A BOSS BERRY GROWER.

Horticultural papers of recent date cite the case of a strawberry grower at Creston, B. C., who last year raised 2,206 crates of strawberries—52,944 quarts—from four and one-eighth acres. In explaining the remarkable yield obtained the grower attributes it to careful preparation of and enriching the land before setting the plants; thorough cultivation, snipping blossoms, layering the runners and spraying two or three times the rows and scattering nitrates and covering with mulch pulled from berry rows the second season. In explanation of the prices received for berries, never less than $2.20 per crate, he lays especial stress on making preparations for the picking and packing of the fruit and shipping to but one dealer in a town. From the standpoint of productiveness and shipping quality he ranks the varieties of berries he has grown in the following order of excellence: Dunlap, Warfield, Parsons Beauty, Glen Mary, Clyde, Tennessee Prolific and Lady Thompson. This getting a gross return of close to $1,200 from each acre of land may be in part due to favorable climatic conditions, but more than all else to the man and the fact that he has made a very thorough business of growing strawberries.

BURNT SUGAR A DISINFECTANT.

The burning of sugar as a disinfectant in sickrooms is a practice followed in many parts of Europe and has usually been viewed by physicians as an innocent superstition, neither beneficial nor harmful. Professor Tribert of the Pasteur institute at Paris has recently demonstrated in experiments which he has been making that the burning of sugar develops a remarkably powerful antiseptic gas. Five grams of sugar were burned under a glass bell holding ten quarts, and after the vapor had cooled germs of typhus, tuberculosis, cholera and smallpox were placed in open glass tubes under the bell, and within half an hour all the microbes were found dead. The efficacy of burnt sugar as a purifier of air containing offensive odors is well known and is probably due to the antiseptic principle referred to. This seems to be one instance in which a popular superstition seems unwittingly to have had a very good scientific foundation.

SEED IMPORTATIONS.

Professor N. E. Hansen of the South Dakota experiment station, sent abroad by Secretary Wilson to gather seeds of plants suitable to northern latitudes, has lately returned home. Included in some 250 kinds of seeds which he brought back with him are those of a clover and a variety of alfalfa growing wild in northern Asia north of Lake Baikal, where the temperature sometimes goes to 75 degrees below zero, adapted to the northwestern states; a supply of Persian clover seed suitable for western Texas, New Mexico and Arizona; varieties of alfalfa from north Africa, the original home of this legume, whence it was taken to Spain, to South America and then north and east through the southern states. It is Professor Hansen's belief that the ideal alfalfa of the future will be a hybrid of all the best alfalfas known. The development of these plant importations will be followed with keen interest by all who are watching the remarkable development of the country agriculturally.

BLEACHED FLOUR.

Secretary James Wilson has won out in a contention which he had with the millers of the country about bleached flour, it being his view that subjecting flour to the bleaching process was a violation of the pure food laws. This question takes its origin from the increased production of durum or macaroni wheat, which, owing to an excess above demands for export purposes, the millers have been bleaching and mixing with other flour. Flour from durum wheat contains a large per cent of gluten, is quite yellow in color, and it is because of the desire of the millers, who pay less for the wheat, to sell it under another name that the trouble has arisen. Secretary Wilson holds that this flour should sell under its own colors and sell for just what it is.

FRUIT JUICES VERSUS DOPE.

Humanity would be stronger and have a much smaller annual doctor's bill if it would swill down less dope—quinine, bromo seltzer and booze concoctions disguised under pious, soothing and high sounding names—and eat more nature distilled fruit juices, grapefruit for malaria, prunes and figs for costiveness, cranberries for slow liver, lemon juice in hot water for nausea and biliousness, with apples, oranges, pears, peaches and the rest as aids to digestion, blood purifiers and for the general health.

If one has a brush patch which he wants cleaned up, nothing will do the job more quickly and thoroughly than a bunch of Angora goats. They are a veritable scourge in the horticultural world.

An Illinois poultry breeder has five White Wyandotte hens which have laid 1,223 eggs in one year, or an average of 233.4 each. The oldest hen in the flock, the mother of the other four, laid 253 eggs in eleven months.

It is a puzzler how so many kids survive the August period of dog day soaks in swimming holes, green hazel nuts and half grown apples, but it seems that a vast majority of them do and are no worse for the ordeal.

Bugs doped with arsenic are said to die of starvation. The important consideration, whatever the diagnosis, is that an effective kink is put in their digestive apparatuses, which keeps them from a further chewing of trees, fruits and vegetables.

A Fresno county (Cal.) poultryman has a hen—breed not stated—which has laid 244 eggs in eleven months, only seven less than the world's record. At prevailing prices the eggs this hen laid were worth about $6. The cost of keeping was $1.44, leaving a net profit of $4.56.

Where limbs exceeding an inch in diameter are cut from the orchard trees the wound should be painted over with white lead and oil, colored with lampblack if desired, which will keep the wood from checking and becoming a source of infection for the rot fungus.

Alfalfa meal—ground alfalfa hay—contains about 14 per cent of protein, 2 per cent of sap, 25 per cent of crude fiber and 7 per cent of ash. It is because of the above ingredients that it is worth, pound for pound, as much as bran and sells for about the same price on the market.

Kansas holds the blue ribbon for the highest price ever paid for a load of farm products in the shape of a load of alfalfa seed bought by a dealer at Garden City. The load weighed 19,733 pounds, or 328.53 bushels. The price paid was $8 per bushel, and the value of the whole load was $2,631.15.

The Minnesota Agricultural college has ascertained through experiments that the cost of raising ten tons of green corn per acre and putting it into the silo is $18.80, making one pound of digestible nutrients cost 53 mills. An acre of mangels yielding twenty tons cost $34.12 to raise and harvest, making a pound of digestible nutrients cost 93 mills, or nearly twice the cost of the silage.

Among the many wonders of the insect world none is more marvelous than the queen bee. She has been known to lay as high as 3,000 eggs a day, and during her life of about five years it is estimated that she sometimes produces a total of 25,000,000 eggs. Without the queen a swarm of bees would become extinct in a short time. Queen bees are scarce, and good ones bring all the way from $1 to $18 apiece.

The owner of the Canyon ranch in Texas has been pasturing 10,000 sheep during the present season in the La Sargo pasture near Kaw City, Okla. The herd is divided into seven flocks, each being in charge of a Mexican herder, who does his work on foot, carries a small tent and provisions about with him, does his own cooking and moves his flock from place to place under the direction of the American superintendent who has charge of the outfit.

An acre of corn with hills three feet four inches apart each way will produce fifty bushels of ear corn if the stalks in each hill produce on an average a pound of corn. Did they produce a pound and a half per hill the yield would be seventy-five bushels per acre, while if two pounds the yield would be 100 bushels. While the last yield would be on the bumper order, it is readily seen that it would not be impossible on rich land with a full stand of big corn.

The prosecution of agriculture with a serious purpose of succeeding is fraught with obstacles and handicaps enough in the very nature of things without a fellow's taking on the booze habit. While this may be indulged at the start for the purpose of drowning trouble, it always trebles a fellow's difficulties, taking away the keen edge of physical force and endurance and the clearness of mind that are particularly indispensable if the way is rather uphill and rough and there are real difficulties to overcome.

The revised government estimate of last year's cotton crop place the total acreage at 33,370,000 acres, the area actually picked 32,440,000 and the average yield per acre 194.9 pounds, not quite two-fifths of a bale per acre. The states leading in cotton production, with average acre yield, are as follows: Texas, 9,316,000 acres, 196 pounds; Georgia, 4,848,000 acres, 190 pounds; Alabama, 3,591,000 acres, 179 pounds; Mississippi, 3,390,000 acres, 233 pounds; South Carolina, 2,545,000 acres, 219 pounds; Oklahoma, 2,311,000 acres, 143 pounds. Missouri had but 87,000 acres to cotton, but her acre yield was 340 pounds.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

Sherman R. Norris, former manager of the Minnesota Grain and Indemnity company, says the deals of his company in Minneapolis were gambling transactions pure and simple and that the persons who invested money with him for grain speculation have no legal claim against him. Mr. Norris states his position in an answer filed in bankruptcy proceedings begun against him in the federal district court.

Two Cass Lake boys by the name of Kiley, nine and ten years old, went out picking berries and became lost in the woods. Three days later the lads walked into Bemidji, sixteen miles distant, tired and worn out. They say they kept on walking when they became lost.

Iron ore has been discovered on a farm a mile and a half southwest of Wadena. When placed under a dip needle the specimens deflected it 35 degrees, showing that there was a goodly amount of iron in the ore.

The Mankato charter commission has completed the new charter after six months' work and, if adopted, it will make Mankato the first Minnesota city to be governed by the commission plan.

Fifty-seven clerks in the St. Paul postoffice have been granted a raise of $100 a year in salary, in accordance with the law providing for an increase in this amount to efficient employes, up to $1,100.

Minnesota is going to have a new capitol ornament in the figurehead of the battleship Minnesota, which the navy department has agreed to loan to the state indefinitely.

The advance sheets of the St. Paul city directory show that, at the close of last month, St. Paul had a population of 234,786.

It is now definitely reported that President Taft will stop in St. Paul on his visit to the Northwest this fall.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

As a result of the hearing in the Ledbeter murder case at Mankato Mrs. Goldie Schwandt and William Schwandt were dismissed on a charge of murder in the first degree and rearrested as accessories. The testimony of Frank Smith did not implicate them in the actual crime. Smith stoutly maintained, however, that Mrs. Grace Ledbeter, widow of the murdered man, hit the fatal blows and she was held to the grand jury on a charge of murder in the first degree.

Peter A. Nelson, residing near Lake Park, Otter Tail county, was struck by the sweep of a stump puller which he was operating. He was thrown ten feet into the air and never regained consciousness, dying in less than half an hour. Nelson was twenty years of age.

Robbers broke into the postoffice at Georgeville, nine miles north of New London, entered the safe by working the combination and stole $100 in cash out of the money order box and paper and notes valued at $1,000.

Mrs. H. R. Sargent of Rush City took a dose of arsenic and died before a physician could be summoned. She was about forty years of age and leaves a husband. The cause of the suicide is not known.

Palmer Hornseth, aged fourteen years, son of P. P. Hornseth of Coleraine, was accidentally killed by a work train. He was employed by the Missabe road as a water boy for a construction crew.

Charles Erickson, aged twenty-two years and single, was drowned in Pelican lake, north of Virginia, while in bathing. He was wading and got into water over his head and, being unable to swim, drowned.

Charles Yoetger, a German employed on the farm of Gus Roetinger near Fort Snelling, received fatal injuries by falling from a load of hay and breaking his back.

Mrs. L. N. Mills of Winona, this state, who had been visiting her daughter, Mrs. St. John, at Kearney, Neb., committed suicide by jumping into the Platte river.

Mrs. Halvor Steenerson, wife of the representative from Minnesota, was knocked down by a bicycle in Washington and narrowly escaped serious injury.

An electric tornado at St. Cloud and vicinity seriously injured five persons and flattened the grain fields for miles around.

Walter Tripp, aged nineteen years, son of E. W. Tripp of Northfield, was drowned while bathing in the Cannon river.

Matthew Michaels, twenty-two years old, was found dead with a revolver in his hand in a South St. Paul hotel.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Dr. Wesley G. Matchan, formerly of Minneapolis, is dead in Bismarck, N. D., where he had been practicing for several years. Dr. Matchan was graduated from the University of Minnesota medical department in the class of 1899. He was thirty-three years of age.

Sergeant Francis Kittel, veteran of Mexican, Civil and German wars, died of old age at the Soldiers' home at Minnehaha. He was eighty-five years old.

H. O. Harmansen, forty-five years old, former county commissioner of Norman county, died at his home near Gary.

HOWELL PLANER AND MATCHER

You no doubt find it a hard matter to sell your rough lumber to advantage because most of your customers want it finished. Furthermore you can get twice as much for your lumber by planing it, making it up into flooring, drop siding, window casing and mouldings, for which there is an unlimited demand at big prices. The Howell Planer and Matcher does all this work to perfection.

You can also make big money by working up all your slabs and waste material into Lath and Shingles. All you need for this purpose is our Lath Mill and Shingle Machine. We build the best and most up-to-date machines of this kind on the market, which we can furnish you at manufacturers prices. Keep your plant running all the time. Remember we build complete Saw Mill Plants from top to bottom, all of our own manufacture. Our new Catalog B is just now out. If you have not received it, write to-day. Manufactured by

THE HOMESTEADER AND HIS MEAT.

Recently The Herald published a dispatch relating how a Northern Minnesota game warden had trapped a settler who had killed a moose, had landed him in court and had him fined $100.

It seems that somebody had told on the settler, and the game warden set out to entrap him. He made his way to the settler's clearing, passed the time of day, and soon got acquainted with him. It is easy to get acquainted with a settler in his lonely clearing in the woods. He seldom has company and he hails with delight the appearance of a stranger from the outer world. To him all men are friends, and his hospitality is always on tap.

The game warden hung around until he received an invitation to dinner, at which his host spread before him a nice meal of moose meat. Not only that, but when the game warden expressed pleasure in the meat, the settler kindly wrapped up a choice cut and presented it to the game warden, to be taken home to his wife. Whereupon the game warden disclosed his identity, arrested the man, and took him to town and had him fined $100. The Herald sympathies fully with the finely choleric spirit in which the Cass Lake Times thus comments upon the incident: "We know nothing about the truth of this story. If true it is an exhibition of a system of espionage more depraved and more dangerous to the body politic than all the game in the state could offset The worst feature of the case was the sneaking method used to secure evidence against the settler. A man who will boldly partake of a settler's hospitality, be fed on meat that is killed out of season, and because of the having this in possession and having the generosity to offer the sneak who is out after 'blood' a square meal, he is 'pulled' and fined a sum that few if any of the settlers are able to pay, shows a spirit that our settlers are not willing to bear, and which will end in blood somewhat thicker than that of the slaughtered animal. The game of this state is not for the rich and indolent alone; all who are citizens are well entitled to it as the man who can spend a moderate fortune to make a killing."

This game warden was clearly enforcing the law; and yet it is hard to find much respect for him. It is unlawful for anybody, even a settler, to kill a moose out of season; but there are laws of hospitality which this game warden violated that are higher even than the game laws, and no matter how great offender against the game laws this settler may have been, the game warden is a greater violator of the laws that regulate amiable human relationships.

The policy of the state toward a settler who kills a deer or moose to provide meat for himself and his family should not be severe. The settler is doing a great work for the state, and he has a hard enough row to a hoe. He is far from the butcher shop, and fresh meat is a rarity on his table. The sum this settler was fined is a very large amount of money to the average homesteader on cut-over lands, and unless he was a persistent and wanton violator of the game laws, his sentence was unduly severe.

It is notorious in the northern country that lumber camps are lavishly fed on illicit veneson; yet arrests and convictions of lumbermen on this charge are rare indeed. It may be that this man was a greater offender than the settler who kills an occasional wild animal that his children may have meat; but if that is all he did it is hard to feel indignant toward him: and no matter what he did, it is harder still to admire the methods of that game warden.

It is good to preserve the state's wild game; but it is more important that the pioneer settler should soften the hardness of his lot with an occasional meal of venison than it is that the city sportsman should have his expensive pleasure.—Duluth Herald.

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD

Section V., article IX. of the state constitution provides that, "for the purpose of defraying extraodinary expenditures, the state may contract public debts, but never, in the aggregate, exceed $250,000." This provision of the constitution has been repeatedly violated by issuing certificates of indebtedness (which are simply state bonds) to the amount of millions of dollars. This violation of state constitution has been approved of by the city press and the powers that be—executive, legislative and judicial. The last sentence of the above mentioned section also provides that, "the state shall never contract any debts for works of internal improvement, or be a party to carrying on such works." Our August supreme court has held that because of the last provision the legislature had no authority to appropriate a few hundred thousand dollars for the improvement of country roads and bridges.—Princeton Union.

HERE is the butcher who, having cash,
To the dry goods merchant's made a dash,
For he saw an ad. of a special sale
Of things that people order by mail,
And he paid for all the things he bought
With the selfsame money he had got
From the grocer who had settlement made
With the money the honest workman paid.

The School of Agriculture.

The School of Agriculture located at University Farm is an institution that is attracting attention throughout the United States. This is not only the first school of its kind established in this country, having been organized twenty-one years ago, but it is also the largest school of agriculture. Many states have sent delegations of officials to visit it to secure information so that similar schools may be established by them.

The school offers a three years' course for boys leading directly to farming as a business. It takes the boys from the farm and gives them a fund of agricultural knowledge and a practical training that should make of them successful farmers.

It also aims to give sufficient training in English, mathematics and civics to make them useful and intelligent citizens.

Students of proper age may enter this school after completing the work given in the country school. High School graduates may enter and finish the course in two years.

There is also provided for girls a three years' course in home-making, domestic science and domestic art with a part of the agricultural instruction.

Full information concerning the School of Agriculture may be obtained by applying to J. M. Drew, Registrar, University Farm, St Paul.

Bird and Insect Charts for the Public Schools.

The State Entomolgist is preparing for distribution to the public schools of Minnesota colored charts of insect pests together with illustrations of some beneficial insects and useful birds. Over nine thousand of these charts will be made, and it is expected that they will be ready for delivery late next winter or in the spring.

Any school in Minnesota can have one of these charts for the asking, the request to be made through the County Superintendent. The funds for these charts were provided by the last legislature.

Such insects as the Gypsy Moth, which there is reason to believe may ultimately get into Minnesota, and the Browntail Moth, which have caused thousands of dollars of loss in New England, are shown in color, as well as the San Jose scale, which in time, unless preventive measure are taken, may become one of the pests of our farmers. Many others of our common pests will be shown by beautiful drawings, and name plainly indicated.

It is believed that pupils in our schools can ably serve the cause of good fruit growing and good crop growing in Minnesota by becoming familiar with the appearance of some of these insects and being able to recognize them when seen. It is in this way that these charts may become of great practical utility.

Some of our insect-eating birds, which help the farmer and fruit grower by consuming insect pests, will be shown.

Hold On To Your Land.

"I say to you farmers, don't sell your land. I am seventy years old and dont know how much longer I shall be here, though I am going to live as long as I see anyone else living. But there are men before me today who will see the Red River Valley land sell for $100 to $150 an acre. Hold onto your land, if you are a speculator, I don't care how soon you sell out. Red River Valley land is going to be worth from $100 to $150 an acre and if you farmers who now own it and farm it do not so farm as to get interest on that value, somebody else is going to put you off your farm and do better farming. Minnesota averages only 13½ bushels of wheat to the acre; Austria-Hungary averages 17 bushels, the United Kingdom 32.2 bushels, France 19.8 bushels and Germany 37.0 bushels. Think of that and think hard."—J. J. Hill at Crookston.

Single Ear Seed Corn.

Northwestern Agriculturist: In the field is the only proper place for seed selection. The office of experiment stations of the Department of Agriculture notes a significant test of selection of seed corn where for two years seed was selected from stalks bearing each a large ear, as compared with seed from stalks bearing two good ears each. The yield was considerably more from the seed taken from the single ears, being in one experiment 1,324 pounds of grain from a single ear corn as against 1,197 pounds on a similar plat of corn planted with grain from corn from double eared stalks—an increase of over ten per cent. This was at the rate of a grain of eight bushels per acre—an increase well worth while."

Stop Train for Sober Ones.

The state railway and warehouse commission has ordered the Soo Line to stop its Winnipeg flyer at Ogema, a station near Detroit, Minn.

The company objected on the ground that the passengers at this point were mostly Indians who made trouble after obtaining liquor at Detroit. The commission ruled that sober passengers must have first consideration and that if there are any drunken ones the company can put them off.—St. Paul Dispatch.

Miss Paula Haven, of McIntosh, spent the portion of the week visiting at the Hofto home in this city.

Miss Irene Calwell left last Saturday for Bismark N. D., near where she will teach a four months term of school.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Salley, of Red Lake Falls, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Koke, of Eugene, Oregon, and B. H. Koke, of Malta, Mont., spent Sunday in the city, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Holzknecht.

Homer Mussey has resigned his position as editor of the Plummer Pioneer and Audley Caldwell went down to Plummer the first of the week and will have charge of the paper in the future. Mr. Mussey took the Pioneer when it was in a run down condition and by hard work made it one of the best papers in the country. Mr. Caldwell is able and no doubt will keep up the present high standard of the paper.

SOCIALISTS IN STOCKHOLM

They Are Fast Becoming a Terror to All Law and Order in the Swedish Capital—Letter Written by Anarchist Wang Prior to the Murder of Major General O. L. Beckman—Seven Russian Anarchists Arrested Prior to the Arrival of the Czar in Stockholm.

SWEDEN.

The funeral of Major General O. L. Beckman, who was murdered by Anarchist Wang during the recent visit of the Czar of Russia to Stockholm, was held from Skeppsholmen, and was attended by thousands of people, including the king and all the members of the royal house. He received, of course, a military burial and the remains were interred in the Skeppsholmen's church. Wang, the anarchist, who murdered General Beckman and who afterwards shot himself, was buried in the Nya Kyrkogarden. Only two persons were present at the funeral. Prior to committing the murder, Wang wrote the following letter to the military authorities, who had ordered that a rigid watch be held over the czar during his visit to the capital: "To the Commander of the Arboga Regiment No. 52: I hereby desire to inform you that I shall not participate in your murderous maneuvers. And will not, therefore, be present on the day stated. If I desire to murder some one, I can do this without your instructions. You may come on with your jails. Our courage, our enthusiasm, you cannot kill. Long live the revolutionary socialism. Hjadmar Wang, member of the Stockholm Northern Socialist club." This is but a sample of the work of the young socialists in Stockholm, who are fast becoming a terror to all law and order in the Swedish capital. The authorities are watching them closely and if there is a repetition of the Beckman tragedy it may go hard with the young socialists in Sweden. Prior to the arrival of the Russian czar in Stockholm seven Russian anarchists were placed under arrest, among them Wang's roommate, Paul Felizoff, formerly a student at a Russian university. The others were Saul Chain Selzerovitch, a chemist; Karl Sernchan, a public school teacher; August Kirchbaum and Fritz Girgensohn, telegraph operators; Menchner Tobbis, a tailor, and a young woman, Helena Natalia Sachsen, who was the affianced of one of the aforementioned. They are all held in prison and their cases will come up for trial in the near future.

After completing his successful tour in America, John Svanberg, the runner, will make an extensive tour in Europe, going first to Italy, where he will meet all comers. He will first be interested in a series of running races in London, where he will join his wife. In Italy he will meet Dorando and other famous runners. Mrs. Svanberg will accompany her husband on his European tour, and after he has completed his running races in Italy he and Mrs. Svanberg will enjoy a well earned rest there next fall. Svanberg made good money in America this summer and is well pleased with his visit there. He has been winning right along and is taking splendid care of himself. Svanberg is now justly regarded as one of the greatest runners in the world.

According to a telegram from Stockholm, Sweden intends to put forth strong efforts to increase her foreign trade and the government will for this purpose send a number of young business men to foreign countries to solicit trade. Among the countries to which Swedish business representatives will be sent are Mexico, Argentine, Egypt, Chile, Russia, Spain, England, Germany and France. America does not seem to be on the list and just why it has been eliminated is not exactly clear at this writing. There have, however, been so many attempts made by Swedish export merchants to reach out for Swedish trade that may be it is considered that enough energy has already been spent in that direction.

From the 27th inst., until Aug. 23, the Swedish king will lay aside the arduous royal duties at Stockholm and will spend his vacation somewhere in the northern section of the country. But he has been careful not to let any one know where he is going, so there will be some section of the land that can expect a visit from "the first man in Sweden" at any old time. The king will travel incognito, and does not want his subjects to make any fuss over him wherever he may chance to bob up.

Queen Victoria of Sweden during her recent visit to Berlin displayed such a knowledge of military affairs in the presence of the German emperor that he at once asked her if she wanted an honorary rank in the German army. Her majesty replied that she would be willing to accept such an honor and sure enough Emperor William has now made her a colonel in the German army. Her majesty is a fine horsewoman and is deeply interested in all military affairs.

Rumor has it that the Swedish government is negotiating with Count Zeppelin for the purchase of two of his airships. But the Swedish government also requires that he furnish instructions to a company of picked men, but this will be somewhat difficult for Zeppelin to do unless he can secure permission from the German government to do so.

NORWAY.

Roald Amundsen is a man who does not idle away his hours and believes in gathering all the knowledge that he can possibly secure prior to taking one of those long and dreary trips up into the polar country. At present he is in Bergen, where he is engaged in studying oceanography at the biological stations in the fjords near that city. This illustrates Captain Amundsen's thoroughness and complete devotion to the purpose before him. If he reaches the north pole his success will be due to the fact that he has carefully planned everything, made all necessary preparations and that he does not by any means trust to luck alone. He possesses besides a tenacity of purpose which is in evidence everywhere, both in his every day life and when he sets out to do something special. Roald Amundsen deserves to succeed and many are those who actually believe that he will be the successful one.

The "Schubertbund" arrived in Bergen on Friday, June 25, where they were cordially received by the city officials. At 7 o'clock, prior to the concert, a dinner was given in their honor and was attended by about 3,000 people and netted something over 2,700 crowns. From Bergen the "Schubertbund" left for Trondhjem, where they were equally well received and where about 2,500 persons attended their concert. The tour has in every way been a success and the Germans have been heartily received wherever they have appeared. Their singing was excellent and was something entirely new to Norwegians.

Last year Emperor William of Germany announced his intention of presenting glass paintings to the church in Aalesund, and they have now reached the city and will soon be put in place. There are three paintings in all, one large one, representing the Saviour on the cross, and the smaller ones representing St. Olaf and the coat of arms of Aalesund and of the German emperor. They are all exceedingly beautiful and will surely be one of the interesting things to point out to travelers that visit the city of the fuutre.

Bjornstjerne Bjornson, who has been very ill during the last few months, is now very much improved and is able to use his legs, having recently taken short promenades. Some time ago he was so weak that he was confined almost all the time to his bed. He has spent the long hours having some friend read aloud to him. Mr. Bjornson's doctors believe that the great author may rally and if the proper care is exercised he may once more be able to take up the pen.

Prince Olaf is now old enough to learn his a b c's and his mother is, of course, his teacher, as she desires to direct his development herself rather than leave this in the hands of a tutor. The little prince is an exceedingly popular little fellow and is by many regarded as the brightest and most popular little prince in all Europe. He is of course a genuine boy in every respect and much like other boys so far as playfulness and mischief is concerned.

The steamer "Alfheim," from Mandahl, which left Rossario, Italy, for St. John, has been encountering hard luck. Besides storms, typhoid fever has broken out among the crew, five of them dying. The remainder of the crew are now confined in a hospital in St. John, which port the ship fortunately reached after a series of untold hardships.

Per Sivles "bauta" was unveiled last month with appropriate ceremonies. There were about 2,000 people present at the unveiling. Rev. Anders Hovden delivered the address of the day. The ceremony was exceedingly impressive throughout.

DENMARK.

The government expedition under Captain Einar Mikkelsen, the Arctic explorer, sailed a few days ago aboard the Danish steamer "Alabama" for Greenland in search for the bodies of the unfortunate Erichsen party. They will cruise along the southern coast of Greenland and if their efforts are not rewarded they will institute an extensive inland search for the bodies.

There are at present over 8,000 Methodists in Denmark, with thirty churches and church property valued at more than one million crowns. There are 4,000 Methodist Sunday school children. Last year a sum of 100,000 crowns was solicited for foreign missionary purposes.

Professor Harold Hoffding has been appointed as Denmark's representative at the one hundredth anniversary which will be observed at the University of Cambridge, England, in the near future. Professor Hoffding is regarded as one of the country's foremost educators.

George Brandes, the celebrated Danish critic, and Carl Torp have been awarded the Dannebrog's insignia, second class. Both men are well known all over Denmark and Brandes has, as is well known, an international reputation as one of the world's leading critics.

A telegram from Copenhagen states that Denmark has declined to participate in the Hudson-Fulton celebrations in New York.

RIVER OVERFLOWS BANKS

Causes Much Damage to Property in Minnesota.

The Wild Rice river is overflowing its banks from Mahnomen to Ada. The Soo railway bridge at Mahnomen washed out and the log drive belonging to the Wild Rice Lumber company, which has been dammed at Mahnomen on account of low water, broke loose and is taking the bridges across the river as fast as they are reached.

All the bridges between Mahnomen and Twin Valley are gone and both the Northern Pacific railway bridge and the road bridge at Heiberg are expected to go as soon as the logs reach them. The logs are now held a few miles east of Twin Valley.

Heiberg village is still under water and all the houses have been abandoned. The river rose so rapidly that the people were unable to remove their furniture. Horses, cattle and hogs saved themselves by swimming from the flooded valley to the adjoining high lands.

PLUNGES INTO THE FLAMES

Farmer Fires Barn and Then Ends His Life.

August Huebner, sixty years old, who lived twelve miles west of Jackson, committed suicide by setting his barn afire and then plunging into the flames.

Huebner and his wife had quarreled and Mrs. Huebner locked herself in the house with her children. When Huebner attempted to gain admittance to the house and discovered that the door was locked he seized an ax and smashed the door. Then he disappeared. Mrs. Huebner and the children then fled to a neighbor's house and on their way noticed that the barn was ablaze. When Huebner's body was found the head and limbs were charred.

FOUR MEN SERIOUSLY HURT

Three of Them May Die of Their Injuries.

By the collapse of a derrick used on the construction of the new village hall at Chisholm four men were seriously injured, three, it is feared, fatally. Those seriously hurt and who may die are:

John Hamlin, Gust Hazgert and August Olson.

Frank Bellen had one of his ankles crushed, while Arthur Dillman was slightly injured.

The men were raising two immense cornices, weighing about 500 pounds each, when the derrick broke, precipitating them and the load about fifteen feet.

BAD FIRE AT MINNEAPOLIS

Property Valued at Nearly $200,000 Destroyed.

Fire of an unknown origin, which for a time threatened the lumber yards and Great Northern yards in North Minneapolis, damaged the warehouse of Lindsay Bros., implement manufacturers, about $175,000.

The fire was discovered by Night Watchman Gust Halvorson. Upon the arrival of Chief J. R. Canterbury a 3-11 alarm was sent in, and for over an hour the firemen fought the fire against the wind. Finally the wind died down a little and the blaze was soon under control.

RIVER BATHER IS DROWNED

Farmer Leaves Dinner Party to Meet End.

William E. Hodge, a prominent young farmer, was drowned while swimming in the Zumbro river at Hammon, a few miles north of Rochester.

Several families had arrived to visit at the Hodge home, and after dinner six men went to take a bath in the river.

Hodge was twenty-five years old, was married and had three children.

Bond Issue Constitutional.

The state supreme court holds that the law passed by the last legislature, authorizing the state to issue certificates of indebtedness to the amount of $2,250,000 for the new state prison, is valid and not contrary to the constitutional provision which prohibits the issuance of bonds in excess of $250,000.

Hill Donates to Duluth School.

J. J. Hill has donated $10,000 to the Duluth Catholic high school. The announcement was made by Right Rev. James McGolrick, bishop of the Duluth diocese. The new school is now under construction and will cost $60,000.

Drowned While Fishing.

Andrew Franglia, twenty-six years of age, of Minneapolis, was drowned while fishing in Crystal lake. Franglia was sitting on the end of a boat while two companions were in it. He lost his balance and went overboard.

Sailor Plunges to Death.

Allan M. Smith, forty years old, a sailor on the steamer J. J. H. Brown, moored at a Duluth dock, was killed by a fall from the foremast. He was painting the mast and fell sixty feet through an open hatchway.

Mankato Daylight Robbery.

Unknown persons entered the store of Olgaad & Kn[illegible] of Mankato during the noon hour and robbed the safe of about $[illegible]. Th[illegible] was found later in [illegible] at some distance back of the store and factory.

FLOOD AT DULUTH

Heavy Rain Does Damage of a Million and a Half.

THREE LIVES LOST AS RESULT

Streets Turned Into Rivers by Deluge of Water.

Fully $1,500,000 damage was done by a flood at Duluth, following terrific rains and a cloudburst.

Three lives were lost during the storm. Two children were swept from their mothers' sides on Ninth avenue east, one body being lost in a sewer at the bottom of the hill. Another child was lost in Keene's creek at West Duluth.

The entire hillside became practically one great waterfall. The sewers, already overflowing, were totally inadequate to carry off the rushing water and the streets and avenues quickly turned into torrents, with the water running three feet deep. Street cars were compelled to suspend. Citizens stripped off their shoes and waded home. The theater crowds came out to find the streets a miniature lake and the men, picking up their female companions, carried them to higher ground. Automobiles and hacks were impossible, owing to the accumulation of mud in the streets. The hotels were crowded with those unwilling to venture forth in the elements.

Twenty or more houses were washed away along small creeks in the city suburbs.

Several narrow escapes are reported from drowning on Superior street, the main thoroughfare of Duluth. One woman was rolled over and over until rescued unconscious by a man who floundered after her. Blocks of asphalt pavement were carried away and mud from the hills piled high on the lower levels.

A peculiar element of human interest was added to the storm features in the discovery that Mr. and Mrs. Romano, two of whose children were drowned, also were victims of the disaster in San Francisco at the time of the earthquake and fire.

When the cloudburst struck Duluth Mrs. Romano and her three children were standing on the back porch of their home. A torrent of water carried away the porch and threw them all into the flood. The two smaller children were drowned.

TRAGEDY IN MINNEAPOLIS

Shoemaker Fatally Wounds His Wife and Himself.

Murder and suicide is the finale of the dual tragedy enacted in Minneapolis when Emil Farland, a shoemaker, cut the throat of his wife with a razor and then turned the weapon upon himself. The man died at the city hospital three hours after the crime, while the woman died several hours later.

The police are at a loss to know the reason for the crime. The woman's words before falling unconscious were, "He cut me!" In the automobile patrol the man said on the way to the hospital, "She did it all." He then lapsed into unconsciousness.

The police have come to the conclusion that the husband did the cutting after a week's debauch. He is said to have threatened to kill his wife before. Appearances of the room where the crime took place show that a terrific death struggle took place.

GUILTY OF MANSLAUGHTER

Italian Convicted of Crime Committed in Duluth.

A St. Louis county district court jury brought in a verdict of guilty of manslaughter in the first degree in the case of Pasquale Barilla, accused of killing Casper Zumbarilla at Duluth.

The penalty for manslaughter in the first degree is from seven to twenty years' imprisonment.

Stranger Drowns in Lake.

An unknown man about twenty-five years of age was drowned while fishing in White Bear lake. He was in a boat a short distance from the shore. Mrs. T. P. O'Regan of Lakewood saw him pitch headlong from the boat into the water as if he had fainted. She called to her husband, who sprang into the lake, dived and recovered the body, towed it to shore in six minutes. Efforts to resuscitate him were fruitless.

Would Oust Chief of Police.

With a mass of data covering a considerable period of time and many alleged violations of the law in all parts of the city the St. Paul Law Enforcement league will go before the attorney general of the state and demand that judicial proceedings be instituted to oust Chief of Police John J. O'Connor from that office for his alleged wilful neglect and failure to enforce the Sunday closing law.

Minneapolis Woman Ends Life.

Mrs. Minnie Levering, wife of A. Z. Levering of Minneapolis, who was confidential secretary for Thomas Lowry up to the time of the street railway magnate's death a few months ago, was found dead in her home with a 38-calibre revolver nearby. The police say that she committed suicide.

IN order to close out our line of gang plows, breaking plows, sulkey plows, disc harrows and road scrapers we will sell the same at greatly reduced prices. Now is the time to buy if you are in need of anything in this line.

WOES OF THE PURSER

He Has Troubles of His Own on the Trip Across the Atlantic.

MUST HAVE A GOOD TEMPER.

His Time Wasted by Foolish Questions and Trivial Appeals, Mainly by Women Passengers, Yet He Has to Be Always Polite and Agreeable.

"Yes," said the purser on one of the big liners recently to the writer, who happened to be taking a trip from Liverpool to New York, "we have our own troubles, I can assure you, and I sometimes envy the captain his solitary enjoyment of the bridge, even during a sixty mile gale. Passengers seem to think that the purser is put on a ship simply to answer foolish questions.

"Of course there is a good deal which we have to put up with as being part of our legitimate duties, though when a passenger brings us a hundred dollar yellow back and asks to have it changed into English, French, German and Spanish money and stipulates that there must be twice as much French as German and half the remainder in English silver coins, presumably for tips, is it any wonder that we occasionally lose our temper?

"And then, again, the purser is always appealed to for the most trivial things. A woman passenger comes to the window, and if it is closed she will bang on it till it is opened, no matter if the sign is there as large as life that the office hours are from 11 to 2 and 4 to 6 o'clock and she is honoring me with a call at 3 p. m. Then, when the window is raised for fear she will smash it to smithereens, she says, with a sweet smile: 'Oh, Mr. Purser, I am so sorry to disturb you. I know it is not your hour of business, but could you tell me if we will really land next Thursday, as I told my brother we would, and I know he will be waiting for me on the dock.'

"Of course I am polite, but I have some difficulty in persuading her that I am not running the ship, and neither can I control the elements. She goes away with an expression that clearly shows she thinks I am keeping something back and it will be my fault if we do not arrive at the time appointed.

"I remember on one trip when the weather was particularly stormy a woman passenger knocked at my door—after office hours, of course—and begged that she might speak to me for a few minutes. I politely asked her to enter, and then, her eyes starting out of her head with the excitement of suppressed emotion, she implored me to draw up her will. I protested that I was not a lawyer, but do you think she would be satisfied with that excuse? Not much! There and then I had to draw up a document in the best legal phraseology I could muster.

"When it was finished and I and my assistant had signed it she gave the young fellow a sovereign for his trouble, and as for me—well, she took off a very handsome ring and insisted on my accepting it. I have that ring yet, but what became of the donor I never knew, for when the storm abated and we were safe in port she never so much as bade me goodby, though I had repeatedly asked her to take back her ring. She was a very rich woman evidently, and the 'bequests' in that will I drew up made my eyes bulge.

"Most passengers when we have been a day or so out bring the purser all their valuables, for which they receive a receipt. Some nervous women seem to think that a 'strong room' at sea is not a very secure place for their jewels, and they insist on seeing their treasures at least every day. One woman passenger made my life a burden during a recent voyage by taking her valuables out and putting them in again three times a day until I told her that the next time she called for them I would not take them back again, whereat she told me, with a sour look, that I was impertinent and she would inform the captain. I believe she did so, but the captain gave her a word or two of advice regarding the implicit trust which should be placed in a purser, and this quieted her. In fact, she afterward came to me and apologized for her seeming rudeness.

"As a rule, I conduct church service on board, as the captain does not enjoy the work, but prefers to remain on the bridge. Many a funeral service also has fallen to my lot, and I have even officiated at a christening. I am usually the one to whom a passenger flies when he is dissatisfied with his cabin, though the duty of changing a stateroom really rests with the head steward. Then, again, it is the purser who is appealed to when the passengers elect to hold a concert, and the young folks usually rush to him also when they want to have a dance on deck. A purser can be very popular or the reverse, and unless you have an excellent temper you stand a good chance of being the reverse.

"The funniest experience I had was on a recent trip, when there was on board a little girl about twelve years old. She struck up a warm friendship with me and would walk the deck for miles if I would only accompany her. She fell very ill during a storm and refused to be comforted. Her mother asked her if there was anything she could do which would ease her suffering, and the young imp said there was. If she would only 'skidoo' and let the purser read a book to her she would feel better. And the indulgent mother came to me, stated the case, and—well, I complied with her request and read to the child for a little while each day until she was well enough to come on deck again."—London Tit Bits.

BILL LANGE'S FEAT.

One of the Famous Old Outfielder's Sensational Catches.

The greatest individual feat ever performed was one by which Bill Lange saved a game for Chicago and $200 for himself in Washington in 1895. There is an odd story connected with the play. Lange had missed a train in Boston two days before, failed to reach New York in time to play there, and Anson had fined him $100. Thereupon he missed a train to Washington—arrived on the grounds after the teams had practiced and just in time to play, and for that Anson fined him another $100. The game that afternoon went eleven innings, Chicago scoring one run in the eleventh. There were two men out and a runner on the bases when "Kip" Selbach, then one of the hardest hitters in the business, smote the ball a terrific blow and sent it flying over Lange's head toward the center field fence. The hit seemed a sure home run, but Lange, a man weighing 225 pounds, turned and without looking sprinted desperately straight out toward the fence, racing with the flying ball. At the last instant as the ball was going over his head, Lange leaped, stuck up both hands, turned a somersault and crashed against the fence. The boards splintered, one entire panel crashed outward, and out of the wreckage crawled Lange, holding the ball in his hand, and the crowd went mad. Lange came limping in, with the crowd standing on seats shouting, and he said to Anson, "Fines go, cap?" "Nope," said Anson, and the catch had saved the big fielder $200.—Hugh S. Fullerton in American Magazine.

THE FIRST ALMANACS.

They Attempted to Foretell Men's Destiny From the Stars.

The almanac, properly so called in its origin, is not merely a device for keeping people in mind of the progress of the year. It is an attempt to show what destiny has in store for us as indicated by the position of the stars in any particular year, and as, according to astrological lore, the destinies of men are ruled by the different aspects of the planets, so also the human body is subject to the influence of the constellations through which the sun appears to pass in his yearly course. A French almanac of 1610 gives a diagram of the human body surrounded by all the signs of the zodiac and indicates the various organs and members over which these signs have power, and this for a guide pour les saignees, or to show at what period blood may be let with safety. But the same almanac also gives directions sensible enough for the avoidance of the plague which would not be found fault with by a modern fashionable physician:

Who would keep his body in health
And resist the infection of the plague,
Let him seek joy and sadness fly,
Avoid places where infections abound
And cherish joyous company.

A few examples exist of almanacs of this character before the invention of printing, although none, it is believed, earlier than the twelfth century. But some of the earliest specimens of printing are black printed German sheet almanacs, which are chiefly concerned about blood letting.—Westminster Gazette.

Wasted Time.

Mrs. Newrich was growing accustomed to power. She enjoyed it and was irritated when any one presumed to differ from her in opinion. When the sailing party of which she had been a member landed on the shores of the lake rain soaked and frightened, Mrs. Newrich was the only one who cared to talk.

"It could all have been avoided if that captain had done as I told him," she said between the chattering of her teeth as the party stood huddled under a small shelter.

"When I saw that cloud coming from that corner of the lake I said to him, 'I think you'd better make straight for home and not spend any more time tacking,' but he paid no more attention than as if I hadn't spoken!"—Youth's Companion.

He Didn't Bet.

"A man in my county," said a Kansas congressman, "was always anxious to bet on his game of checkers. One time he was about to play a game for $10 with a fellow called Three Fingered Jack. Suddenly one of his friends exclaimed:

"'Don't bet, Charlie. Don't you know that fellow wore off two fingers playing checkers? That's why he's called Three Fingered Jack.'

"That settled it. The bet was never made. A man who had worn off two fingers by brushing them up and down the checkerboard was too much for my friend."—Kansas City Journal.

A Bitter Disappointment.

"When I was in Paris," remarked the collector of curios, "I discovered in a bookstall a volume which I knew at first glance to be of extraordinary value. I could scarcely believe my good luck. Breathless, I inquired the price of the dealer. Just think of it! I could have had that treasure for a song!"

"Well, why didn't you get it?"

"Never could sing a note in my life," cried the collector, bursting into tears.—New York Times.

The Audience Moved.

He had been trying to start a revival fervor, but the audience was unresponsive. "O ye of flinty hearts," he cried, "will nothing move you?" "Pass the hat, boss," answered the gamin, "and we move immediately."—Florida Times-Union.

GOOD FROM THE START

Fifty-five years ago Gund's Beers were made in a log brewery and brewed in a six-gallon kettle. The superior grade of barley grown about this then sparsely settled region was the chief attraction that drew this famous German brewmaster to La Crosse. Now it is the heart of the world's finest barley growing belt and the cream of every barley crop comes to his brewery, from which combined with the finest hops grown in Old Bohemia, is brewed. Instead of a log brewery today, there stands a mammoth model 20th century plant operated and lighted by electricity to which visitors are always welcome.

It is impossible to brew a beer of a higher quality than Peerless. You should see that it is always in your home. Telephone us today for a case of Peerless, the beer of matchless flavor.

The Seven Wise Men of Greece.

The seven wise men of Greece were Thales of Miletus, Periander of Corinth, Cleobulus of Lyndus, Chilon of Lacedaemon, Solon of Athens, Bias of Priene and Pittacus of Mitylene. Some fishermen of Miletus sold a draft of fishes to a bystander. When the net was drawn in it contained a golden tripod, and the purchaser claimed it was his, while the fishermen contended that they sold only the fish that might be in the net. The dispute was referred to the oracle of Delphi, who awarded the tripod to the wisest man in Greece. Thereupon it was taken to Thales, who declined it and suggested that it be given to Bias. He in turn refused to accept it, and thus it was successively declined by all the seven, and they were thereafter known as the seven wise men of Greece.

The Number 4.

There are four cardinal points, four winds, four quarters of the moon, four seasons, four rules of arithmetic, four suits of cards, four quarters to the hour, four legs for furniture, most animals go on four legs, the dead are placed between four planks, the prisoners between four walls. We have four incisor and four canine teeth, and our forks have four prongs. All animals when butchered are cut into four quarters. The violin, greatest of all string instruments, has but four strings. Four of a kind is a pretty good hand at poker, even if they are only fours.—Exchange.

Dressed For the Part.

"What subject have you taken for your address at the Civic club?"

"Woman's moral obligations as a citizen."

"What a lovely subject! And what are you going to wear?"

"That new gown I brought home with me from Paris. And just think! I had it so cleverly packed in with my old clothes that the customs house inspector never discovered it was there."—Baltimore American.

An Explanation.

"How in blazes did the compositor happen to head my foreign travel letter with the words 'Foreign Drivel'?"

"I don't know. Perhaps he read it."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

No, don't get down'earted, Bill. Lummy, don't yer look gashly! But, there, keep up yer spirits, ole sport; I've come to see yer an' cheer yer up a bit. Nice little room yer 'ave 'ere; but, as I says to meself when I was a'comin' up, wot a erkard staircase to get a coffin dahn!"—London Globe.

An Epitaph.

In the churchyard of Leigh, near Bolton, will be found a tombstone bearing the following amazing sentence: "A virtuous woman is 5s to her husband." The explanation seems to be that space prevented "a crown" being cut in full, and the stonemason argued that a crown equals 5 shillings.—London Notes and Queries.

Musical Note.

"How do you sell your music?" asked the prospective customer.

"It depends on the kind you want," replied the smart clerk. "We sell piano music by the pound and organ music by the choir."

FAT MEN THE WINNERS

Defeated the Leans in a Game of Ball Last Friday by a Score of 18 to 16.

The Victory Was an Easy One for the Fats and They Did Not Half Try.

By a score of 16 to 18, the Fats defeated the Leans at the ball game last Friday afternoon. There was a large attendance, and the game, which was played for the benefit of the band, was an interesting one throughout. It netted the band over $150 and all spectators had full value for their money.

Dr. G. A. Penney and Daniel Shaw were the umpires. Dr. Penney was certainly very fair in his decisions, and always gave the Leans the benefit of all doubts. Mr. Shaw was selected to represent the Leans and all we wish to say was that he did. His rankest decision was in calling F. J. Stebbins out when he struck at only one ball.

The Fats went to bat first, and they were certainly in good form. Every man in the team made one score before there was a single man put out, and then just for the fun of it they made two more scores, making a total of eleven for the first inning. By taking this big lead the Fats were at no time in any danger of losing the game, and they did not exert themselves very hard during the remaining part of the game. Just to show the Leans, however, that they knew the game, a few star stunts were pulled off "Bill" McGinty knocked out a home run Judge Bishop fanned the Leans out in the one, two, three order, Harry Dobner wrenched his leg, Bob McGinn dislocated a finger, but the star play of all was made by F. J. Stebbins. Mr. Stebbins played in left field and by accident one of the Leans knocked a ball out in his territory. After running about fifty yards Stebbins froze to the ball and then turned four somersaults. He never let go of the ball, however, and it was probably the most sensational catch ever made on the ball grounds in this city.

The Leans were at a great disadvantge, of they did not know the rules of the game, and the only good stunt that they did was to have Dr. Booren, their star batter, up to bat about every fifth time. This resulted in increasing the score of the Leans a considerable number, but the Fats made no objection.

Only seven innings were played, the time limit having been reached that inning, and now some of the Leans are mean enough to say that if a nine inning game had played that they would have been victorious.

[illegible] Elevator to Farmers.

On Monday the officers of the farmers elevator company met in this village and arranged the details in the transfer of the Hanson & Barzen elevator. Mr. Hanson was here and the deal went thro without a hitch. The transfer price is $4100. The farmers take possession August 1st. We have not learned who will have charge of the elevator here, as Mr. Oie, the present agent, has decided to leave and can not serve.—Badger Herald Rustler.

Soo Surveyors.

The "Soo" surveyors are reported on good authority to have been in the neighborhood of Buena Vista about a week ago working west. It is reported that they are to come south of Clearwater Lake. The surveyors that work from Gully east between Winsor and Gonvick seem to have abandoned this route, and struck a new line about one mile west of Gully running in a southeasterly direction, directly west from Queen, and apparently aims to intersect the G. N. at or near Ebro, tapping the White Earth south of Bagley.—Olberg Journal.

Crop Rotation.

Crop rotation is coming to be recognized as an important factor in profitable farming. In some very simple systems of rotation conducted at the Minnesota Experiment Station, St. Anthony Park a difference of $13.43 an acre in net profit is shown between poorly arranged cropping systems and those that provide for a proper system of rotation. Pasture and hay crops judiciously distributed throghout the rotation with the reasonable use of cultivated crops invariably result in greatly increased yields of grain and all other crops.

Rotations in five and six-year periods appear to offer the best opportunities for increasing crop production, but the three and four-year rotations also give splendid results when the crops are properly arranged. Many combinations of crops are included in the 123 plots now devoted to experiments in crop rotation at University Farm, giving a splendid basis from which to draw conclusions on good arrangements of crops for various types of farming.

The Station authorities believe that the farm revenues of Minnesota can be raised at least 25 per cent by a rational system of crop rotation, but as this rotation must be arranged to suit each individual farm, it is not possible to give systems of rotation that will be suited to all. Prof. Andrew Boss, the agriculturist of the Station at St. Anthony Park, who has this work in charge, will revise plans of rotations or suggest new rotations free of charge upon receipt inquires.

CONTRACTS ARE LET

A. M. Arpin Secures the Contract for Digging the Silverton--Smiley Ditch.

A St. Paul Firm Gets the Contract for Staightening the Thief River.

The contract for constructing ditch No. 35, which will drain land in the townships of Silverton and Smiley, was let last Friday to A. M. Arpin, of this city. There were five others who had bids in to do this work, but Mr. Arpin's bid was the lowest—12.24 cents per yard—and he secured the job. The contract calls for the completion of this ditch next year, but Mr. Arpin will at once put one of his walking dredges at work upon the job and it is possible that the work will all be done this fall.

The fact that Mr. Arpin has secured this job will be good news to the residents of Silverton and Smiley who are to receive benefits for the building of the ditch, as it will mean that the work will be completed as the contract calls for.

Too many ditches in Red Lake county are being let to a Red Lake Falls scalper, who sub-lets the work to others—when he can. Ditches built in this way are never completed on time and cause much damage.

Another job of ditching in which the residents of Thief River Falls and vicinity are interested is dredging and straightening of the Thief river. The contract for this work was let by the State Drainage Board in St. Paul last week to Forestal & Fegan, of St. Paul, for 6.81 cents per yard. The work is going to cost the state about $65,000.00, and will be of great benefit to the county north of here.

Hill Offers $2,500 Prize.

James J. Hill, chairman of the board of the Great Northern, has offered $2,500 in gold as prizes to be awarded for the best grains and grasses grown in the territory along his lines to be exhibited at the National Corn Exposition in Omaha December 9 to 18.

The money is to be divided into 200 prizes by Prof. C. P. Bull of the Minnesota Agricultural College and Prof. Thos. Shaw of the Dakota Farmer.

There will be about 40 first prizes for wheat, oats, barley, corn, clover, timothy and alfalfa hay, as well as prizes for speltz and field peas.

Details of the contest will be supplied by the exposition at Omaha within a few days and farmers intending to win some of the Hill money, should save samples of small grains in bundles as well as the peck samples of grain.

In addition to offering the prize, Mr. Hill will arrange to assist the farmers in getting their exhibits to Omaha.

The contest is an unusual one, because the farmers will not have to compete with those in the old agricultural states, but simply among themselves as the contest for Mr. Hill's prizes will be open only to those living along the Great Northern lines. Besides the prizes are to be offered by states, so Montana, for instance will not have to compete with the highly developed farms of South Dakota and Minnesota.

Besides Hill's money the exposition offers $50,000 in prizes and while competing for the Hill prizes, the exhibitors may also win some of the regular prizes.

About Butter.

Butter worth 30 cents per pound is made from the same milk that grease worth 4 cents a pound is made. It takes as much milk to make one as the other. The one is the result of ignorance, the other of intelligence. The one goes begging in the market, and brings poverty upon the producer, the other is everywhere in demand and brings wealth and honor to the maker. The one honors the cow the other disgraces her! The one builds mansions and costly barns! The one covers the farm with mortgages, the other removes them! The one brings ignorance to the children, the knowledge and respectability. In no way are ignorance and knowledge more plainly brought in contrast than in the manufacture of butter. Ignorance sits in poverty and is clothed in want and disgrace, while knowledge is clothed in plenty and respectability! In the last ten years knowledge has struck a terrible blow square on the head of ignorance, cracked its skull and laid it up for repairs. This knowledge has its birth in the West, and the creamery is its legitimate off spring.

People with chronic bronchitis, asthma and lung trouble, will find great relief and comfort in Foley's Honey and Tar and can avoid suffering by commencing to take it at once. A. Bjerkhoel.

THE REPORT IS FILED

Public Examiner Makes Report on the Affairs of Thief River Falls.

Says That the Acounting Department of the City Is Perfect in All Ways.

The following is the report of the public examiner, who recently made an examination of the affairs in this city:

The accounts of the City are very carefully and accurately kept. All bills are O. K.'d by the head of the Department under which service is performed, or for which the goods are bought. These bills are then presented to the City Council and if found proper accounts, are passed and ordered paid. All bills are paid upon warrant issued by the City Clerk and counter-signed by the Mayor, a careful record of same being kept by the City Clerk, and duplicate records being made by the Treasurer.

The only thing to question in the conduct of affairs at Thief River Falls, is the minor one of bookkeeping and would really make no difference in the final outcome.

The charter provides that all items of interest shall be charged to and paid from an interest fund created for this purpose, but the Council has been in the habit of charging these items to the fund which created the charge, the Electric Light Fund, Water Works Fund, Sewer Fund etc.

The Treasurer keeps track of the same accounts as the City Clerk making the report of same every month and returning to the Clerk all paid vouchers to date. By this means the Clerk and Treasurer are able to keep their accounts with positive exactness. The Supt. of the Electric Light Works has charge of the bookkeeping for both the Electric Light and Water Works Department making a report twice a month to the City Council. This report is turned over by the Council to the City Clerk and makes a complete check upon these two Departments.

The Accounting Department of the City of Thief River Falls seems to be as perfect as human ingenuity can make it. All moneys collected for the use of the City are easy to trace and account for.

Wins Both Games

Threshermen to Get Together.

There will be a very important gathering in Crookston on Saturday, August 14th, when the threshermen of the Red River Valley will meet in that city to discuss prices to be charged this fall and other matters of interest.

It is the first attempt that has ever been made on the part of the threshermen to get together. It is expected that pratically every threshermen in the Red River Valley will be present. The meeting will be held at two o'clock and all thresherman are invited to be present.

Pays to Raise Good Cattle.

Last Saturday, Tonnes Nelson shipped out one of the nicest steers ever seen in Newfolden. The steer was five years old and weighed 1975 pounds and 5½ cents per pound, which was paid for same, brought the handsome sum of $108.62. C. W. Anderson is the man who raised the steer and we will say that he has done what a good many farmers thot to be impossible here. This should be good proof that it pays to raise steers when done the right way.—Newfolden Review.

First to Register.

Martin M. Bothun, residing north of Thief River Falls, is the man in the county to have the name of farm property registered [illegible] the law passed by the last legislature [illegible] of his land, a beauty spot [illegible] Thief River just north of the townsite he has named "Wonderland" and the name was filed at the office of the register of deeds July 15. The name is now a part of the legal description of the land. The naming of farms should become more common. It is a common practice in the eastern states and farms are much better known by their names than by the legal description and there is much less confusion and trouble in looking up records. It would be interesting to know just how many farmers in the county cannot give the descriptions of their lands without going to a map to figure them out.

When a name is filed at the register's office the owner has acquired a property right to the name and no other farm in the county can be given the same name. It costs only fifty cents and a very little truble to get the name registered. It is worth much more and no doubt many more farms will be named when the value of the name is understood.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

NEW P. M. FOR PLUMMER

Charles W. Latta Has Resigned and Ole J. Johnson to Be Appointed.

Mr. Johnson an Old Resident of Red Lake County and Held in High Esteem.

Charles W. Latta has resigned as postmaster at Plummer and Ole J. Johnson has been recommended to fill the vacancy. Mr. Latta has sold his building in Plummer to Mr. Johnson and the former will leave that village and remove to Crookston. For a number of years past there has been a great deal of opposition to Mr. Latta as postmaster at Plummer and his removal from the village will result in restoring harmony. The appointment of Mr. Johnson will be a popular one, not only in Plummer, but throughout the county. Mr. Johnson is one of the pioneer residents of Red Lake county and for several years served as county commissioner. As a public official he was always fair and just and is in every way deserving of the office.

Breeding New Potatoes.

Work along the line of breeding new varieties of potatoes has been much extended since it has been taken up as a special work at the Minnesota Agricultural Experiment Station, University of Minnesota. In 1908, about 8,500 seedling potatoes were set out from seed bolls produced the year before. Last fall the best of these seedlings were saved, a number of them being promising. Last spring, a large number were again set out.

Just at present extensive work is going on in the crossing of varities which are most likely to produce improved varities, and, since the potato is difficult to cross, at the same time the flower and factors that influence the vigor of the flowers, or their parts, are being studied so that some means may be found by which varieties which cannot now be produced to set seed may be crossed.

Importatoins from Mexico, South America, England, Scotland, Germany and other parts of Europe are being used in this breeding work.

Lack of space forbids the pointing out of special features of the many other lines of experimental work with the potato now going on at the Station. Only a visit to the grounds and a study of the new potato bulletin can give one an adequate idea of the present extent of the work and of its value to the Minnesota potato grower.

A MALIBRAN VICTORY

The Great Singer's Lively Debut In an English City.

SHE DEFIED THE DIRECTORS.

Considering That She Had Been Shabbily Treated, Malibran Sang as Long as She Wanted to and Had a Most Satisfactory Revenge.

Quarrels between opera singers and managers call to mind an incident in the life of Malibran. It was in 1829, when Malibran returned to England from New York and made her debut at Birmingham at the music festival as Malibran Garcia. Miss Paton had already become a favorite there and was allowed to choose her own songs and sing as many as she pleased, whereas Malibran was compelled to sing only what was assigned to her. Garcia bore the indignity with such patience as she could command until one morning she saw the announcement that Miss Paton would sing six songs that evening and that she would sing but two. Then it was that, realizing that much of her success for the season in England depended on her having a better place in the program, she stormed the directors.

In vain the directors endeavored to avoid receiving her, but she made short work of ceremony, and while they were framing an excuse to pacify her she broke in upon them in a magnificent rage. In a jiffy she asked the chairman:

"Sir, have you sanctioned this program?" And, receiving a nod in the affirmative, she sailed along further.

"I had hoped," she said, "it had been issued without your sanction, for it assigns me two songs, both of which are hackneyed, while it gives my rival, Miss Paton, six. She has an established reputation here. Mine is yet to make, at least with your English audiences, and therefore if any preference should be given to any one it should be to me. On my success here depends all chance of my success in London. You forget this or do not care. You give me no chance of success, whereas all I want is justice. I want the same opportunity for displaying my ability as you allow Miss Paton. Here you advertise me for Romeo. But I performed that last night, and the public will say, 'Romeo on Monday, Romeo on Tuesday, Romeo on Wednesday—Romeo, Romeo, she can do nothing but Romeo.' I want fair play—no more, no less!"

Well, it was a great fuss. The directors endeavored to soothe her, for she had talked herself into a great passion, but they made their mistake in pointing to the fact that the program was printed and could not be changed. In vain Malibran argued that she should sing six or an equal number of songs with Miss Paton, and finally she went off in a great huff, declaring if they would not right her she would right herself.

The evening advertised came, and the theater was crowded with the rank, beauty and fashion of Birmingham, as every one familiar with English music festivals would expect. The performance commenced. Some one sang, then Braham followed, and finally came Miss Paton. As usual, she was heartily received. Then Malibran came forward amid many plaudits, undoubtedly agitated at the applause, and stood for a minute with her arms folded and her eyes on the ground.

There was a piano near the footlights, and the music stool stood at the back of the stage. Malibran stood near the piano, but did not touch a key, while in a manner until then unknown in England she warbled the well known aria "Una voce poco fa." Peal followed peal of applause, and when the conductor came to lead Malibran away the cries of encore were so loud as to make him retreat, and again Malibran was in the hands of the audience.

For some time the applause continued and finally died away. When all was silence Malibran started up suddenly, made a pretty obeisance, hastily ran to the back part of the stage and brought out a piano stool. Then, motioning to the orchestra not to play, she played a preludio and then an accompaniment to the song she had just given. But that was not all. When she came within a note or two of the conclusion she paused, cast a look at the wings, where the mystified director stood, laughingly shook her head and to the delight of the audience and the amazement of the directors commenced a new song. She had been singing Italian; now she sang Spanish, and when this had been applauded she started to retire. The audience, however, would not part with her, and when the conductor came to lead her off pit, gallery and boxes actually hissed the poor fellow.

There never was a more enthusiastic ovation to a singer in Birmingham, and, thus encouraged, Malibran gracefully waved the conductor off and again sat down to play. She passed from Spanish to German, German to French and finally from French to English, and the result was that she occupied so much time that the nervously waiting Miss Paton sang only two songs instead of six!

There was a lively scene behind the curtain when Malibran at length retired. But to the acting director, who fumed and cried, "Madam, you have played us an astonishing trick!" she only smiled and said, "I told you that I would right myself if you wronged me—and I did."—New York Post.

A diamond with a flaw is better than a common stone without any imperfections.—Chinese Proverb.

TROPICAL INSECTS.

The Tarantula Is the One Most to Be Dreaded.

Excepting only the tarantula, the crawling insects of the tropics are not really dangerous, though they are more than unpleasant, sufficiently so to make every one wary, and an instinctive watchfulness becomes after a time habitual. It is only a matter of being careful and dangerous stings can be avoided. The sting of a scorpion is sharp and painful. Rapid swelling follows till a great lump is formed at and about the wound, the glands often become swollen and painful, and the tongue swells so that speech may become difficult. The pain lasts from two to twenty-four hours, usually about a day, and it is exceptional if any serious effects follow.

The centiped attacks by burying its sharp feet in the flesh and then biting with its jaws, inflicting deep wounds. Often it goes on crawling rapidly over the flesh, puncturing it with burning, needlelike feet, biting continually, its jaws buried deep in the flesh with vigorous rapidity. This is a serious affliction. The sores, like burning blisters, are open for days, and where a centiped has walked and bitten the flesh a livid sore develops, leaving a deep scar witness to the pain inflicted. Sometimes even gangrene may set in, and then death is apt to follow in a few days. Thus a wound from a centiped unattended easily becomes serious. The centiped's back is so smooth and its muscles so supple that to check it under one's clothing requires fortitude which could press a redhot iron against the naked flesh. Relax the hand for an instant and the centiped slips away to continue its course over the body. The result is not easily described. The screams of a person so attacked attest the pain, and we dread the centipeds. I have seen them in the jungles over a foot long and about three inches broad. Usually they are less than half this size, and fortunately their attacks are rare. There are smaller centipeds, and bad enough it is to be bitten by them, but it is the big fellows in the woods which we dread.

Of all the insects which crawl about in the tropics the tarantula is most to be dreaded. It sinks its fanglike jaws deep in the flesh, and a poison which oozes out around them is carried into the wound. The soft body of the spider permits it to be easily killed, and if there is a way open for escape the tarantula will take it, perhaps not biting at all. One bite it gives, seldom more, and this is sufficient. Days of suffering must be endured, and death may occur. Violent swelling follows the bite of a tarantula and afflicts all that part of the body which has been bitten. At times the flesh becomes discolored, and with the intense pain a form of paralysis develops which may result in death. If, however, the person bitten is enjoying fair health no evil effects result, but where the blood is in poor condition, the heart weak or other organic troubles are present then stings or bites from creeping insects, not only tarantulas, but all of them, are apt to be fatal.

Naturally one crawls out from under the folds with feelings of trepidation and usually finds that some creeping thing has made the outer folds of the folds a resting place for the night.—Forest and Stream.

Eskimo Graves of Stones.

To the Eskimo mind everything animate or inanimate possesses a soul. Thus in their graves we found they invariably placed every cherished possession, that their spirits might serve the departed spirit in the same capacities in the life to come. There is little room for burial beneath the scanty earth in Labrador, even if the frost would permit. So the grave consists of upright stones, with long flat ones laid across. These not only serve to keep the wolves from the body, but wide chinks also afford the spirits free passage in and out.—Wilfred T. Grenfell in Century.

Uncle Sam's Human Hinges.

In other cities the doors of public buildings are set on springs and slap to and fro as the visitor wills, but in Washington it appears necessary to have a special man to open and close the doors—human hinges, as it were—no undignified banging of doors there. This custom has died out in other places, but there are many veteran negroes in Washington who have seen years of such service for the government. They have a stately way of performing this office, which gives a door an official and unofficial swing.—Joe Mitchell Chapple in National Magazine.

A Mystery to Father.

"So your daughter has gone to Europe, after all?"

"Yaas," drawled Farmer Hayseed; "she's been daffy t' go ever sence she left skule. These here female girl colleges dew put ideas intew women's heads. Her maw an' me never could calc'late why she was so set t' go t' Yurrup. She don't know a soul thar."—Lippincott's.

THE CAPITOL STATUE

Heroic Figure That Surmounts the Dome In Washington.

THE MODEL WAS CHANGED.

Jefferson Davis Objected to the Original as Designed by Crawford, and It Was Altered to Symbolize "Armed Liberty," as It Now Stands.

"Armed Liberty," the splendid statue that crowns the dome of the capitol, is by far the most symbolic of all the statues in Washington. Beautiful and reposeful, yet with an air of vigilance, it is perhaps the least appreciated of the city's statues, possibly because of its being placed at such an altitude that it cannot easily be studied. The original plans of the capitol called for a statue to surmount the dome, but no title was then given it, and comparatively few people know the real name of the statue.

Seeking this information, a Post reporter interrogated a number of persons whose daily occupations keep them almost constantly beneath the shadow of the great statue. To the question "What is the name of the statue above the dome of this building?" came these widely different opinions:

"The name of that statue? Why, it's the Goddess of Freedom."

"Yes; I can tell you the name. It is the Goddess of Liberty."

Several declared it to be the statue of Independence. Others said, "It is an Indian woman."

"It is the God of Justice and Freedom," declared a portly man in a tone that defied questioning.

"It represents an American woman, but I am not sure of her name."

"Well, now, I never inquired what lady that statue commemorates," remarked a politician from a not very distant state, "but it is a fine work of art."

"It is a statue of the god of war, Mars."

"Can you tell me something about that statue above the dome?" was asked a man whose knowledge is well known.

"Why, certainly. It is a woman of colonial days. Can't you see the trimming around the mantle and the curls about the face? And the features are delicately molded. You see, I have studied the model at the museum. It surely is a woman. I think you can safely say it is an American woman."

One who always tries his best to help others said: "Now, all statues, as you know, bear the names of the people they represent, and if you will just step over to the library of congress I think you can easily find some book on statues that will tell you all you want to know. It is a woman, I am sure, so look for the female statues."

A younger member of the house replied to the question about the statue most suavely and confidingly, "It is the god of progress; you know his name." Several of the colored men in the various parts of the building were nearly all quite sure it was the Goddess of Freedom. One of them knew the year, 1863, when it was placed above the dome, and he affirmed, "It is the Goddess of American Liberty Before the War."

"You want to know the name of that statue? Well, just wait a minute, and I will get it for you first hand." And a most accommodating guide passed into the senate chamber. Directly he returned.

"That is a statue of Pocahontas."

Every one had a different name for the statue, not one giving the real name, "Armed Liberty."

The statue was modeled by Thomas Crawford, father of the novelist, the late F. Marion Crawford. It was cast at a Maryland foundry. Jefferson Davis was secretary of war when the model was first presented in the war department. The statue then wore a liberty cap and carried a bundle of rods. Davis objected to the liberty cap as being emblematic of the emancipated slaves, while Americans were freeborn. He also thought the bundle of rods, suggesting the functions of the Roman lictor, had lost its symbolic character. Because of these criticisms of Secretary Davis the model was changed, and "Armed Liberty" was evolved.

The statue is nine feet six inches tall and weighs 14,985 pounds. It was put in place on Dec. 2, 1863. The head is thrown back and adorned with eagle's beak and plumes. The right hand rests on a sword, and the left holds an olive branch and a shield. The mantle is gracefully draped and is held by a brooch bearing "U. S." on its face. The helmet is encircled with stars. The supporting globe bears the legend "E Pluribus Unum."—Washington Post.

The Emu's Kick.

An emu can kick as hard as any donkey. The bird stands on one leg and with the other delivers at will a quick and generally very accurate blow. "I never would have believed that a bird had such power," says a recent Australian traveler, "had I not had ocular evidence of it during our trip. After two or three of our men suffered from the terrible kicks of these birds we did not venture near them, but, after running our horses until we got close enough, would bring them down with our rifles. We killed them for their feathers and also hunted for their eggs, but we took good care not to go within kicking distance."

In his better moments stormy Carlyle used to say, "Kindness is the sum of life, the charm to captivate and the sword with which to conquer."

THE BOTTLE CONJURER.

An Old Time Hoax That Caused a Riot In a London Theater.

In 1748 there appeared in the newspapers of London an advertisement stating that on a certain night a remarkable conjurer would perform in the Haymarket theater. He would, the advertisement ran, borrow a common walking cane from any member of the audience and "thereupon play the music of every instrument now in use." It was also promised that he would take an ordinary wine bottle, place it on a table in the middle of the stage, get into it "in the sight of all the spectators" and sing while in it. In the same issue of the newspaper was a second advertisement announcing the arrival of Signor Capitello Jumpedo, "a surprising dwarf—no taller than a tobacco pipe," who engaged to perform with and outdo the "bottle conjurer," contorting himself in all manner of shapes and finally "opening his mouth wide and jumping down his own throat." This feat, not without reason, Signor Jumpedo described as the "most wonderfulest wonder of all wonders as ever the world wondered at."

The night set for this dual display of "wonderfulest wonders" found the theater packed from roof to pit. But as the time passed and the curtain remained down catcalls and hisses began to be heard. Then a man in the pit stood up and in a calm voice announced that if double prices were paid the conjurer would get into a pint instead of a quart bottle. At once the audience realized that they were being hoaxed. Somebody threw a lighted candle into a box, and this was the signal for a riot. Benches were torn up and boxes pulled down, while the timid rushed for the doors, with great loss of wigs, hats, swords and canes. Those who remained, re-enforced by roughs from outside, completely destroyed the interior of the theater and finished up by dragging the scenery into the street, where it was burned in a huge bonfire. Nor was the author of this imposture ever discovered, although it was commonly attributed either to an actor who had been discharged or to a mischievous nobleman bent on winning a wager.—New York Tribune.

DISGUISES FAILED.

Experiences of Emperor Napoleon I. at a Masked Ball.

The Emperor Napoleon I. once announced to his valet that he intended on a certain evening going to a ball at the Italian embassy and requested that complete costumes should be sent in advance. The valet, Constant, obeyed and attended his imperious master and commenced to dress him in a manner which might, had the emperor followed the valet's advice, have defied detection. Constant had some trouble with Napoleon over one or two minor matters, but when it came to changing his top boots for shoes the emperor resolutely refused.

Going into the ballroom, Napoleon at once relapsed into his accustomed attitude and, wishing to engage a lady in conversation, approached her with his hands behind his back. To his first question she prefaced her reply with "sire." Turning away abruptly, he went back to his room and said: "You were right, Constant. I have been recognized. Give me another costume and shoes this time."

The valet redressed his master and warned him to keep his hands at his side. No sooner had he entered the room the second time than once more he relapsed into his natural attitude. This time a lady addressed him, "Sire, you are recognized." Once more the emperor left the room in disgust.

Returning to his room, Napoleon was disguised for the third time. His toilet complete, he went back to the ballroom, which he entered as if it were a barrack room, pushing and swaggering. He was at once detected, and some one whispered to him, "Your majesty is recognized." Another disappointment and another change, still with the same result, and in the end the emperor left the embassy convinced that it was impossible to conceal his identity.

The Mathematical Problem.

Little Marion was busy at her "home work." After a great many perplexed frowns and much nibbling at her pencil she looked up and said:

"The only answer I can get to this example is 'five and three-fourths horses.' Do you s'pose that is right, mamma?"

"Well, I don't know," answered her mother cautiously. "It sounds rather queer."

A long pause; then the small arithmetician's face lit up with a smile.

"Oh, I know," she cried; "I'll reduce the three-fourths horses to colts!"—Woman's Home Companion.

Missed the Name.

Guest of the Doctor's (late home from the theater)—Hurry up, old chap, and let me in. Absentminded Doctor (who has forgotten all about his visitor)—Who are you? Guest—Mr. Trane. Doctor—Missed a train, have you? Well, catch the next.—London Fun.

Well Enough.

"Didn't I tell you to let well enough alone?" said the doctor to the convalescent who had disobeyed and was suffering a relapse.

"Yes, doctor," whined the patient, "but I wasn't well enough."—Detroit Free Press.

Passionate Fondness.

"Do you think that most people nowadays worship money?"

"No; I won't go as far as that," answered the home grown philosopher, "but I will say that the love of money is seldom platonic."—New York Journal.

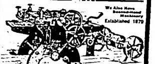
HOWELL PLANER AND MATCHER



We Also Have Second-Hand Machinery

Established 1879

You no doubt find it a hard matter to sell your rough lumber to advantage because most of your customers want it finished. Furthermore you can get twice as much for your lumber by planing it, making it up into flooring, drop siding, window casing and mouldings, for which there is an unlimited demand at big prices. The Howell Planer and Matcher does all this work to perfection.

You can also make big money by working up all your slabs and waste material into Lath and Shingles. All you need for this purpose is our Lath Mill and Shingle Machine. We build the best and most up-to-date machines of this kind on the market which we can furnish you at manufacturers prices. Keep your plant running all the time. Remember we build complete Saw Mill Plants from top to bottom, all of our own manufacture. Our new Catalog is just now out. If you have not received it, write to-day. Manufactured by

The report of the public examiner, published in another column of the NEWS, regarding the conditions in Thief River Falls, is just what most every well informed citizen of this city expected it to be. There has never been any grafting in Thief River Falls and the men who have served the city in various ways have been men of integrity. Mistakes undoubtedly have been made, but we do not believe that there is a city in the whole state of Minnesota of its size that is in as good financial condition. The electric light and water works plant, which is owned by the city, could be sold today for a sum greater than the entire indebtedness of the city. The cost of making improvements in a city that has grown as fast as Thief River Falls is considerable, and in the near future it is going to be possible to run the city with little or no direct tax for city purposes.

The Red Lake Falls Gazette very wisely informs the people of Red Lake county that it does not make any difference whether the court house is built with the $35,000 borrowed from the ditch fund or the money raised by issuing a general county bond. The only difference is that the owners of ditches in Red Lake county are paying the interest on this $35,000, while the people of the whole county would pay the interest if a county court house bond was issued.

The Sunbeam says that there is a strong sentiment in the county east of here for John Duffy as a member of the legislature. While Editor Hunt is quite truthful, we are inclined to believe that in this instance he made a mistake.

If the county commissioners were in as big a rush to have Ditch Contractor Duffy complete his ditch contracts as they are to build a court house, we rather think that financial genius of the Lower Falls would "smile a sickly smile."

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD

TO MOVE OUR PLANET

Power It Would Take to Raise the Earth One Foot.

THE WEIGHT OF THE GLOBE.

It Has Been Calculated to Be Some Six Million Million Tons—What Would Happen if the Earth Should Come to a Sudden Standstill.

It is not generally known that the rotundity of the earth and its movement were known long before Copernicus and Galilei. Thus, Aristotle says, "almost all those who claim to have studied heaven in its uniformity declare that the earth is in the center, but the philosophers of the Italian school, otherwise the Pythagoreans, teach entirely the contrary. In this opinion the center is occupied by fire and the earth is only a star, which by a circular movement round the same center produces night and day."

The following Greek philosophers believed in the rotundity of the earth: Pythagoras of Samos, Anaximander, Nicetas of Syracuse, Heraclides of Pontus, Aristarchus of Samos, Seleneus and Ecphantus. Heraclides and Ecphantus admitted that the earth moved only upon its own axis, the diurnal movement. The Pythagoreans held that each star was a world, having its own atmosphere, with an immense extent of ether surrounding it. Many centuries before Copernicus wrote his work on "The Revolution of the Heavenly Bodies," which was about 1542 A. D., the Jewish cabalistic book, called "Zohar," stated as to the cosmography of the universe:

"In the book of Hammannuah the Old we learn through extended explanation that the earth turns upon itself in the form of a circle; that some are on top, the others below; that all creatures change in aspect, following the manner of each place, keeping, however, in the same position. But there are some countries of the earth that are lightened while others are in darkness. These have the day when for the former it is night, and there are countries in which it is constantly day or in which at least the night continues only some instants. These secrets were made known to the men of the secret science, but not to the geographers."

Maimonides (1190 A. D.) held that the earth had the form of a globe; that it was inhabited at both extremities of a certain diameter; that the inhabitants had their heads toward heaven and their feet toward each other, yet they did not fall off.

In India at a very early period the astronomer Arya-bhata (born A. D. 476) held to the opinion that the earth revolved upon its own axis. It is known that the Chaldeans at a very ancient period calculated with certainty eclipses of the moon and closely approximated the time of eclipses of the sun. Dr. Schlegel gives the great antiquity of 18,000 years to the Chinese astronomical sphere.

Though astronomy affords the means of determining with great precision the relative masses of the earth, the moon and all the planets, it does not enable us to determine the absolute mass of any heavenly body in units of the weights used on earth. To determine the absolute mass of the globe its mean density must be known, and this is something about which direct observation can give no information, as we cannot penetrate more than an insignificant distance into the earth's interior. The most probable mean density of the earth is 5.6—that is, the earth is 5.6 times as heavy as a ball of pure water of the same size. From this and similar estimates the weight of the globe has been calculated to be six million million tons.

Archimedes, the greatest ancient geometer, is accredited with the saying, "Give me where I may stand, and I will move the world!" With a lever of sufficient length this task might possibly be accomplished. But let us see what it would require to accomplish it with the forces at our command. The weight of the globe has been calculated to be six million million tons.

To move this weight one foot a steam engine of 10,000 horsepower would have to work incessantly for a period of seventy thousand millions of years. During this time the engine would use up forty million million quarts of water, a quantity sufficient to cover the whole globe 300 feet high. Now, as to the fuel consumed by the engine, if its boiler was good and working economically it would require four thousand million tons of coal to feed it during the seventy thousand million years. To ship such a quantity of coal by railway it would take two hundred thousand million cars of a capacity of twenty tons each. These cars, when placed in a line, would form a train so long as to encompass the earth forty-five times, and if this train should move with a velocity of twenty five miles an hour it would take it five million years before it could traverse the distance of its own length.

This calculation shows that the globe rests pretty firmly in the place assigned to it by nature and how difficult would be the task suggested by the great mathematician.

It is known what happens when a rapidly running train comes to a sudden standstill. We are thrown forward in the direction of its motion. The same result would follow the sudden stopping of the earth's motion, only on a much larger scale. Everything on its surface would be hurled into space with a velocity hundreds of times as great as that of the swiftest express train.

But we should have hardly the time to realize this somersault into space because of the other immediate result—viz. the transformation of the earth's motion into a heat so intense as to raise the temperature of the air by hundreds of degrees, turn seas, lakes and rivers into steam and instantly consume forests, buildings and cities. And men and animals would instantaneously perish from the mere breathing of the hot air, and their corpses would be incinerated in the general conflagration. In short, the result would be a tragedy such as is depicted by St. Peter for the judgment day.

Scientists have given the temperature which one would feel when penetrating to the center of the globe. To obtain this estimate of heat they had to confine themselves to simple observations on the rise of temperature in mine shafts. Geologists believed that the mean temperature of the earth increased by 1 degree with every hundred feet of descent. With these figures for a basis they calculated that the mean heat of the central nucleus must be 4,320 degrees F.

This was good mathematics, but incorrect, for observations made in Nevada with instruments of great precision showed that the heat of the central nucleus was much greater. For the experiment of 1897 a silver mine was selected, and there they found that at 2,500 feet under the earth's surface the air showed a temperature of 94 degrees F. and the water of 120 degrees. In the vicinity, at Yellow Jack shaft, the mine reaches a depth of 3,000 feet, and the thermometer shows constantly 130 degrees F., so that miners cannot work there for more than fifteen minutes at a stretch. The works in the Simplon showed likewise an uncommon subterranean heat, and the calculations justify an assumption for the central nucleus of a temperature of 680,000 to 700,000 degrees, the same as is assumed of the sun.—Leon Landsberg in Chicago Record-Herald.

QUEER BOUNDARIES.

The 10 o'Clock Line Was Suggested by the Indians.

The most original and primitive way of marking a boundary was probably that of Queen Dido and her colony when they stipulated, before the founding of Carthage, for as much land as could be inclosed by a bull's hide. All tribes belonging to the infancy of civilization have like peculiar modes of reckoning.

From a point near the mouth of the Miami river extends northwest through Indiana a boundary known as the "10 o'clock line." This is one limit of an Indian grant. When the tribe had agreed to cede a portion of their territory to the whites a meeting was held for the purpose of marking out the ground. A surveyor was present and had mounted his compass and telescope on a tripod. The head man of the tribe went up to the instruments, stared steadily at them for awhile, grunted and returned to the circle about the council fire. Not a word was spoken by any one. Soon another Indian arose, walked sedately to the instruments, gravely examined them, grunted and returned to his place by the fire. This example was followed by half a dozen others, after which a short consultation was held.

The chief then approached the white men. "That what Indian know," he said, drawing a small circle on the ground with a stick. "That what white man know," drawing a larger circle round the first. "This what nobody know," he added, pointing to what lay without the last circle. "White man know that," indicating the instrument. "Indian not know it. Indian know the sun. He never cheat. Him always same. Him throw shadow. Indian give white man land one side."

After long consultation it was decided that a line drawn in the direction in which the sun would cast a shadow from an agreed point at 10 o'clock should be made the boundary, the white man taking the land on one side and the Indians keeping that on the other. The other boundaries of the concession were those of the original territory of the tribe, supplemented by water courses and other objects.

Such lines have been frequently used in concluding bargains with the Indians and have become known as "10 o'clock lines."—Minneapolis Journal.

A Pen Point.

"I have an idea, a glorious idea!" cried the inventor's wife. "One of those simple little ideas wherein millions lie."

"Yes?" said he, tossing the long white hair back from his ears. "Proceed."

"It is a two pointed pen!" cried the lady. "A reversible pen. You write with one point till that is worn out; then you pull the pen from the holder, reverse it and write with the other point."

"Excellent, but"—

"I should say it was excellent! For the same money, out of the same quantity of material, two pens instead of one. Where are your patent application papers, James? There's no time to be lost."

The old inventor shook his head and smiled sadly.

"Jenny," he said, "never try to improve on the steel pen. The subject is too old. Too many minds have been ahead of you. That idea of yours for a pen point at both ends was patented all over the world in 1859. The pen appeared on the market in 1870. The people would have none of it. A failure, it was withdrawn.

"But penmakers and the patent people tell me that never a year goes by without the arrival of a hundred or so of excited letters from people who, like yourself, think that they have hit on an epoch making idea, a two pointed pen."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

LOUNGERS IN LUXURY

The Life of the Gilded Youths of Great Britain.

FADS OF MODERN SYBARITES.

They Surround Themselves With the Highest Products of Civilization and Make Idols of Their Bodies, These Twentieth Century Epicures.

In a case that came before the bankruptcy court recently the debtor, a young man in the early twenties, gave in his accounts an item of £6,000 which, he said, was the amount he had lost owing to the compulsory sale of the furniture in his flat. The original cost of the furniture in question is left to the imagination. The truth is that our "golden lads" do themselves remarkably well (to use their own expression) and think that nothing in the world is too good for them. We are always reading in the papers allusions to the luxury and extravagance of women of the smart world. Now and then we may come across some reference to the elaboration of self indulgence in which the young men of our wealthy class luxuriate. Some years since we had a description of the wardrobe of a New York "dude." It appeared in an American paper, and much of it had been communicated by the young man himself, especially some information as to the prices of the garments he affected. Not long after a paragraph went the round of the papers about a certain Italian poet and the little comforts with which he loved to surround himself. They were described as in no way inferior to those of the New York young man. It is not alone in England that the dandy surrounds himself with the highest products of civilization and makes a god of his body.

The luxury of a woman of fashion pales almost to insignificance when compared with that, for instance, of her brother in the guards or heir to the family estates. The young man who was £6,000 to the bad in consequence of "the bankruptcy sale" of his furniture is a case in point. He probably lavished between £8,000 and £10,000 on the plenishing of the rooms. This is not much beyond the usual with young men of the kind. Carpets alone make a large hole in £1,000. Something very special in wall hangings is proportionate in cost. Each piece of furniture is a gem in its way. The tradesmen know the kind of customer they have to deal with and that—for the present—there is plenty of money. They bring forth their richest and rarest and not in vain. The high ambition of the young man is to "go one better" than any other fellow he knows in every detail of his surroundings. The civilized world is ransacked in order to provide him with the latest refinements of costly luxuriousness in such appointments as bed and bath, glass, china, ornaments, silver and dexterously shaded lights. His florist's yearly bill would keep two or three poor families.

As to dress, a single fact may throw some light on the relative values of the young man's wardrobe and that of the smart woman. The valet of one such gilded youth having complained to his master that in his large and luxurious west end flat there was no proper accommodation for his clothes, the resource of renting a second flat equally large for the housing of the wardrobe was suggested and at once adopted. A small room is devoted to clothes and brushes and certain preparations for the treatment of shoe and kid and boot leather. A larger room is given to the boots and shoes themselves and their familiar trees, and so on with the more important articles of dress. Country clothes have spacious quarters devoted to them. They include riding gear, cricket and tennis suits, sporting get-up and traveling kit. Here are his portmanteaus and traveling bags, an imposing array. A large wicker basket standing among them elicits smiling inquiry from the interested relatives whom he has invited to tea and to whom he is showing his new "diggings." "Oh, that?" he says. "That basket ought to know its way to France alone. It goes every fortnight with my washing. English laundries ruin silk things. We tried 'em. Tore them to pieces and made the sheets yellow in no time."

"Silk sheets?"

"Oh, yes! No one ever has any other now."

"And you send this huge basketful once a fortnight?"

"Every week," he corrects us. "One is on its way back now."

It is interesting to see the young men of the day at our smart restaurants, each seated alone at one of the tables, intent on doing himself thoroughly well. His whole mind seems occupied with the menu and its component parts.

In a novel written by a man the opening chapter shows us a ruined youth leaving London for Monte Carlo. He gives the guard 5 shillings to keep the rest of the world out of his first class carriage and regards with satisfaction three small hampers with which he has provisioned himself for the journey. One contains his dinner for that evening, another his luncheon for the next day, and the third holds the wine that is to accompany these two meals and a neat contrivance by the help of which he makes himself a cup of superlatively excellent after dinner coffee. He has left London to escape his creditors.

Such is the golden youth of our day. He denies himself nothing, and his expenditure upon the luxuries of existence far exceeds that of the most extravagant of the women of the fashionable world.—London Queen.

CIRCULATE THAT GOOD OLD $ At Home. Don't Send It Away to the Mail Order Man.

An excellent paint or wash for fruit tree trunks is made from the following: One peck of stone lime slaked in a quantity of water, one quart of crude carbolic acid, four pounds of sulphur, half a gallon of pine tar. The last named ingredient should be added while the limewater is hot, so that the tar will dissolve more readily. The whole should be stirred thoroughly and enough water added to give the mixture the right consistency for spreading.

The wholesome effect of an hour's work on lawn, garden or wood pile or in a brisk walk in the way of helping a fellow to "let down" from a condition of nervous tension and irritability induced by confining office work, tobacco smoke and bad air can hardly be measured. Failure to take advantage of this simple restorative has shortened life, bred unhappiness and furnished more grist for divorce mills than almost any influence that can be mentioned.

The brown tailed moth is an insect pest that has worked havoc to vegetation in the limited areas in which it has appeared and gives promise of being a national horticultural curse unless the most stringent measures are taken to keep it in check. Once it appears in a locality it strips orchard, shade and forest trees of every vestige of foliage. To handle the problem as it should be met not only should most stringent laws be passed, but there should be the fullest co-operation possible between federal and state authorities.

In sections where heavy windstorms are likely to occur at harvest time a timber belt on the windward side of the orchard often saves heavy loss from windfalls as the fruit approaches maturity. Where the orchard has not been favorably located with reference to such timber protection a shelter belt can be grown in a few years. Quick growing varieties such as the cottonwood and box elder will answer the purpose nicely, while the Scotch or white pine may be set outside the deciduous varieties to give effective protection near the ground. In the writer's own orchard such windbreak has meant a saving of hundreds of dollars almost every year as a result of the protection afforded.

TELEPHONE FRANCHISE

An Ordinace Introduced in the Council to Grant One to the Northwestern Company.

It Is Said a Majority of the City Coucil Are In Favor of It.

At the regular meeting of the council Tuesday evening, an ordinance was introduced by Alderman Charles Alexander which will give to the Northwestern Telephone company the right to build and operate a local telephone exchange in Thief River Falls. It is further stated that three aldermen—a majority of the council—are pledged to vote for its passage when it comes up for final action.

In consideration of being granted the franchise, the Northwestern company agrees to install a modern system and give the city the use of five phones free of charge. No rate is named as to what private users will be charged.

There is no question but what there is much feeling against the Tri-State company, which has the present local franchise, but in the opinion of the NEWS it would be a very unwise thing to grant a franchise to Northwestern or any other company, as would result in a greater complication of the telephone affairs in this city.

An Appeal Taken.

Railroad Promoter Here.

Promoter Williams, the venerable gentleman who is the head of the Great American Railway company, was in Thief River Falls on Monday. He says that his surveying crew is still in the county southeast of here, and that there is every indication that the line will be completed from Winnipeg to Chicago inside of a year. He admitted that, although his crew of surveyors have been at work for several weeks, only a few miles of the line had been surveyed, but says that by end of this month he will have over fifty surveying parties in the field. It is his intention to hire the surveyor of every county through which the road passes to do the surveying through that particular county, and then the farmers will be invited to do the grading and take pay for the same in stock.

Mr. Williams does not seem to be discouraged in the least, but admits that the farmers of Red Lake county are not giving him proper encouragement.

G. N. Is Worried.

Duluth Herald: That the Great Northern road is viewing with alarm the entrance of the Soo to Duluth, and that the visit of James J. Hill to this city Friday will result in the expenditure of a large sum of money on the terminals at Duluth, is the belief of the railroad men of Duluth, and there is a rumor current today that the Hill road plans improvements to its terminals here that will cost several hundred thousand dollars.

It is stated that Mr. Hill is coming here with the idea of going thoroughly over the local situation.

One rumor that is current in railroad circles of Duluth is that the Great Northern stands ready to spend a big sum for terminal improvements here; that the docks of Great Northern at the Head of the Lakes will be enlarged and improved; and that steps will be taken to block the plans of the Soo, in regard to the hauling of wheat from territory competing with the territory of the Great Northern.

The construction of the Thief River Falls branch of the Soo is said to be causing some worry to the Great Northern officials, and plans are on foot to get the jump on the Soo by enlarging the local terminals of the Great Northern, and possibly constructing mills here.

Mr. Hill is due to arrive here Friday morning. Just how long he will remain in the city is not known at this time.

COUNTY FAIR IS NOW ON

The Eighth Annual Fair of the Red Lake County Agricultural Society.

Exhibits This Year Are Better Than on Any Previous Year.

The eighth annual fair of the Red Lake County Agricultural Society opened yesterday under very favorable weather conditions. The Chicago Amusement company, which furnishes the free attractions, arrived here Monday over the Great Northern and there are the usual number of tent shows and other attractions.

The exhibits at the fair are better this year than usual, and especially is this true of the live stock exhibit. It is too early to give a full report of the exhibits in this issue, but next week we hope to give a complete report.

An unusual number of race horses are here, there being over twenty horses here on Monday and more came in on Tuesday. Last evening a large number that had been at the Warren fair came over and the races today and tomorrow should be exciting.

Owing to the fact that the farmers of this section are so busy with their haying, the attendance this year will probably not be as large as last year, but the fair is going to be a better one.

In the gentlemen's driving race yesterday afternoon, J. J. Crowe's mare took first money and Charles Shirley's horse, second.

There were no entries in the slow race.

Ball Team Disbanded.

The base ball club has been disbanded for the season and all of the hired players have been released. Under the management this year, all bills were paid in full, new uniforms purchased and several obligations contracted by the club of a year ago were paid.

A FAMOUS DETECTIVE

The Rise, the Achievements and the Fall of M. Vidocq.

GREAT FRENCH POLICE SPY.

His Career as a Coiner, a Burglar and the Associate of Thieves—He Knew the Secrets of More Than Half of the Criminals In Paris.

"The fellow has made his escape by the roof!"

A little band of Parisian police had paid a surprise visit to a mean, dirty house in one of the most disreputable parts of Paris. It was about 3 o'clock in the morning when an officer tapped at the door and demanded admittance of the trembling person who opened it. Slipping past him, they crept swiftly and noiselessly up the rickety stairs to the door of a room, opened it and rushed in. But the bed in which they had expected to find their man was empty. He must have heard them stealing up the stairs and escaped by the window.

The officer in charge of the party looked out. In the darkness he could distinguish nothing. But the man must be there. His clothes still lay beside the bed, where he had cast them down when he had retired the night before.

Some of the most daring of the officers crawled out after him, while others went for ladders to reach the roof from the street. The man must be caught! He was found at last. Crouching down and seeking to hide himself among the chimney stacks, the officers pounced upon him.

A short time later he was before one of the chiefs of the police.

"Good day, M. Henri," he said, saluting the stern looking official. "Some one has once more betrayed me into your hands."

"You are accused of being in league with coiners and passers of bad money," said the official. "What have you to say?"

"Only that I am innocent, monsieur, though the people in the house where I lodged were guilty of such practices. I had the honor of calling on monsieur some time back and of saying that I could put it in his power to clear Paris of such scoundrels."

The man the officers had found upon the roof and who addressed those words to the police official was one Vidocq, a man destined to become famous as one of the greatest detectives of modern times.

Vidocq had been concerned for years past in all manner of rogueries. He had received various terms of imprisonment. He was regarded as one of the most dangerous of the hundreds of criminals that threatened the honest citizens of Paris. He was daring, full of resource, a man of marvelous physical strength and audacity. Upon two previous occasions his accomplices had, knowing how much the police valued his capture, betrayed him into their hands. This was the third time Vidocq had so suffered. Two could play at that game.

"M. Henri," said Vidocq, "make me one of your agents, and I swear to put you in possession of the secrets of half the criminals in Paris."

The offer was a tempting one, for the Parisian police were then baffled by criminals of all descriptions, and Parisians were crying out for more efficient guardians.

"We will see," replied the official.

A short time later Vidocq found himself in prison, condemned to serve a sentence of eight years. But that miserable convict sentenced to that terrible sentence was really a police spy. He was popular with the other convicts and learned all their secrets. Each night he used in his cell to write out an account of the discoveries he had made during the day. The report was dispatched to the chief of the police and proved remarkably useful.

One day the criminal world of Paris was amazed and joyful over the marvelous escape of Vidocq from prison. They received him with open arms. As a matter of fact, the authorities had come to the conclusion that Vidocq could be much more useful to them outside than in that grim place. His escape had all been planned. Vidocq returned to his associates as a hero. In fact, he was a spy—a spy with the keenest eyes, the most alert ears, the most subtle brain, to learn all the villainy going.

It was wonderful what ill luck began henceforth to dog the criminals of Paris. All their plans came in some mysterious manner to the ears of the police. Was it Vidocq who betrayed them? Some of them were so convinced of it that at last Vidocq found it necessary to disguise himself and act the part among them of a new hand in crime. A consummate master of disguise, he went among them, still unsuspected, in his new role.

He was certainly one of the most useful fellows that the police had ever had as an ally.

"Vidocq," said M. Henri to him one day, "we must find that fellow Fossard, the man who has escaped from the prison at Brest. He is in Paris, hiding somewhere. His lodging is in a house in a bystreet near to a market place. And there are yellow silk curtains to the window of his room. In the same house there lives a woman with a humped back. That is all I can tell you about the fellow—all I have been able to learn."

It was a vague clew to work on. Vidocq, anxious to distinguish himself, set off. A window with yellow curtains, a woman with a humped back! For weeks he walked about Paris searching for such a window in a house in which lived such a female.

He found it at last. The hump-

METAL MONEY.

The Greeks Started Coining Long Before the Christian Era.

The invention of coinage is due to the Greeks, most probably to the bankers of Halicarnassos and adjacent Asia Minor Greek colonies, who toward the end of the eighth century B. C. began stamping the small gold and electron ingots which passed through their hands as currency with a mark of some sort intended to guarantee the weight and purity of the metal. Such ingots very soon assumed a round and more regular shape, which we find already in the older silver coins from Aegina, nearly contemporary with the Asia Minor "beans."

Curious to say, none of the surrounding peoples with whom the Asiatic and European Greeks were in constant communication, political or commercial, took up the wonderful invention which at present seems to us of such obvious necessity that we scarcely realize how the civilized world of old can ever have got on without it. As a matter of fact, however, neither the Phoenicians, with their practical commercial sense, nor the Lydians nor the Persians, who claimed the supremacy over the very cities where the new currency was initiated, nor, of course, the Egyptians, ever had coinage till the conquests of Alexander disseminated the Greek civilization all through the eastern world.

The Romans came to know of it through the Greek cities in Sicily and Magna Graecia and began striking silver coins toward the beginning of the third century B. C. In the meantime with the Greeks die sinking, like everything else, had fallen within the domain of art, and their coins, above all those struck during the fifth and fourth centuries B. C. by the Dorians of Sicily at Syracuse and Agrigentum, have never been equaled and remain forever a standard of beauty for the artist and a model of perfection for the die sinker.—London Saturday Review.

A FAMOUS BANKNOTE.

The One That Cruikshank Drew and the Crowds It Drew.

One day about the year 1818 George Cruikshank was passing Newgate on his way to the exchange when, seeing a crowd collected, he went forward to learn what was the matter and saw that it was the execution of several men and women. He was horrified at the spectacle and on inquiring learned that the woman was being hanged for passing counterfeit one pound notes. He learned also that this punishment was quite a common thing, even though the poor wretches often sinned in ignorance, being the dupes of men who sent them to buy some trifles and return the change to them. Wrung with pity and with shame, Cruikshank went home and immediately, under the inspiration of his feeling, sketched a grotesque caricature of a banknote. He called it a bank restriction note—not to be imitated. He represented on it a place of execution, with spaces about filled in with halters and manacles, a figure of Britannia devouring her children and transport ships bearing the lucky or unlucky ones who had escaped death to Van Dieman's Land, or Australia, while in place of the well known signature of Abraham Newland was that of "J. Ketch."

He had just finished this when his publisher, Hone, entered and, seeing it, begged to have it for publication. So Cruikshank etched it and gave it to Hone, who exhibited it for sale in his window with startling effect. Crowds quickly began to gather and purchased so eagerly that the issue was soon exhausted.

Cruikshank was kept hard at work making more etchings. The crowds grew so great that the street was blocked, and the mayor had to send soldiers to clear it. Hone realized over £700 in a few days.—London Standard.

Pronunciation.

Dr. Johnson would not have consented to pronounce "wind" differently in prose and in verse. He insisted upon making the "I" long always. The story goes that, in order to crush somebody who preferred the short "I" in ordinary conversation, Johnson, rhyming all three words with "tined," remarked, "I cannot find it in my mind to call it wind, but"—rhyming all three words with "blind"—"I can find it in my mind to call it wind." But his adversary got the better of him. Johnson himself always pronounced "gold" as "goold." "If I may be so boold," said the other, "I should like to be toold why you call it goold."

A Caustic Critic.

The Paris critic Martin once only had taken his chocolate in a place other than the Cafe Foy, and he then found it not good. This happened at the Regence, and the young woman at the desk, to whom he expressed his displeasure, said: "You are the only one to complain. All of the gentlemen of the court who come here find it good."

"They also say, perhaps, that you are pretty," he replied slowly.

Defenseless Man.

A woman writer in one of the magazines says women are sacrificed by thousands in the name of marriage. Yes, but what about the defenseless men who are each year torn from their comfortable homes and dragged to the altar?—Columbia (S. C.) State.

GEORGE HANGS A PICTURE.

But He Couldn't Do It Without His Wife's Able Assistance.

"George, I wish you would hang that rose picture tonight."

"All right, my dear, I'll do it now. Get me the stepladder."

"I should think you might get the stepladder yourself."

"Where is it?"

"Where it is always kept. On the top of the cellar stairs."

"That's where it is supposed to be. Where is it now?"

"It is either there or up in the back room, or—let me see—I loaned it to Mrs. Johnson yesterday. No, she brought it back, and I left it on the back porch. Oh, yes, I know where it is. You'll find it in the pantry off the kitchen."

After twenty minutes' search the ladder is discovered. George locates the spot for the picture and climbs up.

"Now hand me the picture, my dear."

"Yes, here it is."

"Where's the hammer?"

"I thought you had it."

"You thought I had it! You knew very well I didn't have it. Get it for me right away."

"Where's the nail?"

"Didn't you get a nail either?"

"No, I didn't get a nail either. I supposed if you wanted me to hang a picture you'd have the tools ready. Where's the picture cord?"

"Well, for heaven's sake! Why didn't you look to see if there was picture cord on it before you went up there to hang it?"

"Get me the cord and don't stop to argue. I'm getting dizzy up here."

"Well, here's the cord. What else do you suppose you'll want?"

"Well, I don't want any more of your lip. I can hang this picture without that!"

Whereupon she left him to get along as best he could. "Just like a man," she remarked as the hammer fell to the floor.

"Just like a woman," he muttered as he descended. "Just like a woman. They've got nothing to do and all the time in the world to do it, and then, by jingo, they leave it to a man!"—Detroit Free Press.

DID HIM A FAVOR.

His Apparently Innocent Request Cost the Bank Dearly.

A customer having a fairly good balance, never going below four figures, at a London bank hurried in one morning and asked to see the manager. The usual civilities were exchanged, and the caller explained that he was making a rather good investment and had promised to pay £1,600 the next day.

"Well," said the manager, "there's no difficulty about that." "Precisely," was the rejoinder, "but will you do me a small favor?" "What is it?" queried the manager. "I want my friend to see that my paying him £1,000 will not exhaust my resources. Will you, therefore, oblige me by instructing all the pay clerks (and they were numerous) to cash my check when it is presented without referring to the ledger to see how my account stands? It will make a good impression on my man, and it cannot do you any harm, as you know what my balance is." (It was a little over £1,000.)

"Certainly, if you particularly wish it," replied the unsuspecting manager, for his customer's name had been long on the books, and there had never been any trouble with him.

When the check was presented the next day at a particular desk the clerk, without going through the formality of referring to the customer's account, pleasantly inquired, "How will you take it?" and handed over the amount without ado.

The same little ceremony was gone through at four other pay desks, each clerk, acting upon instructions, cashing Mr. ——'s check for £1,000, making £5,000 in all, or nearly £4,000 in excess of the wily customer's balance.

And, of course, when Mr. —— received a polite note requesting him to call at the bank he was not to be found.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A Fashion Garrick Killed.

Women of England in the eighteenth century wore large hats. Samuel Rogers once traveled to Ranelagh in the same coach with a woman who was compelled to sit on a stool on the floor of the coach on account of the inconvenient height of her headdress. Hannah More, who was all for simplicity in costume, writes in her diary that she has seen women wearing on their heads "an acre and a half of shrubbery, besides slopes, grass plats, tulip beds, clumps of peonies, kitchen gardens and greenhouses." The credit of killing this fashion is given to Garrick. He appeared one night on the stage with a mass of vegetables on his head and a carrot suspended from each side, to the shame and confusion of many fair members of his audience.

Dr. Johnson's Resolutions.

Dr. Johnson compiled this list of good resolutions on his fifty-first birthday in 1760: "Resolved, Deo juvante, to combat notions of obligations; to apply to study; to reclaim imaginations; to consult the resolves on Tetty's coffin; to rise early; to study religion; to go to church; to drink less strong liquors; to keep a journal; to oppose laziness by doing what is to be done tomorrow; rise as early as I can; send for books of history of war; put books in order; scheme of life."

The Proper Way.

"I would like to ask," said a lady visiting America for the first time, "when you call here do you turn down the end of your visiting card or not?"

"No," said a man; "you fold it in the middle."—Ladies' Home Journal.

A MAN'S POCKETS.

What on Earth Does He Want With Eighteen of Them?

The great fundamental difference between the modern woman and the modern man is this—that whereas the raiment of the modern woman has no pockets at all the raiment of the modern man has nothing else.

Indeed, a man may be defined as an animal with a passion for pockets. If you were asked to say offhand how many pockets you possess at a given moment, you would be stumped.

It would be necessary to make out an inventory. In the first place, there are at least five in your overcoat. There are at least five more in your lounge jacket, four in your waistcoat and four in your trousers. You have therefore at least eighteen pockets.

Now, it is absurd to say that any man needs eighteen pockets. Why, it is almost a set of pigeonholes! They ought to be numbered or lettered. Often a man loses his railway ticket, and after paying excess fare he finds it hidden in one of his dozen and a half pockets. It takes some time to search carefully in eighteen little bags.

Men carry a great deal of rubbish in their pockets. There are few of us who do not suffer from accumulations of old letters, paid and unpaid bills, bus and tram tickets, theater vouchers and miscellaneous odds and ends.

We change our flotsam and jetsam from one suit of clothes to another, for we are not happy without unnecessary fragments of paper.

I once knew a man who carried an amazing assortment of useless things in his pockets. He always had a lump of chalk, a piece of string, a small ivory inch rule, a penknife, a pencil and a pair of compasses.

In his pocketbook he carried stamps, sticking plaster, telegraph forms and pins. Another man I know always carries half a dozen silver cigar cases shaped like torpedoes with one cigar in each.

Some men have a mania for carrying enormous bunches of keys. They do not use more than two of them every day, but they are not happy unless they have a key for everything they have ever owned. When they lose their keys, it is a tragedy.

I sometimes wonder why the chancellor of the exchequer does not impose a pocket tax. It would bring in enough revenue to pay for old age pensions. It would be much more profitable than the ancient window tax, for men could live without windows, but they could not possibly exist without pockets.

A pocketless man would be miserable. Try to imagine yourself in clothes without pockets. The imagination boggles at the thought. A coat without pockets would be a monstrosity, before which a man would recoil in terror.

I suspect that the tailor is the first cause of pocketitis. He it is who forces us to submit to the plague of pockets. I appeal to my fellow men to revolt against this sartorial tyranny. Let us establish a pocket limit. Fourteen pockets ought to be enough for any sane man.—James Douglas in London M. A. P.

Value of a Laugh.

The value of a good natured laugh may be rated low by some people, but many writers have attested its worth in no measured terms.

It is not surprising that the merry Charles Lamb should have said, "A laugh is worth 100 groans in any market," but from the lips of the somber Carlyle one is scarcely prepared to hear, "No man who has once heartily and wholly laughed can be altogether or irreclaimably bad."

It was Douglas Jerrold who boldly stated that "what was talked of as the golden chain of Jove was nothing but a succession of laughs, a chromatic scale of merriment reaching from earth to Olympus."

"I am persuaded," wrote Laurence Sterne, "that every time a man smiles, but much more so when he laughs, it adds something to his fragment of life."

Last of all comes the verdict of Dr. Holmes, given with his own inimitable humor, "The riotous tumult of a laugh, I take it, is the mob law of the features, and propriety the magistrate who reads the riot act."

"Hold the Rudder True."

If you have enemies, go straight on and don't mind them. If they get in your way, walk around them regardless of their spite. A man who has no enemies is seldom good for anything. He is made of that kind of material which is so easily worked that every one has a hand in it. A sterling character is one who thinks for himself and speaks what he thinks. He is always sure to have enemies. They are as necessary to him as fresh air. They keep him alive and active. A celebrated character who was surrounded by enemies used to remark, "They are sparks which if you do not blow will go out of themselves." "Live down prejudice," was the Iron Duke's motto. Let this be your feeling while endeavoring to live down the scandal of those who are [illegible] against you. If you stop to dig [illegible] but as they desire and open [illegible] abuse. Let the [illegible] talk. There will be a reaction if [illegible] perform your duty, and hundreds who were once alienated from you [illegible] to you and acknowledge [illegible]

PLAY TIME IN STOCKHOLM

Leaders of Fashion Now Occupying Summer Homes on the Shores of the Malaren—Average Stockholmian Is a Generous Host, Although City Has but Few Millionaires—Poor People Welcome Summer as a Season When They Can Reduce Expenses.

SWEDEN.

At this season of the year nearly all of Stockholm's fashionable population are comfortably located in summer cottages on the beautiful shores of the Malaren. Stockholmians always make the most of the summer and then is the time when indeed the purse fares the worst, too. In a well appointed summer home the Stockholmian finds himself entertaining friends from up the country and even from abroad and while the summer rent is in a measure a trifle cheaper, the table bill is by far much heavier. The well-to-do Stockholmian is also a generous host and this does not tend to increase the strength of his purse. Jolly launching parties, lake concerts and sexas are common and it all costs money. In no city in the world are well-to-do people so generous to a fault when it comes to entertaining as in Stockholm, and this may account for the fact that the city has comparatively few millionaires. The poor people on the other hand welcome the summer months as a boon to their existence, for they can move out to smaller but cheaper quarters along the lake shores and there in a measure make up for the expensive winter. Still, take it right through, the experience of all who visit Stockholm and who live there is that it is from all points of view an unusually expensive city to live in.

There have been several automobile accidents in Sweden this summer and several people have also been killed, but none has created so much attention as the one at Falun, principally because of the miraculous escape of those who figured in the sensational accident. An automobile carrying seven persons became unmanageable while crossing a bridge across the Sundborn river, near Falun, and the machine, together with its occupants, plunged into the river. Just as the automobile left the bridge all of the seven occupants were hurled into the river and that, by the way, was fortunate for them. They were hurled into the river ahead of the automobile, so that no one was caught under it. The entire party was carried by the current and saved at a dam a short distance below. Several of them were slightly hurt in the fall, but none of them dangerously. The automobile landed in seven feet of water and that too was pulled out of the water in a practically unharmed condition. It was indeed a most miraculous escape and all the occupants are now wondering how it can be really possible that they are alive today.

A sum of 2,385.05 crowns has been solicited in Stockholm for a fitting monument to be erected over the grave of the late novelist and story writer, Alfred Hedenstierna (Sigurd), Sweden's Mark Twain, whose works will ever remain popular in Sweden. "Sigurd" has been widely read in America, where thousands of Swedish-Americans have made his acquaintance.

Emigration from Sweden is increasing instead of abating. During the first six months of the present year there were 7,960 persons who left for foreign ports. During the same period last year there were 3,094 persons who emigrated to foreign lands. This proves very conclusively that the work of the National Anti-Emigration society has not been very successful.

The Stockholm exposition has thus far proven a splendid success and while the attendance has not been as large as during the international exposition in 1897, it has still averaged about 6,000 people a day, something very gratifying when it is considered that the exposition is only being managed on a small scale.

The opera singer, Wilhelmina Fundin, celebrated her ninetieth birthday at her home in Stockholm the other day. The famous lady, who was a contemporary of Jenny Lind and an intimate friend of hers, is still enjoying vigorous health, and enjoys her promenades out in the fresh open air every day.

At Sorbonne there will in the near future be erected a chair of Scandinavian languages and literature. The professor who will fill the chair to begin with will be M. Paul Verrier. This is the first time that the Scandinavian languages and literature will receive attention in Paris, France.

A syndicate with a capital of 1,200,000 crowns, to be known as Ingaro Strand company, has been organized for the purpose of erecting a new Saltsjobaden. A large number of villas will be erected in connection with the big institution.

Queen Olga of Greece is expected to pay a visit to the Swedish court in the near future on the invitation of Queen Victoria. Queen Olga is the grandmother of the Duchess of Sodermanland.

The king and queen were present at the dedication of the Orsa-Sveg railway, the 10th inst. There were at least 5,000 people who attended the dedication festivities.

NORWAY.

Captain Engelstad of the Norwegian navy met death by lightning July 24. He was taking meteorological observations during a thunderstorm and coming to touch the winch holding the copper wire attached to the kite, which was a thousand yards high, was struck dead. Captain Engelstad was an officer of high attainments. He was to have commanded the polar expedition ship Fram, of the much-talked of Amundsen polar expedition.

In Bergen St. Han's Night was observed by dancing and general festivities at all the inns up in the mountains. In Sverresborg there was "folcespiel," national dances and vaudeville. In the Nygaardspark there was a grand concert, which was attended by several thousand people. In Christiania there came a drenching rain, which placed a damper on the grand festivities planned there.

Reports from Norway state that Emperor William's Norwegian trip will be abandoned this season owing to political complications at home. This will be the first time for a great many years that Emperor William will not be cruising in Norwegian waters. It is fully believed, however, that the Trondhjem cathedral will receive its annual donation of $1,000 from the emperor.

That weather in Norway can act very freakish at times is conclusively evinced by the fact that last month, about June 20, cows froze to death in the vicinity of Hegsfjord and a flock of sheep met a similar fate while they were on their way up the mountains for the fresh pastures. Only a few miles away from there, however, the weather was warm and pleasant.

J. Janssen, a Norwegian lecturer of note and director for the Grand Biographical company of Christiania, recently arrived in America, where he will give a series of stereopticon lectures, showing some very fine views of Norwegian scenery and folk life. He has already given three very successful lectures in Brooklyn, N. Y.

During the Oresund races there were no Swedish boats entered as competitors this year. There were two German boats and three British. During the handicap race from Warnemunde to Copenhagen, there was only one Danish boat, the remaining three were Norwegian boats.

Little Prince Olav's birthday was observed July 2. There was a morning salute of twelve cannon in his honor and during the day a large number of poor children in the capital city were remembered with small presents.

The committee on education appointed by the storthing has purchased for the government the Falstad school, belonging to the Trondhjem "Kommune," for 85,000 crowns.

Dr. Holm's tourist hotels on Finse and Gjeilo will cost when completed something over 250,000 crowns. An English syndicate is also interested with the doctor.

DENMARK.

Says the Literary Digest in a recent issue: "It is often said that we bow respectfully to the great books—and do not read them. But it must be seldom given to a man to find himself the object of such veneration and neglect. Yet this is the picture we are given of George Brandes, the Danish critic and essayist, the author among other things of a life of Shakespeare and a work on the Romantic movement in Europe. He has achieved European fame, his books are translated into English, he is recognized as one of the intellectual giants, yet he himself asserts that few buy his books and that his royalties are pitifully small. He spends his days in contemptuous aloofness from the world, pursuing the intellectual life and writing more books, that only the very few read. 'I am famous,' he said recently to Mr. Sylvester Viereck, who paid him a visit, 'but that is of no avail if nobody reads me. My publishers never sell more than forty copies of my books.' 'And,' added Mr. Brandes, as a sad smile flickered across his Jovian visage, 'when the twentieth century was about to be ushered in, a prosperous German newspaper wrote to me that they had planned to publish a full page review of the nineteenth century by a poet, a philosopher and a scholar, and that I was their man because I combined in my person the qualities of the three. I don't care to write for newspapers. It detracts from my vitality and distracts me from my real pursuits. But as the chance for such an article occurs only once in a hundred years and I didn't expect to live through another century, I agreed to undertake the task for a remuneration of 500 crowns ($125). They replied, regretting that they had written me, and that in view of my unreasonable demands they would be compelled to enlist the services of less expensive pens.' 'But surely American magazines pay you well?' 'Oh, well, they write me occasionally for contributions and ask me to name my own price. I don't care to do that sort of thing for less than 500 crowns. And they usually send me one-half of what I demand.' And then Brandes, pointing contemptuously to a booklet in English exclaimed, 'this is merely one chapter from one of my books. I suspect it is too expensive to reprint them entirely in the English language. I write only in Danish. As a young man I used to write German and English, but I can't bother to rewrite my books several times. I must devote myself to my studies.'"

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

State Auditor Iverson has written the department of insular affairs at Washington asking for official information as to the date when C. B. Elliott begins to draw salary as judge of the supreme court of the Philippines. Judge Elliott left his home at Minneapolis about July 18, and he has already drawn his salary as justice of the supreme court in Minnesota up to Aug. 1. Mr. Iverson was informed unofficially that Elliott would commence drawing salary as federal judge from the date he left Minneapolis, and that the transportation for himself and his family would be paid. If the report is officially confirmed, Mr. Iverson says he will issue no more warrants for salary for Judge Elliott, although the latter's resignation does not take effect until Sept. 1.

The Minnesota Dairy union, which will be a union of all the dairy interests of the state, including the centralizing creameries, was organized at St. Paul at a meeting of the officers of the Minnesota Dairymen's association, the Minnesota Creamery Buttermakers' association, the Minnesota Co-Operative Dairies association and leading dairymen of the state. The organization will fight to retain the present tax on oleomargarine.

Complete reports from the auditors of the counties where sales of state land were held this summer show that the exact number of acres sold was 35,807 and the total price received was $229,142. This makes an average price of $6.40 per acre. Wright county lands averaged $19.03, the highest of any county.

The totals of the personal property assessments just completed show an increase of $6,000,000 in Ramsey county. The increase is largest in the wholesale ward, the Seventh ward, where the wealthy live, and in the ward where the street car company and gas company have their offices.

A big Minnesota farm deal has just been closed at Eldora, Ia., where Judge Charles E. Albrook sold to an Indiana banker 1,518 acres of land near Slayton, Murray county, this state. The price received by Albrook was $75,900, or at the rate of $50 an acre.

Attorney General Simpson has been requested by the officers of the Law Enforcement league of St. Paul to take steps to oust Chief of Police O'Connor from office for failing to enforce the saloon lid law. Simpson took the complaint under advisement.

Daniel Larson, a Duluth carpenter, has brought suit against Carl Thiel of Hibbing, a photographer, well known over Northern Minnesota, for $15,000 on a charge of having alienated Mrs. Larson's affections.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Addie Broadbent, the eight-year-old daughter of William Broadbent of Arago township, Hubbard county, was accidentally shot in the head by her father. Broadbent was shooting at a target when a twenty-caliber ball passed through a board, hit another and glanced, striking the girl above the left ear, cutting a hole through her skull and going into the brain. Her recovery is doubtful.

The tearing up of the old sidewalks at Red Wing under the direction of the street commissioner for the purpose of replacing them with cement, has led to the discovery of a large sum of money which is believed to be the money taken from the St. Paul road depot. Sums ranging from $1 to $15 were found, one package in the form of a roll of bills containing $115.

J. Gregg, aged seventy years, stonemason and contractor of Northfield, while crossing a railroad bridge at Cannon Falls was seen to stoop over to pick up a package, which he had dropped, when he staggered and fell into the river below, a distance of about thirty-five feet, and was drowned.

Halvor Solverson, aged seventy years, who has been in ill health for some time, committed suicide by hanging himself on the farm of Andrew Thompson, near Pipestone. He climbed a tree, and fastened a rope around one of the branches and jumped, the fall breaking his neck.

Leonard Amel, aged nine years, a son of John Amel of Cloquet, was drowned in the St. Louis river near that city. He was out on a boom of logs and happened to slip off into the water, going under the logs with the current.

While responding to the beckon of a prospective customer across the street Myer Chelneck, a seven-year-old St. Paul newsboy, was run down and probably fatally injured by an automobile.

Fred Lauersdorff, twenty-two years old, of Appleton, Wis., farm laborer near Cloquet, became overheated and drank a large quantity of cold milk. He died a few hours later.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Mrs. Mary L. Mitchell, wife of John R. Mitchell, president of the Capital National bank of St. Paul, is dead. Mrs. Mitchell was born in Winona, Minn., Oct. 10, 1867, and was the eldest daughter of the late Henry W. Lamberton of Winona.

Captain Charles E. French, a veteran of the Philippine campaign and prominent in state militia circles, is dead at St. Paul, aged thirty-five.

SIX PEOPLE DEAD

Terrific Explosion of Acetylene Gas at St. Paul.

TWO BUILDINGS DESTROYED

Victims Caught in Wreckage and Bodies Cremated.

St. Paul, July 31.—The explosion of an acetylene gas tank in the building occupied by the Kuhlo Manufacturing company and other tenants will, it is believed, cost nine lives. Six persons are dead and a number injured, three probably fatally. The dead are:

ARNOLD KUHLO, president of the Kuhlo Acetylene Tank company.

G. BORGEN, draftsman, interested in the company.

ROMMIE BUSKEY, three years old.

CLIFFORD GAMBLE, three years old.

MRS. AGNES GAGNON.

HERBERT P. HODGMAN, twenty three years old, a student.

Numbers 79 and 81 West Third street, two-story buildings, were completely wrecked, a huge mass of flame shooting up. Glass was broken in all directions roundabout.

The fire following the explosion raged for an hour and the bodies of the victims were badly burned.

The acetylene tank which exploded was being used as part of an apparatus invented by Arnold Kuhlo for filling automobile lamps with fuel gas.

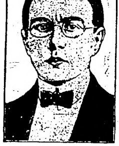
COURT RUFFLES THAW

Puts Series of Pertinent Questions to Defendant.

White Plains, N. Y., July 31.—It was the judge, not the prosecution, who ruffled the assurance of Harry K. Thaw on the witness stand. "Exaggerated ego," the insane delusion that the individual is a person of supreme ability and importance, may prove the bar that will keep the doors of the Matteawan insane asylum closed upon him.

When District Attorney Jerome finished his cross-examination Justice Mills assumed the role of inquisitor and put a series of questions that in the judgment of many were more pertinent than any of those asked during the twelve hours Thaw has been questioned.

"They are going to argue with me," said the justice, "that all the way through you have shown an 'exaggerated ego.' You have had the assistance of the ablest counsel, but I have observed you constantly interrupt him and make suggestions. In your former litigations you have constantly changed your counsel. Why don't you trust Mr. Morschauser?"



HARRY K. THAW.

Thaw was clearly nonplussed. This was a feature of his conduct upon which Mr. Jerome had not touched.

"But I do trust Mr. Morschauser," he hastened to assure the justice.

"Why didn't you trust your other lawyers—you a man unlearned in the law?" continued the court. "Haven't you felt all the way through that you were better able to conduct this case?"

"No," answered Thaw, "except perhaps in the case of Mr. Hartridge."

Thaw admitted that he might have interrupted Mr. Morschauser, but he pleaded that it was only because he wanted to make suggestions regarding the evidence and not because he felt qualified to take the case out of his attorney's hands.

AWFUL FLOOD IN MANCHURIA

One Thousand Persons Perish in One City Alone.

Tokio, July 31.—News has reached here of a terrible flood in the province of Changchun, Manchuria. In the city of Kirin, situated at the head of steam navigation on the River Sungari, 225 miles from Mukden, 1,000 people have been drowned and 7,000 houses submerged. The water is still rising.

COURT TO DECIDE

Will Pass on Legality of Drainage Appropriations.

ATTORNEY GENERAL SAYS NOT

Declares State Aid for Purpose Mentioned Is Invalid.

The question of the legality of the legislative appropriations for state drainage will be submitted to the state supreme court as soon as the fall term opens and a test is made to see whether Attorney General Simpson is right in his opinion that state aid for the improvement of water courses and the drainage of private lands is illegal. The county attorney of Redwood county will start the test case and a judicial short cut will be used so that it will be brought to the supreme court immediately.

The attorney general ruled that of the annual appropriation of $100,000, made for drainage, the $25,000 set aside for the improvement of water courses and drains other than those upon state land and the $25,000 for the Whetstone river canal were illegal. The $12,500 set aside for a survey of watersheds and the $2,500 for the drainage of lands owned by the state he held to be legal.

STATE'S RICHEST IRON MINE

Scranton Location Near Hibbing Makes Wonderful Showing.

The state of Minnesota struck it rich in a mineral way at the Scranton location on the outskirts of Hibbing.

The property is controlled by Pickands, Mather & Co., and they have just awarded a contract for sinking a concrete working shaft. This mine will not only be the biggest that the state owns, as far as known at present, but it will be the biggest underground mine on the Mesabi range.

Twenty-five millions tons of ore have been shown up on this property by drills and the state will pull down 25 cents a ton royalty on it. The state will get more than $8,000,000.

The Scranton mine was formerly called the Elizabeth. It was originally explored by the late John P. Morrow of Duluth and a few of his business associates, and after showing up 13,000,000 tons they sold the lease to Pickands, Mather & Co. of Cleveland for a cash bonus of $325,000. Since then the company has shown up about an equal amount additional on an adjoining forty, which was covered by the one lease.

ALLEGED DEFAULTER DEAD

Expires in Jail at Jackson, Minn., Following Arrest.

Dr. Frank R. Hansen, defaulting school secretary of Lakefield, died in his cell in the Jackson county jail at Jackson. His death is attributed to the fact that he was deprived of morphine. Dr. Hansen formerly was a prosperous physician and a prominent Mason.

The shortage in his accounts was discovered three months ago. It amounted to $8,000. After being arrested by Sheriff Ter Haar he escaped from that officer at Kansas City by a simple ruse, but later was recaptured and brought here to be tried.

DIES IN TERRIBLE AGONY

Minneapolis Man Victim of Mad Dog's Bite.

John Haugen, aged twenty-seven, is dead at the University hospital at Minneapolis from the effects of hydrophobia.

Haugen was bitten by a mad dog six weeks ago in the face, but he did not feel the effects of the injury until a few hours before his death, when he became a raving maniac and after several hours of horrible suffering died. Haugen was employed by the C. A. Smith Lumber company, and was bitten while at work in the company's yards.

St. Paul Man Killed at Duluth.

William C. Bray of St. Paul, a lineman in the employ of the North American Telegraph company, was killed in Duluth in a fall from the fire escape in the rear of 304 West Michigan street. It is thought that he was overcome by the heat. Bray was working in the rear of the building on the second story and was about to descend when he fell. He struck the lower iron platform of the fire escape near the ground. When picked up he was dead.

Freight Train Strikes Wagon.

While John Carlson and Tom Pierce were driving across the yard tracks at Blue Earth a northbound Northwestern freight engine backed into the wagon and threw out both men, Carlson going across the track. Both of his legs were cut off. His recovery is doubtful. Pierce and one of the horses were also hurt, while the wagon was completely demolished.

New Minnesota Supreme Judge.

Thomas D. O'Brien of St. Paul has been officially named a member of the state supreme court by Governor Johnson. Mr. O'Brien received his commission in person. The appointment becomes effective Sept. 1, the date of Judge C. B. Elliott's resignation.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

Shooting over the head of United States Senator Jeff Davis, Y. Ellis, a resident of Pine Bluff, Ark., fired a bullet into the heart of Nathaniel Parker Willis, owner of a liquor cure at Indianapolis, in the circuit courtroom at Little Rock, Ark. The shooting was the tragic ending of a law suit brought by Willis against his divorced wife, who had subsequently married Ellis, for the possession of his child.

An elopement terminated in the murder of Tony Panelli and Mrs. Clara Pizzani by Mrs. Panelli, wife of the slain man, at Canton, O. After shooting her husband Mrs. Panelli attacked Mrs. Pizzani with a butcher knife. A terrible struggle followed, during which Mrs. Pizzani was stabbed thirty times.

Noah R. Marker, assistant cashier of the First National bank of Tipton, Ind., apeared at his home in that city after having been missing since July 24, when, it is charged, he carried away with him $60,000 of the bank's funds. Marker was placed under arrest and held in $10,000 bail, which was furnished.

Madarlal Dhinagri, the Indian student who shot and killed Lieutenant Colonel Sir William Hutt Curzon Wyllie and Dr. Cawas Lalcaca in London, was found guilty and sentenced to death at the conclusion of a trial of less than an hour's duration.

At Paterson, N. J., a blind negro, angered by a bartender's refusal to serve him more liquor, pulled out two revolvers and emptied them in a crowded saloon, killing two men and seriously wounding a third.

Two pretty girl bandits held up and robbed Charles M. Babbitt of Buffalo, N. Y., who was in the Glidden tour party, in a secluded part of a mountain road near Sterling, Colo.

At Bellevue, Ky., Mrs. John Mullarkey, twenty-eight years old, shot and killed Edward Axline, thirty years old, and died later as a result of self-administered poison.

Laurel Laidley, twelve years old, committed suicide, hanging himself to a rafter in his father's barn on the farm near Guthrie Center, Ia.

Marital troubles caused Mrs. Emma Michel of Chicago to murder her two children and then commit suicide by means of illuminating gas.

THE DEATH RECORD.

Cornelius Cuyler, president of the United States Mortgage and Trust company of New York and prominent in financial and civic affairs, died in Biarritz, France, as a result of injuries sustained in an automobile accident.

Colonel Leopold Markbreit, mayor of Cincinnati and a distinguished soldier and journalist, is dead after an illness extending over the greater part of the nineteen months he had served that city as its chief executive.

Harry C. Pulliam, president of the National league of baseball clubs, committed suicide in his rooms on the third floor of the New York Athletic club. Ill health, it is said, was the cause of his act.

HOLDING THE CROP.

The tiller of the soil who is so situated that he can hold his crop has a decided advantage over his fellow producer who cannot do so. It is a well known fact that the middleman, quite generally comprising wholesalers and commission men, like to get control of just as large a percentage of the supply of any product as possible and as soon as may be after it is fit or ready for market. This enables them to control the supply, while there accrues the added advantage of buying at the low prices which so often prevail when the many who cannot hold their product throw it on the market. It is a matter of mere observation that unless starting prices are abnormally high they advance materially as soon as the bulk of any commodity is out of the producers' hands. It is on this account that a hand to mouth policy in the matter of marketing stuff is to be discouraged, unless prices prevailing are unusually high. The adoption of this plan usually results in an increased price for grain, for some fruits and vegetables and often in the case of farm animals. To put it in another way, the suggestion may be made somewhat clearer by saying that one should endeavor to so equip himself that he shall not be a victim of the market circumstances which may happen to prevail at any given time.

AN OPEN MIND.

The interesting story is told of a Missouri farmer of forty-seven years who was so impressed with his son's progress in the state agricultural college that he sold his farm and is now taking a full course in the same school, and it is understood that the new pupil is making some of the kids scratch gravel to beat him in class room work. The incident as related emphasizes the fact, forgotten at times by some, that one never gets too old to learn and take advantage of the helpful things to be derived from the study and experience of other people. This keeping one's mind open to new things, while it may in rare instances be carried too far, is that which distinguishes the bright, alert man from the clodhopper and him who succeeds in life from him who plods along on a dead level of monotonous mediocrity or inferiority.

There be folks who somehow have the idea that there is virtue or merit of a sort in doing a given piece of work in a laborious and painstaking way when it might be done just as well with less time and energy in a different way. It is this disposition to save time and energy that accounts for one fellow's being forehanded, with his work while his neighbor is just about as much behind with his.

THE HOT WATER CURE.

Among the many panaceas which have been recommended from time to time to cure the ills of ailing folks none seems to have had the efficacy of the water cure, which is just now receiving a good deal of attention. This consists in the drinking of hot water the first thing in the morning and at mealtimes, with just as many glasses of water between times as possible. The contention of those who recommend this copious use of water—and they are among the best medical authorities of the country—is that the average person does not consume enough water anywhere near to supply the needs of the body and because of this a generally sluggish condition results, which tends to aggravate any disorders which may exist. Many who have tried the cure have been greatly helped and are warm in their praises of it. It's cheap as dirt, and anybody can give it a trial.

ALCOHOL RECTIFIER.

Professor Snyder of the Minnesota experiment station has designed an alcohol rectifier costing about $38, which, with some modifications of a small type still, puts the cost of a complete still having a capacity of ten to twelve gallons of alcohol per day at about $100. On such a basis it would seem that the manufacture of alcohol might be considerably extended. Alcohol made in as inexpensive an outfit as this and extracted from the waste products of the farm would furnish the cheapest of all sources of light, heat and power.

WATER FOR BEES.

A western beekeeper recommends the following device for furnishing water for bees, which he thinks should be given fresh water at intervals of two or three days. He takes a keg or barrel and makes a hole near the bottom just large enough so that water will trickle out slowly on a sloping board on which it spreads out where the bees can drink their fill without danger of drowning or being pestered, as would be the case if they had to go to a running stream or nearby sprayed orchards.

The dairy herd will do better at the pail when pasture is short and flies are bad if they are stabled during the heat of the day and given a ration of green corn or hay.

Even in the dairy business misery loves company, this truth probably accounting for the fact that poor cows and poor and improvident dairymen are so often to be found on the same premises.

Peas, beans or any other legume plowed under not only contribute a considerable supply of available nitrogen to the soil, but add a supply of humus in the shape of decayed vegetable matter.

The poorer stick of a tenant a fellow is the oftener he has to move, and the poorer stick the landlord is the oftener he will want to move. These two sticks are often found near together and are responsible for a heap of mighty slovenly farming.

Any man who is able to walk for a living, as the "Weary Willies" do, can usually muster enough energy to do a little work for the meal he calls for at the back door. If he isn't willing to do this, introduce him to the dog and show him the highway.

It is estimated that it would take 200 or more of the poor dairy cows to be found in most any state to give the annual profit from their milk and butter yield that is realized from the one cow Jacoba Irene. Besides this, there is the job of milking the 200.

The average farm implement man can hardly view with aught but a feeling of satisfaction the carelessness which so many farm owners exhibit in the matter of putting their machinery under cover, as it means an increased trade in repairs and new machines.

The Kansas fruit grower is in trouble from the operation of the pure food laws of the state, which require, among other things, that a quart berry box shall contain a quart of berries and not seven-eighths of a quart. Under the new regulations the growers will be compelled to stamp seven-eighths of a quart on the short measure boxes.

There are thousands of farms the country over which would be transformed and the life thereon made immensely brighter if eight or ten dairy cows were purchased, a silo installed and clover or alfalfa grown. This trilogy might well be called the faith, hope and charity of the agricultural world and will do more to save soil sinners from the wrath to come than any other virtues in the category.

Pure Food Commissioner Wright of Iowa has had an interesting problem shoved at him for solution—whether the sticking of a pin point through the shells of eggs, a practice followed by poultry fanciers to prevent the eggs they sell on the common market from being used for hatching purposes, is a violation of the state pure food law. This would seem to be getting the pure food law down to a pretty fine point.

New and old potatoes have been on a good deal of a soar the past couple of months. Spuds that were priced at 60 cents a hundred last fall brought $1.75 by spring, while this year's crop wholesaled in May for $1.55 per bushel, the local grocer charged about 5 cents a pound, or close to $3 per bushel. This year's high prices are the result of a 40 per cent shortage in the Texas crop and a belated spring which delayed three weeks the marketing of the new grown crop.

Kansas dairies seem to be suffering from transportation rates which are so adjusted as to give decided advantage to the big centralizer plants through less rates for long hauls. Twelve years ago there were 300 creameries in the state, while there are at present but 50. In contrast to this state of affairs, low rates on short hauls in the state of Minnesota have been in part responsible for an increase in the number of creameries from 300 to 920 in the same period.

Those orchardists who are receiving the largest returns quite generally follow the practice of hand thinning the fruit on overloaded trees. This not only relieves the heavy pull on trees which set too heavily, but insures a larger and more uniform size and better quality of fruit. This thinning, which is done when the apples are about an inch through, makes possible the elimination of dwarfed and defective fruit and reduces the work of picking by just so much at harvest time. In the thinning process no care is required in the handling of the apples, and the work can be done rapidly.

One of the chief reasons for the increased wealth of the Danes is the fact that they have increased the average yearly production of butter fat in their dairy herds from 112 to 224 pounds per cow in the comparatively short period of twenty three years. In this period the people have advanced from virtual bankruptcy to affluence. What is needed in the United States more than anything else is a campaign which will put the average butter yield of the dairy cows from 150 to 250 pounds. Could such a thing be brought about agricultural and economic conditions would be revolutionized.

ACCIDENTS AT THE FAIR

Races on Friday Afternoon Were Hotly Contested and Accidents the Result.

A Valuable Young Mare Ruined in the Free for All Trot or Pace.

There were all kinds of accidents on the race track Friday, the last day of the fair.

The first accident was a very costly one and that it did not result more disastrous was indeed fortunate. In the free for all trot or pace "Polly Pry," a mare owned by Fakes & Ansley, of Hibbing, smashed into "Bobby's Brother," owned and driven by J. Blackman. The right front leg of "Polly Pry" was so badly injured that it is not believed she will ever be able to enter any races in the future. She was a very valuable mare, being just a little over four years of age and has made a mile in 2:14 this summer. The owners refused an offer of $2,500 for her this spring, and she had been entered in some fast races in the east for this fall. They paid $5,000 for her last fall.

The second accident happened to young V. G. Brink, who lives on a farm with his father, Ole Brink, near St. Hilaire. In the second heat of the running race, the other jockies crowded Brink's mare against the fence, throwing her. Young Brink was given a bad fall, but he struck on soft ground and sustained no serious injury. Brink won the first and third heats, thereby winning the race and this was very pleasing to the spectators who all wanted to see the Red Lake county horse win.

The third accident was in the 2:25 trot or pace. When the horses were all bunched together and going at a high rate of speed, "Catheryn C.", owned by by P. C. Burley and driven by O'Connor stumbled and fell. O'Connor was thrown a distance of about twenty feet over the mare he was driving and struck on his head. He was rendered unconscious and for a time it was feared that he had been killed, but a severe scalp wound was the extent of his injury. "Skidoo" driven and owned by Theodore Hall was close behind "Catheryn C." when she fell, and ran over her. Neither of the horses were injured.

Established the Ditch.

At a meeting of the county commissioners held last week, ditch No. 36, known as the Knox ditch in the town of Smiley, was ordered established and the contract for constructing the ditch will be let in a few weeks. This ditch will greatly improve this section.

—Sand and gravel for sale by George Newberry.

A Severe Electric Storm.

Crookston and vicinity were visited last Thursday forenoon by another terrific electric storm, accompanied by a very light shower. One bolt struck the new double barn of J. F. Ingersoll who lives in the suburbs about a mile from the center of the city.

The barn was destroyed and four horses, a cow and a calf were cremated. Other live stock was saved, but the balance of the contents of the barn was destroyed. The total loss is $7,500, with insurance of about $3,000.

The bolt was a most terrific one, knocking down several people in the streets and scores of horses fell to their knees. Electric light fuses were burned out in over a score of business houses.

The lightning put the electric fire alarm system out of commission temporarily and the department was not called out for 20 minutes after the barn was ablaze.

The Game Laws.

Game Warden Wm. Munch, of Crookston, was in Thief River Falls last week and called at the News office, asking that we publish, for the benefit of local sportsmen, a synopsis of the new game laws.

The season for hunting now opens on the 7th of September instead of the 1st. Prairie chickens, and snipe can be hunted from the 7th of September until the 7th of November.

Ducks, geese and brandt can be hunted from the 7th of September until the 1st of December.

Partridge from the 1st of October until the 1st of December.

Any violation is punishable by a fine of from $10 to $100 for each bird killed.

Injured in a Runaway.

While driving to St. Hilaire from this city last Friday afternoon, a team driven by Fred Peck and carrying A. Weicht, a traveling man for a wholesale liquor house, became unmanageable and indulged in a runaway. Mr. Weicht, who is a large man, jumped from the buggy and sustained a broken leg, the bone being broken in three places. He was brought to this city, where his leg was set and left that evening for his home in Minneapolis. Fred Peck, the driver, injured his hands quite severely on a wire fence.

An Auto Wrecked.

The National touring car, owned by Sundahl Bros., was hit by a Soo freight train at noon last Friday on the crossing just south of the depot and the machine was badly damaged. John Sundahl was driving the automobile and Mrs. A. M. Arpin was a passenger. Mrs. Arpin jumped before the train hit the auto and sustained no injury. The two hind wheels of the machine were demolished and other damages done. A claim has been filed with the Soo road for the damages.

C. L. Dobner, the former Thief River Falls banker and now engaged in the lumber business at Kalispell, Mont., arrived in the city last Friday morning and departed again Saturday afternoon for his Montana home.

FAIR WAS A BIG SUCCESS

Finest Exhibit of Live Stock and Agricultural Products Ever Before Seen Here.

Attendance Better Than Expected, but Not as Large as Last Year.

The eighth annual fair of the Red Lake County Agricultural Society, held in Thief River Falls last Wednesday Thursday and Friday was a successful one in every way. The attendance this year was not as great as at the fair of a year ago, when all records were broken, but it was far greater than had been expected. Owing to the fact that the farmers were far behind in their haying, very few were expected to attend, and yet more of them turned out than had been anticipated. The cities and villages of Northern Minnesota and along the Wheatline in North Dakota sent large delegations and it was due largely to their attendance that the fair was the big success it was. The attendance on Thursday reached the high water mark and some over 5,000 people were upon the grounds.

The exhibits at the fair were by far better this year than ever before. The Agricultural building was filled with the best display of grains, grasses, vegetables, etc., ever collected together in Northern Minnesota, and it opened the eyes of all visitors. The Women's building was also filled with exhibits and they were very neatly arranged. The exhibit of stock and poultry was exceptionally fine, and in number was far greater than ever before seen at any former fair.

Will Travel With Carnival Company.

The Patten Carnival Company found an attraction for their show while exhibiting here this week. It is young Henry Juers, son of Henry Juers, Sr., a farmer living near Radium, and who though a lad only twenty years of age, has, under the forcing and stimulating effects of Marshall county's salubrious climate, attained a height of six feet nine inches and is still growing. His weight is 165 pounds. Mr. Patten's instinct as a show man was not slow to recognize the value of the young man as an attraction and he offered to make a contract with him at $3 per day and expenses to appear in his shows. Henry will very likely accept the offer, if his parents give their consent.—Warren Sheaf.

Lost Three Fingers.

John Fasha, a young man employed in the Thief River Falls Lumber Company's mill, had the misfortune to saw off three fingers on the left hand last Saturday morning while operating a shingle saw. He is the adopted son of Adolph Bolts, who is also employed in the saw mill.

To Build An Elevator.

Ed Werts left for Fox, a station between Rodger and Roseau on the Great Northern, with a crew of men on Monday and will build an elevator for the Hanson & Barzen Milling company. He expects to have the elevator completed about the 1st of September.

Bind With Straw.

It has long been the dream of harvest machine men to have a selfbinding mechanism that would successfully bind bundles with straw band instead of twine or wire. Such a machine is now possible through the efforts of Albert Izor, of Indianapolis, and the financial backing given him by August Kiefer.

Fourteen years ago the Brown Straw Binder Company was organize in Indianapolis to experiment on an invention by a man after whom the company was named Brown thought he had the correct idea, but he failed to work it out and disposed of his interest in the company about seven years ago. Albert Izor has been the president of the company the last 12 years and has given much of his time and thought to the invention. It is due to H. A. Hancock's inventive mechanical ability that the present machine has been perfected. He took charge of the work four years ago and met many failures, but triumphed at last. It is a peculiar coincidence in that it took fourteen years to develop the twine binder and the same for the straw binder.

Straw binder apparatus can be adapted to any of the standard make machine and it is said does not make the machine any more expensive.

The apparatus is simple. The straw comes on to a conveyor to be formed into a bundle as usual with twine binders. After enough straw has been received the pressure releases a trip which starts the twister. This mechanism grasps enough to encircle a bundle once and a half. It takes the band from the butt end of the bundle and does not waste any grain. The knotter grasps the band after it is twisted and twists the two ends into a knot. The next operation is by the "tucker" which tucks the twisted ends under the band, completing the operation. The knot is similar to the one used in binding by hand, but is tighter and more uniform.—Appleton Press.

Minnesota Leads.

Joel G. Winkjer formerly of St. Hilaire but now in the employ of the United States government as a creamery inspector says that in all travels and sampling of butter, none came up to the Minnesota product. Michigan, perhaps, came the nearest. In other states he rarely found the test of butter going above 93. In Minnesota the tests ran as high as 98. This was not altogether due to climatic conditions, or the production of grasses, etc., because other states are as highly favored as Minnesota. Mr. Winkjer stated that in his belief this result was due largely to the small co-operative creamery where cream was delivered every day or two, or more frequently where the separating was done at the creamery. He believed that Minnesota owed its high rank as a butter producing state to the small creameries scatterd broadcast over the state. Other states, Mr. Winkjer said, had given up all hope of winning Minnesota's standing as a butter producing state.

Soo Surveyors Busy.

Walker, Minn., Aug. 3.—Surveyors are at work on the Soo extension from Thief River Falls to Duluth. A townsite is being laid out at the Leech Lake government dam, and a local company is being organized to run daily passenger boats from Walker to the dam, a distance of thirty miles, to connect with the trains.

C. L. Hanson was up to Middle River last Saturday attending to business matters.

Highlanding Won.

The Highlanding creamery took the first prize for the butter at the county fair last week and Viking the second. Messrs. Engelstad, Gustafson and Long were the judges, but the real work of scoring the butter was done by O. A. Storvick, of the state dairy and food department, and A. R. Gerber, an expert creamery man. The following is the standing of the various creameries:

Highlanding	93½
Viking	93
Holt	92½
Plummer	93½
St. Hilaire	92
Thief River Falls	92
Kratka	90

Bound Over.

Louis Johnson, who was arrested several days ago charged with assault upon Charles Holm, was given a hearing Monday before Special Municipal Judge Richardson. The testimony was so conflicting that Mr. Richardson considered that a jury should decide who was telling truth and Johnson was bound over to the October term of court. His bond for appearance was fixed at $300 and this was furnished.

Road In Bad Condition.

The Telephone road running east from this city is said to be in very bad condition and in places is almost impassable. Last fall considerable money was spent in fixing this road up, but since that time little or no work has been done upon it, and those who have occasion to drive over it are making complaint.

Has a Dozen.

Caspar Weiner was in to attend the fair last week and announced that his wife had just presented him with a new daughter. There are twelve children in the Weiner family now and all are strong and healthy.

All of Newfolden Was Here.

The way that the Newfolden people made their get away for Thief River Falls yesterday would lead one to think that it was Newfolden at the fair. The 10:45 freight never carried a more valuable lot of human freight.—Newfolden Review.

Rocksbury.

All the Farmers and their families took in the Fair last week.

Miss Abbie Miller returned home from Grand Rapids last Monday, where she spent three weeks visiting friends.

Miss Emma Satre returned home from Red Lake Falls this week, where she has attended Summer School.

Emil Welo, Bert Thorstad, Sophus Ness and Ray Pope left Monday morning for Dakota where they will work in the harvest fields.

Una Miller spent Sunday with Mable Satre.

Ole Olson and family of Grand Forks, who had been in the city visiting Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Lang, returned home last Saturday.

TRAVELING MEM NEXT

The Fats Are Going to Take the Traveling Men Into Camp on Sunday.

Game Will Be for the Benefit of the Band and Will Be a One-Sided Affair.

Next Sunday the traveling men who make Thief River Falls their headquarters will meet the Champion Fats on the base ball grounds at the fair grounds. An admission of 25 cents will be charged and the proceeds will be for the benefit of the band.

Capt. Hamre, of the Fats, is just as confident of winning this game as he was of defeating the Leans, only it is his intention of making it a little more decisive, so that the traveling men will not have any opportunity to do any kicking after the game is over. Capt. Hamre's line-up will be about the same as in the previous game.

Oscar Williams is to be manager of the travelingmen's aggregation, A. A. Hall chief rooter and A. Anderson will be captain. Mr. Anderson will also be catcher, and the remaining part of the line-up will be about as follows:

Frighner will pitch; Ed Ashley will try to hold first base as will also Fred Anchoh and C. Storholm on second and third respectively; George Wernham will play between second and third base and try to dodge the swift liners that the Fats knock out while N. F. Saxton, E. B. Bakke and O. H. Nesseth will be in the outfield.

In the whole bunch of traveling men there is not one good player, so it is easy to tell who will win.

Advertised Letters.

THE ROUGH DIAMOND

Three Processes Through Which the Uncut Stone Passes.

SPLIT, CUT AND POLISHED.

The Flaws In the Gem Decide the Number of Parts Into Which It Must Be Split—The Difference Between the Roses and the Brilliants.

The first of the three processes through which the rough, uncut diamond has to pass is that of splitting the stone. Men are employed at this task, which is all done by hand without the aid of machinery. It is not a lengthy process unless the stone contains a great many flaws, for an ordinary diamond weighing about ten carats can generally be split in fifteen minutes. The object is to divide the rough, uncut diamond containing flaws into several pure, flawless stones, and in order to do this strong pressure is exerted on the weak spots caused by flaws by means of a diamond tipped tool, which is held in the right hand. It is an old and well recognized principle that "nothing but a diamond will cut a diamond." In the left hand is held a curiously shaped little frame into which the rough diamond now to be split has been firmly fixed. Great pressure is then used on the weak spot, and in a few moments the diamond splits into two portions.

Should there be any more flaws in either of these sections the process is repeated until several pure, flawless diamonds lie on the rough wooden tables of the workmen, ready now for the second process—that of cutting. This process, like the first, is almost entirely performed by hand, but by women and girls instead of men. Only in the case of very hard, difficult stones is machinery necessary, and then men are employed to use it.

The work of diamond cutting is a delicate and difficult task, very trying to the eyes, too, for some of the diamonds are so minute that 400 of them or more may weight only half a carat. Each worker is responsible for the packet of diamonds she receives at intervals from the forewoman, and if by accident she loses one of the precious stones she has either to find it again or refund its value. The tools employed in diamond cutting are very similar in appearance to those used in diamond splitting. In both cases diamonds are used as knives, after having been firmly fixed into the tip of pear shaped tools. The women hold in the left hand the rough diamond they wish to cut, which has also been firmly fixed into a wooden frame. Little jets of gas are always kept burning on the various tables ready to be used at any moment when melted wax is necessary.

The only real difference in the two processes of diamond splitting and diamond cutting lies in the fact that whereas the men who split the diamonds use pressure on one spot only (where the flaw occurs) the women devote themselves to rounding the whole stone and carefully cutting off all angles to be seen on its surface by means of the sharp diamonds they hold in their right hand. Occasionally they have very large diamonds to cut which take a great deal of time, but an ordinary stone weighing about ten carats would not take so very long.

When the diamond has been sufficiently cut and rounded, it is then ready for the third and last process, that of polishing. This work requires a great deal of time and skill and is performed entirely by machinery, a steam engine supplying the motive power for all the iron disks. The process consists in giving to the rounded diamonds what is termed in technical language their necessary "sides."

All diamonds are divided into two classes, "brilliants" and "roses," although the only real difference between them lies in the number of sides they individually possess after having been polished in one of the many diamond factories. A brilliant must possess fifty-eight sides (a few years ago the lowest number was sixty-four, for there are fashions in diamond cutting), but a rose need only possess twenty-four sides.

Another, though slight, difference between them is that a brilliant is pointed at both ends, while a rose diamond has one end flattened and the other pointed. When the diamond is ready to be polished it has first to be soldered into a pear shaped frame made of zinc and then dipped into a preparation of oil and diamond dust before being fastened, with three others, into a strong frame placed in close proximity to an iron wheel.

This little disk is then set in motion by connecting it with the great engine, and the wheel immediately turns at the rate of 2,000 revolutions to the minute.

As it revolves the four diamonds set in the adjacent frame are gradually polished by means of the friction produced on their surface by the particles of diamond dust still adhering to the oil into which they had been previously dipped.

Only one portion of a diamond can be polished at once, and consequently when this part has been dealt with the stone has to be resoldered, so that another portion of its surface may be subjected to the friction of the wheel.

The process of resoldering takes place about twenty times in the case of every brilliant before it can be considered to be thoroughly polished.—Exchange.

Candles and Gas.

It requires fifty pounds of candle to produce as much light as 1,000 cubic feet of gas.

VOORHEES AND MONEY.

The Famous Orator Was Genial, Generous and Careless.

A majority of congressmen are improvident and when they are compelled to leave Washington have only a sufficient surplus on hand to carry them home. It matters little how much these men make, the result is the same, for they live up to their revenue.

Among the many was Daniel W. Voorhees, so well known in his public career as a famous orator, a genial, generous, good fellow and boon companion. In money matters Voorhees was as simple and ignorant as a child. He parted with his money with no thought of its value. The middle of the month generally found him "broke," but this worried him little, for he managed to get along just as well until pay day. He ordered what he wanted and had it charged and then forgot all about it. The funny part of his nature was that, while he did not remember his creditors, he always kept in mind his friends and would give them the last cent he had if they applied for assistance.

One day an old constituent of Mr. Voorhees from the Wabash, in Indiana, called at the capitol to see the senator. Not finding him in, he went to the sergeant-at-arms, that position then being held by R. J. Bright, also from Indiana and an intimate friend of Mr. Voorhees. The old man told his story to Bright and the reason why he was in search of Voorhees. In effect it was that he was "hard up" and Voorhees owed him $150 on a note and he needed the money badly and was there to collect it. Bright thought the story over and said:

"Now, my friend, if you go to Dan to collect this money he will not pay you a dollar. On the other hand, if you will go to him, tell him a hard luck story and put up a poor mouth he will raise and give you every dollar he can."

The man took his advice and, meeting Voorhees, told him what a bad fix he was in and his need of a little assistance. Voorhees affectionately put his arm over his shoulder and said: "William, I am very sorry for you, and I will help you all I can. Come with me to the clerk's office. I do not know whether I have any money there or not, but I will give you all I have."

The clerk informed the senator that there happened to be over $200 to his credit. This surprised Voorhees, but he said, "Give it all to my friend here, as he is a long way from home and needs it more than I."

Mr. Voorhees devoted the last ten years of his life to the Congressional library. Until his death he took no interest in politics or anything else but the library, and to him more than to any one else is due the completion of the beautiful structure. He died poor and in debt.—O. O. Stealey in Success Magazine.

Peculiarities of Bats.

In one respect at least bats are the most remarkable of all the creatures possessing the power of true flight. Bats, as most people know, are mammals—they belong to the great class of "higher animals" which comprises man himself. Moreover, it is not a little remarkable that among the host of extinct animals with which, thanks to the labors of geologists, we are now acquainted not one has been discovered in any way connecting bats with other mammals. Thus bats stand alone, while how and why they became vested with the power of flight are questions shrouded in mystery. The framework of the bat's wing is furnished by the fore limb. Indeed, the bones corresponding to those of our own hand constitute its most important parts; hence bats are known as chiroptera, or hand winged animals. The thumb of the bat is free and terminates in a hooked claw, but the "fingers" are enormously lengthened, while between them stretches a skin or membrane, to which in certain species the bones of the tail give additional support. All things considered, bats appear to be better models than birds for those who attempt to attain flight by mechanical means.—Scientific American.

Conferring a Knighthood.

Sir James Knowles, the editor of the Nineteenth Century, used to describe with enjoyment the fashion in which he was knighted. He was at Sandringham one Sunday evening, and the king said to him: "Knowles, I want you to be a knight. Will that please your wife?" "I'm sure she will be charmed by your thought of her, sir." "Well, then, send word to her in town." Sir James was discovered a little later by his majesty writing a letter. "No, no," said the king. "I've given it to the court newsman, and she will very likely see it in the papers before she gets the letter. Write out a telegram, and I will see that she has it tonight." And she had. "It was not the honor," added Sir James in telling the story, "that I valued so much as the way in which it was conferred."

The Peoples of Italy.

There is a marked difference in stature and temperament between the people of north Italy and those of south Italy. The reason is because, while politically one, they are racially separate peoples. The Longobards, or Lombards, who about 568 took possession of northern Italy and permanently established themselves in the rich valley watered by the Po and its affluents, were of Teutonic stock, their original home having been the region on the left bank of the Elbe, round about Magdeburg and Luneburg, Germany, while the Italians south of Lombardy are of the old Latin stock. This fact explains the physical and other differences between the people from the north and the people from the south of Italy.

THE GOLF BALL.

How Gravity Is Foiled In Its Flight Through the Air.

Professor Petrie Guthrie Tait had little skill at golf, but a vast deal at science. Among the many problems to which he applied his genius were some concerning that apparently simple thing, the flight of a golf ball. And here he found difficulties so baffling that, though he worked over them for years and called on other scientists for assistance, many mysteries still remained. One question that he solved, however, is of curious interest.

The force of gravity is the one force we know as most constant and inevitable. To defeat gravity is almost to suspend one of nature's laws. In his investigations Professor Tait suddenly became aware that gravity was defeated by the golf ball. The fact admitted no doubt. On timing the flight of the ball he discovered that it remained in the air almost twice as long as it should have under the influence of gravity. Thus, with gravity acting as usual on other things, a drive of 200 yards would be completed in three and a half seconds. A thrown ball, for example, describing the same trajectory, would remain in the air only that length of time. The golf ball in passing over that 200 yards floated serenely through the air for six and a half seconds.

It was clear, then, that in some manner—the gravity was thwarted. Professor Tait attacked the problem of the means, and in the end he solved it. After searching long he found the cause of the prolonged flight in the rotation given to the ball by the club's impact. The secret lay in the manner of the stroke from the tee.

The first principle of the explanation is in the simple fact that an object poised in the air has an equal atmospheric pressure on it at all points. The second principle is that when a sphere rotates in a current of air the side of the sphere which is advancing to meet the current is subjected to greater pressure than is that side which is moving in the direction of the current. To illustrate, when the golfer slices his ball it is made to spin in such fashion that its front side is constantly in movement to the right. Therefore the pressure of the air is greater on the left side than on the right, and the ball curves to the right. When the ball is pulled, the operation is reversed, and the flight bends away to the left. So if the ball is topped the spinning direction of the front is downward. Thus the pull of gravity is aided and the flight is swiftly checked. But every properly driven ball receives an undercut. By the underspin thus imparted the front side of the ball is made to spin upward; the added pressure is from below and is in consequence directly opposed to gravity. The result is a flight sustained, but little less than twice as long as it would be without this underspin. Moreover, Professor Tait demonstrated that without this undercut when driving the ball would travel only about half its usual distance.

The ordinary golfer is quite unaware that he gives any underspin to his best drives, but he does. Without the undercut his driving would be a continuous failure.—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Chaotic Child.

Surely the mystery of life was greater than the mystery of death in the case of a five-months-old child which has been the subject of an inquest at Battersea. It had what the doctor calls "drumstick" fingers and toes, its heart was on the right side instead of the left, the position of the lungs was reversed, the aorta curved down the right side instead of the left, there was no spleen, the liver was on the wrong side, and there was no division between the two chambers of the heart, while the artery which should have supplied the lungs with blood was closed, the blood passing through a communication between the aorta and the remaining portion of the pulmonary artery. With all this jumbled anatomy the child lived, and the medical evidence proved that its death was not directly due to the disarranged organs, but to an attack of bronchitis. Still, death came mercifully, for the medical view was that if the little one had lived until it could stand it would have died of heart disease. That it breathed at all proves the tenacity of life and forms a comment on the vast sacrifice of healthily constituted children which annually results from negligence.—Pall Mall Gazette.

She Acquiesced.

The wife of one of the directors of the line was a passenger. She was an imperious woman, accustomed to having her own way, and when the ship began to roll she sent forthwith for the captain. A steward came instead. She scorned the steward and demanded the captain's presence immediately. The purser was the next sacrifice, and after he, the third officer and the first officer had all retired discomfited, with a flea in the ear, as the saying is, the captain came. By this time the rolling had increased, and the lady's voice was beginning to sound far away.

"I wish you to stop this rolling at once," she said to the captain.

"Madam," said the captain, "a ship, as you know, is feminine, and if she wants to roll I fear that I can no more stop her than I could help coming here when you wished to see me."

It was a naive bit of flattery directed at her weakest point, and, despite the green tinge of her complexion that foretold an immediate attack of mal de mer, the woman smiled.

"Very well, sir," she faintly murmured, closing her eyes. "Let—let her roll."—New York Sun.

THE RACCOON.

In Its Habits This Animal Greatly Resembles the Bear.

A coon seems to be a composite animal, made up of parts of bear, fisher and monkey, with considerable devil thrown in for luck, says a writer in Forest and Stream. He can use his fore paws as handily as a monkey, and what he cannot undo with his hands he can gnaw off with his teeth. As Miss Murfree—Charles Egbert Craddock—says in one of her stories, he has "a great deal of head stuffing." Any one who disbelieves in original sin had better keep a raccoon for a pet or try trapping one.

In captivity raccoons are very cleanly, often washing their hands and always washing every kind of food except eggs before eating. They know all about eggs without any teaching. One will take a hen's egg and, lying on his back, will toss it up and catch it as if it were a ball until, becoming tired of this amusement, he will hold it in the left hand and by tapping it lightly with one nail will drill a small hole in one end and then suck the contents. Its holding capacity is considerable, as I have known a tame one which got loose to kill a sitting hen and suck thirteen eggs. In this case thirteen was an unlucky number for the owner of the hen.

Raccoons love the vicinity of water, where they catch frogs and pick up some dead fish. In their habits they greatly resemble bears, and, like bears, they eat any kind of flesh or fish and most sorts of berries, nuts and grain; but, unlike bears, they do not remain steadily in their dens, but often, at any time in winter when there is a warm spell or a thaw, they will come out and travel for miles, sometimes going into open water to dig for frogs. A number of times when there were several feet of snow I have caught them in traps set for otter both in springs and in water too swift to freeze. Although I never trapped coons purposely, because they are not worth it, I have caught them in traps set for nearly everything else. One of the most comical sights I ever saw was a large coon caught by both fore feet in a beaver trap. He was standing on his hind feet, turning the trap first one way and then another, seeming to be studying what it was that had caught him.

The Young Idea.

The following are specimens of some absurd and amusing answers made by schoolboys and schoolgirls in examination papers:

Iron is grown in large quantities for manufacturing purposes in southern France.

Dog Smugglers.

Smuggling by dogs is greatly in vogue on the frontier between Italy and Switzerland notwithstanding all the efforts of the preventive men stationed along the hilly country north of Como. The dogs are trained for smuggling by first inculcating within them a mortal terror of the customs officers. This is done by dressing up a man in the custom house uniform, who thrashes the dog severely whenever he sees him, and the animal, having thus acquired a wholesale dread of the uniform, will fly for his life at the sight of a douanier. The smuggler on the Italian side, who owns the dog, pets it and treats it well, and when the dog is taken to the Swiss smuggler, whose tobacco is to be taken across the frontier, it is first kept chained up without food for some days, then packed round the body with a belt containing the contraband goods and hunted off with blows and cries. Needless to say, the dog's miraculous instinct makes him head straight for home. He rushes off at full speed, and once across the frontier he finds his beloved master and a warm welcome awaiting him.

Two Cambridge University Jests.

The fellow commoners were always at Cambridge called empty bottles, from the following circumstance that occurred at Emanuel: Wine merchants send their porters occasionally round the colleges to collect the bottles. One of these men, during the hour of lecture, knocked at the lecture room by mistake and called out "Empty bottles!" The tutor, then out of humor at being attended only by one fellow commoner when there were twenty in college, cried out: "Call again another time. I have now but one." This soon gathered wind, and these young gentlemen of the first class went afterward throughout the university by the name of "empty bottles."

As to professional students (some very few excepted), they are worse scholars leaving college than at their admission. I heard one tutor once censure a young man at lecture who had been nearly three years at college by saying that he knew less than a freshman who sat next him.

"Well, and what of it?" retorted the youth. "He is but just come from school!"—Cornhill Magazine.

HOWELL PLANER AND MATCHER

You no doubt find it a hard matter to sell your rough lumber to advantage because most of your customers want it finished. Furthermore you can get twice as much for your lumber by planing it, making it up into flooring, drop siding, window casing and mouldings, for which there is an unlimited demand at big prices. The Howell Planer and Matcher does all this work to perfection.

You can also make big money by working up all your slabs and waste material into Lath and Shingles. All you need for this purpose is our Lath Mill and Shingle Machine. We build the best and most up-to-date machines of this kind on the market which we can furnish you at manufacturers prices. Keep your plant running all the time. Remember we build complete Saw Mill Plants from top to bottom, all of our own manufacture. Our new Catalog B is just now out. If you have not received it, write today. Manufactured by

CANNON'S VINDICTIVENESS.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon wound up the extra session of congress by giving an exhibition of his vindictiveness towards the house "insurgents" who bolted his nomination to the speakership and attempted to defeat the adoption of the old rules. He punished these brave men by depriving most of them of appointments on the important committees. Old members who had gained valuable knowledge of matters which their committees dealt with were cast aside, and other men who have always voted to maintain the ascendancy of Speaker Cannon and perpetuate the autocratic power of the house machine of which he is the head were put in their places.

The "insurgents" who have thus been disciplined by the Cannon machine are not likely to suffer in the estimation of the people who elected them on their pledges to work and vote against Cannonism. The speaker's spiteful treatment of these opponents of the machine will add strength to the campaign against Cannonism, and the next congressional election will undoubtedly see their numbers increased.

HERE is the furniture dealer who read
A clothier's ad. and by it was led
To spend for clothing the selfsame bill

Germantown.

August 9, '09.

Despite unfavorable weather, such as excessive heat and an almost daily sprinkle of rain, quite a lot of hay was put into stack last week. The flood three weeks ago delayed haying so that it must now be done in double quick time if it shall be done at all before harvest, and harvest time seems to be approaching sooner than many are prepared for it and in some instances sooner than the ground is dry or solid enough for the binder.

The Farmers Club meeting at Henry Roller's farm on Aug. 1st was attended by about 50 or 60 people who all had a pleasant time and enjoyed themselves. Addresses were made by H. Roller, H. O. Berve and John Philipp, after which lunch was served to which all did justice before heading for home in the evening. The next meeting of the club will be held at the home of N. Bundhund, Sept 5th.

J. N. Rembec, of Stevens Point, Wis., while here last week, purchased Henry Cook's farm one half mile west of town for a consideration of $2,775. Mr. Rambec returned to Wisconsin the first of last week and Oscar Rambec who had rented the farm this year will remain in charge of the place.

Martinus Johnson's father from LaCrosse, Wis., was here for a visit week before last, returning home Wednesday.

Wm. Christofferson, a former homesteader northeast of here, and now an employ of the Fergus Falls wolen mills, spent last week here attending to business matters and visiting old haunts.

Quite a number of men from the country north and east of here are passing through these days bound for the North Dakota harvest fields, though the number is not near as large as some years past.

The Germantown-Grygla mail route has been abandoned at least for the time being, on account of impassable places on the road. The mail for Grygla and tributary post offices will be sent east from Middle River, making Gatzke, northwest of here, the supply office for those places. P. P. Maney, the contractor of the discontinued route left here Sunday to commence carrying the mail between Gatzke and Grygla, this week. This is a very undesirable turn of events for those who were served with delivery along the route and it is hoped that the change will only be temporary awaiting repairs on the roads.

At the Skogstad home last Saturday, the Rev. H. Bjornson officiating, occurred the marriage of Mrs. Christine Johnson to John Ellingson. The contracting parties are both present residents and pioneers of the town of Moylan and well known to all who are acquainted with the country. Ye scribe joins their friends in extending congratulations.

Emil Dommer was up from North Dakota some time ago returning last week accompanied by his brother Carl and their horses

Reports have reached here that a wedding was consumated at Liner on Sunday, by which Hans Bergseng past master and merchant of that place was united in marriage to a Mille Lacs Co. women who made her home at Liner for some time past. We wish them luck.

Miss Addie Holden returned home last week after a two weeks absence.

The announcement recently published to the effect that the firm of Vaughn Bros. & Co. have decided to discontinue at this place has been received with all but happy feelings by all the people hereabout and whatever the coming change may bring we know it safe to assume that the next party destined to take up the business will find themselves "going some" to maintain the present standard and reputation of the Vaughn store, built up by eight years of square and honest business methods. After closing out at this place the firm leaves for the west to engage in the merchandise and lumber business at Collins, Mont., taking with them the hope of success and well wishes of a host of friends.

Gov. Johnson in voicing the greatness of our state on Minnesota day at the Seattle exposition took occasion to say "Our homes are happy, our workshops busy our barns are full." It occured to us that he may have been referring to some of our barns, whose fullness is very much related to that of the stable, the emptying of which was one of the tasks of the legendary Hercules, and for which he was not given credit because it was accomplished by diverting the river from its natural course.

THE BUFFALO.

A Good Surveyor and One of Our First Roadmakers.

The buffalo was a good surveyor. It did not reason out why it should go in a certain direction, but its sure instinct took it by the easiest and most direct paths, over high lands and low, to the salt licks and water courses which were its goal. The authors of "The Story of the Great Lakes," Edward Channing and M. F. Lansing, say that the buffalo observed something like the principles which today govern the civil engineer.

As soon as the explorer landed on the southern shores of Lakes Erie, Michigan and Superior he came upon buffalo roads or "traces." Sometimes these were narrow ditches, a foot wide and from six inches to two feet deep, trodden down by the impact of thousands of hoofs as herd after herd of buffaloes had stamped along in single file behind their leaders.

When the first path became too deep for comfort because of repeated travel the buffaloes would abandon it and begin a second path alongside the first, and thus the frequented traces would be gradually widened.

Again, an immense herd of these heavy animals would crash through the forest, breaking in their rapid progress a broad, deep road from one feeding ground to another. As this route would be followed again and again by this and other herds, it would become level and hard as a rock, so that there was great rejoicing in pioneer settlements when the weary roadmakers, struggling with log causeways and swampy hollows, came upon a firm, solid buffalo trace. Nor was this an uncommon experience.

The line of many of these roads is followed today by our railroads and canals, as it was followed by our log roads and turnpikes.

The buffalo followed the level of the valley. He swerved round high points whenever it was possible, crossing the ridges and watersheds at the best natural divides and gorges, and he crossed from one side of a stream of water to the other repeatedly in order to avoid climbing up from the level; after the fashion of our modern loop railways.

ONE OYSTER ENOUGH.

He Swallowed It Alive and Had to Kill It After It Was Down.

A farm laborer from the interior on his first visit to London dropped into a small oyster shop where a number of men were eating raw oysters. The extreme satisfaction displayed on the faces of those about him created longings of a gustatory nature in the new arrival, who edged his way up to the counter in anticipation of eating a real live, juicy oyster.

It was the first time he had seen an oyster, and he became at once interested, and when the shellfish had been finally uncased he proceeded to balance it on the end of his fork, then, with a look of extreme satisfaction, gulped it down.

"Great Scott!" shouted a man standing near him. "You haven't swallowed the oyster alive, have you?"

There was a horrible pause.

"That critter will eat right through you!" shouted another.

By this time the poor countryman was shaking with fear and horror. He commenced to have terrible pains in his abdomen and was soon doubled up in his agony. He begged some one to go for a doctor to get the thing out.

He continued to grow worse, when some one suggested that he take a dose of tabasco sauce, which it was claimed would kill the object that was creating such terrible commotion in his internal arrangement.

He grasped the bottle with avidity and took a draft. His condition, which before had been alarming to the victim, now assumed a serious phase to the perpetrators of the hoax.

The man gasped and choked. He became black in the face, and tears were running down his face, when some one thrust a bottle of oil into his mouth, and he was forced to drink copious drafts.

The effect was magical. The oyster was evidently "dead." He became more composed, and when he finally recovered his breath he said:

"We killed it. But when that darned stuff got into my stomach that oyster rushed around as if a shark was after it."—London Scraps.

Spoiling the Show.

Showman—I don't know as we can give any kind of a show this afternoon. Assistant—What's the matter? Showman—That fresh kid's been in the cage of the man eating lion having a romp, and the critter is as playful as a kitten, the farmer we rented the sacred cow from India from says the money ain't payin' him for the loss of his milk route, and the wild man of Borneo says he's got to have a day off to register and see the police parade.—Baltimore American.

THERE'S A REASON.

Why the Mosquitoes Stayed Away From a Certain Summer Resort.

THE had just arrived at the summer resort and were sitting on the porch in the evening watching the yellow moon rise from behind the ragged sky line of the pine crowned hill.

"They don't seem to have any mosquitoes here," said the lady newcomer in a tone of gratified surprise.

"You can't blame the mosquitoes for staying away," remarked the woman in the big rocker. "Just wait a moment."

And then without further warning a strange compound of villainous sounds came from the stuffy little parlor.

"Whirr—whang—zimmy — zimmy—zang—ging—zhong — zoom — hwang—brrrr!"

The newcomer gasped.

"That's the most awful phonograph I've ever heard," she said.

"That's what the mosquitoes think," said the woman, "and they stay away."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Different.

The woman in the parquet represses a sob, dashes her handkerchief to her eyes and sighs as the heroine on the stage makes one last appeal to her parents to allow her to wed the poor but proud young suitor. But no! They sternly refuse, and she announces that she will go out into the cold, cruel world alone!

The woman in the parquet lifts her streaming eyes and beholds two familiar faces over the balcony rail. She stiffens with wrath and says:

"If there isn't my daughter with that young Porefokes chap that I've forbidden the house! I'll say a few things to her tonight when I get her home."—Boston Globe.

A Clever Turn.

An eminent lawyer was once cross examining a very clever woman, mother of the plaintiff in a breach of promise action, and was completely worsted in the encounter of wits. At the close, however, he turned to the jury and exclaimed: "You saw, gentlemen, that even I was but a child in her hands. What must my client have been?" By this adroit stroke of advocacy he turned his failure into a success.—London Mail.

Out of the Question.

"Here is something very elegant," says the salesman, piloting the lady through the display of beds. "This is our latest design in twin beds and is one of the most popular things we sell. I would suggest that you cannot do better than to buy them."

"Twin beds?" replies the lady. "They are pretty, but—but we haven't twins!"—Chicago Post.

Putting in New Machinery

Work of installing a new set of cleaning machines was commenced in the Hanson & Barzen Milling company's mill in this city the first of the week. It will take three or four weeks to finish this job, and when completed the Hanson & Barzen Milling company will have the best epuipped mill northwest of Minneapolis. The cleaning machines installed are a new invention in the milling business and as the local firm is one of the most progressive, it is the first mill outside of Minneapolis to install them The machines will make the flour purer and cleaner, as every particle of dust and dirt will be removed from the wheat before it is ground.

Increased Attedance.

The Bulletins of the School of Agriculture and the College of Agriculture of the University of Minnesota have just been issued and may be obtained by applying to J. M. Drew, Register, University Farm, St. Paul Minn.

They show a remarkable growth in the different departments of the institutions. The total enrollment in all courses is over 1,400 students for the school year. The School of Agriculture has had a large attendance, but the College of Agriculture has had a phenomenal growth, the increase being more than 65 per cent over last year's attendance.

Dairy Extension Work.

The Dairy Division of the Minnesota Experimental Station is now in a position to furnish speakers for dairy meetings and experts to judge dairy stock and dairy products of county fairs. The last legislature appropriated money for carrying on this kind of work, and three experts are in the field practically all the time in response to requests for their services. A large number of meetings have been held this summer and a still larger number is scheduled for the month of August.

This work is done without cost to the parties asking for the services of these men. All requests should be addressed to Prof. T. L. Haecker, Dairy Division, Experimental Station, St. Anthony Park, Minn.

Potato Prices.

The potato buyers have been busy during the past week, according to the Anoka papers, which is in the heart of the potato country, and many car loads of potatoes have been shipped to the eastern market. The opening price was 35 cents per bushel, but most of the potatoes marketed brought from 40 to 45 cents per bushel, some receiving as high as 50 cents.

To Postphone Bids.

In order that the local contractors may have more time to submit bids on the proposed new armory and auditorium which the city is going to build, it is quite probable that the contract will not be let on next Tuesday, the 17 of August, the time set for the opening of bids, but that the date of opening will be postphoned for (six or seven days. The St. Paul architect did not get the plans for the building here as early as had been anticipated and this is the cause of the delay.

For Sale.

A good general merchandise business in Northern Minnesota in a country town located in a very good dairy and farming country on the bank of Red Lake river. A very good and nice creamery located on adjoining lot, a good clean stock of general merchandise that will invoice about $2,000 anual sales $8,000 frame store building 22x32 ft upstairs fixed up into four living rooms, Post Office in store telephone will be put in this month. Reason for selling poor health. For further particulars call or write, J. W. Vrolson, Highlanding Minn.

Rented Sundahl Barn.

A. M. Arpin has rented the old Sundahl livery barn and will use it during the coming winter as a storehouse and also as stable. There will be some 19 car loads of coal and other supplies to haul out for the Germantown ditch this winter and it is going to keep quite a crew of men busy doing the work.

Work Soon to Be Commenced.

A. M. Arpin, who has the contract for constructing the Germantown ditch, announces that work upon the same will be commenced at once and that a considerable number of miles will be built before it freezes up this fall. A floating dredge has been shipped to Steiner and will be started east from the Thief river in a short time. The provisions of the contract are that work must be started from the lower end.

Take Notice.

All persons are recommended to take Foley's Kidney Remedy for backache, rheumatism, and kidney and bladder trouble. It will quickly correct urinary irregularities, which, if neglected, may develop into a serious illness. It will restore health and strength. Do not neglect signs of kidney or bladder trouble and risk Bright's disease or diabetes. A. Bjerkhoel.

AMERICAN WANDERLUST.

A Habit Which Strengthens the Cohesive Unity of the Nation.

Less than half the members of the United States senate and house of representatives are native born in the states which they represent. Nothing could more clearly show the alert activities of the American people and that constant intermingling of the inhabitants of the several states which adds so much to the cohesive unity of the nation. The boy who goes to a distant state often accomplishes more than the one who goes straight on in the footprints of his father in the home village. Even Daniel Webster was not born in the old Bay State, whose influence and dignity he so well sustained and whose people mourned him so sincerely when his great life closed.

This wandering from state to state has resulted in the organizing in New York city of many state societies, which aim to gather together the natives of their respective states annually to revive the pleasant memories of the old home days, with their thousand clinging ties.

What would happen if the American people should cease to wander about the country? is a question often asked. It is said that an eastern man never amounts to anything until he goes west and that a western man has to come east in order to attain his full stature mentally. The northern man is advised to go south to learn gentle courtesy and chivalric bearing, the southerner to go north to add more iron to his blood. There can be no doubt that this constant evolution has encouraged the birth of new ideas, just as the whirling of the kinetoscope developed a toy into our present wonderful moving pictures, which gives us glimpses of life in motion all over the world.—Joe Mitchell Chapple in National Magazine.

THE HURRYING BARBER.

Speed Manifested More In the Motions Than In the Results.

"Barbers," remarked the man with the short hair, "are born unable to hurry. Just you go into a shop, as I did the other day, wanting a hair cut, and ask the barber how long it will take. He told me, 'Oh, about twenty minutes!' and I said to go ahead.

"That barber honestly believed he was hurrying, but he couldn't leave out those little snip-snips about the back of the neck they are all so fond of doing, and he had to cut the hair as if he were chiseling priceless marble. When it got to be about half an hour I said to him, 'You're a pretty bad judge of time, aren't you?' He came back with something about not wanting to turn out a poor job.

"I've known it to happen often in the case of shaving. When you tell a barber to hurry he dashes around on the tiled floor at imminent risk of falling, and he splashes the lather into your eyes and your mouth, but the fact remains that he takes as much time as usual to rub the lather into your face and as much time to shave you.

"I begin to believe there is some sort of rule regarding time that all barbers observe, because I have timed them. Once I asked a barber to hurry shaving me, and he had all the motions, but took up just as much time as when he went along at his usual gait.

"I imagine they believe the customer will be satisfied with the appearance of speed, and that's the reason they run around so and breathe heavily as if winded when changing from one side of the chair to the other."—New York Sun.

Children of Criminals.

It is a curious fact—one all at variance with the doctrines of heredity, but borne out by police records—that the children of crooks, of all classes, rarely turn out to be crooks themselves. Deeper study of the subject might reveal that they are possessed of the criminal instincts, but that the tragically close example of the punishment and wretchedness that attend a criminal career has been a terrifying deterrent. The fact, at any rate, remains. The rogues' galleries of Scotland Yard, New York and Chicago may be studied in vain for the photographs of a father and a son.—Argonaut.

He Did His Part Thoroughly.

In order to avoid an argument with a woman suffragist on the subject of her hobby a happy bachelor gallantly acquiesced in the truth of her assertions.

"But, sir," sternly remarked the spinster, "your admission is anything but creditable to you. What, for instance, have you ever done for the emancipation of woman?"

"Madam," responded the gentleman, with a polite smile and a bow, "I have at least remained a bachelor!"

Seemed All Right.

"Mamma, why don't you want me to play with that Kudger boy?"

"Because, dear, I know the family. He hasn't good blood in him."

"Why, mamma, he's been vaccinated twice, and it wouldn't take either time."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Making and Earning Money.

"What is the difference between making money and earning money?" asked the youth.

"Sometimes the difference is a trip to the penitentiary for counterfeiting," answered the home grown philosopher.—Chicago News.

Enlightening Rollo.

"Father," said little Rollo, "what is an egotist?"

"An egotist, my son, is a burnt match that thinks it was the whole fireworks."—Washington Star.

Local Traveling Salesman Brings an Action Against the Great Northern.

Claims to Have Been Injured in a Railroad Wreck in North Dakota.

Papers have been served this week in an action brought by Ole Landro, a traveling salesman who makes Thief River Falls his home, against the Great Northern Railway company for damages to the amount of $10,000. The case will be tried at the October term of the district court for Red Lake county and promises to be warmly contested by both parties.

Mr Landro, claims that while riding on a Great Northern passenger train from Minto to Grafton, the train left the track and the plaintiff sustained injuries to his back that are painful and permanent. The accident happened on the 16th of February, this year, and since that date Mr. Landro has been under the care of a physician.

Attorney G. Halvorson will represent the plaintiff.

A Friendly Injunction.

A "friendly injunction" restraining the county commissioners from building the court house will be tried before Judge Watts in Crookston today. The action is brought by Red Lake Falls parties and citizens from Thief River Falls may and may not intervene. Ex-Attorney General Young and G. Halvorson will be present to see that the interest of the taxpayers are protected.

Passed Through the City.

Gov. John A. Johnson and party, who had been at Seattle attending the exposition, passed through Thief River Falls yesterday morning at 10 o'clock. The governor and party were routed to pass through Thief River Falls at 10:10 on Tuesday evening and it was the intention of the band and people of this city to extend to the party a warm welcome, but owing to delays at Winnipeg they had to come on a special train.

FALL FROM GREAT HEIGHTS.

The Sensation Described by One Who Experienced It.

A German scientist, Professor Albert Heim, who fell over a precipice in the Alps, but lived to tell the tale, makes that story a very encouraging account to those with an inclination to high jumps and the like.

His fall was only seventy feet, yet that would be more than enough to satisfy a temperate person. His story is full of interesting detail.

At first he seemed to himself to be flying through the air. His fall really could have occupied only a few seconds, but his train of thought was long and full of interesting details.

"I clearly saw," he says, "the possibility of my fate. I said to myself, 'The rocky wall from which I am now being hurled prevents my seeing what is at its base. The snow may be melted there or there may be none. If there is any, my life may be saved. Otherwise death is inevitable.

"'If I am conscious on reaching the earth, I have by me a bottle of aromatics and my alpenstock. I will grasp it, for it may serve me in good stead.' I thought, too, of removing my eyeglasses lest their splintering might cause injury.

"Other and gentler thoughts for those I was to leave behind came upon me. For myself I felt indifferent, caring really little whether I should be much injured or not, but from motives of consideration for others I felt impelled, as it were, to make light of the matter. I seemed to call aloud, 'I am not much hurt!'

"I recollected that in five days more I was to have delivered an inaugural discourse and thought of the grief my death would cause to those near and dear to me. Anon, lying, as it were, on the limit of a far distant horizon, appeared distinct and divers images and episodes of my past life. The whole mental picture stood out clear-cut and illumined by divine and mysterious light.

"All things seemed lovely and of good report. There were no misgivings, no anxieties, no sorrow, pain or terror.

"There were no sensations of contest or strife. All was merged in feelings of genial good will and kindly feeling. Such feelings predominated over all and formed what was truly a unique and lovely picture.

"Gradually a heaven of glorious blue flecked with crimson clouds of gossamer lightness surrounded me. In them I was wafted to and fro, borne up from below, but painlessly and pleasantly, while a vast and moving snow field seemed to accompany me. Anon the perception of objects, subjective thoughts, a medley of various feelings, seemed to circle in concentric mazes around as a common center.

"Then came a dull thud, which I heard very distinctly, but did not feel, and my fall was ended. At that instant a dark veil passed before me.

"I called aloud three or four times 'I am not much hurt,' grasped my glasses, which lay near me, and touched my limbs to make sure they were not broken.

"Then I saw my companions slowly approaching. They told me a good half hour had elapsed after my fall before I spoke.

"I had lost consciousness, and that explains the dark veil. Later the power of thinking returned. I was conscious only so long as I was falling of the perception of beautiful images. At the moment of contact with earth they disappeared."

On another occasion Dr. Heim was injured in a carriage accident. He said that he distinctly heard and counted the bone fractures—seven in all—which he received. He quotes the evidence of an Italian who had a similar experience.—Gateway.

A Horseman's Getup, 1662.

"If the sword be not bought," writes Sir James Verney, "I had much rather have one according to the mode, and the rather because a black one is more agreeable to my phancy. I hope you have given my tailor full directions about the belt, for I can by no means trust to his judgment. As for the saddle you mention, I am very much obliged to yourself for borrowing and to Sir Rich: Temple for lending it, if he knows for whom it is, but my feare is that I shall not become a saddle of that worth, if it belongse to him as Kt. of the Bath, and I question whether I may have it for both assises. As for the horse I have at Sutton, I feare he will be too high for a low fellow to gett upon; if so, I shall be bold to send for yours. I am unwilling to look like a jackanapes on horseback. You mention topps to be laced, which I suppose are to be worn upon my leggs; if so, I feare there will be so much topp, as there will be but little bottom to be seen. My leggs all are short enough in conscience allready, and if the fashion must needs make them shorter I must strutt it out as well as I can."

Passed College "Exams" at Seven.

Few people in Connecticut realize that there once lived a boy in Waterbury who possessed the remarkable precociousness which enabled him to pass the Yale examination at the age of seven years. He didn't enter Yale until his thirteenth year, yet the record remains and ought not to be lost sight of. The boy's name was John Trumbull, born in 1750, and he died full of honor, scholastic and political, at the ripe age of eighty-one years in 1831. He was frail and tender as a youngster, and his remarkable intellect overbalanced his physical makeup. Nobody thought he would grow up, and his mental achievement at an age when most boys nowadays are entering the district school attracted the attention of scholars and distinguished men in his day.—Hartford Courant.

TWISTING A BRONCHO.

How Colts Are Put Through the Grand Merry-go-round.

He was a big black beauty of a colt and just as mean as he was handsome. Bronc had never been thoroughly broken by his former owner, and when I first saw him he was in the hands of the best horse-breaker in camp, who was putting the finishing touches to his education.

"They called this pony a' outlaw afore I took a-holt of him," remarked the broncho twister. "Shucks! Nowadays ef a hoss bucks his caddle blankets off'n him the boys say: 'Outlaw! Bad broncho! Guess I'll ride that old hoss over yonder.'"

"I've sweated most of the ugliness outen him a'ready," continued the trainer. "He ain't got but one mean habit left, an' today I'm a-goin' to larn him to fergit it."

The mean habit referred to was this: When Bronc decided to go straight ahead he'd go—over rocks and down the steep banks of a wash, through cactus and the well named cat's claw, and if the chollas pricked him or the curved claws of the brush snatched at his flanks he would throw in some fancy bucking for good measure as he tore along. But turn? Never!

The trainer took his riata from the saddle horn and tied one end to the rope bridle or hackamore, fastening it securely under the jaw. Then he petted the colt, working toward its flanks, until the animal allowed him to reach the tail and fasten a loop of rope in its heavy strands.

The free end of the riata was passed through the loop in a way which would bring the horse's head and tail together when tightened, and by passing the riata once more through both hackamore and loop it was prevented from slipping when released.

"Now for the grand merry-go-round!" announced the twister, and, standing away from the colt's heels, he pulled the riata taut until the animal was bent nearly double. "Keep turnin' till I say you kin stop," he commanded, and in fact the bewildered creature was revolving like a top and painfully learning the old lesson of his race—that man's will is law for the horse.

We sat in the shade of a mesquite watching him for twenty minutes or so, when the broncho twister decided that the stiff neck was sufficiently limber. When he mounted he discovered his error. The frightened horse danced and bucked with him and finally tried to roll over the rider, who sprang from the saddle just in the nick of time.

But his patience was by no means exhausted.

"Here's a shore way to make 'em limber," he announced, and, picking up a large flat stone, he tapped the horse's neck for a few minutes steadily, but not with sufficient force to hurt him. "He'll feel that perty soon an' find it easier to turn than brace his tender neck agin the reins."

When the pony had been reversed—that is, tied head and tail on the opposite side—and allowed to rotate another half hour, he was dripping with sweat and completely subdued. The broncho twister mounted, and the colt allowed himself to be ridden about the flat until he tangled in his trailing riata and fell, the rider still on top.

"Now we'll turn him loose an' see how he behaves hisself," remarked the trainer, and, unslinging the ropes, he again mounted and rode the now tractable horse in circles and figure eights, wheeling and turning at will.

As the trainer concluded, "I'd a heap sooner twist this critter's neck with a rope than have him break his back an' mine, too, over yonder cliff."

Which was the justification of Bronc's hard lesson.—Out West.

East Indian Magic.

A former French chief justice in Chandernagore, Jacolliot, gives an account of several curious performances that were displayed for his benefit by a yogi named Govinda-Swami on the terrace of his own house. Being by no means credulous, Jacolliot took every precaution to prevent deception. Fine sand was strewn on the ground in order to make as even a surface as possible. Jacolliot was asked to seat himself at a table upon which were a pencil and paper. The fakir carefully laid a piece of wood upon the sand and announced that whatever figures Jacolliot might draw on the paper the piece of wood would transcribe precisely upon the sand. The yogi stretched out his hand, and the wooden piece immediately copied upon the sand the most complicated and twisted figures that Jacolliot drew. When the Frenchman stopped writing the piece of wood also came to a standstill. The fakir stood at a distance against a wall, while Jacolliot held the paper and pencil in such a way that the Indian could not possibly see what he was inscribing.—Harper's Weekly.

Well Turned.

It would be a pleasant thing if all people who are plagued with short memories had the ready tact by which the composer Rossini once turned his own defect into a graceful compliment. Statistics show that the hens of the country produce as much wealth in six months as all of the iron mines in a year.

In the hilling of the celery bed the stalks should be held together firmly, so as to prevent dirt from getting into the crown of the plant, where the tenderest portions of the plant will grow.

During the heat of the midsummer it is especially necessary that flocks of hens which are confined should have a supply of green food in some form, with a plentiful supply of clean, fresh water.

However favorable irrigation may be as a means of using otherwise waste water, it is an interesting fact that of the water diverted into irrigation canals but one-third is finally utilized in the actual production of crops.

A good table relish may be had during the early fall days if some string beans are planted early in August after some other garden crop has been removed. They will be appreciated because the time of green things has gone by.

A Texas farmer living twenty miles from El Paso last year raised watermelons under dry farm conditions with a rainfall of but 9.84 inches during the year. It would sort of puzzle a fellow to tell just where the juice in these melons came from.

Unlike some other products, particularly those kept for long periods of time in cold storage, comb honey keeps best if stored where it is warm and dry, in temperatures ranging from 70 to 90 degrees. Exposed to frost and dampness it deteriorates very rapidly.

The Weyerhauser lumber interests have given 2,200 acres of land near the headwaters of the Mississippi in Minnesota to the state agricultural college to be used for experiments in scientific forestry. Here an attempt will be made to work out some of the more important general forestry problems, and particularly those pertaining to Minnesota and adjacent states.

Natives of Germany are often heard to speak of the large numbers of fruit trees which grow along the roadsides and furnish large quantities of fruit for nearby residents, the boys and girls especially appreciating the advantage. It seems a pity that this idea couldn't be adopted in America and some of the soil fertility that is being exhausted to produce roadside weeds devoted to growing fruit instead.

There is something in human nature that seems to make it impossible for some folks who get started on the downward road to really come to themselves until they have struck the last ditch—so low down that they take their provender from the hog trough as did the prodigal, or even worse. This makes mighty rough sledding, but it is about the only thing that will bring a body to his senses.

The foxtail or wild barley is coming to be one of the worst weed pests in many sections, requiring a good deal of work to eradicate. Botanists seem undecided whether to classify it as a winter annual or as a semi-perennial. It is hardy, ripens its seed early, and the fuzzy character of its seed head enables the wind to scatter it widely. Thorough and clean cultivation is the best method of getting rid of it.

Many a farm could easily produce the bulk of the sweets produced on its own table if two or three hives of bees were kept. Literature on the matter is easily available in the shape of pamphlets or a bee journal, while the degree of attention required for their proper care is light. Pure, fresh honey from the home hives is both cheaper than and far superior in quality to the "honeydew" maple sirups for which one has to pay a dollar a gallon.

A resident of Reading, Pa., departing from the usual practice of having his apiary in his back yard or orchard, has fitted up his garret for this purpose and there has some forty hives. The bees have access to the room through holes bored just beneath the window sills. They seem contented in their odd quarters and store their sweets there just as generously as out among the grass and flowers, some colonies producing as much as 200 pounds during a season.

Instances of death from descending into wells long unused are of too frequent occurrence. In such instances death is due to the presence in the well of carbon dioxide, which, being heavy, settles to the bottom and in which it is impossible for a human being to breathe. It is always well before going into such a well to lower a lantern by means of a rope. If it continues to burn at the bottom it means that the life giving oxygen is there and that it is safe to descend. If the light goes out the presence of carbon dioxide is shown, and this means that death lurks at the bottom.

Ties which are being scattered along most railways for repair work are black as your hat, showing evidence of treatment with creosote, one of the most effective wood preservatives known. Years ago the abundance and cheapness of ties were such that the question was one of minor consideration, but today even poor ties cost sixty cents apiece. It is estimated that the creosote bath costs from thirty to fifty cents per tie and increases its life three or four times. During 1908 [illegible] gallons of creosote were [illegible] pounds of zinc chloride.

Cured Hay Fever And Summer Cold.

A. S. Nusbaum, Batesville, Indiana writes: "Last year I suffered for three months with a summer cold so distressing that it interfered with my business. I had many of the symptoms of hay fever and a doctor's prescription did not reach my case, and I took several medicines which seemed only to aggravate it. Fortunately I insisted upon having Foley's Honey and Tar. It quickly cured me. My wife has since used Foley's Honey and Tar with the same success." A. Bjerkhoel.

In some sections of the western and northwestern states where motor power for harvesting is furnished by gasoline tractors it has been found feasible to plow at the same time, the strip from which the grain is cut being turned over by the gang of six or eight plows attached behind, the bundles of grain being delivered on the plowed furrows outside the range of operations. The advantages of this plan are economy in operation, the killing of incipient weeds and a conserving of moisture, which in sections of short rainfall is an important consideration.

An agricultural journal which prides itself on the reliability of the firms whose advertisements appear in its columns not long ago carried an alluring advertisement of a "paint man" whose bonanza product by an analysis made by the South Dakota experiment station was found to contain about 30 per cent aqua pura, which a fellow can get cheap by working a pump handle. Either the editor of this publication doesn't consider the work of experiment stations practical and doesn't scan their bulletins very closely or else the aqua pura chap has mended his ways.

THE SAFFRON PLANT.

It Is Among the Very Oldest of the Vegetable Products.

The particular species of crocus that has from time immemorial been cultivated for its dried stigmas, a product known under the name of saffron, is Crocus sativus, which is wild from Italy to Kurdistan. Saffron may be reckoned among the very oldest of vegetable products, being alluded to in the Song of Solomon among other spices of Lebanon. The name crocus is Chaldean or Greek and was first used by Theophrastus of Eresus about 350 B. C., and that it was a well known and admired flower in Greece soon afterward is shown by Sophocles, who mentions the "crocus of golden beam" in his "Oedipus at Colonos."

The word saffron seems to be a corruption of the Arabic name "al zahafaran," and the product itself was first imported into England as a spice or condiment, being also used as a color or dye for silks and other fabrics of the eastern looms.

At a later date, exactly when is not known, the plant itself was cultivated in England, more especially in Essex, in which county the name of Saffron Walden remains in evidence of the fact. Again, we have in London Saffron hill, which formerly was a site included in the bishop of Ely's garden at Holborn, once famous for its saffron beds as well as for its strawberries. Today, however, saffron is but little used.—London Chronicle.

SUGAR AND CANDY.

Satisfy the Cravings of the Children For Sweets.

Children may eat too much sugar, and they may also stay too long in their bathtub, or in the creek when they go in swimming, or get tanned or a headache from playing too long in the sun, or chilled by staying too long in the open air, but is that any sound reason why they should be deprived of sweets, sunlight, baths and fresh air or discouraged from indulging in them?

All that is needed, says Dr. Woods Hutchinson in Success Magazine, is a little common sense regulation and judicious supervision, not prohibition or denunciation. Most of the extraordinary craving for pure sugar and candy, which is supposed to lead the average child to inevitably "founder himself" if left to his own sweet will and a box of candy, is due to a state of artificial and abnormal sugar starvation, produced by an insufficient amount of this invaluable food in its regular diet.

Children who are given plenty of sugar on their mush, bread and butter and puddings, a regular allowance of cake and plenty of sweet fruits are almost free from this craze for candy, this tendency to gorge themselves to surfeit, and can usually be trusted with both the candy box and the sugar bowl.

Parker House Rolls.

Materials.—Three tablespoonfuls of butter, one teaspoonful of salt, one-half cupful of lukewarm water, one yeast cake, two cupfuls of new milk, one tablespoonful of sugar, two egg whites and six cupfuls of flour.

Way of Preparing.—Scald the milk and add to it the sugar, salt and butter. Let stand until lukewarm, then add three cupfuls of flour and beat for five minutes. Add the dissolved yeast and let stand until it is a very light, frothy mass, then add the egg whites, beaten to a stiff froth, and the remaining flour. Let rise again until it is twice its original bulk, place on your molding board, knead lightly and then roll into a sheet half an inch thick. Take a large biscuit cutter and cut the dough into rounds. Brush with melted butter, fold over and press the edges together. Place in a buttered pan one inch apart. Let rise until very light and bake in a hot oven fifteen minutes.—National Food Magazine.

A Duck of a Man.

Ellen Terry and Mr. Balfour met for the first time at the table of Henry W. Lucy in London. During the ensuing conversation Miss Terry remained strangely silent. Presently the Unionist leader had to leave for the house of commons, and Ellen Terry at last found her tongue. Her host was relieved to find that she had not been bored. Bringing her closed hand down on the table, she exclaimed with a glance toward the door through which Mr. Balfour had passed, "I think that's a duck of a man!"

Advantages.

"I suppose you are glad to be free again?"

The ex-convict sidestepped a trolley car, dodged an auto and looked nervously toward a clanging ambulance.

"Oh, of course, of course," he said. "But let me tell you a man in prison feels mighty safe."—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Drawback.

"Oh, yes."

"Saw icebergs and such things, eh?"

"Yes, but I missed the billboards, I can tell you."—Washington Herald.

Caution Extraordinary.

"You have a night key?"

"Of course," answered Mr. Meekton, "only I'm so careless that Henrietta keeps it locked up in the safety deposit so that I won't lose it."—Washington Star.

Amateurish.

"Am I the first girl you ever kissed?"

"You are—I swear it!"

"I accept your apology."—Cleveland Leader.

AFTER THE BATTLE.

An Incident That Seemed to Explain Joshua's Miracle.

There was an incident in our life at Brandy, connected with Gettysburg, which is worth relating. Batchelder, whose map of the battlefield of Gettysburg is authority and whom we had fallen in with while we were there, asked to join our mess at Brandy when he came to the army to verify the positions of the various commands. One night we had just sat down to dinner when he entered our big hospital tent, quite tired.

"Well," he announced after taking his place at the table, "I have been down in the Second corps today, and I believe I have discovered how Joshua made the sun stand still. I first went to —— regiment and had the officers mark on the map the hour of their position at a certain point. Then I went to —— regiment in the same brigade. They declared positively it was one or two hours earlier or later than that given by the other. So it went on, no two regiments or brigades agreeing, and if I hinted that some of them must certainly be mistaken they would set me down by saying with severe dignity, 'We were there, Batchelder, and we ought to know, I guess,' and I made up my mind that it would take a day of at least twenty hours instead of thirteen at Gettysburg to satisfy their accounts. So when Joshua's captains got around him after the fight and they began to talk it over the only way under the heavens that he could ever harmonize their statements was to make the sun stand still and give them all a chance."

Any one who has ever tried to establish the exact position or hour when anything took place in an engagement will confirm Batchelder's experience and possibly, if not too orthodox, accept his explanation of Joshua's feat.—Morris Schaff in Atlantic.

A MONSTER SKULL.

One That Was Said to Be Bigger Than a Bushel Basket.

One of the most remarkable finds of gigantic human remains of which we have any record was that said to have been made at Palermo, Sicily, in the year 1516, when an entire skeleton of unheard of proportions was unearthed by some marble quarry men. These mammoth remains measured exactly thirty-four feet from head to foot and nine feet seven inches from point to point of the shoulders.

A stone ax buried with this old time giant may still be seen at Palermo in section "Z" of the St. Isoront museum. It is made of a bluish looking, fine grained bowlder and appears to be about two feet eight inches long by one foot broad and nine inches through in the thickest place. A musty, rusty looking tag attached to the relic informs the visitor that it weighs fifty-two pounds, but the general verdict is that it could not weigh over thirty or thirty-five pounds.

The skeleton was burned by a mob in the year 1602 during the prevalence of the black death at Palermo, the ignorant, superstitious people believing that it was connected in some mysterious way with the death dealing distemper. The skull of this giant, according to Abbe Ferregus, "was largely excessive of the baskets sayd to hold the bushel, being fitted above and belowe withe teeth to the number of sixty-foure, the each of which would have weighed two ounces."

Cavalier Scroy claimed to have found a skull on Tenerife that had sixty teeth.—Westminster Gazette.

Animal Mimicry.

Observers of nature are frequently struck with the singular resemblances of insects to leaves, dried sticks, etc., and these likenesses are supposed to have grown out of the necessity of protection against or concealment from enemies. An interesting example of this kind of resemblance was brought to the attention of the Entomological society in London by a naturalist, who exhibited a spider found inhabiting some rocks near Cannes, on which were also fastened the cases of a species of moth. When at rest the spider exhibited almost precisely the same form and color as the moth cases surrounding it.

THE SAWMILL'S BOOKS.

They Needed Not an Auditor, but a Mathematical Carpenter.

Biffkins froze me with a stare. "I remember," he went on, calmly ignoring my interruption, "one time when I was hired to keep books for a sawmill way up north. 'Twas six days by log wagon from ever' place exceptin' the infernal regions, the same bein' a quarter of a mile away, straight down. The durned simpleton they sent down to Nigger Wool settlement after me had so much business with a roulette dealer that he forgot to tell me to get some office supplies, so when we got to camp I found that the principal equipment of my palatial 6 by 8 business apartment consisted of three lumber crayons, slightly shop worn, and a last year's almanac. I got some smooth pine boards and kept my books on them with chalk."

"How did it work" I asked, interested in spite of myself.

"Like a charm," grinned Biffkins, "until the foreman of gang 1 got on a drunk one night an' slept in the office an' used up fourteen pages of the general ledger fer kindlin' wood the next mornin'. The company sent up an auditor to check over my books, but he went back plumb disgusted. Told 'em they didn't need an auditor—what they wanted was a carpenter who was handy at figgers. An' that reminds me"—   —Bookkeeper.

FLOATING STORES.

Merchandise Steamers of the Muskoka Lake Country In Ontario.

Among the interesting features of life in the Muskoka lake country, in Ontario, are the floating stores. A good sized steam vessel fitted out with every imaginable item of merchandise that might be required makes a tour of an assigned chain of lakes once each week. On a certain hour of a certain day the boat is expected at the different resorts and summer homes, and enough merchandise must be bought at each to tide over until the next trip of the floating store.

Upon stepping on board the store boats, says a writer in Popular Mechanics, the purchaser approaches a counter with scales and cash drawer, as in any other kind of store. Behind the counter are shelves, on which are displayed such articles as may tempt the eye. Behind these shelves is the entrance to the storeroom and hold, in which more merchandise is stored. Each article has its place, and the storekeeper can find it in a moment.

Sometimes isolated farms on the lakes are not worth stopping at every trip, so a flag is flown when stores are desired. The store vessel drops anchor when the signal flag is flown, and some member of the family rows out and makes the purchases.

Engraved Gems of the Ancients.

Engraved gems are among the most interesting objects of art inherited by us from the ancients. Though many of the cameos and intaglios were engraved on precious stones over 2,000 years ago, they are still as clear and fine as if they were cut yesterday. The designs engraved on these stones indicate that the old Greeks and Romans regarded them as charms against accident or misfortune. This superstition generally took the form of a fondness for representation of certain animals. Sailors affected the dolphin because it was believed to be the mariner's friend. Women, so far as fishes were concerned, preferred the representation of the prolific ariuga of the Adriatic, which was a symbol of fruitfulness because of the great number of its eggs. The ant was worn as an emblem of industry. By the frog was indicated the idea of resurrection, because that interesting batrachian renews its youth each spring by shedding its old skin.

Pertaining to Fish.

Blessings on thee, little man! Go a-fishing when you can. Never mind the teacher's rule not to run away from school. Take your bait and alder pole and then hunt the deepest hole where the wary troutlets hide by the canyon streamlet's side. You'll get licked at home, of course, and you'll suffer great remorse, but when daddy sees your string he'll gasp and say, "By jing!" And his rod and reel he'll snatch and start out to make a catch when your jacket he doth tan. Blessings on you, little man!—Los Angeles Express.

Clothes and the Man.

Man is in some sort a slave to his clothes, and there are many men who dislike wearing the same clothes on two consecutive days, more particularly the necktie. For the first two or three things you look at when you meet a man are his eyes and his necktie. And there is a sort of underlying consciousness as you face the morning world that your tie must be straight and clean and new. But to this end you must buy the cheap tie and throw it away with your sins before going to bed.—London Chronicle.

THE TONGUE.

It Appears That This Organ Can Be Eloquent Even When Silent.

From the observations made by a physiognomist it appears that the tongue when quite still can be as eloquent in giving its owner away as when it is wagging sixteen to the dozen. This is a hard fact for a silent man to swallow—in silence. His only remedy is to keep well so as to obviate the necessary injunction of the doctor to put his tongue out, for by this thrust out sign the doctor shall know him.

The tongue of the talker when obtruded inclines to the right side of the mouth, we are asked to believe, whereas the seldom used tongue gravitates to the left side. Orators, preachers and barristers are endowed with right sided tongues. Verbally parsimonious persons have left sided tongues.

Furthermore, "the tongue that shoots out straight without turning or wavering indicates a solid, reliable man of affairs." Tongues that turn up indicate impractical natures. A downward, drooping tongue belongs to a person born to poverty and a ready eye for the hopeless side of things.

The cruel tongue flattens and broadens when extended. The delicate speaking organ with curled up edges is the property of an imaginative and artistic being. When the tongue issues forth as if gripped in a dental vise it signifies a love of life more than ordinary.

Finally we are warned that the individual who thrusts forth his tongue to its extremest verge is a person to whom no secret should ever be confided, for he is an irresponsible chatterer.—London Chronicle.

HE WANTED A PARROT.

The Use to Which the Old Man Would Put the Green Bird.

We are all striving for two things—success and happiness. To get these many of us are struggling for a third—fortune. In striving to attain our desires many of us need a green parrot. In a little town in Iowa, in the midst of a great stretch of timber and meadow, a man built a castle. Something over $25,000 he spent in building a home. It was finished within with the finest polished woods. The foundation was of brownstone, the windows of French plate, and every detail was carried out in the best manner. He had grown to be an old man. He had always lived in a modest cottage of six rooms. This mansion had fifteen. On one side there was a magnificent stone arch over the paved drive that led up to the house. He had just completed showing a friend over the place and reached this point when the visitor exclaimed:

"Well, John, you ought to be happy. This is a magnificent home. Here is everything one could wish for."

"Waal," replied the old man, who was a cattle buyer, "a fellow always wants something else."

"What on earth could you want?" was the query.

"A green parrot to hang up thar in the drive."

"Why a green parrot?"

"So every morning afore I drive out he would say, 'John, you're a darn fool.'"—Cleveland Press.

Couldn't Turn It.

The eye of little Willie's teacher was sad and sorry, for, notwithstanding that he was her favorite pupil, he stood before her convicted of the heinous charge of a theft of candy from a fellow pupil. It was a first offense, however, and she did not desire to inflict corporal punishment. A moral lecture, she thought, would fit the case.

"Bear in mind, Willie," she concluded, "that these temptations can be resisted if determination is used. Always turn a deaf ear to temptation."

Little Willie's lip trembled.

"But, teacher," he answered, "I ain't got a deaf ear."

Making Hubby Appreciative.

A doctor tells of a note he received from a woman saying that her husband, who was about to make him a professional call, found constant fault with the dinner she prepared for him. She appealed to the physician for aid. The doctor examined his patient, who had a slight attack of indigestion, and told him to cut out luncheons, to eat nothing but a slice of toast and a cup of tea. The scheme worked excellently. Of course hubby returns home in the evening, eats everything in sight and votes his wife's cooking even better than mother used to make.—Boston Record.

"Dinna think o' deein' yet," answered Sandy; "but when ye do, ye'd better be drooned at sea than anywhere else."

"An' why, Sandy?" asked his wife.

"Why?" exclaimed Sandy. "Because ye wouldna cost sae muckle to bury."

AN IMPRACTICAL JOKER.

He Thought It Was Very Funny to Fire the Hayrick.

Practical joking, "the meanest form of wit," is common in Hungary. Formerly the pranks used to be coarse, if not dangerous, but that is changing now. The only saving grace of the Magyarian practical jokes, says W. B. F. Bovill in "Hungary and the Hungarians," is that they are not perpetrated in a spirit of bitterness.

One of the most famous jokers of the old school was Jozsa Gyuri. Exiled in one of the most inaccessible parts of the great plain, he lived and died "a prodigal and a buffoon."

A story is told of Jozsa going to spend a night with a Count Keglevich. Wishing to be impressive, he journeyed thither in a beautiful new coach, of which he was very proud. On being shown over the grounds by the count his attention was directed to a remarkably fine hayrick. Hay was then standing at a good price. After supper Jozsa drew together some friends, and the rick was soon nothing but a heap of ashes.

The next morning when Jozsa wanted to continue his journey his wonderful carriage was not to be seen anywhere.

"Why, my friend," said the count, "you yourself burnt it last night. The fact is my coach house wants repairing, and as the evening threatened to be wet we put your carriage under the rick to keep it dry."

A MAN OF LUCK.

The Story of the Test by the Eastern King's Minister.

A king once said to a minister, "Do you believe in luck?"

"I do," said the minister.

"Can you prove it?" asked the king.

"Yes, I can."

So one night he tied up to the ceiling of a room a bag containing peas mixed with diamonds and let in two men, one of whom believed in luck and the other in human effort alone. The one who believed in luck quietly laid himself down on the ground on his blanket; the other after a time found the bag and, feeling in the dark the peas and stones, ate the peas and threw the diamonds to his companion, saying, "There are the stones for your idleness."

The man below received them in his blanket.

In the morning the king and the minister came and told each man to keep what he had found. The man who believed in trying got the peas which he had eaten; the other got the diamonds.

The minister then said, "Sire, there may, you see, be luck, but it is as rare as peas mixed with diamonds, so let none hope to live by luck."—An Eastern Fable.

Teaching Him a Lesson.

The new mail carrier on the rural free delivery route glanced at the name on the letter box by the roadside, stopped his horse and spoke to the roughly attired farmer with the old slouch hat who was resting his sun browned arms on the gate and looking at him.

"I see," he said, "your name is Holmes."

"Yes."

"Beverly G.?"

"Yes, I'm the man that lives here."

"Any relation of Sherlock Holmes?" gravely asked the carrier.

"No, sir," answered the farmer, "but I'm detective enough to know that you're not a very good judge of human nature. You took me for an ignoramus because I've got my old working duds on. I'm Sherlock Holmes enough to look at a man's face and eyes before I size him up as a— Some mail for me? Thanks."—Youth's Companion.

Men and Their Feet.

The Frenchman's foot is long, narrow and well proportioned. The Scotchman's foot, according to anthropologists, is high and thick, strong, muscular and capable of hard work. The Russian's foot possesses one peculiarity, the toes being generally "webbed" to the first joint. The Tartar's foot is short and heavy, the foot of a certain type of savage, and the toes are the same length. The Spaniard's foot is generally small, but finely curved. The Englishman's foot is in most cases short and rather fleshy and not, as a rule, as strong proportionally as it should be.—Argonaut.

Javelle Water.

Wherever water is used in preparing bleaches it should be soft. The alkali in hard water affects all chemical substances. Javelle water is a standard preparation for bleaching white things and removing spots and stains, but it must not touch colored surfaces. To make it dissolve half a pound of washing soda in a pint of boiling water and mix it with a quarter pound of chloride of lime dissolved in a quart of boiling water. Stir well, let settle, pour off the clear liquid and keep closely corked in a dark place.

A Nose For the Truth.

THE DIAMOND CUTTER.

His Skill Has Much to Do With the Brilliancy of the Gem.

When the expert looks at a diamond he can tell you in a moment where it came from and even whether it was cut lately or some years ago. He knows by its color whence it comes, for the color of the Brazilian diamond differs from that of the South African, and even in South Africa different colors are found in different mines.

In the rough the diamond has little brilliancy, for there is a crust that must be cut away before it can properly refract the light, and it is this power of refraction which makes the brilliancy of a diamond and has everything to do with its value in the market. The skill of the diamond cutter has much to do with bringing out this brilliancy. He must do the most he can with the rough stone before him and lose as little as possible of the precious weight in the stone.

Diamonds are found in all kinds of queer shapes, for the carbon may be in any position while being crystallized, and the act of crystallization may affect only parts of that carbon. When the expert cutter has a rough diamond before him he judges almost instantly how it will cut to the greatest advantage. If it inclines to the pear shape he will make a pear shaped diamond of it. If it be square or round the cutting will folow the natural lines as closely as possible, so that the loss may be reduced to a minimum.

To make the stone as brilliant as possible the diamond cutter cuts many facets so as to refract the light from as many points as he can. A full cut brilliant has at least forty-eight facets, and so expert are the cutters that they often cut diamonds so small that it requires a hundred to weigh a carat. Each has forty-eight facets.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

SARATOGA'S SPRINGS.

The Water Was First Used by the Indians as a "Cure."

The Saratoga Springs "cure" antedated the settlement of this community by the white man, when the High Rock spring was only a bubbling springlet, drunk at first by the Indians as a fresh water spring. Finding that their health was improved by the water, they bethought them that it must have medicinal qualities, and from that time all sick Indians were brought to High Rock spring for the healing of their ills. The "outward and visible sign" that impressed the red men was the deposit of the salts of the water about the spring in the form of a cone, called tufa, which still exists and from which it received its name and through and over which the water bubbles to this day.

In 1800 the Congress spring was discovered and became renowned the world over as a saline cathartic. This, combined with the sulphurous iron water of the Putnam spring, made Saratoga Springs famous as the leading health resort of the United States. The remainder of the thirty-five mineral springs were discovered from time to time, and all have a wide therapeutic application in the treatment of almost all chronic diseases and are divided into four groups according to their component parts. These groups are: First, sodic, muriated, alkaline, saline, cathartic; second, sodic, calcic, muriated, alkaline saline; third, chalybeate; fourth, sulphur.—National Magazine.

Living Over Catacombs.

Paris, in many of its districts, is built over the catacombs, says Harper's Weekly. These vast subterranean chambers and galleries produce that peculiar cavernous sound which is heard in the Luxembourg, Montparnasse, Vaugirard, Montrouge and Montsouris quarters when heavy carts pass rapidly along the coarsely metaled roads. The streets are then like monstrous drums beating funeral marches to the grave over that vast common grave of ten centuries of Parisians with its millions of skeleton dead. That quaint little Gothic house at the corner of the Boulevard Raspail, which many an American artist must remember from his student days, actually has a private staircase leading to the catacombs from beneath a hermetically closed stone slab just in front of the doorstep.

A FAMOUS DETECTIVE

The Rise, the Achievements and the Fall of M. Vidocq.

GREAT FRENCH POLICE SPY.

His Career as a Coiner, a Burglar and the Associate of Thieves—He Knew the Secrets of More Than Half of the Criminals in Paris.

"The fellow has made his escape by the roof!"

A little band of Parisian police had paid a surprise visit to a mean, dirty house in one of the most disreputable parts of Paris. It was about 3 o'clock in the morning when an officer tapped at the door and demanded admittance of the trembling person who opened it. Slipping past him, they crept swiftly and noiselessly up the rickety stairs to the door of a room, opened it and rushed in. But the bed in which they had expected to find their man was empty. He must have heard them stealing up the stairs and escaped by the window.

The officer in charge of the party looked out. In the darkness he could distinguish nothing. But the man must be there. His clothes still lay beside the bed, where he had cast them down when he had retired the night before.

Some of the most daring of the officers crawled out after him, while others went for ladders to reach the roof from the street. The man must be caught! He was found at last. Crouching down and seeking to hide himself among the chimney stacks, the officers pounced upon him.

A short time later he was before one of the chiefs of the police.

"Good day, M. Henri," he said, saluting the stern looking official. "Some one has once more betrayed me into your hands."

"You are accused of being in league with coiners and passers of bad money," said the official. "What have you to say?"

"Only that I am innocent, monsieur, though the people in the house where I lodged were guilty of such practices. I had the honor of calling on monsieur some time back and of saying that I could put it in his power to clear Paris of such scoundrels."

The man the officers had found upon the roof and who addressed those words to the police official was one Vidocq, a man destined to become famous as one of the greatest detectives of modern times.

Vidocq had been concerned for years past in all manner of rogueries. He had received various terms of imprisonment. He was regarded as one of the most dangerous of the hundreds of criminals that threatened the honest citizens of Paris. He was daring, full of resource, a man of marvelous physical strength and audacity. Upon two previous occasions his accomplices had, knowing how much the police valued his capture, betrayed him into their hands. This was the third time Vidocq had so suffered. Two could play at that game.

"M. Henri," said Vidocq, "make me one of your agents, and I swear to put you in possession of the secrets of half the criminals in Paris."

The offer was a tempting one, for the Parisian police were then baffled by criminals of all descriptions, and Parisians were crying out for more efficient guardians.

"We will see," replied the official.

A short time later Vidocq found himself in prison, condemned to serve a sentence of eight years. But that miserable convict sentenced to that terrible sentence was really a police spy. He was popular with the other convicts and learned all their secrets. Each night he used in his cell to write out an account of the discoveries he had made during the day. The report was dispatched to the chief of the police and proved remarkably useful.

One day the criminal world of Paris was amazed and joyful over the marvelous escape of Vidocq from prison. They received him with open arms. As a matter of fact, the authorities had come to the conclusion that Vidocq could be much more useful to them outside than in that grim place. His escape had all been planned. Vidocq returned to his associates as a hero. In fact, he was a spy—a spy with the keenest eyes, the most alert ears, the most subtle brain, to learn all the villainy going.

It was wonderful what ill luck began henceforth to dog the criminals of Paris. All their plans came in some mysterious manner to the ears of the police. Was it Vidocq who betrayed them? Some of them were so convinced of it that at last Vidocq found it necessary to disguise himself and act the part among them of a new hand in crime. A consummate master of disguise, he went among them, still unsuspected, in his new role.

He was certainly one of the most useful fellows that the police had ever had as an ally.

"Vidocq," said M. Henri to him one day, "we must find that fellow Fossard, the man who has escaped from the prison at Brest. He is in Paris, hiding somewhere. His lodging is in a house in a bystreet near to a market place. And there are yellow silk curtains to the window of his room. In the same house there lives a woman with a humped back. That is all I can tell you about the fellow—all I have been able to learn."

It was a vague clew to work on. Vidocq, anxious to distinguish himself, set off. A window with yellow curtains, a woman with a humped back! For weeks he walked about Paris searching for such a window in a house in which lived such a female. He found it at last. The humpbacked lady was a seamstress, and Vidocq made himself so agreeable to her that he quickly learned all about the lodgers in the building. Fossard—under another name, of course—tenanted a room at the top of the building. How was he to be got at? He was a man of prodigious strength, a man who had vowed he would never be taken alive, a man who always carried firearms, ready to slay any one who might seek to take him.

"Such a man is best taken in his bed, M. Henri," suggested Vidocq. The only difficulty was how it was to be managed to take him so.

Fossard, in spite of his being such a desperate criminal, was a bit of a fop. He used to keep a bottle of eau de cologne in his room. That scent was to prove his undoing. It is not the only occasion that perfume has proved disastrous to criminals who have indulged in it. A few nights later, when Fossard was in bed and fast asleep, he was awakened by a timid knock at his door. Calling out to know what he was disturbed for, he heard a timorous child's voice in reply. It informed Fossard that the knocker was poor little Louis, the nephew of a woman on the next floor who had been taken very ill and who had sent the child to beg M. Fossard to lend her his bottle of eau de cologne. Fossard groped round for the bottle and with it in his hand threw open the door. Vidocq and his helpers were on him in an instant.

"The most terrible man in Paris"—such became the description among the dangerous classes of Vidocq, now a recognized agent of the police.

He was not regarded with favor by members of the detective service. They might well, indeed, look askance at a man with such a record.

"I have never caught any criminal who more deserved imprisonment than M. Vidocq," protested an indignant officer to M. Henri one day.

But Vidocq was too useful to be hastily set aside. Never had the criminals of Paris such a bad time as they were now enjoying with Vidocq in the detective force.

He organized the first really efficient detective service on the continent. The task of selecting twelve assistants was confided to him. Vidocq chose the majority of them from the cleverest thieves he knew. Those that had been pickpockets he made wear gloves. It was impossible for them to indulge in their former bad habits while wearing those fashionable articles.

Tall, of magnificent physique, with what is known as an "open" countenance, with large twinkling blue eyes and a mouth that seemed to be ever ready to break into good natured laughter, Vidocq was perhaps the last man in the world to be taken for a detective.

"I always regretted," he declared once, "that my duty prevented me from cultivating a mustache, but it would be a sad hindrance to my disguising myself. I had to give the idea up. Criminals would have got to know that mustache of mine."

So he remained a close shaven man to the end of his days. Perhaps there never was a more energetic disguiser than Vidocq. He relied upon his marvelous facility in making up to utterly bewilder the professional criminals he had to deal with.

In one day's hard work he assumed no fewer than twelve wholly distinct disguises!

He went, when he was not in disguise, constantly armed. A pistol lay ready to his hand in a pocket of his handsome clothes, and a dagger was concealed in the front of his coat.

At the end of ten years' service he retired.

The news spread all over Paris. Vidocq, who had made the police of Paris more feared than they had ever been before, was actually in the hands of the police!

He had after his retirement from the force established a private inquiry office, and clients of all kinds flocked to him. Then he opened an agency for the protection of shopkeepers and merchants against fraudulent customers. He had as many as 8,000 customers on his books when the police arrested him, and he was now accused of having in many cases become the ally of the very people from whom he was supposed to be protecting his customers. He was found guilty and sentenced to eight years' imprisonment. When he at last got the conviction reversed Vidocq found himself a ruined man.

One of the attractions at a place of entertainment in London years ago was M. Vidocq. The great detective had taken to the stage! Enormous audiences came to see the strange man, who related his extraordinary experiences and seemed like a dozen different men upon the stage by his marvelous quickness in changing his appearance.

One day in 1857 a white haired, feeble, mumbling old man lay dying in a bed in the garret of a house in a miserable Paris street. He was Vidocq, the marvelous detective! Helpless, in poverty, dependent on the charity of friends, the once terrible man lay there awaiting the approach of death. Almost his last word, according to one who attended on him, were, "You are my prisoner."—London Tit-Bits.

Why He Was Excused.

At the Dublin city sessions one morning a juror prayed to be excused and said he had a doctor's certificate that he was not fit to serve. He handed up a closed envelope to the recorder, who found it contained a letter from a well known Dublin medical man. Amid great laughter in court the recorder read this letter aloud:

"This man has been asking for a certificate that he is unable to serve as a juror. I don't know whether he is a knave or a fool, but he has little brains, and he reeks of porter."

The Wise's Kept No Maid

This was economical and satisfying to Mrs. Wise. Things seemed right only when she did them.

It worked fine—everybody satisfied. Busy hands are happiest;—but the strain told—physically first, then mentally. One day she gave out—had to quit—"All run down" she said.

The facts were—complete physical exhaustion and ragged nerves, due to never-ending monotonous tasks.

The Wise's doctor said "DIGESTO"—a wine glass three times a day.

That did it.

The doctor made good, DIGESTO made good and both made Mrs. Wise good, and equal to her tasks with energy to spare.

Moral: Don't wait—take DIGESTO now. A perfect liquid food and body builder.

TRI-STATE LOSES AGAIN

The City of Thief River Falls Again Wins in the Telephone Fight.

This Is the Second Law Suit Between the Telephone Company and This City.

Last Saturday Judge Watts made an order sustainig the demurrer of the city to the petition of the telephone company in which the company prayed privilege to extend its long distance service in Thief River Falls.

This is the second law suit between the Telephone Co & the City. The first suit grew out of the fact that the Co. claimed the right under the franchise granted by the city, to install a local telephone system and when the city council denied them this privilege the matter was taken into court where it was determined that under its franchise the tephone Company did not have the right to install a local telephone system.

About one year ago the telephone Company requested of the council the privilege of extending its long distance service by installing additional pay stations, which being refused the company brought an action Mandamus to compel the council to grant this privilege under the franchise: The city then took the position that the telephone Company had no lawful franchise and was in the city as a licensee.

The case was submitted to Judge Watts on July 8th, who has sustained the city.

This leaves the telephone company without any franchise and can be expelled from the city at any time. It is the opinion of the city authorities that the franchise of the Tri-State Company is no better than that of the Northwestern. General E. T. Young and city Attorney Halvorson represented Thief River Falls while Chas Loring, Cobb Wheelwright and E. A. Prendergast represented the Telephone Company.

Report Is Unfavorable.

The following letter received by John Durbin of interest to many in this vicinity:

United States Engineer Office.
St. Paul, Minn.

Sir:

As it comes to the notice of the undersigned that you have expressed an interest in the proposed improvement of Red Lake River, between Red Lake and Thief River Falls, you are hereby informed that the preliminary examination of this river authorized by act of Congress approved March 3, 1909, has been made, and that the report submitted thereon is unfavorable to present improvement of this river.

You are further notified that all interested parties have the privilege of an appeal from this conclusion to the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors, a permanent body sitting at Washington, D. C., to which all examinations and survey reports of this character are referred. Persons who so desire may be heard on appeal by the Board, either orally or in writing. Written communications should be addressed to the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors, Rooms 507-510 Colorado Building, Washington, D. C., and should be mailed in time to be in the possession of the said Board within three weeks from the date of this communication. If oral hearings desired, dates for the same may be arranged for by correspondence with Board.

You are requested to communicate the foregoing information to any persons whom you know to be interested in the improvement of the river, and who, not being known to this office, do not receive copies of this letter.

Very respectfully,
Francis R. Shunk,
Major, Corps of Engineers.

GRAND TRUNK TO BUILD

Will Build a line from Winnipeg to Emerson Next Year

Will Connect With the Great Northern and Northern Pacific.

The Grand Trunk Pacific railroad, it is announced, will build a line from Winnipeg to Emerson at the international boundary to connect with the Great Northern Pacific systems, but the understanding is that, owing to the extensive construction work which the Grand Trunk is now doing on the line to the Pacific coast, the Emerson branch will not be started until next year. It will give the Grand Trunk Pacific a connection with the American road, and enable it to compete to some extent with its older rivals, the Canadian Pacific and Canadian Northern, for American business.

The time is not far distant, however, when the Grand Trunk will find it necessary to get a Duluth connection. The Canadian Northern has, by the purchase of the Virginia & Rainy Lake road, secured a direct line between Duluth and Winnipeg, and when the Soo cut off is built from Thief River Falls the Canadian Pacific will have a short route from Winnipeg to Duluth. To place itself on an equal footing with its rivals, the Grand Trunk must have a more direct line to Duluth than can be obtained by a connection with the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific at Emerson, and it would not be surprising to see the building of the Winnipeg Emerson branch quickly followed by the construction of an air line across Northern Minnesota from Emerson to Duluth.

The Grand Trunk Pacific must have a direct connection with Duluth, and that is the only way it can obtain it, unless the Northwestern railway system should be extended northwesterly from Duluth to the boundary, as has been discussed in the past. With such a connection the Grand Trunk Pacific would have a short route from Winnipeg via Duluth to Chicago, where it would connect with the parent Grand Trunk system.

GREAT DITCH ESTABLISHED

Thief River Drainage Proposition Will Cost About $70,000.

Forestal, of St. Paul, Will Have Two Big Dredges At Work Very Soon.

Engineer Geo. A. Ralph returned last week from Warren, where last week State Ditch No. 83 was established.

This is one of the most important drainage propositions undertaken by the state and includes a plan to deepen and straighten out Thief River and thus drain the entire Thief Lake country.

The work will cost approximately $70,000 and Contractor Forestal, of St. Paul, who was awarded the work, had the remarkably low bid of 7 cents per yard. It is all dredge work and the contractor will have the dirt flying within the course of two or three weeks, two big dredges being ready for the work.

The ditch will be 40 feet on the bottom and 60 feet on top, and ranges in depth correspondingly. The drainage canal will carry an immense volume of water and will drain thousands of acres of land.—Crookston Times.

Are Salve Makers.

Frank H. Day, chairman of the state democratic committee, private secretary to Governor John A. Johnson, campaign manager and politician, has organized a salve company. It is to sell real salve.

Mr. Day has long been recognized in Minnesota and the northwest as the Great Smoother. He has enacted brilliantly through many parlous and fretful periods the role of democratic axlegrease has applied in masterly fashion some never-failing emollient to various raw and tender spots, and has, in fact, so proved himself past master at the gentle art of making the wheels go round without audible creak, that upon more than one occasion political friends and foes alike have speculated upon the precise nature of this unparalled lubricant.

Today the market is out, for shortly the market will be flooded with the genuine Day slave, name on every box. It is called "Z-Mex-O," and it is to be handled at a price to place it within the grasp of every politician, however humble.

A $50,000 stock company has been formed in which Mr. Day is associated with several other men prominent in politics, but not so noted as salvers. One of them is John E. King, state librarian and last year manager of the democratic press bureau. J. A. Nowell of St. Paul, long a member of the democratic state committee, is another incorporator, while the chief financial backer is said to be Marcus Johnson of Red Lake Falls one of the most prominent republicans of western Minnesota. Additional incorporators are Anton Huhn, Minneapolis, and C. F. Rutherford and W. P. Curtiss, St. Paul.

Heavy Rains Beneficial to Log Drives.

The copious rains the past weeks, which were apparently of altogether too generous proportions, have been beneficial in one respect at least, that of swelling the small streams around the Red Lakes, where drives of logs have been "hung up" on account of the scarcity of water.

It is believed that enough rain has fallen to move at least one drive, that which is in the South Cormant River, in the Red Lake country.

There are some 30,000,000 feet of logs in this drive which are owned jointly by the Grand Forks, Thief River Falls and Crookston Lumber companies.

The logs have been, for the most part, lying high and dry on the banks of the stream. The logs will be driven down the Cormant to Lower Red Lake, towed across Red Lake by steamboats and driven down the Red River to Thief River Falls, Crookston and Grand Forks.

The remains of the young son of Editor and Mrs. Grothe of the Waubun Forum was brought through this city last Saturday enroute to Hendrum, the former home of the Grothe's, where it will be laid to its last rest. Besides the sorrowing parents, those who went down to attend the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thompson and Mr. Jacob Soustad, all of Waubun.

FATS WIN ANOTHER

Champion Fats Defeat the Traveling Salesmen By a 9 to 11 Score.

Game Was Close and Much Interest Was Manifested by Those Present.

As was predicted by the close observers of the national game, the Fats retained their champion record by "doing" the traveling salesmen, who make their headquarters in this city, to the tune of 11 to 9, at the fair grounds last Sunday. The game was a close one throughout and comparatively few errors were made by either side, except for a few low ones the fattest ones failed to connect with and a few other various errors, the game was a very interesting one all through and the old veterans of the national game did themselves proud by their good work on the diamond.

The gate and grand stand receipts amounted to some $27 which will go towards the benefit of the band.

Big Mill Has Cut Last Log.

At 5 o'clock last Wednesday afternoon blowing whistles on the sawmill and concerns at Scanlon, three miles from here, signaled the closing for good of the big sawmill of the Brooks-Scanlon Lumber company at that point.

About 150 men have been working at the mill, or about one-half the regular force. Many of these will be given employment at Virginia, where the Brook-Scanlon company has a mill, while others will seek employment elsewhere. The planing and yard crews will be maintained at Scanlon until the lumber on hand has been disposed of, then it is expected the planer will be moved out West.

For several months people have been leaving Scanlon in anticipation of the closing of the chief industry of the extinction of the town, many coming here and others going to the range and other points. Many of the buildings have been moved here. As soon as the planer ceases operations it is expected there will be a general exodus and that in a few months barely a handful of people will remain.—Duluth Herald.

The kicker on the farm is not so hard to get along with as the kicker in town. On the farm there is the kicking cow, and our long-eared friend, the mule, while in town there is the old mossback (although he may not be so old) who wants all the municipal improvements without paying for them. The cow may be sold for beef, the mule traded for an old shotgun, but only a funeral will remove the town kicker.—Ex.

HONEST ABE, U. S. M.

They Want All Kinds of Poetry Along His Route.

VERSES FOR HICKS FAMILY.

Comforts the Family of Farmer Green on the Loss of Their Baby. Grinds Out a Poem For a Would Be Suicide.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

I HAD not driven a mile on my route the other morning when I met Farmer George Hicks going the other way, and he called out to me:

"Abe, stop at the house when you get there. If you are to drive past and if you don't give that old poetry machine of yours a twist I'll never speak to you again."

I stopped to find that the stork or gander or gobbler or some other old bird had come and left a girl baby. The mother wasn't able to see me, but said that she must have at least two verses on the occasion and would show me the new arrival and record her thanks later on. I therefore sat down and dashed off the following and hurried on my way:

"ABE, IT'S THE MOST AFFECTING THING I EVER READ OR HEARD OF."

Good Farmer Hicks and his good wife
Have got another daughter,
Though they had three before she came,
And really hadn't orter.

But bless the kid, the little dear—
Aye, bless her to her toeses;
May she be happy all her life
And dwell among the roses.

I was told that there was sadness at Farmer Green's, and I found him at the gate with a solemn look on his face. As I greeted him he said:

"Abe, our baby was buried yesterday. You'll have to come in and give us some poetry. Ma wants something to frame and hang in the parlor."

I went in, and for twenty minutes I listened to the tales of Franky's smartness and the predictions of what he would have been had he lived on, and then I wrote:

The doctor said it measles was,
And that they had struck in,
And that our Franky must depart
To lands without a sin.

He died at 10 o'clock at night—
The winds did round us roar;
He spread his wings and flew away
To brighter, better shore.

It wasn't poetry to live forever, but just long enough to comfort and console for a year or two, and it was agreed by husband and wife that nothing could have taken the place of it.

There was something less sorrowful awaiting he at Farmer Snow's. In a fence corner just beyond the house I found Jim Davis, his hired man, and he stopped me to ask:

About to Commit Suicide.

"Abe, are you willing to save me from a suicide's grave?"

"Perfectly willing, Jim."

"Mebbe you know that for the last year I've been in love with Sarah Stone?"

"I suspected it."

"Well, I don't know whether she loves me or not, but I think she does. I want something to sort o' break her down and make her confess it. What's an ode, Abe?"

"A yard and a half of poetry praising some girl."

"I thought it was, and I want one. I must either have it or commit suicide."

Under the circumstances I had to beat Uncle Sam out of twenty minutes' time and grind out the following:

Her hair is blond, her eyes are blue,
Her lips are cherry red,
Her teeth are white as driven snow,
And none as yet have shed.

She moves around like a gazelle,
Her voice is like a song;
Her feet are solid under her,
And not so very long.

The sun is kissing of her cheeks,
The moon is does delight
In shining on her Grecian chin
On almost ev'ry night.

Oh, maiden fair, my heart it beats
For thee, ar ' thee alone;
Be mine—be n e, I thee implore,
My angel, Sa h Stone.

The turtledoves will coo for us—
We'll have our shady bower;
No thunderstorms will ever come
To turn sweet milk to sour.

When I had finished the above and read it to Jim I found tears in his eyes, and as soon as he could control his voice he grasped my hand and said:

"Abe, it's the most affecting thing I ever read or heard of. If that don't melt Sarah's heart and cause her to promise to be mine then she isn't the sorter gal to be my wife. Say, I can't thank you enough. I feel that I can never reward you as you deserve. By thunder, if you don't go to heaven when you die none of us ever will!"

I got down to Henry Jed's place just in time to witness a marriage and be hauled in to lunch with the guests. After the ceremony I tried to make a sneak, but it was no go. I had to come to time with a poem and be told that Shakespeare hadn't the ghost of show with me in the county.

Mr. Jason Morgan and Miss Debora Jed,
They stood before the preacher and most properly were wed;
And when they had been hitched for life the preacher he did say
That 'twas about the slickest job he'd done for many a day.

A few remarks he'd like to make, and he sought Jason's eye,
And told him he must hustle now and make the soil to fly;
The more he sang and whistled the better he would work,
And the harder he did labor, why, the more the beans and pork.

He gave him kindly warning to stick to good root beer,
With a barrel of hard cider to finish out the year;
To run in debt as little as farmer ever could
And pay the same tomorrow in good dry maple wood.

He said to keep on courting the gal he'd made his wife,
And thus prevent the quarrels that enter into life;
To kiss her every morning, and often through the day,
And let her see that Cupid was leading of the way.

To never mind if trials came, but face 'em bold and brave,
And not to spend his hard earned cash when possible to save;
To be honest to his fellow men, and to obey the law,
And to his many children be a loved and honored paw.

And to the bride, whom he had kissed, he had a word to say—
'Twas just a word, most kindly said, in his most kindly way;
But let us hope it was enough, and she will e'er beware
And do no walking in the path that's set with tempting snare.

Debora, dear, the petticoat was made for female wear,
And in its place is all O. K. for fairest of the fair,
But when the breeches you'd put on and seek to be the It,
Then things will go to Texas, oh, and happiness will flit.

Quick Diagnosis.

"Ah! How marvelous it is to sit and muse in the twilight," sighs the poet, resting his cheek upon his hand and gazing raptly into the gathering dusk. "Here, far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife, I hear the mystic undertones of the music of creation. To my ears there comes the shrilling of the fairy horns, the trumpet call of the legions of the marching night, the fifing of the armies of the breeze and"—

"Lucius!" calls his aunt. "You'd better come in off that grass on to the screened porch. I hear the skeeters buzzin' like mad."—Chicago Post.

Heard Something.

One summer evening a miller was leaning over his garden gate, facing the road, enjoying his pipe, when a conceited young farmer happened to be passing. The miller in a friendly tone said:

"Good evening, George."

"I didn't speak," said George gruffly.

"Oh," said the miller. "I thought you did, but it must have been your ears flapping."—Chattanooga Times.

A Helpful Plan.

"Why do you always say that you appreciate classical music when you know you don't care a rap for it?" we ask of our friend.

"Because," he answers, "when they ask me if I appreciate it and I say I do that ends the discussion. Otherwise they bore me to death with efforts to educate me up to an appreciation of the stuff."—New York Life.

Explaining Mixup.

"How did the accident happen?" asked the policeman. "Did that motor car scare the horse?"

"No," said the innocent bystander, who was nursing his elbow. "The horse scared the man who was learning to drive the car."—Detroit Free Press.

Not So Strange.

"That blind man is a stubborn mug."

"How's that?"

"I tried for an hour to convince him that despite his affliction the world still had many beauties for him, but I couldn't make him see them."—Houston Post.

Disadvantage.

"Don't you realize that you are financially handicapped by bad roads?"

"Of course we realize it," answered Farmer Corntossel. "No automobilist dares travel fast enough to give us an excuse for collectin' a fine."—Washington Star.

Skinny's Anti-climactic Swipe.

The score was 1 to 0, and the Stars had two men out.
It looked as if the finish no longer was in doubt,
For it was Skinny Lindsay who came up then to bat,
And the Comets felt complacent; there was no doubt of that.

Then Spider Watson, pitching, uncoiled his awkward length,
He sent the balls in whizzing with most uncommon strength,
And Skinny stood there watching, with a set, determined face
That showed his one ambition was to circle to third base.

But Spider kept on working till the record stood three-two
And Skinny set his teeth until his compressed lips were blue.
Then the ball came wiggling toward him, and Skinny swooped and missed,
And the Comets chalked another mark upon their victory list.
—Somerville Journal.

HE B'LIEVED IN HIMSELF.

FOLKS down in Sleepytown said he was a crank—
Jim Jones was—an' the fellers in the bank
Laffed when he passed, an' the clerks in Miller's store
Looked down on Jonesy when he walked by the door.
Home folks even didn't s'pose him extry bright;
Dad sort o' snickered, Brother Joe made light
O' Jim's ambitions, an' they didn't b'lieve in him,
But Jim—
He b'lieved in himself.

Jim left the village when he turned twenty-one
For the county seat town, where he hustled an' done
Jobs aroun' the courthouse, a-workin' for his keep,
An' read them books that are bound in yaller sheep—
Jim Jones did—an' he studied day an' night.
Lawyers laffed a little, an' they didn't count him bright,
An' folks aroun' town didn't b'lieve in him,
But Jim—
He b'lieved in himself.

Hung out his shingle when he turned twenty-three.
Lawyer Jenkins laffed with a he-he-he!
Jedge Smith smiled when the long legged yap
Tried his first case an' got ketched in a trap,
For he didn't know much o' the tricks o' the trade,
An' the shysters agin him, they throwed him in the shade.
But he b'lieved in law, this gangling' legal limb,
An' Jim—
He b'lieved in himself.

Went to the city when he turned twenty-eight.
Practiced a year or so an' got on the slate
For circuit attorney, an' still folks said:
"Ain't nothin' to him. Got wheels in his head."
Still Jim wuz elected, an', gee, how he fit
The ring an' the gang with his bulldog grit!
An' folks in the city, they b'lieved in him,
An' Jim—
He b'lieved in himself.

Folks down in the Sleepytown, dressed up to kill—
Sunday-go-to-meetin's on—Sam, Joe an' Bill,
Dad an' the gals an' his ma an' me
Traipse to the capitol now for to see
Gove'nor Jones—Jim Jones, the yap
That we didn't b'lieve in when he was a chap.
But Jim—
He b'lieved in himself.

Fish Stories.

"Well," says the neighbor to the east, "I see that the Perkinses are home from their summer trip. Now we'll get the usual lot of fish stories."

"Do they all go fishing?" asks the neighbor to the west.

"He does. He will tell about the big ones that he almost caught, his wife will tell about the bridge prizes she almost won and the girls will tell about the young millionaires that almost proposed to them."—Los Angeles Times.

Her Answer.

Once upon a time a child who was asked upon an examination paper to define a mountain range replied, "A large sized cook stove." The same method of reasoning seems to go with older growth. A recent examination paper at the Sheffield Scientific school at Yale contained the question, "What is the office of the gastric juice?" And the answer on one paper said, "The stomach."

Just the Man.

Mr. Crow—A member of the yacht club, eh? What do you do?

Mr. Pelican—Bail out the boat in rough weather.—Baltimore American.

Mrs. Hiram—Waal, Hiram, I don't see no joke about a clock fact'ry workin' extry hours sech weather es this.—Boston Herald.

A Trick of His Trade.

"The corpulent man you see over there on the corner has had a great many stirring experiences."

"You don't say so! How did that happen?"

"For a number of years he was the soup cook for a big hotel."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Playing Safe.

"So you don't guide hunting parties any more?"

"Nope," said the guide. "Got tired of being mistook for a deer."

"How do you earn a living now?"

"Guide fishin' parties. So fer nobody ain't mistook me for a fish."—Kansas City Journal.

Practice Sermon.

Bella—I haven't decided between the merits of a monoplane and biplane wing effect.—New York Sun.

TIME OF THE NATION.

How It Is Kept at the Naval Observatory In Washington.

THE SIGNAL FOR HIGH NOON.

It Is Flashed Out Over Nearly a Million Miles of Telegraph Wires Every Day In the Year—The Finely Adjusted Instruments That Are Used.

A few minutes before 12 o'clock noon every day in the year a young man walks into a certain room of the main building at the naval observatory, which is set up on a hill in the northwestern part of the District of Columbia. He glances at the various clocks in the room and then goes over to a table which is covered with electric apparatus.

He watches the clocks to his left closely and waits for the hands to reach 11:55. As the second hand approaches the 60 on the dial he prepares to shift a switch. The clock is so finely adjusted that when the second hand points to 60 it exactly marks the beginning of a new minute.

As it touches the 60 the switches are thrown on. That starts a signal that goes out instantaneously over 900,000 miles of telegraph lines. In Washington, New York, Buffalo, Cleveland, Newport, Baltimore, Newport News, Norfolk, Savannah, New Orleans, Key West, Galveston, Chicago and elsewhere the time balls go up on their poles. People know that it is five minutes to noon, Washington time.

The clock which keeps the time in the observatory ticks on. With each tick there is a contact of electric points. A circuit is closed, and an instrument on the table similar in appearance to a telegraph sounder ticks away loudly.

It goes on to the twenty-ninth second, then skips one tick, then resumes its steady sounding until the last five seconds; then there is another gap. These gaps are for the purpose of giving listeners at the other ends of the great system of wires a chance to know what part of the minute the clock is on. So it goes up to the last minute.

At the twenty-ninth second there is again the skipping of one second. Finally the clock gets around to the fiftieth second. Then the circuit remains open for ten seconds. There is silence all along the telegraph wires.

At the other end, where there are time balls or merely train operators, the long pause indicates that noon is almost there. The second hand makes on toward 60 and finally reaches the mark. Then there is another click; in about a second the sounder is down, and that tells hundreds of thousands of people that it is noon in Washington.

It is a wonderful operation, this getting the time, and highly technical. Finely adjusted clocks, chronographs and other instruments of great value are used, and the taking and recording of the time have reached a point where the human equation is practically eliminated.

The results obtained are of great value, particularly to mariners. The time is not only flashed to hundreds of points in the United States, but it is sent far out to sea by wireless. A cable carries the flash to Havana; another to Panama and Callao, Peru.

The observatory here does not send the time much farther west than the Rockies, but they have an observatory at the Mare Island navy yard, and from there the time is sent up and down the Pacific coast, just as it is from here to the eastern part of the United States. In the cities where the central time is used the flash marks 11 o'clock. An hour later local operators drop the time balls.

The mean time is determined by astronomical observations. When certain stars pass the seventy-fifth meridian, called the meridian of Washington, it is a certain time. The operator watches for the stars through a telescope, the field of which is covered with fine wires.

As the stars reach a certain point in transit the operator presses a key in his hand. A contact is made and recorded on a chronograph. The chronograph consists of a cylinder covered with paper. A fountain pen rests on the paper. It is held by an arm attached to the mechanism. The cylinder revolves once a minute, and the pen moves along the surface of the paper, making a spiral line.

A sidereal clock of the finest make is running in a vault underneath the observatory. With each tick of the clock there is a contact of two points. These two points are attached to wires that lead to an electro-magnet attached to the arm that holds the pen of the chronograph. The clock is so adjusted that each minute the pen jumps to one side. Consequently there is a break in the line.

There are other breaks, too, when the observer watches the stars cross the lines in the field of the telescope. The mean time thus recorded for each star, after being corrected for errors, is the clock time of the star's transit. Whatever difference there is between the clock time and the sidereal time marked by the transit of the stars is the error of the clock. From these astronomical observations the sidereal time is obtained. The error amounts to but little, rarely being more than from five one-hundredths to ten one-hundredths of a second.

The time of sending a flash over the wires is practically nothing. A flash has reached Greenwich, England, in three-tenths of a second.—Washington Cor. Chicago Inter Ocean.

HOWELL PLANER AND MATCHER

You no doubt find it a hard matter to sell your rough lumber to advantage because most of your customers want it finished. Furthermore you can get twice as much for your lumber by planing it, making it up into flouring, drop siding, window casing and mouldings, for which there is an unlimited demand at big prices. The Howell Planer and Matcher does all this work to perfection.

You can also make big money by working up all your slabs and waste material into Lath and Shingles. All you need for this purpose is our Lath Mill and Shingle Machine. We build the best and most up-to-date machines of this kind on the market which we can furnish you at manufacturers prices. Keep your plant running all the time. Remember we build complete Saw Mill Plants from top to bottom, all of our own manufacture. Our new Catalog It is just now out. If you have not received it, write to-day. Manufactured by

IV.—The Shrewd Dry Goods Man

HERE is the dry goods man who sought
The furniture dealer's store and bought
Some chairs and things he had wanted to buy
Since a catchy ad. had captured his eye,
And he paid for them with the very bill
That had come to him from the butcher's till
After the grocer had his settlement made
With the money the honest workman paid.

P.S.—The local dealer who's up to snuff
Will always advertise his stuff.

A WISE DEDUCTION.

By F. A. MITCHEL.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

There lived in Asia Minor a man named Kalaidjien, a great philosopher, who spent years in hunting for the source of evil. At last he settled down to the conclusion that all the trouble in the world came from woman's vanity. Kalaidjien about the time he made this discovery was presented by his wife with a daughter. He gave orders that the child should be brought up with a limited number of companions and attendants, none of whom should ever refer to her personal appearance and on no account should she ever be allowed to look upon her face in a mirror.

Moira—that was the child's name—grew up to be a very beautiful woman. By and by a young man came courting her, or rather asked for her from her father. To the request the latter replied:

"Years of study, Tatlos"—that was the suitor's name—"have convinced me that the source of evil is in woman's vanity. For that reason I have guarded my daughter that this fiendish spirit should not be permitted to enter into her. No one has ever told her that she is beautiful, nor has she ever seen her face reflected. She shall be your wife on your promise to carry out this policy which I have begun."

The lover consented, and the couple were married. The bride's mother at the time of the wedding secretly presented her daughter with a mirror; but, hoping to avert the consequences against which Kalaidjien had so long guarded, she told Moira that whenever she looked into it she would see her mother's face as it would appear in heaven. Shortly after the wedding the mother died, and the daughter found the mirror an inestimable treasure. The mother, in order to insure the secret of its possession being kept, had told her that if she revealed it she (the mother) would grow old and ugly in heaven and be cast out into hell. Moira, greatly dreading such a consequence, carefully hid the mirror in a secret drawer in her cabinet, only opened by a key which she kept on her person. Once a month her husband was obliged to go to a distant city on business, and then Moira would take out her mirror and reverently feast her eyes upon her mother in paradise.

Meanwhile Tatlos kept up the surveillance over his wife that her father had instituted. In western countries this would have been impossible, but not so in the east, where every man is master of his own household. Under the influence of a beautiful face which looked out at her from the mirror affectionately Moira every year grew spiritually more and more beautiful, though physically she passed her prime, like other women, and her physical beauty began to wane. But she saw only in her reflected face the spiritual and did not recognize the decay of the physical.

When Tatlos was about to go on one of his journeys he decided to take his wife with him. Moira, fearing for the safety of her treasure, locked it in a box and, taking it to a temple, gave it in charge of a priest to keep till her return. It happened that Tatlos saw her go out and, being suspicious, followed her and watched her carry the box into the temple. He said nothing at the time, but brooded over the secret which his wife had apart from him and on her return to his home went to the temple and demanded the box. The priest would give it to no one but her who had left it, so Tatlos demanded that she go to the temple and open the box before him.

Moira was in agony that her mother could look at her no longer and, becoming ugly, would be cast out of heaven. She told her husband her secret and, as he was unmovable, went with him to the temple and gave him the box with the key, and, opening it, he took out the mirror. Knowing that all the care he had for many years exercised had been aborted, he was in great anger.

"Woman," he said, "you have been looking at your own face. When you first saw it it was young and beautiful. Now it is old and faded. Look, undeceived by your fancy, and see that what I tell you is true!"

Moira, convinced that she was looking at her own reflection, ceased to see in it a spiritual beauty, viewing only the image of an old woman. Angered with her husband that he should have spoiled the charm, she cursed him.

At this point the priest said to the husband:

"Oh, Tatlos, you have been acting on the assumption that evil has its source in the vanity of woman. Look rather within thyself. Believing that her good mother looked down upon her from heaven, your wife has been kept pure in the contemplation of her own image. It is the use made of beauty, not beauty itself, that brings good or evil and man's mastery of it, for man's selfish desires must always bring evil. You have destroyed a source of good within your wife, and she has cursed you."

The husband, seeing what he had done, bowed his head and begged forgiveness of his wife. She forgave him through the influence of her past contemplation of the good as seen through the beautiful. But the spell had been broken. The wife, no longer sustained by the mother who had so long looked at her from heaven, at times gave way to the peevishness of age, and her husband saw that the inestimable treasure he had thrown away was not to be recovered. Yet from that time under the influence of a new philosophy he was a better man.

But it was he who bore the burden of being amiable instead of his wife.

A MATTER OF CONSCIENCE.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

Deacon Uriah Hart of the village of Poolsville was an ex-deacon, as a matter of fact, but the title still clung to him. It was the same with Deacon Abraham Noble. For ten years there was a neighborly and a brotherly feeling between these two men. Then came a rupture. They traded horses, and each felt that the other had taken advantage of him. There was no scandal over it, but the two men were cool to each other and had nothing to explain, even to their wives. The minister of their church sought to smooth over matters, but found them noncommittal.

At the end of the year Deacon Hart rose up in prayer meeting one night and said that, while he had tried his best to be a good man, he had made a slip or two in his life. One of those slips rested hard on his conscience and he would ask forgiveness. He was about to make a statement when a big piece of plaster fell from the ceiling and struck him on the head, and his injuries were such that he was in bed for a fortnight.

He had been out of bed and walking around for a month when he and Deacon Noble met on the bridge. They were about to pass with a nod when the latter deacon stopped and said:

"Uriah, I don't feel right in my mind. It isn't about that horse trade, but something else. I think of it and can't sleep nights. I'm going to own up and ask you"—

But he didn't own up. Just then a farmer's runaway team came along, and they had to jump into the creek to get out of the way. They both crawled out sopping wet and went home, and after they had got dried out conscience didn't seem to prick quite so hard. Then Deacon Hart wounded himself in the leg with a pitchfork, and after a day or two symptoms of blood poisoning set in. He feared that his days were numbered, and he sent for Deacon Noble and said:

"Abraham, I may die of this, and I want to leave my house in order. My conscience is pricking me about a certain thing in connection with you, and I want to get it off my mind."

"That's right, Uriah," urged the other. "No one ought to go to the grave with anything on his mind. I'm ready to hear your confession."

But no confession was made. The doctor came in just then to examine and dress the wound, and he said he was glad to inform Deacon Hope that the bad symptoms had disappeared and that the leg would now do nicely. These words had a wonderful effect on conscience, and the deacon shut his lips and waited for some other time. That time didn't come for a year or more. Then Deacon Noble's wife was taken ill with typhoid fever. When the crisis approached and the doctor said the chances were all against her the husband broke down. He was out under an apple tree, and when Deacon Hart came along and began to express his sympathy Deacon Noble decided to relieve his conscience.

But he didn't relieve it. The doctor came to the door and beckoned to him and whispered that he believed the crisis was passed. It was such good news that Deacon Noble wouldn't have confessed anything for a hundred dollars. His wife convalesced, and time ran along until the biannual camp meeting opened. Both deacons were particularly strong on camp meetings. They were there and enthusiastic. On the third day of the camping the spirits of all were aroused by the words of a visiting minister, and at length Deacon Hart got up and said that he could stand it no longer. He was admonished to make a full confession, but before he could start out Deacon Noble, who was laboring under nervous excitement, arose and said that he had a burden on his conscience that he was determined to get rid of.

Something might have come of the two confessions then and there but for some loafers who had planned to break up the meeting. They let a lot of bees loose on the people and created a diversion lasting an hour, and when it was over it was found that both deacons had been stung so many times that any matters of conscience had been adjourned to a more propitious occasion. That occasion came just a year later. There was a flood in the river, and both deacons turned out to help the sawmill man save his property. They were engaged in this neighborly task when both found themselves seated on the same log and being whirled downstream. It was then that Deacon Hart said:

"Abraham, we are in danger."

"We are, Uriah."

"We may never see home again."

"I'm afraid we won't."

"Then I'll make that confession to you, and you make yours to me."

"Yes; the time has surely come."

"Abraham, we traded horses. I thought you cheated me."

"Just what I thought of you, Uriah."

"I didn't say anything about it, but to get even with you I sneaked into your barn one night and cut off your cow's tail. Can you, will you, forgive a repentant man?"

"With all my heart, Uriah. I thought you had beat me in that horse trade, and one night I sneaked over into your pasture and knocked the horns off your bull. Shake! Neither one of us has a durned thing on his conscience, and this saw log is driving right ashore, and we shall be saved as sure as shooting."

Will Be Here Saturday.

"The Texas Cattle King" which comes to the Evenson Opera House on Saturday evening, August 21, is one of the most beautiful and interesting comedy dramas now before the public, full of pathos, mirth and interesting situations. The scene of the play is laid in the Lone Star State—the home of chivalry—and portrays in a faithful manner life on the plains as it really is. The company is composed of excellent players selected with care from best theatres in the east, and patrons of the Opera House are assured of a rare treat on the appearance of the play.

COURT HOUSE IS TIED UP

County Commissioners Cannot Build a Court House With Ditch Funds.

The Friendly Lawsuit Did Not Turn Out as Well As Expected.

The order to show cause why the county commissioners should not be enjoined from letting a contract or creating any indebtedness for the construction of a court house at Red Lake Falls was returnable before Judge William Watts at Crookston last Thursday; Fred L. Farley appearing for the plaintiff, P. B. Gaass, and F. A. Grady for the county commissioners. This suit was brought in the interest of Red Lake Falls with the idea on the part of both the plaintiff and defendants that the defendants should be discharged which would have the effect, as they thought, of an adjudication so as to render it impossible to institute other proceedings to stop our county board from letting a contract for the proposed court house and that Gaass and Farley were acting as stool pigeons.

This plan did not work out as expected for when the time for hearing came Ex-Attorney General Young and Attorney G. Halvorson appeared for the taxpayers of the county and on motion obtained the leave to file a complaint in intervention and in this way the case had to be tried on its merits and even though the complaint was evidently drawn so imperfectly as to make it subject to a demurrer yet Judge Watts held that the complaint was good which was another disappointment to both plaintiff and defendants.

The intervenor contended that the county board could not legally take ditch funds to build a court house with and this contention was upheld by the court. One peculiar fact came to light at that time which was, that on July 20th, 1809, the county board transferred $35,000.00 from the ditch fund to the general revenue fund for court house purposes and it now appears that on July 31st there was but $32,737.65 in the general fund so that even if the general revenue fund was entirely empty at the time of this unlawful transfer, the board has used $2,262.35 for unauthorized purposes during the ten days between dates mentioned and at this rate it will not take long to use up this whole amount without building a court house. The contractors who are figuring on this proposed court house have been given to understand that the plans call for a court house to cost not less than $55,000 and that the contract will be let for only a part of it this fall and the balance will be built when the board has a chance to transfer some more funds, unobserved.

The News has been informed on good authority that Red Lake Falls last Saturday sent an emmissary to Judge Watts to get permission, notwithstanding the injunction which Judge Watts issued restraining the board from letting a contract to build or contracting any indebtedness for court house purposes, to build the foundation for the court house this fall but there was nothing doing, hence Duffy, Grady, et. al., are wearing sackcloth and ashes. There seems to be no limit to which Red Lake Falls votaries will not go, regardless of law, the best interest of the county or taxpayers.

Brings a Suit.

Henry W. Lee, the former Thief River Falls attorney, but now located at Schonomish, Wash., has commenced a suit against the estate of the late Patrick Meehan, of Milwaukee, for $2,000. Mr. Lee was for a number of years attorney for Mr. Meehan and his action is to recover for past services and also on a promise Mr. Lee claims that Mr. Meehan had made to leave him $1,000 upon his death.

DEATH DUE TO BURNS

Mrs. Peter Forsberg Died Sunday Morning as a Result of Burns Sustained Saturday.

Deceased Was for a Number of Years a Resident of Thief River Falls.

Mrs. Peter Forsberg, a former resident of Thief River Falls and a sister of Mrs. John Forsberg, of this city, died Sunday morning at about 10 o'clock as a result of severe burns she sustained on Saturday evening at about 11 o'clock. She was building a fire and poured kerosene oil upon the blaze, and the oil can exploded, setting fire to her clothing. She was badly burned and suffered a great deal the few hours she lived.

Deceased was for a few years a resident of Thief River Falls, removing to Warren with her husband four years ago. Besides her husband she leaves two children, one five years of age and the other one and one-half years old.

The funeral services were held on Monday afternoon and were largely attended by the friends of the deceased.

Potato Prices Down.

The price of potatoes down in Anoka, Sherburne, Mille Lacs, Isanti and Kennebec counties which are in the potato belt of this state have fallen from 50 cents a bushel to 25 cents, and this all within a week. As a result business is at a standstill down there and the farmers are refusing to market their potatoes. It appears that the potato crop is a good one everywhere and it is doubtful if the prices are very high this fall.

Lost Over $200.

Mrs. Peter J. Keeley, wife of the well known Soo Line passenger conductor, lost a handbag Tuesday forenoon containing over $200 in money. Mrs. Keeley had been at John Aos' store where she had made some purchases, and there placed the handbag containing the money in a baby carriage. When she arrived at the Vienna Bakery the handbag could not be found and evidently had been lost on the way. She at once returned but could find no trace of the lost parcel.

A reward of $25 is offered to the person returning same to the owner.

BOWSER'S UNCLE JOHN

Stranger Telephones, Claims Relationship and Other Things.

SAYS HE WILL VISIT SAMUEL.

Proves Himself a Fraud, Tries to Obtain Money and Is Kicked Into the Street and Told to Go His Way. Mrs. B. Looking For Praise.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

THE Bowsers were sitting on the front steps to take the evening air when the telephone rang in a peremptory way, and Mr. Bowser went in to answer it and was greeted with—

"Hello—is that you, Sammy?"

"What do you want, sir!" was demanded.

"I want Bowser—Sammy Bowser. Is that him at the phone?"

"Sir, I am Mr. Bowser."

"Glad of it. Howdy, Sammy?"

"If you do not address me more respectfully I shall shut you off."

"Come now, Sammy, don't get hot under the collar. Let your Uncle John have his little joke."

"What do you mean?"

"I'm your Uncle John, one of your mother's brothers. I live in Wisconsin, but am here on business. You have probably forgotten me, but I've kept track of you through the papers. Been going to write you a hundred different times, but have always put it off. Meant to have got over this evening and surprised you, but will drop in tomorrow evening in time for dinner. Haven't seen you since the day you were married. How's the wife?"

"Do you mean that you are one of my uncles?" asked Mr. Bowser.

"Cert, my boy. It don't flatter me that you can't remember your Uncle John, though I never saw you often in the long ago. How do the rest of our tribe come on?"

Mr. Bowser couldn't remember on his life if he had ever had an Uncle John, but concluded to take the chances, and the man at the other end of the wire was told that he would be made welcome. Of course Mrs. Bowser wanted to know all about it when the talk was closed, and when the particulars had been related she mused for awhile and then said:

"HE WAS A SLICK, OILY, GABBY MAN."

"Seems to me that you ought to remember if your mother had a brother named John."

"But she had half a dozen brothers, and it's twenty years since I saw any of 'em. I believe one or two did go west."

"How did he open the conversation?"

"By calling me Sammy. He wouldn't have done that unless he was a relative. He'll be over tomorrow evening, and we can see what sort of a man he is."

"I should be on my guard if I were you."

"On my guard about what?"

"He may not be your Uncle John at all. He may take that way to borrow money of you. You know that there are all sorts of slick games being worked."

"Woman, do you wish to insult me?" exclaimed Mr. Bowser. "Am I such a fool that a stranger can pass himself off as my uncle?"

"But you have been taken in and done for so many times, you know."

"What! What! I have been taken in and done for—I, Bowser! When? Where? How? I deny that I have ever been a victim to anybody. Produce your proofs or stand convicted!"

"Well, let us hope that this man will turn out all right," she said, realizing that she had gone too far on the other tack.

"Of course he will turn out all right. How can he turn out any other way? That's just like you—suspicious of everybody. I don't believe you fully trust your own mother. I'd like to find one man in this world that you wouldn't put down as a double dyed scoundrel."

Arrival of Uncle John.

Mrs. Bowser said no more, though she had thoughts, and after a few minutes Mr. Bowser got over his choler and began remembering about all his relations. It was agreed that a nice dinner should be prepared for Uncle John and that he should be invited to pass two or three days with them.

At 4 o'clock the next afternoon, two hours before Mr. Bowser was expected home, Uncle John rang the bell. He was a man of forty. He was a slick, oily, gabby man. He wore loud clothes, and there was an aroma of horse about him.

"And this must be Sammy's wife?" he said as he was admitted. "Well, well. The last time I saw you you were a girl bride. I remember how it rained that morning and how Sammy was half an hour late."

(Mental memo, made by Mrs. Bowser: She was married in the evening, and it didn't rain at all.)

"After talking with Sammy over the wire last night," continued the uncle, "I tried to figure out what his age must be. I make it about fifty-eight. How does he bear his age?"

(Another memo.: He had the age nine years too much.)

Mrs. Bowser distrusted the man on sight, but as he was Mr. Bowser's Uncle John she did her best to entertain him. In his conversation he made slip after slip, until she had no less than ten recorded against him, but she gave him plenty of rope. He informed her that he was a dealer in horses and related many particulars of his career and family. In all the conversation he did not mention his name. He simply referred to himself as Uncle John.

Mr. Bowser came home full of curiosity, and there was a great shaking of hands. Uncle John was accepted at once. He slapped Sammy on the back, and Sammy slapped him. He related many things that Sammy had done when a youth which the doer couldn't recall, but didn't dispute. At the dinner table Mrs. Bowser plumply asked for his name. He halted and hesitated and finally gave it as Burt. Mr. Bowser was laughing and didn't catch on. His mother's name was Stevens. If Uncle John was her brother his name should be Stevens too. It was now plain to Mrs. Bowser that the fellow was a fraud, but she made no change in her demeanor.

Dinner over, the two men sat down to smoke their cigars, while she saw to the clearing up. An hour later, as she was ready to sit down and help entertain the relative, she heard a few words that sent her upstairs instead. Fifteen minutes later Mr. Bowser came up. He had $100 in cash in his dresser and he was after the money. She looked at him inquiringly, and he said:

"Uncle John has a snap on hand and if I put this hundred in I double it in three days."

"How kind of your uncle! Are you sure of the relationship?"

"Am I sure that I'm alive?"

Questioned and Led to Door.

"Your mother's maiden name was Stevens. This man's name is Burt. How could they be brother and sister. The snap he has on hand is to snap your hundred. Go down and ask him what your father's first name was. You never had a brother Ben, but ask this man if he ever knew a Ben Bowser. I'm telling you straight, Mr. Bowser, he's a sharper."

For once in his life Mr. Bowser took advice. He went down and carelessly asked about brother Ben, and the caller laughed and replied:

"Oh, yes, I remember your brother Ben well. Nice boy, Ben was. Give him my regards when you write him."

"And my sister Kitty." (He never had one.)

"Ah, Kitty was the beauty of the Bowser family. Sweetest girl I ever saw. I trust she married well?"

"Very well, indeed. Uncle John, I give you two minutes to get outside my gate!"

"Why, Sammy Bowser!"

Sammy took him by the neck and led him to the door and put a shoe against him, and the "uncle" went without a word. Mrs. Bowser felt that she deserved a word of praise for her share, but when she said so Mr. Bowser turned on her with:

"Why, I spotted that fellow over the telephone last night and was just drawing him on! I can't see where you come into this thing at all!"

HOOKING ALLIGATORS.

A Florida Sport With an Element of Uncertainty In It.

"Hunting alligators at night with a bullseye lantern and shotgun is tame sport compared with what is called a gator hunt in Florida," said an old Floridian who is visiting New York. "I mean the feat of capturing an alligator alive and then towing the fellow to high ground through mud and water from what is called in Florida a gator hole.

"The gator fishermen first find the hole, which is indicated by an opening in the surrounding grass in the midst of a dense growth of vegetation, where the ground is worn smooth by the alligator in his pulls in and out. Sometimes these gator holes are in the nature of a cave in the bank of a stream and may be fifteen or twenty feet deep, and if so it is not an easy matter to get the animal out.

"The fisher is supplied with a long pole with a metal hook on the end. He takes a strong rope and throws it about the entrance of the hole. Then the fisher rams with the hooked pole down the den and waits and listens. If he finds a gator in the hole he teases the beast by poking him until the gator in a rage finally grabs the hooked pole and is pulled from the den. It is with uncertainty that he is dragged forth, for it is not known whether the catch is large or small. The fisher does not know whether to get into shape to run or to fight. Out the gator comes, bellowing and roaring mad.

"After the gator is dragged to the surface he in his rage turns and rolls and finally twists himself up in the rope or noose that has been previously prepared. With the assistance of the others in the party the gator's legs and mouth are tied and the gator is a prisoner.

"The gator is for the most part caught in marshes where the ground is soft and slushy and too wet for either horse or wagon to enter. The fishers are compelled to carry their catch to higher ground, there to be loaded into the waiting wagon, and the hunt is ended."—New York Sun.

UNCONSCIOUS WORRY.

Born of the Habit of Taking Things Too Seriously.

A great many people worry unconsciously, says O. S. Marden in Success Magazine. They don't understand why they are so tired in the morning, why their sleep was so disturbed and troubled.

This mental disturbance is often caused by the habit of taking things too seriously, carrying too great a weight of responsibility. Everywhere we see people who take life too seriously. Most of us are like the motorman who not only starts and stops the car and tries to keep from running over people, but also feels tremendous anxiety and responsibility about the motive power.

One of the most helpful lessons life can impart is that which shows us how to do our work as well as it can be done and then let principle take care of the result. How often have we been amazed to find things come out much better than we anticipated; to find that the great unseen power that governs our lives through a wilderness of trial and tribulation into the open has guided our life ship through the fogs of difficulties and of sorrow, through storms of hardships and losses, safely into port.

The pilot does not lose heart when he cannot see his way. He turns to that mysterious compass which sees as plainly in the fog and guides as faithfully in the tempests as when the sea is like glass. We are in touch with a power greater than any compass, greater than any pilot, a power that can extricate us from the most desperate situation.

Family Floriculture.

George Blank, the stage manager, is a lover of nature and a hater of overcoats and umbrellas. Recently during a violent rainstorm he called on his mother, entering her presence wringing wet.

"George," said she firmly, "you ought not to expose yourself in such weather. You will get pneumonia."

"But, mother," exclaimed George, with a theatrical wave of his hand, "why should I fear the rain? Does it not nurture the grass? Is it not life to the flowers?"

"It is a long time," said the good woman, closing a window, "since you were a flower."—Success Magazine.

Origin of the Word Academy.

Academus was a wealthy Greek of Athens who lived several hundred years before the birth of Christ. Among his possessions was a beautiful grove, where young men used to congregate and listen to the teachings of wise men, such as Plato and Socrates. This developed into the school of modern times, and these modern schools take their name "academy" from the old Greek, Academus. The real meaning of the word academy is a school for boys.

STRIKE SITUATION PUZZLING

More Than 150,000 Men and Women Involved in the Movement and City Is Threatened with Famine—Printers Leave Their Shops and Newspapers Are Published in Bulletin Form Only—Farmers Send Out Appeal for Help to Save Crops.

SWEDEN.

Events have been crowding fast one upon the other these days of turmoil and strike in Sweden's beautiful capital. Judging from the tone of the various dispatches the situation there at present is, to say the least, very problematical and the world is anxiously awaiting to see whether the whole thing can be settled amicably or not.

Many fear that it will end in much bloodshed. It takes a long time for the tranquil Swedish blood to be aroused, but once this is done, then watch out for trouble. More than 150,000 men and women are out on strike and the city at the present writing is almost without food. The light and water plants have been shut down. The garbage has not been hauled away for several days. The morgues are filled with bodies because there are no grave diggers. The city is threatened with famine and pestilence, even if there should be no open outbreak on the part of the strikers. The railway and telegraph employes threaten to quit. The trouble has reached such proportions as almost to threaten the existence of the present government. The situation is a surprise to the entire world.

The Swedish people are not ordinarily excitable or easily stirred to revolt, and therefore disorder approaching almost to revolution seems out of place in the country. It is apparent that the whole trouble started over wages and undoubtedly has been augmented by the activities of the anarchists, who have gained considerably headway in the Scandinavian countries recently. As stated before, the outside world will be very much surprised, however, if the difficulty is not settled without a serious conflict. It seems hard to believe that the Swedes will permit themselves to be carried away by the spirit of violence. It is to be hoped, and the world is confident that wiser counsel will prevail in order that the country may be spared the disgrace of an internal revolution.

Newspapers in the city of Stockholm are now publishing small bulletins and cannot, owing to the strike, publish any of their regular issues. These bulletins are published by so-called "cubs," as the printers have all joined the strikers. This is the second week of the strike and it shows no abatement, and the men already on strike continue to augment their forces by the addition of sympathizers in other trades. The Farmers' association has sent out an appeal to all classes to help them save the cereal crops, the harvesting of which is also prevented by the strike of the farm hands. The association supplemented this appeal by offering police protection to all persons assisting in the harvest. Street cars are running on time in the capital, and on all lines to Gothenburg, where the strikers have been replaced by strike breakers.

It is announced that a delegate of the Central Federation of Trade unions, named Tholin, will leave Stockholm shortly for the United States for the purpose of collecting contributions for the strike fund from Swedish-Americans. The latter would, however, do well to remain at home, for he would meet little sympathy from Swedish-Americans. They contributed liberally to the famine stricken people during the famine in northern Sweden in 1907, but it is very doubtful if they would consider it their duty to aid the strike fund in Stockholm.

Professor Oscar Bernadotte Bystrom, a member of the Music academy at Stockholm, died last month at his home in Stockholm, aged eighty-eight years. The well known veteran musician began his career in the Swedish army and was for a number of years captain of the Svea artillery regiment, from which position he resigned in 1871. Since that time he has devoted all his time to teaching and composing music and his name is linked with much of Sweden's sacred music of later years. He studied church music in London, Paris, Rome and Milan and in 1894 he published the "Svenka Messan."

Queen Victoria and her friends from Baden left for a few days' sojourn at Solliden the other day. The queen and her party will not return to Sweden until the latter part of September and may, owing to the present turmoil in Stockholm, delay the home journey indefinitely.

NORWAY.

A seventeen-year-old girl who has been attending the "Middelskole" in Trondhjem was arrested the other day for starting incendiary fires and for obtaining money under false pretenses. It appears that Miss Oline Staven was staying with an aged aunt while attending school last winter and spring and the understanding seemed to be that the young girl should inherit her aunt's fortune, which was a very considerable one from all accounts. During the early part of April, the girl confessed, she put fire to her aunt's home, in order to shield herself from a theft that she had committed in the house a few days previous. She reasoned that by putting fire to the house her aunt would never discover the fact that she had stolen money from her.

When she had successfully accomplished this she made out papers purporting to prove that she had inherited her aunt's fortune an also had forged her aunt's name on this self-manufactured will. At the same time her aunt died very suddenly and the young woman had no trouble in securing the money and property that her aunt had left her in the bogus will. When the authorities learned that the young woman had not informed any of her relatives that her aunt was dead they became suspicious and placed her under arrest. She at first confessed that she had set fire to the house, and upon being closely questioned she afterwards confessed that she had choked her aged aunt to death by covering her face with a pillow. This happened early one morning when her aunt was sitting on the side of her bed, feeling too weak to dress herself.

"Then," says the young woman, "I threw myself upon her and choked her with a pillow." The strange part of it is that the girl during this time was attending school, where she had a splendid record as a student and her deportment was the best.

It is feared that a Norwegian whaling and hunting vessel has been lost at Jan Main island in the Arctic ocean. It is known the boat was shut in ice several months ago. It was proposed to send a relief expedition, but nothing could be done on account of the ice. A message from Vardo says that the whaling steamer "Onward" made an attempt to pass through the ice a few days ago, but had to give up the trip. Some Samojeds were seen and they claimed to have seen a post with an inscription on it. This is supposed to mark the grave of a member of the lost crews. If this supposition is correct, the crews must have abandoned their ships and perished.

The English steamer "Gladys," which arrived in port in Fredrikstad the other day, brought the distressing news that it collided with a trawler near Doggers banks in the North sea while on route for Fredrikstad. The trawler was cut right in two and nine men, who were engaged in eating their dinner, went down beneath the waves, together with the wreckage. In spite of the most determined efforts to save the unfortunate ones, help came too late. The trawler sank with all on board before the crew on the "Gladys" could cast out as much as a line.

The hay crop in Jaderen and vicinity was very excellent this year and they will have plenty of fodder for their cattle up in that part of the country. This will be a great help to the farmers. In fact they almost depend on a hay crop altogether, as dairying is the chief industry there.

The Christiania Boat club was victorious in its contest in Gothenburg, Sweden, the other day. The Christiania club was royally entertained during its visit to the Swedish city and returned to Christiania full of praise for the generous-hearted Gothenburgians.

Terrific thunderstorms, accompanied by hail, caused much damage to the grains in the vicinity of Christiania a few days ago. In the northern section of the country there have also been some very severe weather, but no serious damage has been reported.

Bjornson is at present too weak to think of making the journey to Italy. He will spend the fall months at "Aulestad."

Christian Michelsen & Co. has purchased two new large ocean steamers, with an aggregate tonnage of 46,000.

DENMARK.

There is a unique proposition pending before the folketinget, viz., that the government support all the orphans of the kingdom. Whether this will tend to lessen the number of illegitimate children in the country is of course an open question. The proposition, if framed into a bill, will undoubtedly meet with vigorous opposition, when it is presented for its final passage if, indeed, it will ever come to that.

Rudolph Tegner has made a statue of the late Dr. Finsen, the inventor of the light cure for skin diseases, and a bronze copy of it will be put up at the entrance to Falled park, Copenhagen.

Professor Leopold Rosenfeld, the celebrated composer, is dead. He was stricken by paralysis and died almost instantly on his fifty-ninth birthday, which occurred July 19.

Editor Heinemann has been sentenced to four months' imprisonment for lese majeste. The Copenhagen editor has already begun his term in prison.

The population of Copenhagen is at present estimated to be at least 448,800. The increase in population during the last year amounted to about 2,700.

Mylius Erichsen's old ship, "Denmark," has been sold to a copper mining company in Greenland and will be stationed there as a depot ship.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

After locking their two children in a bedroom and fastening all the doors of their flat so that the neighbors could not enter in a hurry Antonio Spizzirri and his wife went into the darkened parlor of their home at Chicago and tried to kill each other. The woman was shot twice and stabbed twice with a stiletto and died before the police arrived. The husband was shot twice also and probably will die.

Mrs. Marie Handzel committed suicide at Chicago and at the same time asphyxiated her three boy babies. Mrs. Handzel had been ill for some time and apparently was able to get no relief and that is thought to be her only reason for her act. She leaves four other children ranging in age from six to sixteen.

Ascertaining after eight years of married life that his wife was a colored woman Alfred Haberman, a white man, returned to Columbus, O., after a visit to Washington, D. C., and shot her twice. He then turned the weapon on himself, inflicting a wound that will prove fatal.

Discouraged by a desperate struggle for existence Mrs. Matilda Dowd of Philadelphia, aged thirty-eight years, waited until her daughter was asleep and then turned on the gas in their bedroom. Their bodies were found some hours later.

Following his marriage at Des Moines to Miss Mary Saunders, colored, and just after the wedding guests had departed John Weaver, colored, was called to the door of his home and shot to death by an unknown man.

Four mounted bandits robbed the State bank of Crandall, S. D., of over $1,000 and escaped over the prairie. The charge of dynamite with which they blew open the safe wrecked the building and aroused the nearby residents.

Anna Schumaker, fifteen years old, was found murdered and buried in a secluded spot in Holy Sepulcher cemetery at Rochester, N. Y. The police allege that Miss Schumaker had been criminally assaulted.

J. G. Ostby, a prominent Duluth grocer, was shot and killed by his eighteen-year-old son following a family quarrel. The son was immediately placed under arrest.

Mrs. Genevieve Ramsey, wife of K. L. Ramsey, said to be a millionaire coal operator at Williamson, W. Va., committed suicide in a hotel at Keystone, W. Va.

At Lansing, Mich., William Graulich shot and killed his wife and then took carbolic acid, which caused his death. Both were nineteen years of age.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

Midsummer heat thinned the annual parade of the G. A. R., the feature of the forty-third encampment at Salt Lake City, and wrought still more suffering among the hundreds of children who participated in the formation of the living flag. At least 100 children and twenty old soldiers were taken from the streets. Many of the victims, young and old, recovered as soon as they were placed in the shade.

Harry K. Thaw's latest attempt to gain his liberty met with complete and disheartening defeat when Supreme Court Justice Isaac N. Mills, at White Plains, N. Y., dismissed the writ of habeas corpus and declared that "the release of the petitioner would be dangerous to the public peace and safety."

Articles of agreement for a fight between Jack Johnson and James J. Jeffries for the heavyweight championship of the world were signed at Chicago. The fight is to take place within eight months before the club offering the best inducements. All bids for the fight are to be in inside of sixty days.

SHOT TO DEATH BY HIS SON

Prominent Duluth Grocer Killed During Quarrel.

J. G. Ostby, a prominent grocer of Duluth, was shot and killed by his eighteen-year-old son at his home in that city. The son was immediately placed under arrest and declined to make any statement as to the causes leading up to the tragedy. At the Ostby home, however, it was learned that Mr. and Mrs. Ostby had indulged in a rather heated argument over the funeral bill of one of their children who died about a month ago, Ostby asserting that it should not have been $200. The son entered into the conversation and took issue with his parent. The argument became more heated, whereupon the son rushed to a bedroom, procured a revolver and fired at his father, the bullet taking effect in the brain and the victim expiring on the spot. Ostby had been a grocer for many years and did a large business. The son has never been known to be quarrelsome and his rash act has shocked a large circle of friends who have known him since early childhood. Until recently he was a member of the Duluth high school, where he stood high with the faculty and was considered a promising student.

CAUSED BY BREAK IN DAM

Beautiful Lake at Hokah, This State, Is No More.

Beautiful Lake Como, located at Hokah, the resort which for years has been the pride of Southern Minnesota, is no more.

The flood which came down the creek above the lake following a severe rain storm swept away the huge dam at the foot of the big pond and pentup waters in the lake tore through the break with a roar that was heard for a mile, emptying into Root river and finally into the Mississippi, six miles away.

When the torrent had passed all that remained of the once beautiful lake was a tiny stream trickling its way toward Root river over the bed of the big enclosure.

THREE MEN FATALLY HURT

Freight Train Smashes Into Auto at Ortonville.

A collision occurred at Ortonville between a Chicago Great Western freight train and a motor car in which three men, occupants of the car, were fatally injured and three others were badly bruised.

A freight train was backing down to the Ortonville station to take on another car when the motor car, containing six men, which was crossing the tracks, was struck by the rear car of the train and smashed to pieces.

Theodore Seeley, Fred Adelmann and Guy Craig were the men who were most seriously injured and will probably die from the effects. Frank Phalen, Matt Hamburg and Frank Kraft escaped with bruises.

ATTACKED IN A BOX CAR

Brutal Murder Committed at Granite Falls.

Attacked by night in a lone box car on the tracks of the St. Paul road at Granite Falls by a brutal murderer with a heavy stove door he had wrenched from an article of freight and a huge rock, James Granville, an engineer in the Great Northern shops at Havre, Mont., died in a hospital in Minneapolis, while John F. Ruth of Milwaukee, Wis., is held in the county jail at Granite Falls on the charge of committing the crime for robbery.

WITH INFANT BESIDE HER

Farmer's Daughter Found Dead in a Haystack.

Frances Florek, the daughter of a prosperous Morrison county farmer, was found dead in a haystack near Foley and beside her was a baby boy two or three days old, which was alive and is doing well. There was no indication of suicide.

For several years the girl, who was twenty years old, had worked in Foley as a domestic. She bore a good reputation and was an attractive young woman.

DEBAUCH ENDS IN TRAGEDY

Hibbing Man Shoots Wife, Then Kills Himself.

In a drunken rage Joseph Josephson of Hibbing shot his wife twice in the head, inflicting possibly fatal injuries, and then turned his revolver on himself and sent a bullet through his own head. He died an hour or so afterwards. Mrs. Jsephson's condition is serious.

Josephson had been on a drunken debauch for the last two weeks.

MINNEAPOLIS IS SELECTED

Union Printers Will Meet in Mill City Next Year.

Minneapolis was selected by the International Typographical union convention at St. Joseph, Mo., as its meeting place next year.

A strong fight for the 1910 gathering was made by Salt Lake City and Atlanta and the ballot resulted: Minneapolis, 129; Salt Lake City, 16; Atlanta, 60.

Boy's Injury Fatal.

Van Delyne Hegner, aged ten years, son of George Hegner of Eveleth, died of lockjaw, resulting after an injury to his foot while berry picking.

SWEPT BY STORM

Rain and Lightning Do Great Damage in State.

RAILROADS ARE HEAVY LOSERS

Traffic on Northern Lines Interrupted by Washouts.

Lightning and heavy rains throughout this state have caused losses reaching into the hundreds of thousands to farms, villages, towns and cities and the railroads that traverse them.

Electrical disturbances, long heralded by sultry conditions of the atmosphere, marched up and down the southern tier of Minnesota counties, trailed by burning houses and barns, dead stock and overflowed fields, and leaving all means of communication a tangled skein of wires.

Heavy rains unloaded suddenly veritable seas of water in northern counties of Minnesota, seeming to move from Duluth in a series of cloudbursts across the top of the state and sweeping down the Red River valley, centering at Fargo and Fergus Falls, where three northern railways have been forced by the demolishment of their trunk systems to depend on a narrow thread of steel to enter the humming fields of the Western Dakotas.

At Ellendale a bolt of lightning went along the roof of Hotel Ellendale, ripping parts of it into slivers and driving guests in their "nighties" out into the sheeting rain. Several head of stock were reported killed.

The fluid fire of the skies licked about the barn of Joe Mullenbach, five miles southwest of Adams, causing a loss of $20,000 in vast stores of new cut hay, oats, stock and sheltered machinery.

Barns and houses were struck near Windom, Ole Frederickson losing a vast amount of farm property. Little damage was done to crops, they being in shock.

DEMAND FOR HIGHER WAGES

Made by Freight Handlers in the Twin Cities.

Unless the railroads grant an increase of approximately 6 per cent in their wages 1,200 freight handlers of the Twin Cities will go on strike. At a meeting of the men at Columbia hall, Merriam Park, the offer of the railroads of 5 per cent increase and less was rejected. They will demand the increase said to have already been granted by the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha and the Minneapolis and St. Louis, which is about 6 per cent.

DROWNED WHILE FISHING

Father and Daughter Perish in Mantrap Lake.

Judge S. F. Busey of Urbana, Ill., and Mrs. Anna McClain, his daughter, were drowned in Mantrap lake, near Park Rapids, while out fishing for muskellonge.

On account of the absence of poles and lines, one of which was later recovered hooked in reeds at the far end of the lake, it is believed that they had caught a fish, which entwined their lines, to disentangle which they moved about in their boat, capsizing it.

STRANDED AFTER LONG TRIP

Cincinnati Y. M. C. A. Youths Came West to Help Harvest.

Arthur Fries, Benjamin Brandless and Eric Seaman, three of forty or more young men who came from Cincinnati to North Dakota, where jobs in the harvest fields were supposed to be waiting for them, were in police court at St. Paul on a charge of vagrancy. They told Judge Finehout that after they had paid $22 each for transportation they had been unable to get work. All had receipts for the money. They were allowed to go.

HEAD OF GREAT WESTERN

Samuel M. Felton Selected by Morgan Interests.

Samuel M. Felton, formerly president of the Chicago and Alton Railway company and later employed by the J. P. Morgan interests as a consulting railway engineer, has been chosen as president of the reorganized Chicago Great Western company. His duties will begin Sept. 1 and he will have complete charge of the road, reporting only to the syndicate headed by J. P. Morgan.

Woman Fatally Scalded.

While washing clothes in her home at Duluth Mrs. Arthur H. Stockman overturned a boiler full of scalding hot water on herself, and it is feared she will die as a result of the terrible burns sustained. Her entire right side is burned and skin grafting will have to be resorted to.

Minneapolis Man Drowned.

John S. Muir, a cigar merchant of Minneapolis, was drowned at Lake Minnetonka. His wife, whom he had married only three months ago, watched him go down on some rocks in the water ten feet away, powerless to help him.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

William Butler, the sixty-two-year-old guide who was shot by Robert Pohl, the bank robber, during the exciting man hunt at White Bear on Aug. 5, is apparently out of danger. It was supposed that he was fatally shot when he was hurried to a St. Paul hospital, but he has been gaining steadily. His recovery is considered remarkable.

The eastern end of the lake front boulevard at Duluth was put out of commission by a landslide which carried about 200 feet of the roadway into Chester creek, 200 or 300 feet distant. The damage is so extensive that it will require weeks to repair it and for the time being the boulevard is closed to traffic.

Albert Johnson of Red Wing has been named judge of the First judicial district to succeed the late W. C. Williston. The new judge is a member of the law firm of Johnson & Mohn of Red Wing. He is a leading attorney there and has been county attorney of Goodhue county several years.

"It is an insult to the president and to me to have the newspapers print the lie that I asked the president to stop off at Winona and defend me," said Congressman James A. Tawney of the First district. Mr. Tawney declares he is fully able to defend himself.

The epidemic of infantile paralysis in Winona appears to have been checked. The recent rains have been welcomed by the health authorities as the surest means of helping stamp out the disease.

The wet weather in parts of Northern Minnesota has produced such a bumper crop of mosquitoes in sparsely settled localities that horses and cattle are driven frantic by the pests.

Major Elvin R. Heiberg, a Minnesota graduate of West Point in the class of 1896, has been appointed governor of Cotabata province, island of Mindanao.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Albert Koffey, thirty-two years old, whose home was in Grand Rapids, Wis., was killed about three miles east of Clear Lake, Stearns county, by falling beneath a freight train. Koffey was beating his way. The body was crushed almost beyond recognition, but a pocket memorandum contained his name and address.

Dan Jernberg, who, with two accomplices, brutally assaulted Elizabeth Swintek at St. Cloud on the evening of June 18, entered a plea of guilty to the charge of assault and was sentenced to the state reformatory. The sentence is an indeterminate one, but can not exceed seven years.

Selmer, the thirteen-year-old son of P. A. Selheim of Fairfax, is dead as a result of lockjaw. He cut one foot on a piece of old bone ten days before his death. He experienced no pain until the last day of his life, when severe pains set in, followed by convulsions.

Frank Ames, fifty-five years old, of Nora, committed suicide by placing the muzzle of his rifle in his mouth and springing the trigger with his big toe. Despondency over the illness of his wife and son and financial matters are supposed to have unsettled his mind.

One of the worst washouts ever encountered by the Northern Pacific in this state occurred when four miles of tracks at Hawley were washed out by a cloudburst. The people were forced to move out from the lower floors of their dwellings to the upper stories.

Joseph R. Roche, formerly an agent for Schwarzschild & Sulzberger, meat dealers, who has been wanted in St. Paul since Jan. 1 on a charge of having embezzled $1,282.37 of the company's money, has been arrested in Minneapolis.

Edward Harlew, a farmer, twenty-four years of age, residing near Le Sueur, committed suicide by shooting himself. Mental depression resulting from ill health is supposed to have been the cause.

John McCauley, a stranger, was overcome by heat while shocking grain on a farm southwest of Benson and died before a physician could reach his side. He was forty-six years of age.

Anna Dingfelder of Winona, fourteen years of age, is guilty of the crime of arson, having confessed to starting several small fires in that city recently.

Eleven deaths from infantile paralysis have occurred at St. Paul. One of the victims was a young woman of twenty-four.

A. T. Hagen, seventy years old, a farmer living south of Dalton, was thrown from his wagon in a runaway and killed.

Six persons were injured, two of them seriously, when two street cars came together in a head on collision at Duluth.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

While speeding to see his aged mother, knowing he had not long to live, John H. Brighty of St. Paul died on a Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul passenger train entering Chicago. His mother lives at Somerset, Mass.

Thomas Morton, aged eighty years, an early settler of Blue Earth county, is dead.

L. Dedahl, probate judge of Houston county, is dead at Caledonia.

A PRECOCIOUS DOG.

The Wonderful Feats He Performed For Joseph Jefferson.

There is a story that is told of Joseph Jefferson and the boys that had to do with the training of dogs. It appears that there was a gentleman in New Iberia who owned a very intelligent animal, and he was most anxious for Mr. Jefferson to see an example of his prowess. Accordingly he brought him to the island one day and put him through his various tricks, which were remarkably clever.

When the performance was over Mr. Jefferson expressed his appreciation and wonder at what the dog had done, but added that he had an animal that was even more remarkable. As the gentleman seemed to be in some doubt as to the truth of this statement the dog, a dejected, stupid looking beast, was produced, and Mr. Jefferson ordered him to go into his room and bring him a shoe.

Obediently the dog trotted into the house to presently reappear with the shoe in his mouth. Taking it from him, Mr. Jefferson patted him upon the head and told him to return to his room and bring him the slipper for his left foot.

"And, mind you, bring the left one," he cautioned as the animal trotted away.

When he returned in a moment with the left slipper the gentleman could hardly express his astonishment, but Mr. Jefferson waved the matter indifferently aside.

"It is nothing," said he. "However, we will now try something a little more difficult." Then, turning to the dog, he spoke to him very slowly and carefully. "Now go into the library," said he, "look upon the bottom shelf on the right hand side of the room and you will see a set of Dickens. Bring me the second volume. Remember, now, the second volume; not the first or the third, but the second."

When the dog returned in a few moments with the second volume in his mouth the gentleman retired in the utmost confusion, declaring that in comparison with such a prodigy his own much vaunted animal was little better than an imbecile.

And I may add that Mr. Jefferson enjoyed the joke fully as much as did the boys, who, according to a prearranged plan, had placed each successive article in the prodigy's mouth. As to the prodigy, his one accomplishment consisted of trotting into the house and trotting out of it again.—Nevil G. Henshaw in Bohemian.

Table Mountain.

At Capetown, in South Africa, where the traveler usually has the first glimpse of the continent, is Table mountain, a magnificent natural curiosity which rises behind the city to the height of almost 4,000 feet and has a level top about three square miles in area. Its resemblance to a huge table is so marked that the dense clouds which collect at times around the summit are referred to as the tablecloth. A pretty little flower which is found nowhere else on earth grows on top, while on the northern side of its base is a similarly rare tree, popularly called the silver leaf tree.

The Slow One.

"Would you," he said after they had been sitting in the dark for a long time, "be angry with me if I were to kiss you?"

She was silent for a moment. Then in tones the meaning of which was not to be mistaken she replied:

"Why do you suppose I turned down the light an hour and a half ago?"

And yet he wondered, poor fool, how other young men who had started far in the rear were able to pass him in the race of life.

A Chronic Grumbler.

Charles Lamb tells of a chronic grumbler who always complained at whist because he had so few trumps. By some artifice his companions managed to fix the cards so that, when he dealt he got the whole thirteen, hoping to extort some expression of satisfaction, but he only looked more wretched than ever as he examined his hand.

"Well, Tom," said Lamb, "haven't you trumps enough this time?"

"Yes," grunted Tom, "but I've no other cards."

Not Desired.

Having at enormous pains got her length, breadth and thickness about right, the woman heaved a sigh of relief. "No fourth dimension in mine, if you please!" she exclaimed, with unmistakable feeling.

Some aver that the feminine mind is not attracted by metaphysics anyway!—Puck.

Precedent.

"Will that young man ever go home?" demanded the irritated head of the house.

"I guess so, father," replied the materfamilias. "He always has gone."—Washington Herald.

A Good Guess.

"Does your father know you smoke, little boy?" asked the inquisitive stranger.

"I guess not," replied the bad boy. "He doesn't lock up his cigars."—Detroit Free Press.

DETECTIVE STORIES.

Little Things as Aids In Solving Problems In Crime.

THE VALUE OF SMALL CLEWS

"In All My Experience," Says Police Sergeant Cuff, One of Wilkie Collins' Creations, "I Have Never Yet Met Such a Thing as a Trifle."

If you ask some London publishers they will tell you that no book sells so well as a detective story and that people still find a fascination in the achievements of Edgar Allan Poe's Dupin, Gaboriau's Lecocq and Tabaret and the redoubtable Sergeant Cuff of Wilkie Collins.

These men were the forerunners of Sherlock Holmes, and their feats of criminal tracking were as remarkable as those achieved by the famous character created by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Perhaps the least known is Cuff, who figures in "The Moonstone." Cuff looked for clews in trifles. Investigating a smear on a newly painted door, he was told by the superintendent who had the case in hand that it was made by the petticoats of the women servants. The superintendent said petticoats were trifles.

"In all my experience along the dirtiest ways of this dirty little world," replied Cuff, "I have never met such a thing as a trifle yet. We must see the petticoat that made the smear, and we must know for certain that the paint was wet."

Lecocq, the beau ideal of the French detective, was wont to explain his deductions to assistants, just as Sherlock Holmes did to his friend Watson. In the story of "File No. 113" a safe has been robbed. There is a scratch on the door of the safe which seems to have been made by the key slipping from the lock. But Lecocq explained that the paint was hard and that the scratch could not have been made by the trembling hand of the thief letting the key slip.

He therefore had an iron box made, painted with green varnish, like the safe. As Lecocq inserted the key he asked the assistant to endeavor to prevent him using the key just as he was about to insert it in the lock. The assistant did so, and the key held by Lecocq, pulled aside from the lock, slipped along the door and traced upon it a diagonal scratch from top to bottom, the exact reproduction of the one shown in a photograph of the safe. Thus it was proved that two persons were present at the robbery—one wished to take the money and the other to prevent its being taken.

In the play Sherlock Holmes, the detective, with the aid of an accomplice, raises an alarm of fire at the house of the Larrabees, during the excitement of which he is able to investigate the mystery of the purloined documents.

A somewhat similar incident occurs in Edgar Allan Poe's "The Purloined Letter," when Dupin, having obtained entrance to the house of a minister of the state who had purloined a letter of great importance from a lady, wished to take it from its hiding place—a card rack over the mantelpiece—and substitute a facsimile. While Dupin was talking to the minister there was a sudden report of a pistol beneath the window, followed by fearful screams and loud shouting. The minister rushed to the window, and while his attention was thus distracted Dupin took the real letter and substituted the false one which he had prepared. Needless to say, the diversion had been created by Dupin's assistants.

Although "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" somewhat overshadow the stories of other detectives which appeared in the Strand Magazine, one should not forget to mention Martin Hewitt, investigator, and Dick Donovan.

Both these detectives worked alone and were past masters in the art of solving robbery mysteries, murders and the crimes of secret societies.

And the value of noting trifles, particularly in detective work, is strikingly illustrated in "The Case of Mr. Foggatt." The latter had been murdered in his chamber, which was situated at the top of the building in which Hewitt had an office. Hewitt was the first one on the scene. The door was locked, and when he got inside the room he found Foggatt lying across the table, shot dead. There was a sheer drop of fifty feet outside the windows. How had the murderer got in, and how had he escaped?

On the sideboard were the freshly bitten remains of an apple. Hewitt noticed that it had been bitten by a person who had lost two teeth, one at the top and one below. He also saw that the dead man had an excellent set of false teeth, with none missing. He observed, too, that an active young man could, by standing on the window sill, draw himself on the roof and thus escape. Thus Hewitt comes to look for a tall, athletic looking young man with two teeth missing. He finds him, obtains by a ruse another apple which he has bitten compares the two and ultimately obtains the startling story of the murder from the murderer himself after the coroner's jury had returned a verdict of "accidental death."—London Tit-Bits.

It is the little pleasures which make life sweet, as the little displeasures may do more than afflictions can to make it bitter.

Confide a secret to a dumb man and it will make him speak.—Livonian.

J. O. Thorstad Raises Fodder Corn Eleven Feet High in Sixty Six Days.

Corn Has Grown on an Average Two Inches Each Day Since it Was Planted.

J. O. Thorstad, one of the enterprising farmers living in the town of Sanders, brought to town last Friday a sample of fodder corn raised upon his farm this year, and we doubt if there is any section of Minnesota, or Iowa for that matter, that could raise a better stand of corn than Mr. Thorstad has in the same length of time.

The sample Mr. Thorstad brought to town was planted on the 15th of June and cut the 20th day of August, just sixty-six day after it was planted. It stands eleuen feet high and therefore must have grown on an average two inches each day.

The sample Mr. Thorstad brought to town was not cut after careful selection, as he says the field of corn is all of an even height, and he estimates that it will yield about fifteen tons to the acre.

One "Sooner" Caught.

T. J. Sumpter a St. Hilaire real estate dealer, was arrested last week by Game Warden Munch on the charge of shooting a prairie chicken out of season in the town of River Falls, Red Lake county. He was taken before Judge K. O. Gigstad, of St. Hilaire, and fined $10 and costs which he paid.

Opportunities for Young Men in Agriculture.

Young men having had farm experience are especially fitted to take up the study of agriculture in a scientific way and make for themselves very useful careers. Graduates of the school are in great demand as government experts, as teachers in other schools and colleges of agriculture, and as managers of farms. The demand for men graduating from such courses has been far beyond the supply this year, and the salaries offered have been much higher than ever before given for similar work. That there will be in the future a still stronger demand for men trained in agriculture and its allied subjects there seems no room to doubt.

Any young man who has graduated from a High School and who is looking about for some school in which to continue his education, would better send to the College of Agriculture, University Farm, St. Paul, for a bulletin of the work of that institution. This is one of the regular colleges of the University of Minnesota, and those who finish the four years' course prescribed receive a degree.

Finished His Work.

L. D. Moore who has spent the summer here investigating the homesteaders upon the eleven towns, departed Monday, having completed his work. He has recommended that the homestead entry of all those who are behind in their payments and are not actual residents of the land be canceled, and it is quite likely that this action will be taken. The settlers who are living upon their land, even though they are behind in their payments, will not be molested.

An Improved Variety of Rye.

A new variety of rye is being distributed by the Minnesota Experiment Station that promises to give new impetus to the rye growing industry of the state. This variety, known as Minnesota No. 2, was developed by careful nursery selection of individual plants from a stock of Swedish rye obtained from Mr. John Brogan of Henning, Minn., in 1895.

After several selections were made, this variety was increased and tested at University Farm during the years 1900 to 1908. The average yield for that time was 40.4 bu. per acre while the varieties commonly grown in the State averaged for the same years 19.3 bushels. This variety when well grown has large kernels that are quite uniformly light colored, though some dark kernels may be found. The plants stool luxuriantly and the straw stands up well allowing the grain to ripen evenly and in good season, usually about July 10th to 20th. The plants grow four to four and a half feet high with heads 3½ to 4 inches long. No. 2 rye was grown by a few farmers in various parts of the State in 1907—1908, was considered an improvement wherever grown. From these comparative yields it is calculated that No. 2 rye will yield 9.5 bu. per acre more than the common varieties. It was quite widely distributed in 1908 and reports so far received indicate that is doing well this year.

The Experiment Station has only a small stock of the seed for sale at $1.25 per bushel, but can furnish the addresses of seed growers in many localities who purchased seed from the Experiment Station last fall and from whom it can be purchased direct. These addresses may be obtained by writing the Agriculturist of the Minnesota Experiment Station, St. Anthony Park, Minn.

N. P. TO HAUL SOO'S GRAIN

Brooten Branch of the Soo Will Not Be In Running Order This Fall.

Big Sink Holes Causing the Soo a Great Deal of Trouble and Expense.

It is said that the section foreman at points along the L. F. & D. branch, have been instructed to prepare for the heavy fall hauling of wheat over the track under their care. The branch has been used in past years by the Soo for hauling grain from the Dakotas to Duluth and Superior. It was expected that by this fall the new Soo line would be in shape to handle the grain trains and that they would pass over the new line rather than over the Northern Pacific's branch. Due to trouble with sink holes, the Soo will probably be unable to send grain trains over the new extension and for that reason will have to use the L. F. & D.

The Soo grain traffic has always been heavy and it is expected that this year's business will exceed previous years.

The coal for the Soo is still being shipped over the Northern Pacific and is run out on the L. F. & D. branch. On Sunday there were 100 cars of coal for the Soo shipped through Little Falls. The shipments were from the Duluth and Superior docks and were consigned to Glenwood.

Congressman Steenerson Was Here.

Congressman Halvor Steenerson spent last Thursday in the city and at the Antlers Club met a number of Thief River Falls business men and discussed the matter of improvements on the Red Lake river from here to the outlet. Mr. Steenerson is making an earnest fight to have the river improved, but there is some objection upon the parts of the war department.

Karlstad Bank Robbed.

The State bank at Karlstad which is in Kittson county north of here on the Soo Line was robbed early Wednesday morning of last week. The robbers blew open the safe and made their getaway with about $1,500 in cash. The explosion awakened most of the residents but the robbers managed to make their escape before arrangements could be effected towards their capture. There were three or four men in the party and it is thought they will try and make their way into Canada.

Threshers Fix Rates.

Crookston, Minn., Aug. 18. A large number of threshermen of Polk county gathered in the city hall and at a meeting presided over by Thomas Bjoin agreed on a schedule of prices which they desire to prevail in Polk county for threshing the coming fall, this being the first time that a general agreement has been reached. The prices agreed to are as follows: Four cents per bushel for rye and wheat, 3 cents per bushel for oats and barley, 10 cents and up for flax 15 to 25 cents for timothy seed, $1 per bushel for clover.

New Butter Maker for Holt.

A very pleasent entertainment was given by the girls of the Thistle Down Club last Friday night. The Imperial Drug building, where the function was held, was very artistically decorated with green foliage as well as with parraphernalia of camp life. The entire building represented an ideal outing where all the cares of our daily toil are forgotten and we turn loose to give vent to light and jovial part of our nature. The evening was spent at cards. A very dainty lunch brought the program to a close and all retired during the small hours of the night well repaid for their loss of sleep. We vote the members of the club our thanks for having given us a royal entertainment.

New Home for the Sheriff.

The county commissioners in session last Saturday let the contract for the remodeling of the dwelling house that is to become the sheriff's residence. The Damas Bray house, located on the land recently purchased for the court house site, must be moved to make room for the new building. The commissioners entered into a contract with Aug. Morin to move the building back to a location near the county jail and place it on a solid foundation and make other alterations. The contract price for the work is $330. The other house located on the land purchased and that must also be moved was sold to W. A. Schreiter, who is at present occupying the building. Mr. Schreiter paid $300 for the building and is to moved it from the lots.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

Holt Is Prosperous.

Andrew Bjerk, one of the enterprising farmers of the town of Holt, was in Thief River Falls last Friday attending to some business matters. Mr. Bjerk says that the crops in his section are good and the farmers are prospering. The village of Holt is also prospering and two new stores—one general mercantile, the other a hardware—have opened up for business there. Holt is a good business point and the farmers in that vicinity all pay cash for their goods.

Former Residents of This County.

Word has just been received in the city that Willford Dion, formerly of Terrebonne, but who is now located in the west near North Yakima, to the effect that a few days ago his house was burned to the ground and one son cremated, while his mother was so badly burned that she cannot live.

The family is very well known throughout the southern part of the county and much regret will be felt over the calamity that has befallen them.

Clerks the Winners.

The clerks defeated the bookkeepers in a game of ball Sunday at the fair grounds. Only seven innings were played and the score was 19 to 3. The clerks were far in the lead at all times and were especially strong at the bat.

Arrested in This City

Chief of Police Lang arrested Bert Mansfields and two woman at the Great Northern depot last Friday afternoon upon the request of the chief of police of Warroad. They were charged with stealing a watch and other articles from a hotel in Warroad and were taken back to answer to this charge by the sheriff of Roseau county.

Had Narrow Escape.

Hans Maaren, the son of Sever Maaren of the town of Mayfield, who has been working near Cando N. D. the past three months had a very narrow escape from being killed by lightning last week. He as was drving hay rake when the lightning struck, killing both horses and knocking Hans senseless and stripping him of all his clothes. He has now almost completely recovered and no serious results are expected.—Plummer Pioneer.

DOG MAY HAVE BEEN MAD

Strange Dog Bites Two Citizens and Is Shot by Ed Ashely.

Head of Dog Has Been Sent to Minneapolis to Be Examined by Experts.

Considerable excitement was caused Sunday afternoon at about 5 o'clock by a dog that had all of the indications of being mad. In less than fifteen minutes the dog bit or attempted to bite four persons. Two men—John Forsberg and Ed Asheley, traveling salesman for Marshall Wells & Co., of Duluth—substained flesh wounds. The dog also attempted to bite Bertie J. Backe and a young son of Anton Sundahl.

Mr Ashley was the last person the dog bit and this happened in front of Mr. Ashely's home. He at once went into the house and procured his shot gun and killed the dog. There was considerable white froth in the dogs mouth when he was shot and he gave other appearances of being mad. Both Mr. Forsberg and Mr. Ashley had their wounds dressed by doctors and it is not thought that they will suffer any serious results.

On Monday Dr. Newall boxed up the head of the dog and had it expressed to Minneapolis to ascertain whether or not the dog was mad.

Noone appears to know who the owner of the dog is and it is quite likely that it belonged to some farmer living in this vicinity.

Killed by Lightning.

Two cows belonging to William Ferstnow, a farmer living north of town, were killed by lightning last Saturday. The cows were in a pasture and were standing by a wire fence.

Married at Grand Forks.

Word has been received in the city to the effect that Will Breyette and Miss Inga Severtson, both former residents of Thief River Falls, were united in marriage a week ago last Saturday at Grand Forks.

$8.50 HEDGETHORN PUNCTURE-PROOF SELF-HEALING TIRES A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

The regular retail price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks or Glass will not let the air out. Sixty thousand pairs sold last year. Over two hundred thousand pairs now in use.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

INFLAMED EYE TREATMENT.

How to Make and Apply Soothing and Healing Lotions.

The preparation of soothing and healing lotions for the eyes should be known to every housekeeper, for the reason that acute pain often arises from trifling accidents, and to prevent inflammation until professional treatment is secured timely application is necessary. If there is tendency to weakness of sight or to swollen eyelids, the latter sometimes due to a low condition of the system, applications may be beneficial.

Of simple home remedies hot water is one of the best applications that can be used when the eyes are inflamed, whether from crying or from irritation caused by a foreign particle lodged on the eyeball or lid. The water should be as hot as can be endured, and two soft cloths are necessary for the treatment, as one must be wrung out and put over the eyes, while the patient lies down, and as the compress cools the other is immediately laid on. Twenty minutes of this will usually reduce the redness from a prolonged fit of crying.

Camphor water eye wash, of which one hears so much, is easily prepared by putting a grain of borax to an ounce of camphor water. It is safest to filter this or any other mixture containing a powder through brown paper, that no smallest particle shall remain. The lotion may be dropped into the eyes several times a day and at night. In extreme cases of irritability a tiny piece of linen is soaked with the solution and laid directly over the lids, renewing as it dries. If this treatment is continued through the night, as may be done with little trouble, the eyes will be improved in the morning.

Tea makes a better eye-tonic than many persons know, for the tannic acid which is extracted from the leaves is an excellent astringent. For this use a strong decoction is brewed with boiling water, and the infusion stands until the liquid is cold. It is then strained and the eyes are freely bathed.

For acute inflammation that often appears when a foreign particle is not quickly removed from the eye an alum mixture is strongly recommended. A grain of the powder is put into an ounce of water, and after the former has dissolved the lotion must be filtered through brown paper. A few drops are put into the eye immediately and at night. Equally soothing is sulphate of zinc and rosewater, a grain of the former to an ounce of the latter. This, too, is dropped in night and morning.

How to Make a Sewing Box.

One of the most convenient articles a roomer can have is a sewing box—not a large affair, but something large enough to hold the numerous little articles needed every week and which really take up too much space in the bureau or trunk. It can be slipped under the bed and will not be unsightly in the room if covered. Get a pretty green and pink striped cretonne and cover the box neatly, tacking the cretonne on the inside of the box. Then line it with green linen, tacking it around the inside of the box with little white headed tacks. On the lid, which should be hinged, have a little pincushion, a place for scissors, tape measure, tracer and ruler. The heavy elastic holds them in place. Button boxes, boxes of thread and dress patches can be kept in the box portion. Save your pieces of white dimity to patch shirt waists and underclothes and have darning cotton, silkoline, also wax and a crochet hook, in the box. If one has an old suit case it could be made into an ideal sewing box, but the lining should be fastened in with trunk glue. Trim the edge of the lid with a fancy rope cord and tassel.

How to Take Olive Oil Easily.

A young woman who had suffered for years with gastric troubles was advised by her physician to take olive oil three times a day. As the pure olive oil was extremely distasteful she compromised by buttering her bread, shaking the salt and pepper over it and then soaking it in a tablespoonful of pure olive oil. In this way she easily swallowed the required three tablespoonfuls. In a comparatively short time her digestive troubles wholly disappeared, though she had stopped all medicines and treatment save deep breathing, where she used the abdominal muscles steadily and regularly for five minutes at a time. When oil is ordered medicinally it will prove less distasteful if eaten on cress or lettuce. At first a little vinegar may be taken, the amount gradually reduced until the pure oil can be eaten without nausea.

How to Remove Lint From Mahogany.

When pieces of felt are pasted to the bottom of ornaments that are to stand on a polished surface care must be taken that the surface is not damp or the varnish fresh or the lint from the felt will stick to the wood and be worse than the scratch. This happens quite often in the slides of old mahogany desks. The unsightly mark on the top can only be removed by scraping gently with a piece of fine sandpaper and then rubbing up with sweet oil and vinegar. Do not scrape hard or the varnish will be scored and the surface of the mahogany be ruined.

How to Restore Chamois Skins.

An excellent way to restore chamois skins that have become stiff and soiled is to rub them through a strong solution of cold water and household ammonia, later rinsing thoroughly in clear cold water to soften. Pin to the line to dry in the sun and then rub through the hand slightly.

SWEET SCENTED PILLOWS.

How to Prepare the Stuffing and Select the Covers.

In order to make sweet scented pillows first of all the pillow stuffing must be well dried. Lay the leaves or flowers in an airy shaded room and toss them about gently every day, that they shall not collect moisture and mold. When they are quite dry you are ready to stuff the pillow. Take enough raw cotton to fill one-half of the pillow, tear it in small pieces and lay it in a big pan and dry it out well in the oven. This makes a fluffy filling. Now mix the cotton with the dried flowers and leaves, fill up the cushion of ticking and sew it firmly. It is ready for the outer covering.

Of course, if you prefer it, you may make a pillow of hops or rose leaves or lavender alone, but it will not be so comfortable as the pillow that is partly baked cotton, and, since you want to put your head on it, why not make it comfortable? Hops must be used by themselves, and so must lavender. But one may make truly delicious blends by mixing dried lemon verbena, rose geranium, rose petals and clove pinks. Choose your rose petals from the old fashioned flat double pink roses; they are the sweetest sort.

Pine pillows have a refreshing woodsy perfume, and fern leaves dried have a delightful mysterious odor that makes one remember the belief of childhood that one could put fern seed in one's eyes and ever afterward would be able to see fairies. Clover makes sweet pillows, too, redolent of new mown hay. The common pink clover makes the sweetest sort, though white clover may be used.

As for the covers, choose something distinctive and individual. A little pillow of rose leaves and lemon verbena, covered with rose colored linen with a little rosebud stenciled on it, is most unusual and charming.

For a hop pillow choose a linen cover of dull green and embroider your monogram in mercerized cotton exactly the same tone in one corner.

The cover for a pine pillow might well be of rough tan crash or linen with a stenciled pattern of green and brown on it, or else with a smart monogram—block letters—embroidered in brown in one corner.

Fern leaf pillows should be covered with creamy linen, rather heavy in quality, with green fern leaves embroidered or stenciled upon it. Make the cover in the form of two squares, considerably larger than the pillow, and work long buttonholed eyelets through both, lacing them together over the pillow with a ribbon of dull green. At the corner where the ribbon ties slip two or three big green beads on loops and ends.

To cover pillows a cover of the popular Russian crash in cool gray would be appropriate, and if it is stenciled lightly with butterflies or dragon flies it will add to its daintiness, or it might be embroidered in small, flat squares in rose colored cotton.

The flower perfumed pillows will be found useful for the afternoon on lounges in the hammock. Slip them under your head, and they will perfume your hair with just a touch of delicate fragrance.

If you are troubled with insomnia try the hop or the pine pillow—they will help you to sleep if nothing else will.

How to Preserve Eggs.

When eggs are only required to be preserved for two or three months they keep very well packed in dry salt or bran. The meat of the egg may shrink and rattle within the shell when shaken, but its edibility is not impaired. Coating the egg with vaseline or butter will also keep it for a short time, or any application which effectively seals the pores of the shell and excludes air will prolong the freshness of eggs. If the egg is even momentarily submerged in boiling water the albumen thereby becomes sufficiently coagulated to prevent the entrance of air. In some of the rural districts in England and Scotland eggs for home consumption are smutted over with a mixture of sulphur and lampblack, a cheap and effective preservative. But the limewater mixture is best for general purposes.

How to Make Bib Aprons.

An excellent way of making children's bib aprons is by using the regular yoke pattern, cutting the back deep enough so that a narrow piece of the goods comes under the arm. Instead of the same depth yoke in front, cut the material as long as the child's dress, rounding the goods at the side if you prefer. Join the back yoke to the front piece; cut the sleeves and sew in; face the yoke, neck and sides with bias strips of the material. Two buttons will be sufficient for the back. When finished you will have a bib that not only entirely covers the front of the child's dress, but also protects the sleeves.

How to Clean a Light Wool Skirt.

To clean a light wool skirt take one pail of warm soft water. To this add one pint of gasoline and one-quarter bar of naphtha soap (dissolved). Put the skirt to be washed into this and wash carefully. Rinse in water the same temperature as water used in washing the skirt. This is an excellent method and never fails to make the skirt look like new.

How to Destroy Potato Bugs.

Place boards here and there among the potato vines and on them lay slices of raw potatoes. The bugs will go for them and can be destroyed. In a week's time, after a daily slaughter, no bugs will be in sight. It might be well to use paris green on the potato slices, thus saving the work of killing the bugs.

THE NEWS

BY JOHN W. EASTMAN

$1 DOLLAR PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

It cost the country $500,000 to have the tarriff revised. Small favors sometimes come high.

The degree of Litt D. has been conferred on Ida Tarbell by a colledge that hasen't the least hope of ever getting a donation from John D.

The farmers of this section are as prosperous as in any section of the United States. There has never been a total crop failure here and when prices are good we always manage to have a pumper crop.

And now that it is given out as an assured fact by the "kitchen cabinet" that Gov. Johnson will be a candidate for a fourth term, what is the use of going to the expense of holding an election.

Thief River Falls is going to be the center for a large trading population this fall, and the farmers are going to have plenty of cash with which to purchase goods. Those who advertise will get the business.

Red Lake Falls has decided that a $15,500 court house is good enough for that town and has abandoned the idea of erecting a $35,000 structure. Their county will be so small after the next general election that a $500 building will serve the purpose.

If the money paid for hotel and traveling expenses by those who went to "register" for land in the Western reservations had been invested in land at the homes of the speculators, they would have made much greater profits. At one of these "drawings" there were 105,000 applicants, whose average expense was doubtless above $100 apiece—a total of over $10,000,000 put in. The total value of the land was less than a quarter of that amount.—Wheelock's Weekly.

State Supt. Stockwell of North Dakota, has issued a timely circular to school officials of the state in reference to the laws of health. He calls attention to the fact that children are necessarily crowded together in school rooms and therefore more than anywhere else is good ventilation absolutely necessary. He also says that no child afflicted with tuberculosis should be permitted to attend school; that the common drinking cup should be abolished and individual cups substituted; that dust from blackboards should be eliminated as far as possible and that floors should be frequently scrubbed and oiled.

A certain Mr. William R. Hoag, who is employed by the state and paid by the farmers living north of here on the Thief river, has been busy of late giving out interviews—at least they are credited to him—to the effect that the deepening of the Thief river is going to cause international problems as well as state problems. He is credited with saying—we can hardly believe that an intelligent engineer would say it—that farmer ditches are going to result in flooding the whole Canadian territory north of here, and cause numerous flood periods. If Mr. Hoag understood the drainage problem, as anyone should who is employed in this class of work, he would know that the draining of this county is going to lessen the flow of water in the Thief river after the surplus water is once drained off. That has been the history of every ditch that has been built in this section. The area of the land to be drained by the Thief river as compared with the area drained by the Red River of the North is so small that it is insignificant in comparison. If Mr. Hoag believes that a few farmer ditches in this section is going to plunge us into a bloody war with England, why the sooner we have that war the better, because the farmers are determined to drain off the water and reclaim a large number of the acres of the richest land to be found in Minnesota—or anywhere else for that matter.

ICED TEA.

How to Make and Serve This Refreshing Summer Drink.

However the doctors and health fearful may revile iced tea, it is bound to stay as long as thermometers are so unruly in summer. It is surprising, considering the amount of iced tea Americans consume, how rarely it is good.

The most scientific and supposedly healthful way to prepare it is to pour freshly brewed hot tea over a large lump of ice, then pour into glasses half filled with shaved ice.

More economical is it to make a small quantity of rather strong tea several hours before it is to be used, let it cool in the refrigerator and weaken to the desired consistency with iced water just before needed.

It is a mistake to think iced tea can be cooled by a few lumps in the pitcher. There must be either cracked or shaved ice in glasses to make it palatable.

Lemon is also better added before the meal than at it. The usual way is to pass a section of lemon to each guest. Far better is the taste if both lemon and sugar are mixed with the tea when the iced water is added. Better yet is it to adopt the Russian plan of grating the rind of a lemon and pouring hot tea over it.

If lemon is passed, as it may have to be when some of the family do not like it, cut into lengthwise sections rather than thin rounds and pass in addition a small glass pitcher filled with extra lemon juice.

Mint leaves or lemon verbena added to iced tea, besides the lemon, gives a delicious flavor. It is also good with a little ginger sirup or a few drops of rum.

One hostess on gala occasions serves her iced tea poured cold over lemon, orange or pineapple sherbet. This is served in a punch bowl, and each guest fills her tall glass with the mixture. In this case cracked ice is not used.

The thinner and more slender an iced tea glass is the more refreshing it tastes. It should be stood on a glass saucer or tumbler coaster. If possible use long handled spoons.

How to Clean Straw Matting.

To take up and clean straw matting, first remove as much of the furniture as possible and the pictures and ornaments, then sweep the matting with a damp broom, then remove tacks and roll up one strip at a time and take it either out on the grass or the roof, and if possible hang on a line for awhile. Then sweep the room carefully and take up the first dirt as you go along. Then with plenty of hot water and soap wash floor and open windows wide. Then the matting can be tended to. Sweep the wrong side, strip at a time, and with a pail of clean water with some white soap and a little ammonia in it and soft cloths wash the matting thoroughly and wipe very dry. Go over all the strips on the wrong side and then let them dry. Do the same to the right side and when putting down the matting bring the freshest part into wear. By a little study this can be done, and the wrong side can be used just the same as the right. It helps a lot to put newspapers under, and then you can roll them right up and put them in the rubbish, and it saves a lot of dirt.

TRAVELING ON SLEEPING CARS

How to Prepare For a Journey and Be Comfortable.

Preparations for a night's journey differ much from those for a day's trip, because the same articles are not required; hence the selection for the former must include comfort, and to secure this one must have personal experience or suggestions from some traveler.

A long dressing gown—a thin one in summer and a warm one in winter—is better than a night robe for sleeping. It is a mistake not to remove all the clothing when going to bed, but at the same time one should be in condition to go to the dressing room if necessary, so a wrapper fills the bill completely and is incidentally comfortable.

Toilet articles resolve themselves into a box of cold cream; also either some toilet water or saturated solution of borax. The water to be found in sleeping car toilet rooms is not only lacking in qualities for cleansing, but the basins are so abused by careless travelers that a very neat woman will not care to use them. So with her own cleansing agents she is independent. A box of toilet powder, a nailbrush and soap and a brush and comb, with toothbrush, complete this outfit. She must carry her own soap. There is no greater danger of contracting skin trouble than by using soap that has been applied by others. For use on trains a pair of big soft gloves is necessary to traveling comfort and cleanliness. Wear these through the night, because the grime and dinginess that are rubbed into the hands through long hours of travel and from contact with the berth blankets are such that it often takes time to get them white again.

In the morning undergarments are put on in the berth, and then, drawing on the dressing gown and taking the hand bag and frock, the journey is made to the dressing room, where there is a reasonable amount of room to finish the toilet properly. Instead of wetting the face with water, it and the ears and neck should be smeared with cold cream. This must be wiped off with a fresh towel. Another portion of the towel must then be wet with either toilet water or borax solution and the greasy surface cleansed. This application removes all trace of cream and dust. If the hands have been protected at night by gloves they will not need washing, and one is saved putting them into a basin that looks unattractive. On completion of the toilet a woman may look as fresh as though dressed in her own room.

How to Use Crude Oil on the Scalp.

The use of coal oil on the scalp is quite common, but not every one who knows the value of petroleum realizes that crude oil is even better. The former, being not so heavy as the crude product, works farther into the scalp and may affect the color glands.

In using either the crude oil or petroleum it is much better to have some one else apply it. It is almost impossible to put it on so it does not get on the long hair, giving it a sticky, ugly look.

Crude oil should be applied at least a day before the hair is to be shampooed. Instruct whoever makes the application to get the oil on the scalp only, working it in well with the tips of the fingers. If this is done the hair is much improved; otherwise it is a dust collector and does more harm than good.

Be sure after applying crude oil that the shampooer uses hot enough water to remove it. If it appears to stick, rub a little pure white soap over the head to assist the removal of the grease.

How to Iron a White Skirt.

To iron a white underskirt begin at the strings and waistband, then take the bottom of the skirt. Iron all round on the right side with a very hot iron, then iron the first frill. This frill will probably have sewed work or lace. In either case it must be nicely ironed on the wrong side. Probably above the frill there will be tucks or hems. They must next be ironed over the wrong side and afterward on the right. Rub the iron the way of the hem. If there is a second frill the cloth under the frill is ironed at the same time as the hem or tucks and the frill again ironed on the wrong side. Put skirt board into the skirt and place each end of the board on the table, thus allowing the skirt to hang over the board. It can thus be easily ironed and nicely finished. Afterward fold it lengthwise and hang up to air.

How to Preserve Your Sight.

A noted oculist advises against using the eyes immediately after waking. Therefore the habit of many young girls of reading or studying in bed is injurious. It is harmful to use the eyes when sleepy, as it is a great strain upon the muscles. If one must read or write when drowsy rise occasionally and bathe the eyes with hot or cold water. Remember that a quick change from a dark room to a brilliant light is a strain upon the eyes.

How to Clean Bottles.

To clean bottles fill them with scraps of newspaper torn into small bits, and put a little soapsuds in the water. Shake the bottle vigorously until the paper has been dissolved to a pulp, and then rinse the bottle thoroughly. You will be surprised how even the dirtiest bottle can be cleaned easily and thoroughly and made bright and shining.

How to Make Floor Wax.

Shave a five cent cake of beeswax fine and add one quart of gasoline. Let stand overnight, and it will be ready for use. This is best and cheapest wax ever used.

CORN AND CHOLERA.

Hog raisers the country over are putting two and two together in the matter of excessively high prices of corn and absence of hog cholera and drawing some deductions that ought to be of value for a good many years to come along the line of the connection between the health of the hog and the food ration which it is given. It has been observed during the past eighteen months—an interval which has seen scant feeding of corn owing to high price—that there has been an almost total absence of the swine plague in sections where corn has constituted the chief feeding and fattening ration. The net result of this situation has meant an enormous saving to hog raisers, and this whether the connection between feed and animal health is as close as held by some or not. There is surely enough in the theory to make careful study and comparisons of feeding conditions in different seasons worth while. It has been a matter of observation with a good many that the worst outbreaks of cholera have usually followed on the heels of an inordinate stuffing of young pigs with green and immature corn, the plague finding fertile soil for development for months after in droves of hogs whose health had been weakened as a result of this irrational method of feeding. If it turns out, therefore, that the feeder can just as well sell a part of his corn and at the same time save his hogs, it would seem clearly in his interest to do so.

ABOUT CEMENT TILE.

It is only justice and fairness to those contemplating the drainage of wet land to speak another word of warning touching the use of cement tiles in the manufacture of which the proper kind of clean, sharp sand has not been used or which do not contain a sufficient per cent of cement to give them strength and durability. Within a fortnight we have heard one who is interested in a square deal for the user of tiles say that a short time since he saw cement tiles of this shoddy description taken from the ditch all gone to pieces which were laid but eighteen months ago. The worst feature about the matter is that one who is not acquainted with cement tiles cannot tell at a glance whether they are properly made or not, while the putting of them in the ground to find out is altogether too expensive an experiment for the average man to monkey with. In view of this situation it follows that the only safeguard that one can have in purchasing cement tiles is the character and experience of the man who has made and offers them for sale. Makers of clay tiles concede that cement tiles, properly made, are as good as clay tiles, and this is quite a concession for a competitor to make, but no such authority as this need be cited to prove that poor cement tiles are not worth a continental—in fact, are, if laid, a good deal worse than nothing.

A WINNING COMBINATION.

The first five or six years in the life of an orchard may be counted upon as well nigh unproductive. To overcome this some grow a cover crop in sections where the winters are cold, which, being a secondary consideration, can be counted on for but a slight return. In the west, where the winters are milder, strawberries are grown among the trees and not only serve this purpose where needed, but give generous return for the use of the land. In the Hood river valley, famed as an apple and strawberry section, the strawberries in the young orchards net the owners all the way from $200 to $700 per acre. At the end of five years the trees come into bearing, when the numbers of rows may be decreased or the plants entirely removed. Strawberries might well be grown thus in even much colder sections, as the plants and covering required to protect them would catch as much snow as would be needed to protect the roots of the trees.

THE ORANGE SCALE.

The California orange grower has lately had to cope with one of the most serious pests which have troubled him—the orange scale, which has appeared in several colors and is analogous to the San Jose scale. Usual methods of spraying with bordeaux or lime-sulphur solutions seem to be ineffective. The method at present followed is to cover the trees with a tight canvas and give a thorough fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas, one of the most deadly volatile poisons known, which is sure death to all forms of animal or bacterial life with which it comes in contact. The process is a tedious and expensive one, as it takes some time to treat each tree, but it is the only way out for those who hope to produce an orange crop which will pass muster at the packing house.

Losses from lightning over the country were $6,000,000 last year, and 60 per cent of the fire losses in country districts for this period were directly traceable to lightning.

Where small fruit trees are damaged by hail they may be helped out by cutting off the badly injured limbs and even a portion of the trunk. This will induce a growth of new limbs to take the place of the old. If the trunk is badly injured it would probably be best to remove it entirely and reset with a new one.

Texas leads all other states in the variety of cactuses which grow within her borders, California being a close second. These vary in size from those that are of a delicate and fragile type to those that grow eight or ten feet high and have much the appearance of trees. In blossom the variation in color, size and form is almost as great.

To prove beyond question the increasing prosperity of Kansas one need only cite the fact that, while in 1891 the Sunflower State grew but 34,384 acres of alfalfa, this area was increased in 1907 to 743,050 acres, and for the present year the last named figures are doubtless far outgrown, like the small boy's year before last suit.

A sketch of the history of the alfalfa plant appearing in a late agricultural paper holds that it originated southwest of the central part of Asia, which is the district generally credited with being the location of the garden of Eden. If this theory can be worked out it seems that we should have a feeling of gratitude for Adam for being the disseminator of this great legume, in spite of the fact that we usually credit him with being responsible for weed pests that succeeding generations have been cursed with.

Not in many a year has there been a more magnificent crop of wheat harvested than has been secured during the past few weeks in the great wheat belt lying just west of the Mississippi river. Let the great forests of corn but bring forth to maturity without killing frost the myriad ears that are already in sight and there will be granaries and cribs everywhere that will be literally full to overflowing. This means that confidence, prosperity and good times are going to prevail in a degree seldom witnessed in the history of the country.

Breeders of Guernsey cattle in the state of Michigan are much interested in a move which has lately been made whereby Grosse isle, near Detroit, is to be turned into a Guernsey island where no cattle will be kept but thoroughbreds of this popular dairy breed. Last year sixteen thoroughbred cows were imported from the island of Guernsey, in the English channel. One of the hobbies of the men who are interested in the enterprise is clean milk, and this product will be shipped to Detroit for local consumption. The move is bound to give the breeding of Guernsey cattle a boost as well as the general dairy interests of the state.

In favoring a narrower highway some have argued that the sale of this redeemed land would aggregate $30,000 per township on the basis of a valuation of $125 per acre and could be well used as a fund for improving the roads in the territory. This plan is all right in theory, but the fact of the matter is that in the case of a vacation of a part or all of the highway the land so vacated reverts to the owner of the adjoining property, whose it was before the road was established. But notwithstanding this a narrowing of the road a couple of rods would in a majority of cases be the means of reducing just that amount the unsightly weeds and grass at either side, which often, owing to the way the road is graded, it is almost impossible to cut with a machine.

For the past two or three years a considerable increase in the consumption of oranges has been effected through advertising certain weeks as "orange" week, during which fruit of especial quality would be put on the market and very reasonable prices would prevail. Much has been done to popularize this fine fruit through just such well managed publicity campaigns. Following along lines somewhat similar, the raisin growers of California adopted a scheme last spring, advertising April 29 extensively as "raisin" day, the idea being to cultivate a taste for and increase the consumption of raisins as a table fruit. While not all of the thirty-five tons of raisins produced in the San Joaquin valley in 1908 were disposed of as a result of the campaign, a much greater quantity was consumed than would have been under normal conditions.

An eleven acre orchard located in the Yakima valley, in south central Washington, changed hands recently at $30,000, the buildings on the place having a value of about $3,000. This meant that the orchard proper, which comprised about ten acres set in five-year-old trees was valued at $2,700 an acre. The setting of so high a price on fruit ranches of this kind is due to the fact that from eight years of age and up orchards in this section frequently give a net return of from $500 to $1,200 per acre. It is this productive capacity which makes raw sagebrush land well located with water available worth all the way from $500 to $1,000 per acre. Land in the corn and small grain belt is roughly considered worth per acre six times its annual net productive capacity. On the basis of this ratio it will easily be seen why western fruit ranches are held so valuable.

A heavy frost which hits an immature corn crop impairs its usefulness in just about the same degree that the smoking of cigarettes impairs the vitality of a small boy. In both instances a pretty effective crimp is put on further progress or usefulness.

There was recently captured at San Pedro, Cal., a sea turtle seven feet long weighing about a thousand pounds and thought by those acquainted with this type of sea life to be at least a thousand years old. Those who caught the turtle tried to land it alive, but it became entangled in the buoy ropes and was finally towed in dead.

A Peruvian strain of alfalfa is being developed by the department of agriculture which, it is claimed, grows more rapidly, starts earlier in the spring and grows later in the autumn and will stand more severe winters than the ordinary kinds. Officials of the department predict that it will be introduced into the northern states in the near future.

If buyers do not give the price for a product which the grower feels he should in fairness receive, it may be well for him to harvest his product and hold it for a better price, provided it is not of too perishable a character. This would hold true of apples, potatoes, onions, beans, several root crops and likewise the grain crops. This can, of course, be more effectively done if those interested in a given product cooperate to secure the end sought.

Of the imported summer help which has assisted in securing the great grain crops of the Dakotas, Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma none has been found more satisfactory from the employer's standpoint than the many college boys who have taken this means of swelling the fund which is to help carry them through the coming year's schooling. Not only have they been found active and intelligent, but energetic and willing to perform the duty required of them.

The Shasta daisy, one of the finest floral creations which Luther Burbank has to his credit, is seen gracing many a western park and garden and furnishes one of the finest features in the floral display to be found at the Seattle exposition. It is a rank and thrifty grower and has a beautiful blossom with hollow heart and pure white strap shaped petals which often have a spread of three inches. It wins admiration from all who see it, and it will not be long until all up to date florists will have it in stock.

A Minnesota feeder has a good word to say for the Jerusalem artichoke, a distant cousin of the wild artichoke which has proved a pest in many a tilled field. He has found that horses, cattle, hogs, sheep and goats like the tubers and even eat the leaves, while some feeders use the tops as silage. He suggests the artichoke as a ration along with alfalfa or clover pasture, the animals being finished for market with an added ration of ground oats and peas, wheat or barley. Farther south corn would naturally be the finisher.

Many a farmer in sections where the usual rainfall is ample, but likely to be a little short during the latter part of July and August, might well learn a helpful lesson from the irrigation farmer of semiarid sections of the west, who, shortly after flooding his orchard or other cultivated crop, at once proceeds by careful cultivation and harrowing to make a mulch of fine mellow soil on the surface and thus retain the moisture which the soil has been given with much pains on his part. The principle holds as well whether the moisture comes from a ditch or falls from the clouds.

Some experiments which have been conducted by the department of agriculture have made clear the important fact that the work of insects, and especially the borer known as the "sawyer," may be very greatly reduced if the bark of such trees is removed within a month after being blown over or if they are cut into logs without removing the bark and placed in ponds or streams. In the case of timber which is allowed to lie with the bark on it has been found that its value is reduced about one-third within a period of two months. When so much attention is being given to a conservation of our forest resources, a suggestion of this kind ought to be well received by those whom it most directly concerns.

One of the most deplorable sights which the traveler through the west sees is large areas of fertile mountain slopes which have been denuded of their magnificent growth of conifers by the deadly fumes of copper smelteries or the terrible forest fires set by sparks from passing trains, by the campfire of careless hunter or axman or by revengeful Indians who have sought by this means to debar the white hunter from a territory over which its primal owner could no longer hold sway. So intense have been some of these fires that not only the giants of the forest have been killed and in many cases half burned by the conflagration, but all seeds and seedlings destroyed, which will prevent reforestation except by artificial planting. In most cases the land referred to is too rough and steep for tillage, so it is doomed to idleness until such time as systematic planting is undertaken.

The common sow thistle is making its nroads on many farms in this valley. It is a dangerous weed, as when it once gets possession of the soil it is difficult to make a successful fight against it. Many farms in other parts of the state have been abandoned on account of this weed. It behooves every farmer therefore to destroy the sow thistle wherever and whenever it makes its appearance on the farm. Failure to do so will eventually drive away the farmer.—Ex.

As the result of a law passed by the 1907 legislature the state board of equalization is no longer in existance, and this year for the first time the assessments of the various counties will be equalized by the state tax commission. It is argued that as the tax commission has permanent offices and a force of statistican and clerks at its command this body is better qualified to equalize the taxes.

We notice by the papers that we are practically free from the mosquito post as compared with some of the southern countries. In Texas the mosquitoes are so bad that cattle leave the grazing grounds and travel for miles to the Gulf so as to get into the water to rid themselves of them. There they starve rather than go back to grazing and mosquitoes. Travel is impeded and work stopped in many places as the post is so bad as to make work without covering hands and face almost impossible.

RUSH WORK ON SOO LINE

Grading on Thief River Falls—Duluth Line to Be Completed This Fall.

Steel to Be Laid and Road to Be in Operation by the 15th of July Next Year.

The following taken from the Superior Telegram of Aug. 23, will be of much local interest:

Camps are being erected all along the line of the Soo's Thief River Falls line by Foley, Walsh & Stewart, the contractors who are to do the Grading on the road.

The line which is 220 miles long is to be graded before the snow flies this winter if possible and in any case the work must all be completed by next spring so that the tracklaying crew can then go to work. It is the intention to have the new line in operation by the middle of next July.

The Thief River Falls line leaves the Brooten extension, which is just being completed, at Moose Lake. The line hen runs northwest and crosses the Northern Pacific at McGregor. The Mississippi will be bridged at a point 20 miles north of Atkin. A bill granting permission to erect the bridge across the river at this point was passed at the last session of congress.

The completion of the new line will give the Soo direct connections between the head of the lakes and Winnipeg. the new line and the recently acquired Wisconsin Central gives the Soo a direct line from Chicago to the Canadian metropolis and it is reported that it is the intention to run trains between the two cities on a 20-hour schedule.

Damaged by Storm.

Reports from the town of Rollis are to the effect that there was quite a severe wind storm in that township last Saturday. Quite an amount of damage was done to numerous houses and barns, and the store building of Hjertos and Dalquist at Fram was removed from its foundation by the storm.

Dairymen's Convention.

The next convention of the Red River Valley Dairymen's Association to be held in Crookston, on Nov. 3rd and 4th next. This was the decision of the excutive board which met last Saturday evening in Crookston. President Wm. Robertson and Secretary Storvick of Crookston, and Treasurer Harms of Ada, were present at the meeting and while several towns extended invitions to the association to hold its next meeting within their respective borders. the committees decided in favor of Crookston.

Find Iron Ore.

While excavating the basement for the new armory workmen discovered a quantity of rock and other material giving every indication of being iron ore. On closer inspection by those familar with iron range ores and by comparison with ores from that section, the opinion that actual iron ore has been found here is confirmed. How extensive is the body, and of what commercial value it may prove to be are matters of mere conjecture. The samples are on view in an office here and will be forwarded to the cities for expert examination.

Meat Market Prices.

The owners of meat markets in this city held a meeting the first of the week and decided to close their places of business at 8 o'clock each evening in the future. They also agreed upon a new schedule of prices, which are the same as at present with the exception of pork.

The following are the new prices:

A Bad Storm.

A terrific rain and electrical storm, accompanied with heavy wind, visited a portion of Polk county about midnight Monday night and barns and all standing crops are in ruins.

The worst damage was done at Beltrami, about 20 miles south of Crookston. Here streets were flooded, store windows broken and over a score of houses overturned. Many barns in the vicinity were razed. At Shelley and Climax considerable damage of a similar character was done. Dozens of horses and many cattle were killed. The loss will reach into the thousands.

Rev. Gilchrist was down to Red Lake Falls the first of week.

BIDS WERE TOO HIGH

Contract for Construction of the Armory and Auditorium Was Not Let Tuesday.

New Plans and Specifications to Be Drawn and Bids Opened on Sept. 4.

At a special meeting of the city council held on Tuesday afternoon all bids for the erection of the proposed new armory and auditorium for Thief River Falls were rejected on account of being too high. The members of the council had anticipated spending between $30,000 and $40,000 for this structure completed in all details, but according to the bids received Tuesday, the cost of the building completed would be between $50,000 and $60,000. The lowest bid for constructing the building was $34,980, and this did not include the finishing of the basement which is to be quite an expensive job. The lowest bid for doing the plumbing and heating was submitted by Emil Dryfos of this city. Mr. Dryfos not only agreed to do this work for $4,995, but also guaranteed to keep it in repair for a period of two years free of charge to the city, and his bid was much lower than his nearest competitor.

The members of the council decided to have a large share of ornamental part of the building cut out and new plans and specifications drawn, and the contract will be let on Saturday, Sept. 4. It is still hoped by the council to have the building completed this fall.

New Binder Works Well.

There has been considerable speculation as to whether the binder which is being manufactured at the Minnesota State Prison would "make good," and much interest is being taken in the trial of the prison made machine.

One was tried near Moorhead last week, and the Crookston Times says of the trial:

"A number of persons who are interested in the work of the new binder sent out from the state plant at Stillwater, went out to the Anderson farm near Moorhead, yesterday, and watched the working of the machine. Among those who were competant to judge the binder was declared to be a success. It worked perfectly, ran with ordinary lightness, and never missed a bundle.

"The knotter or binder used is the Minneapolis, and the reel, which, in the matter of different adjustments, possesses a number of material advantages.

"The new binder is built upon the same general lines as the Massey-Harris binder, built in Canada, and not patented in this country."

Soo Surveyors Coming.

Reports from Clearwater county are to the effect that the Soo surveyors, who are making the survey of the Duluth-Thief River Falls line are in that country and are making progress slowly towards Thief River Falls. Three teams are required to haul the camping outfit, and there is quite a large crew of men at work. The line surveyed through Clearwater county is about sixteen miles north of Bagley and is running in a northwesterly direction straight to Thief River Falls. It is expected that the survey will be completed in about four or six weeks.

THE REAL MYSTERY OF THE CASE.

By GEORGE A. PARKER.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

We detectives have opportunities to see further into human nature than any class of men, except physicians, and I am not sure but that our opportunities are superior to theirs. One of the strangest insights that were ever accorded me came through the Gilbert case. I was called one day to the house of Joseph Gilbert, whose son Edgar had been taken suddenly ill after smoking a cigar. It was one of a small package received anonymously. An analysis showed that the cigars had been steeped in a deadly poison.

The young man was unconscious of having an enemy. I questioned him closely, asking him to mention any one who might have the slightest motive to injure him. I inquired as to his relations with the softer sex, and he told me that he had had several mild affairs of the heart, but none of them, at least on his part or so far as he could judge of the girls' either, had ever amounted to anything serious.

I left the remaining cigars on a table in the smoking room, establishing a watch upon them, thinking that if the enemy was a member of the household he or she would attempt to remove them. But after they had been there a week I took them away. I compared the handwriting on the package with that of every correspondent Edgar Gilbert furnished me, and those he did not have he procured on some pretext. I could see no resemblance in any of them to that of the address. None of the expedients I tried afforded me the slightest clew. At last I gave up the case, acknowledging myself beaten.

A year later I received a note from Mr. Gilbert, Sr., informing me that his son was about to be married; that the young man's mother had all sorts of vague apprehensions that some woman had tried to poison him through jealousy and she desired I would keep watch over him until the ceremony had been performed and his safety seemed to be assured.

I called at the house and was accorded an interview with Edgar Gilbert and his fiancee, Miss Withers, both happening to be there together. The moment the girl looked me in the eye a suspicion came over me that I had found the person who had tried to poison Edgar Gilbert. How or why I divined this I cannot explain, even to myself. She knew what I was there for and seemed interested in my protecting her lover. There was no betrayal of emotion, no shrinking toward me, no disposition to avoid my gaze.

But what a position I was in—my client about to marry a girl who I felt sure had tried to poison him and I not having a shadow of proof by which to prevent him! The wedding was to take place in three days. I must make haste.

Learning that a sewing woman was employed in the house of Miss Withers, I paid her well to secure me a specimen of the handwriting of every woman in the house and those who were the bride's bosom friends. There were three of the former and two of the latter. In the handwriting of the bride expectant's most intimate friend I found a chirography identical with the address on the package. Making the lady's acquaintance, I satisfied myself that she had only addressed the package as a favor and had no remembrance of having done so. From her I learned that young Gilbert's fiancee had at the time the cigars were sent received his attention, and he had jilted her, causing her great unhappiness. At that period, too, she was ill.

I learned all this without giving up any knowledge whatever. I was puzzled whether to stop the marriage or let it go on. After reflection I decided to shift the responsibility. Learning the name of Miss Withers' physician, I told him the story. He was greatly astonished, but soon recalled the fact that during the period of the attempted murder he had attended Miss Withers and had observed certain indications of a temporary aberration of mind. Indeed, for a brief season he had kept her under a strict watch. When the physical cause of the trouble passed away the tendency to insanity passed with it.

The doctor transmitted my report to the father of the groom, and so late as the day before the wedding was to come off a consultation was held between the parent and the physician, at which it was decided to call in the young man and impart to him the situation.

He suffered a terrible shock. He was about to rush away to confront the girl he was to marry the next morning with the accusation when his father stopped him, and the doctor explained that she might possibly be unconscious of ever having committed the crime. An accusation, especially at such a time, might be attended with serious effects. Before the conference was ended the young man decided, with his father's consent, that the marriage should take place without any postponement.

The doctor was to discover whether the bride was conscious of her act and promised to inform me of the result of his investigation. His report was that she had no consciousness of it whatever.

What was it that conveyed the information of it to me? That is a mystery I have never solved.

DISTINGUISHING SNAKES.

How to Tell Dangerous Ones From the Harmless.

The arrival of vacation time and the consequent excursions into meadow and mountain land give timely interest to a small pamphlet written by Raymond L. Ditmars, curator of reptiles in the New York zoological park, entitled "Poisonous Snakes of the United States—How to Distinguish Them."

"It is not generally appreciated," says Mr. Ditmars in this pamphlet, "that inhabiting the United States are some of the most deadly known species of snakes, and these fairly teem in some parts of the country. Even in the east—in the immediate vicinity of well known summering places—poisonous snakes are abundant. It is well to know how to distinguish them from the many harmless and really beneficial reptiles.

"As will presently be explained, the North American dangerous snakes may be easily distinguished, except two, and these are the coral snakes, having a slender body and a head not at all distinct from the neck—in fact, looking precisely like the harmless reptiles. And they actually belong to the same family as the innocuous serpents—the colubridae. This family is divided into a number of subfamilies. The cobras and their deadly allies of the old world and the coral snakes of the new world form one of these subfamilies—the elapinae. From the typical harmless snakes they differ only in the possession of a very short, fixed pair of venom conducting teeth in the forward part of the upper jaw and by the absence of a small scale on each side of the head (the loreal plate), between the eye and the nostril. Fortunately, such deceptive looking reptiles are limited to two species in the United States. As they are peculiarly colored they may be recognized with little difficulty.

"Both of the species of the claps inhabit the southern part of the country. The common coral snake or harlequin snake occurs from southern North Carolina to Florida and westward to Texas. It is most abundant in Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Louisiana. The Sonoran coral snake is restricted to Arizona, New Mexico and northern Mexico. Both of the species are vividly ringed with scarlet, yellow and black—the red and black rings the broadest.

"Described in detail, the pattern of the coral snakes may be given as broad, alternating rings of red and black, the latter bordered with very narrow rings of yellow. And here we encounter a difficulty, for several harmless snakes 'mimic' these species in displaying exactly the same colors and arranged in ringlike fashion. Yet there is one unvarying difference that will always distinguish the dangerous reptiles from their innocuous 'imitators,' as the yellow rings of the poisonous snakes always border the black rings, while among the non-venomous snakes there are pairs of black rings bordering a yellow one.

"The crotaline snakes, the rattlesnakes, copperhead and the moccasin may be easily told. We may dispose of the rattlesnakes with a simple suggestion, and that is to look for the rattle, a prominent and an absolutely unique organ among snakes. Its presence immediately brands the owner as a dangerous reptile.

"Thus we understand how to recognize all of the North American poisonous snakes except the moccasins—two species."

How to Remove Grease From Soup.

"You never can use that broth today," said an old housekeeper who was making a rich lamb broth for an invalid. "It will be so greasy no digestion could stand it."

"Watch me," laughed the girl, "and your experience may gain a lesson from a novice."

She cut half dozen squares of brown paper that fitted easily over the top of the soup kettle and put a layer over the floating grease on top of the liquid. In a short time the paper was soaked with grease and was removed and thrown into the stove. The other pieces of paper in turn were used in the same way until the broth was freer from grease than if it had been stood on the ice for a day to form a solid cake.

How to Brighten Gold Ornaments.

Even a gold hatpin will grow tarnished, and the best in this condition is anything but ornamental. When the workmanship is such that the usual brushing process is out of the question put the pin heads in a tumbler of ammonia in which two tablespoonfuls of some powder cleaner is placed. This settles to the bottom, and the pin can be churned back and forth on the substance and cleaned. This is an excellent method for cleaning hatpins containing small jewels. Any soap powder can be added to the ammonia. Belt pins and buckles can be cleaned in the same manner.

How to Take Grease From Carpets.

An excellent paste for getting grease from carpets is made by mixing fuller's earth with ammonia and water. Apply the mixture thick, let it remain overnight, then remove with a stiff brush. The ammonia may be omitted if the colors in the carpet are delicate. After the grease is out the colors may be freshened by sweeping with moist salt.

How to Get an Insect Out of the Ear.

An insect in the ear may be destroyed by pouring a teaspoonful of warm olive oil or camphorated oil into the ear and keeping it there for some time, holding the head in a position to retain the oil, which will afterward come away with the dead insect.

THE CHIEF VESTAL.

By NORA E. RECTOR.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

In the middle of the fourth century A. D. the struggle between paganism and Christianity at Rome was drawing to a close. The Emperor Constantine still maintained the worship of the immortal gods, but his wife, the empress, secretly practiced the rites of the new religion. Nevertheless, since paganism was as yet the established worship of the state, those who openly avowed Christianity were still amenable to the terrible punishments inflicted by the earlier emperors.

Even the virgins appointed to keep up the sacred fire in the temple of Vesta, located in the center of the Roman forum, were becoming disaffected toward the religion under which for a thousand years their order had enjoyed inestimable privileges. So great was the honor attached to the position of vestal that every Roman girl aspired to the appointment. There were but six of them, dwelling in a marble house near the temple, served by numerous attendants and slaves. They were free to go anywhere unattended, and in the Coliseum a special box opposite that of the emperor was provided for them. If, then, the religion of Jesus was beginning to affect these most honored of Roman women, if it had already won over the empress, would it not soon carry with it the emperor, the senate and the Roman people?

One morning Claudia, the chief vestal, riding in her carriage for an airing, saw the sun glistening on the breastplates and helmets of a knot of soldiers. When they came near they halted and reverently made way for her to pass. A prisoner whom they were conducting alone stood erect in the presence of the sacred personage. He was Julius Flavius, a young Christian, who had openly refused to bow his head at the sacrifices to Jupiter and was being taken to the Mamertine prison to be strangled.

The vestal sat looking at the man, whose glance, rebellious at the reverence paid her pagan office, was lighted by a fire far more sacred than that over which she presided—love. In the two the conflicting religions met, and Claudia, touched also by the only immortal pagan god, spiritually yielded mastery to this servant of a new deity.

"Take off his chains," said the vestal to the officer in command.

"An order from the emperor?" asked the officer hesitatingly.

"No—by the privilege vested in me as one of the six virgins appointed to keep up the sacred fire. Whence came you that you do not know that any prisoner meeting one of our number goes free? Let fall his chains."

"Pardon," said the officer, bowing the knee humbly before her. "For years I have served in Gaul, and many of our home customs are unknown to me. Your sacred word is enough."

Approaching the prisoner, he took off his chains, and Julius Flavius stood before his liberator a free man.

"You have deprived me of the blessings of martyrdom," he said to her, "but you have prolonged my life that I may spread the faith of Jesus the Christ. May he win you, too, into the true church."

Claudia made no reply.

She ordered her charioteer to drive on. Flavius stood looking after her, hoping that she would turn her head, but she did not. When he came back to his surroundings he stood alone.

Above the house of the vestals towered a wing of the imperial palace. That night Claudia, climbing the height, entered the chamber of the empress and, tearing the filet from her brow, threw herself into her imperial mistress' arms and poured into her ear a renunciation of paganism, a confession of the new religion.

Aided by the new ally, Flavius approached the emperor and besought him to declare as the religion of the state that faith which he had already adopted in his heart. The appeal was successful. When the morning came an edict went forth banishing the heathen gods.

The edict was all that saved Claudia from a terrible death. But paganism, though it had received its deathblow, was not dead, and Claudia, before free and honored among women, now dared not show her face on the streets of Rome. But Julius Flavius, whom she had saved from martyrdom, was taken up by the emperor and advanced as a concession to the Christian faction. In the imperial palace he again met the woman who had saved his life and whose immortal soul he had turned in the way of salvation. How different the meeting from that when Claudia was Vestala Maxima and Julius, loaded with chains, was on his way to the prison where Jugurtha and the Catiline conspirators had perished. She whom he could not revere as a pagan he worshiped as his Christian love.

In the ruins of the house of vestals at Rome there are a number of pedestals on which are the remains of statues of the last of the virgins who lived there. On one is an inscription in Latin praising the Vestala Maxima for her many virtues and her proficiency in the tenets of the pagan religion. One word of the inscription has been chiseled from the marble—the name of her whose praises are sounded. But the first and last letter remain, the first and last of the word Claudia. It is known that at the time of this story a Vestala Maxima went over to the new religion. Was the Claudia who saved Julius Flavius the Claudia whose name was erased from the pedestal and the Vestala Maxima one and the same person?

Cured Hay Fever And Summer Cold.

A. S. Nusbaum, Bascevlle, Indiana writes: "Last year I suffered for three months with a summer cold so distressing that it interfered with my business. I had many of the symptoms of hay fever and a doctor's prescription did not reach my case, and I took several medicines which seemed only to aggravate it. Fortunately I insisted upon having Foley's Honey and Tar. It quickly cured me. My wife has since used Foley's Honey and Tar with the same success." A. Bjerkhoel.

THIS is the hardware man who took
At the jeweler's ad. a careful look,
Then went and bought some trinkets neat
For a girl whom he thought was very sweet
And paid for them with the clothier's bill
That came from the furniture dealer's till,
Where it went when the dry goods merchant bought
And paid with the bill the butcher got
From the grocer who had settlement made
With money the honest workman paid

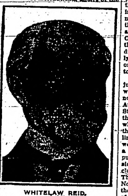
SWELL INTERNATIONAL AFFAIR

Dinner In Honor of the Crownprince and Crownprincess of Sweden Given at Dorchester House, In England, by Ambassador and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid —Mrs. Potter Palmer, Admiral Capps and Major General Barry Among the Americans Present.

SWEDEN.

The crownprince and crownprincess of Sweden were not only entertained by the Astors, but they were also feted by Ambassador Reid and wife, who gave a dinner and dance in their honor, which, it is reported, was one of the swellest international affairs of the season. This was the last Dorchester House entertainment of the season and stands unequalled in in London by any diplomat of any nationality. The dinner guests included the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, Paul Cambon, the French ambassador; the Swedish minister and Countess Wrangel, Mrs. Frederick Vanderbilt, Mrs. Potter Palmer, Major General Thomas H. Barry, Rear Admiral Washington L. Capps, U. S. N.; Lord and Lady Desborough, the Marquis and Machioness of Londonderry and Sir Charles and Lady Hardinge. Both the young Swedish crownprince and crownprincess were exceedingly popular during their visit in London, and the entertainments given in their honor were lavish.



WHITELAW REID.

According to reports the Employers' association is in such complete ascendency in Stockholm that it refused the offer of a group of leaders of independent political parties to negotiate a settlement on a basis of the return of the strikers under the old conditions. The Employers' association said it was already the winner and would make its own terms with those who wished to return to work. The rejection of the offer indicated that the strikers will be fortunate if they are not actually forced to lose ground as the result of the strike.

There are at present in Sweden very nearly a half a million temperance people. In exact language there are 475,000. Of these 205,000 are Good Templars, 96,000 belong to the Blue Ribbon order, 69,000 to the Templar order, 46,000 to the National Good Templar order, 27,000 to the Verdandi order, 12,000 to the S. S. U. H., 6,000 to the White Band, besides 4,000 railway employes, and 10,000 scattered prohibitionists who belong to various societies and orders.

The members of the French parliament and their ladies, who have been paying a visit to the northern capitals, were well received in Stockholm. They were entertained by the city council and King Gustaf gave a swell garden party in their honor at the Royal Palace. They spoke in terms of high praise regarding their journey in the north and of the open-hearted hospitality which had been extended them on every hand.

M. Legagneau, a Frenchman, made an ascension with his aeroplane in Stockholm, July 24. He circled above "Ladugaragarde" and did not seem to have much trouble in managing his air craft. After remaining in the air for about forty minutes he landed his craft safely on terra firma about seven miles from Stockholm.

Another great sangarfest will be held in Stockholm in 1912. A committee has already been appointed to make all the necessary preparations, and it will thus be held in connection with the Olympian games. The great concert which was held in Skansen July 18 of this year, netted a sum of $10,000.

The Maria Magdalene church in Stockholm will soon be submitted to a through renovation. The repairs on the exterior of the building have already commenced. The church will have new decorations entirely and as it is all planned on an elaborate scale, it will not be competed for at least two years.

During their visit to England recently the Crownprince and Crownprincess of Sweden were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Waldorf Astor at Cliveden, in the vicinity of London. They were royally entertained by the former American and his wife.

If Bjornstjerne Bjornson's health will permit he will probably attend the international peace congress, which will be held in Stockholm from Aug. 29 to Sept. 3. Berta Von Sutter, another Noble prize winner, will also be present.

Premier Lindeman is at present enjoying his vacation, which ends the 23th of this month. He is spending most of his time in Helsingland, where the summer weather is fine and cool at this season of the year.

NORWAY.

"Milk and oatmeal," not the kind of oatmeal that is sold on the general market in the United States, but real old, coarse ground oats, is getting popular in Norway once more and this is certainly well. During the last twenty-five years this simple old dish has not been as popular on the table as formerly, but with the increase of appendicitis and poor digestion, the Norwegian people are going back to the good old dish of "mjolk og havregraut." The doctors, too, are recommending it strongly and say that the old standby is the best after all. People in former years were very much more healthy in Norway than they are today and many physicians believe that it is the introduction of delicacies in food that has caused so much sickness. The old fashioned dishes are, therefore, becoming popular again and may this be true the world over. Oatmeal and milk is nourishing and there have been several cases of indigestion right in Christiania recently which have been effectively cured on the simple diet. Therefore back to "mjolk and havregraut."

The court of arbitration which has just closed a series of meetings which were held at Stromstad, Sweden, has not as yet completed its deliberations. At the close of the meetings in Stromstad they were taken on board the Swedish gunboat "Svensksund," which took them over the route which they believe should be the boundary line. Then the members of the court were landed at Kloster, which affords a splendid view of the waters in dispute. The court held an official session at the Vette town hall, and this closed the work on the Swedish side. They spent the following week on the Norwegian side and the Norwegian authorities accommodated the members of the court as best they could. Within a few days the court will hold its regular meetings and negotiations at The Hague, when it is hoped that the matter can be satisfactorily settled to suit both sides. Yet this may be doubtful.

The reports regarding Emperor William's movements are so changeable, especially when it comes to recording the time when he usually takes his cruise on the west coast of Norway, that they often lose their significance. The fact of the matter is, however, that the emperor did go to Norway this summer, although the general dispatches stated that he had changed his mind. The "Hohenzollern" with Emperor William on board arrived in the Bergen harbor on the afternoon of July 19 last. Consul Mohr was the first one to step on board, accompanied by the commander of the battleship "Norge." King Haakon arrived during the night from Christiania and gave a breakfast in honor of the emperor on board the "Norge" the following morning. The following day Consul Mohr gave a dinner in honor of the distinguished guest. Emperor William entertained King Haakon and his adjutants on the "Hohenzollern" in the evening.

The tourist hotels and inns are filled and the boats on all the popular tourist routes are overcrowded. There are more tourists in Norway this year than there ever has been before and the hotel men especially are making good money. Tourists buy souvenirs for thousands of crowns and keepers of souvenir and relic shops are also reaping a harvest.

DENMARK.

The ministerial crisis which followed the resignation of the Danish cabinet last month because of its failure to secure the support of parliament for its project of military defense, came to an end on Aug. 16 with the formation of a new cabinet under the premiership of Count Holstein-Ledrebord. J. C. Christensen is minister of war and marine; former Premier Neergaard minister of finance, and Thomas Larsen minister of public works. Count Ahlfeldt-Laurwig, E. Sorensen, F. S. Hoegsbro, A. Nielsen, K. Bernitsen and O. Hansen, retain, respectively, the porfolios of foreign affairs, education justice, agriculture, interior and commerce.

Denmark will adopt the Swedish custom of celebrating "May Flower Day," when May flowers will be sold at 10 ore a piece and the proceeds will go to some benevolent cause. In Sweden this has been very successful. The last May day there flowers to the amount of 131,000 crowns were sold in different parts of the country and the funds thus collected will be used for fighting tuberculosis among children. It is possible that Denmark will also devote the proceeds from the sale of flowers for the same purpose. It is a beautiful custom, and is productive of a vast amount of good.

There will in the near future be a homeopathic hospital erected in Denmark, which when completed, will be the only one of its kind in northern Europe. A site has already been selected for it in Copenhagen and a sum of $5,000 has been collected for it. It will cost about $10,000.

The Home Mission society of Copenhagen has recently received a donation of 5,000 crowns from Director William Bentzman and his late wife.

FOREIGN NEWS.

American participation in the Hankow-Szechuen railroad loan was definitely settled at the offices of the foreign board at Peking by Henry P. Fletcher, the American charge d'affaires, and Lian Tun Yen, president of the board. The loan is to be increased from $27,500,000 to $30,000,000 and of this latter amount American bankers are to get one-quarter, the other three-quarters going to British, French and German interests.

The memorandum signed at Mukden, Manchuria, Aug. 19 by representatives of the Japanese and Chinese governments practically closed the Antung-Mukden controversy. According to the terms of this understanding China agrees to afford Japan every assistance in the reconstruction of the Antung-Mukden railroad and withdraws all her objections.

The Greek flag, raised three weeks ago by the people of Crete in defiance of the sovereignty of Turkey and as an evidence of their desire for union with the kingdom of Greece, has been lowered by a party of international bluejackets. There was no resistance on the part of the Cretans.

M. Guseff, private secretary to Count Leo Tolstoi, has been exiled for a period of two years. He was found guilty of circulating Tolstoi's pamphlet entitled, "Thou Shalt Not Murder," which is a plea against the infliction of the death penalty.

The death list is steadily being increased as returns from the recent disastrous earthquake in Japan come in and it is now believed that fully 150 persons were either killed by falling walls or drowned by the overflowing of the Hida river.

The end of the labor troubles, which became acute in Stockholm the early part of this month, is in sight. The leaders of the various unions have opened negotiations with the employers with the object of having the men resume work.

Fire destroyed property in the business center of Monterey, Mex., to the value of about $1,500,000. The whole business section of the city was threatened, but escaped destruction largely because there was no wind.

The government report on forest fires in Canada last year shows that timber was damaged to the extent of $25,500,000 and that twenty-one lives were lost. Forty million feet were burned in British Columbia.

The sultan of Morocco has sent a written communication to the Riffs, who are opposing the Spanish expedition at Melilla, ordering them to suspend the struggle until the arrival of an imperial mission.

A $200,000 fire wiped out twenty-two buildings at Coal Creek, near Fernie, B. C.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

The Fuller prohibition bill has become a law in Alabama. The measure forbids the possession of liquor except in private residences, makes the use of the word saloon a crime, bars the advertisement of liquors from billboards and signs and holds that even possession of a federal liquor license is an absolute proof of guilt in selling intoxicants.

Addressing the convention of the National Association of First Class Postmasters at Toledo, O., Postmaster General Frank H. Hitchcock made public announcement of a policy of strict economy throughout the department, with which he requested the postmasters to comply.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

State Auditor Iverson has issued a warrant to Justice C. B. Elliott, now of the supreme court of the Philippines, for his salary for the month of August as a justice of the Minnesota supreme court. The payment was made on the strength of an opinion from Attorney General Simpson, who held that the half salary which Elliott began to draw from the insular government from the time he left Minneapolis in July was more in the nature of an allowance for traveling than a salary.

Fergus Falls has become tired of feeding tramps and other undesirables at the county jail and the city attorney was instructed some weeks ago to draft an ordinance under which they could be put to work. In examining the city ordinances he found one adopted twenty-nine years ago and immediately afterwards forgotten which gives exactly the power required and the council immediately adopted a resolution requesting the city justices to put it into execution.

According to reports received from the state board of health Winona's water supply is not such as to commend it for general public use and in consequence the board of municipal works, which has charge of the water department, has issued a notice advising citizens not to make use of the water for drinking purposes without boiling it first.

Reports of City Assessor G. L. Fort indicate that the assessed valuation of Minneapolis has grown about 70 per cent in a decade. Ten years ago the city paid a tax on property assessed at $106,729,165. The assessed valuation, according to figures obtained after the city board of equalization reviewed the work for this year, is $178,277,161.

State Auditor Iverson and Immigration Commissioner George Welsh have signed the contract for space for an exhibit at the National Land and Irrigation congress, which is to be held at the Coliseum at Chicago Nov. 20 to Dec. 4. They propose to make an extensive exhibit of Minnesota products at the show.

Wolves are numerous in the vicinity of Foley. They have invaded farm buildings and have taken many chickens, ducks and geese. They do not go to their lairs in the woods during the day, but hide in the cornfields instead.

An informal reunion of members of the 1909 Minnesota legislature will be held at the state fair on Sept. 8, according to a plan decided on at St. Paul at a meeting attended by legislators and the board of fair managers.

Farm renters are scarce in Minnesota, but plentiful elsewhere, so George Welsh, state immigration commissioner, has started an advertising campaign to bring renters where there are vacant farms to rent.

The Soo road has awarded a contract to George H. Lounsberry, a Duluth building contractor, for the construction of its new passenger station in Duluth. The estimated cost is $100,000.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Mrs. John Pearson of Aitkin was attacked by two intoxicated men. Her husband ran to her assistance upon hearing her cries and was himself brutally beaten about the head and shoulders and kicked in the stomach. He and his wife are in a dangerous condition. She may die.

Marshal W. R. Newman of Hinckley was shot down while trying to arrest three men suspected of holdups and other crimes. The ball from the gun of one of the suspects broke a bone in the leg of the marshal and his wound is regarded as serious.

A Finn named Lahtaneno, driving a bakery wagon near Buhl, drove into a hole at the curve of the road caused by the elevation of the stripping tracks of Butler Bros., in the darkness, and with his team was drowned.

C. C. Blouch, a well known Stearns county farmer, seventy-seven years old, who recently was terribly injured by the sickle of his mower when his team ran away in a field, is dead in a St. Cloud hospital.

Henry Miller, a stranger, attempted to board a freight train as it was pulling out of Campbell, Otter Tail county, but fell under the wheels. He was killed instantly. Fifteen cars passed over his body.

Vincent Smith, son of Mrs. Rose Smith of Winona, died in Chicago as the result of injuries received by being struck in the back of the head with a baseball.

Seven cases of infantile paralysis, four of which resulted in death, were reported to the state board of health from Finlayson, Pine county.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Oscar Malmros, a distinguished soldier, statesman and lawyer in early Minnesota history and adjutant general under Governor Ramsey from 1861 to 1865, is dead at Rouen, France, where he had served for nearly five years as American consul. Mr. Malmros was eighty three years old.

Andrew E. Johnson, vice president of the A. E. Johnson company of Minneapolis and former president of the Union State bank, is dead in that city at the age of seventy-six years. Mr. Johnson was formerly a member of the Kellogg-Johnson shoe manufacturing firm in St. Paul.

SERIOUS STRIKE AVERTED

Railroads and Twin City Freight Handlers Get Together.

The threatened strike of the clerks and freight handlers in St. Paul and Minneapolis, including the Minnesota Transfer Railway company's depot at Midway, is definitely off, an agreement having been reached for a term which will cover any immediate possibility of further trouble.

The railroad officials are not announcing the exact terms of agreement, but on both sides concessions were made. It is understood that the 4,000 men affected are to receive a little more than 5 per cent increase all along the line, instead of the 10 per cent for which they asked. Overtime will be paid on a scale governed by the character of work done. The union will be recognized, it is reported, although in settling the difference the officials dealt separately with their own group of employes.

SPENDS NIGHT IN HAYSTACK

President Hill of the Great Northern Marooned in Montana.

A Great Falls dispatch says President Louis W. Hill of the Great Northern railway was compelled to spend a night in a haystack. He started from Helena to Great Falls in his automobile. Near Fort Shaw the machine stuck in a mudhole. He applied to a settler for a bed and supper, but was told that he could find a bed in a nearby haystack and that he could help himself to refreshment at the pump.

LOUIS W. HILL.

When he did not appear here on time a searching party started toward Helena. They found the automobile in the mudhole and a short inspection of the nearby neighborhood revealed Mr. Hill and his chauffeur sound asleep in the haystack.

ON EMBEZZLEMENT CHARGE

Municipal Judge at Sauk Center Under Arrest.

Following an investigation by the state public examiner's office on request of Mayor Frank Minnette and the city council of Sauk Center Municipal Judge W. A. Morse was arrested upon a warrant sworn out by County Attorney J. B. Himsl, charging embezzlement of fines paid into his office.

The charges are, in substance, that the judge waved a big stick over his prisoners. They cite that Samuel B. King was arrested July 17, 1907, and placed in jail upon a failure to pay $200 fine. He remained in jail two days. At the end of that time he was released on $50 fine. It is alleged that not a cent of this fine was turned over to the city.

SECURE $50 IN PENNIES

Robbers Fail to Blow Safe in Bank of St. Paul Suburb.

A daring attempt to rob the Twin City bank at St. Anthony Park was frustrated by the strength of the safe in the bank vault.

The robbers took away about $50 in pennies, but were unable to blow open the bank safe, which contained between $1,500 and $2,000.

Big Gift to University.

Thomas B. Shevlin, the millionaire lumberman of Minneapolis, has donated $60,000 to the University of Minnesota and the board of regents accepted it with thanks. Of this sum $10,000 will be used by the board to enlarge Alice Shevlin hall, a gift from the same source, and the other $50,000 will support five scholarships in the university.

Colored Boy Drowned.

Clarence Wiley, colored, eleven years old, was drowned at St. Paul while swimming, and his eight-year-old brother, Jesse Wiley, nearly met death while attempting to save his elder brother. The body was recovered.

Train Kills Miner.

A miner named Frank Pattmona, twenty-seven years of age, was killed by a train at Coleraine. He stepped from the track to avoid a train and was struck by a train going in the opposite direction.

Girl Drowned While Bathing.

Miss Mary Ring, a young schoolteacher, daughter of Mrs. John Ring of Morris, was drowned in the Pomme de Terre river while bathing with a company of girl friends.

BOAT IS SWAMPED

Three Persons Drowned in the St. Croix River.

WAVES WERE RUNNING HIGH

Fourth Member of Party Rescued Clinging to Craft.

Miss Hilda Peterson, aged twenty, daughter of Louis Peterson of Lakeland; Miss Sigria Peterson, her cousin, daughter of Michael Peterson of Moose Lake, who was visiting her, and Louis Wendell, aged eighteen years, only son of a widow of Lakeland, were drowned in the St. Croix river at Lakeland, Washington county.

Harry Staberg, a young man with them, was rescued, clinging to a skiff.

The four in a skiff and another group of young people in another boat had been at Hudson, Wis. They started home about the time a hard wind and rain storm came up. The St. Croix is wide at that point and the waves were running high and swamped the skiff.

HORSE RACE FATAL TO ONE

Ten-Year-Old Girl May Also Succumb to Injuries.

As the result of a friendly horse race between Ferdinand Kieke and August Benoit, who live on farms near St. Augusta, south of St. Cloud, Mrs. Kieke was instantly killed, her ten-year-old daughter was probably fatally injured and Catherine Ruhman of St. Cloud will lose the sight of one eye. They were returning from church and Kieke tried to pass Benoit. The road is narrow and steep at that point and as they were going at breakneck speed Kieke's buggy skidded off of the road and hit a telephone pole. Mrs. Kieke was on that side of the rig.

MAY FREE INNOCENT MAN

Minnesota Convict Confesses to Hold-up Six Years Ago.

Frank Farr, serving a life sentence in the Washington state penitentiary at Walla Walla, may secure his freedom through the instrumentality of James Desmond, recently a convict at Stillwater, but now an inmate of the Rochester state hospital for the insane.

Farr was arrested for holding up the meat market of Miller Bros. in Spokane in 1903 and he was convicted. Six years have passed and now Desmond, an insane patient at Rochester, absolves Farr of all complicity in the crime.

BANK ROBBED AT KARLSTAD

Bandits Have Probably Escaped Into Canada.

Bandits broke into the State bank of Karlstad, blew open the safe, wrecking the interior, and got away with $1,500. They escaped northwest and probably have succeeded in getting into Canada, twenty-five miles north of Karlstad.

The noise of the explosion aroused the town and the officers at Hallock were notified, but the cracksmen were by this time in full flight. There were three or four of them in the party. The border is being watched.

KILLS HER TWO CHILDREN

Insane Woman Chops Off Their Heads With an Axe.

Mrs. Anton Strause, mother of six children, residing at Tabor, north of East Grand Forks, killed her one-year-old daughter and three-year-old son by chopping off their heads with an axe. She then ran to the nearest neighbor to borrow a gun to shoot her other four children, who were picking beans with their father in a field. Insane motive probably prompted the deed, as the woman had only been out of the state asylum three months.

WATCHMEN TIED TO FENCE

Burglars Make Desperate Effort to Get Into Safe.

Burglars held up two watchmen at Wildwood, a resort on White Bear lake near St. Paul, gagged and tied them to a fence, blew open two doors leading to the money compartment of the office safe, but failed to break into the money, and left with a small amount of cash and some jewelry belonging to H. M. Barnet, lessee of the amusement enterprise.

Drowned In Cannon River.

Harlow Sirren, seventeen years of age, was drowned in the Cannon river at Cannon Falls. The boy was an employe of the Goodhue mills there and was swimming above the mill dam, in which a large breach had been torn by descending timbers during the recent floods. He was caught by the current and swept into this breach.

Little Girl Burned to Death.

The fact that little children played with matches resulted in the death of Annie, the two-year-old daughter of William Russell of St. Vincent. While holding a burning match she ignited her dress and was so badly burned that she died in a few minutes.

THE BEGINNING OF A LONG JOURNEY.

By GEORGE HERBERT BOHN.
[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

A few years ago I was obliged to connect between two railroads by stagecoach. I had been doing some hard traveling, was tired out, and my nerves were generally unstrung. The only other passengers in the coach were an old gentleman and a young lady whom I presumed to be his daughter. They occupied the back seat and I the front. There was no middle seat. Indeed, the coach was a small, shabby affair, a ghost of the solid, imposing vehicle in which our ancestors used to ride. Both windows were up, and, thinking to improve the air, which seemed to me to be very stuffy, I let down the one next to which I was sitting. The young lady sat directly opposite me and when I lowered the window cast an apprehensive glance at her father, another at me, then coolly put the window back in its place.

Had she been a man there would have been an explosion then and there. As it was, I set my lips together, breathed hard and racked my brain for a gentlemanly means of crushing her. At last, finding what I considered a honeyed thunderbolt, I launched it.

"Madam," I began icily, "had you"—

"Beg your pardon, sir, but I am not madam."

This took away something of the steel cold sharpness of what I had to say, for I couldn't begin with "Miss;" it would sound ridiculous.

"I assure you," I began again, "that whether you are miss or madam makes no difference whatsoever in this instance. I was about to say"—

"It makes some difference to me whether or no I am addressed properly."

I waited a few moments.

"Had you," I began a third time, "said to me, 'May I ask you to allow the window to remain closed, my father being delicate and I fearing a draft for him?' I would certainly"—

"Had you said, 'Do you object to my lowering the window?' I would have had an opportunity to tell you whether I wished it open or closed. You took it upon yourself to lower it, and I therefore took it upon myself to close it."

"Technically you are right, really wrong. With a stuffy atmosphere like this it is to be presumed that you would prefer at least one open window. Common politeness compelled me to lower it."

"And common protection of my right to be consulted in the matter compelled me to raise it."

I knew in my heart that I was wrong, but when the nerves are the mainspring of one's acts one gets deeper into the mire.

"I have supposed," I replied after some silence, "that a woman's strength is in her weakness. Granting your right to be consulted—and I concede you this right as one of the softer sex"—I put an unnecessary inflection on the word "softer"—"as to granting this right, I say, would it not have been more effective with a gentleman to have"—

"With a gentleman, yes."

"You must excuse me," I retorted hotly, "from further discussion with one who forgets"—

At this point something occurred to stop my speech—something that filled me with astonishment. The old gentleman, who had been paying no attention to our tilting, took an orange out of his pocket, tore off a large piece of the rind and threw it out of the closed window. It went right through the glass without sound or resistance. I put my hand where I had supposed the pane to be, and there was no pane there.

The young lady burst into a merry laugh.

Ordinarily I should have laughed too. But in addition to a headache and strained nerves I had placed myself in a false position and about nothing.

"Did you know there was no glass there?" I asked in the same cold tone as before.

"From the first."

"Then your fear of a draft upon your father"—

"This gentleman is not my father, nor is he with me. I don't think he has understood what we have been talking about. I heard him speaking German with the driver. You acted without consulting him or me, so I concluded to"—

"Teach me politeness."

By way of reply she took up a lunch box and, opening it, handed me a chicken sandwich. I took it and several more, following them up with other eatables. Then I took out my flask and washed the whole down with a stiff horn. I was about to take out my cigar case when I stopped suddenly.

"Do you object to smoke?" I asked politely.

"Not at all," she replied, with a smile.

"Nor that confounded old fellow beside you?"

"I can't tell, not speaking his language. But since he is a German I presume he doesn't. Besides, there is plenty of fresh air coming in through the closed window."

Whether it was the lunch or the mellow corn juice or a pair of dimples I now noticed flanking the girl's smile, the rest of the journey was as delightful as its beginning had been unpleasant. Indeed, it has never ended. That girl and I are traveling on through life in company.

THE BALL IN BOHEMIA

By BELLE C. WARREN.
[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

This is a true story of M. Claude, chief of police under Napoleon III. Claude greatly resembled in person the poet Beranger, the idol of republican France, having the same bald head and the same benevolent countenance.

One night a ball was in progress in the Latin quarter of Paris, that portion of the city given over to students and grizettes. It was in those days a veritable Bohemia, in the height of that splendor pictured by Du Maurier in his novel "Trilby." Among the dancers was Gustave Rieux, who had been active in opposing the assumption of imperial power by the president. Upon the enthronement of Louis Napoleon, Rieux, realizing that he was not safe in France, fled to America, but after a time returned to Paris, purporting to be Henry Underwood, an American student of art.

Rieux's partner in the dance was Clochette Verier, at the time the acknowledged queen of Bohemia. Nevertheless not a word had ever been spoken against her purity. Born in a higher class, fond of social life, but denied by poverty entrance to the society of the upper circles, she entered Bohemia destined rather to rule it than to be ruled by it. There, on his return from America, Rieux met her, and the meeting resulted on both sides in what the French call a grand passion.

Rieux had been warned that the government had trumped up a charge against him of complicity in a case of murder and if caught he would be tried under imperial influences and doubtless convicted. He had delayed flight because he could not tear himself away from Clochette Verier. She, realizing his danger, had begged him to leave France, and he had promised her to do so on the morrow. "Let us spend one evening together," he said, "in that bohemian life amid which we have met and loved. Then we will part, if it must be, forever." She consented.

They were standing as first couple in a dance which was then new in Paris, but which was later imported to America and is occasionally danced here even at the present day—the lancers. A figure had been danced, and the musicians had stopped for a brief interval before beginning to play for the next. Suddenly Rieux, who faced the door, saw it opened and a man enter. Clochette, who was looking at her lover, saw him turn pale and, following the direction of his eyes, discovered the cause. But she could not understand it. She had seen the poet Beranger and supposed the man who entered to be he.

"It is M. Claude," whispered Rieux. "He has come for me. I am lost!"

Claude glanced quickly about the room, and, his eye lighting upon Rieux, he advanced straight toward him. But like a flash Clochette's wit came to the rescue.

"Beranger!" she cried, pointing to Claude.

"Beranger, our idol!" Rieux shouted, taking up the cue.

"Beranger! Beranger! Beranger!" rang through the hall.

Clochette advanced to meet the detective, whispering to every girl she passed, "Come; let us greet the poet." At that moment the music started for the next figure, but no one paid any attention to it. A bevy of girls blocked the way between Claude and the man he had come to arrest. Snatching the flowers from their corsages, they tossed them at the detective, enough of them striking his face to shut out a view of his victim, who was retreating to the door. Clochette, having seen the people in the hall crowding around the man they supposed to be Beranger, followed her lover, and together they gained the street door, where Claude's carriage was waiting to take Rieux to jail. Avoiding it, they hurried away, called a cab and drove rapidly toward the barrier.

Meanwhile the detective was the center of attraction at the ballroom. To tell the admiring throng that he was not the poet they idolized, but an agent of the government sent to arrest one of their number, was more than he dared do. He did deny that he was Beranger, but even this they would not believe. Finally he made his escape loaded with flowers.

"Clochette," cried Rieux, throwing his arms around her as they rolled away in the cab, "you have saved me. Go with me to America as my wife. There, free from the slights of my family and my friends here, we can build a home for ourselves."

"If you are not taken," she replied, with a shudder.

"We will escape," he said hopefully.

"Escape—both of us in ball dress!"

For the first time it occurred to the fugitive that as soon as Claude could get away from his admirers he would put the police on guard, and the lovers began to lay a plan. They first drove to the house of a friend of Rieux, where he borrowed clothing and disguised himself. They then drove to a friend of Clochette's, not daring to go to her home, where she, too, changed her dress. Thus prepared they reached the channel, crossing it in a sailing vessel.

In England, after waiting for funds from Paris, they took passage for America, where they remained without even a temporary return to France till after the downfall of the empire in consequence of the Franco-Prussian war. Then Rieux took his family to Paris and was offered a prominent post under the republic. But he declined it, having become an American citizen.

The Case of B. E. Wise

Wise was a big man on the "street."

His deals were larger and involved more money and brains than most men dared to invest.

Wise's wisdom lacked in but one particular—he failed to consider Nature's laws of compensation. The result—Wise gave out. Some said "Old Wise is all in." They were wrong.

Wise's physician said "DIGESTO" for those wasted tissues and jaded brain cells."

Wise was soon back in the game—he now has snap and energy to spare.

DIGESTO is a fixture with him.

DID NOT GET THE MONEY

Taxpayers Object to the Payment of $600 from Ditch Fund to John Duffy.

Engineer in Charge of Ditch No. 24 Had Made no Report of Work Done.

At a recent meeting of the board of county commissioners, a bill was allowed John A. Duffy, of Red Lake Falls, to the amount of $600 for work done on Ditch No. 24. Mr. Duffy was bondsman for a contractor who took the job of doing this work, and, as is generally the case, the work was not completed on time and had to be finished by the bondsman, Mr. Duffy. The Engineer in charge of this ditch had filed no estimate of the amount of work done by Mr. Duffy, but that did not cut any figures with the county commissioners for they usually do everything Mr. Duffy desires and so they allowed the bill contrary to law. As money for ditch work can only be paid out upon an estimate furnished by an engineer in charge of the work, a number of taxpayers took an appeal. The appeal was served last Saturday when the county board was in session, and instead of hiring an attorney to fight this case they reconsidered their former action and the bill was disallowed.

It is said that Mr. Duffy was quite provoked that any taxpayer should object to anything that he or the county commissioners do with any money belonging to the ditch fund and says that he will get even with the taxpayers.

Farmers to Build a Ditch

Farmers living on the east side of the river in the town of North are figuring upon constructing a four mile ditch to drain that section. They will not petition for a county ditch, but each farmer will contribute a certain amount and the work will be given to some reliable contractor to do. It is estimated the cost will be in the neighborhood of $2,000.

THE SALOONS MUST QUIT

Government to Close Up Saloons in the White Earth Indian Reservation.

Mahnomen, Callaway, Ogema, Waubon, and Bijou Are the Towns affected.

Considerable of a sensation was caused last week by the announcement that John R. Howard, Indian agent on the White Earth Reservation, was in receipt of instructions from the Indian department at Washington to notify all saloons doing business within the White Earth reservation to close their doors within thirty days.

The agency police have served notice to all persons engaged in the liquor traffic at Callaway, Ogema, Waubon and Mahnomen, that they must cease doing business within the time prescribed or legal proceedings will be instituted.

It is the intention of the saloon men generally to obey the order it is said.

A recent murder at Ogema, the result of a drunken quarrel between two Indians, is given as one of the reasons for action being taken at this time.

To Haul Grain by Boat.

There is quite a strong sentiment in favor of putting the farmers steamboat into grain hauling business. There is now plenty of water in the river to run the big boat and barge, and they are just what we need to get our big wheat crop to market. The prospects now are that the roads will be so bad that it will be impossible to draw any grain to market with teams, and the small boats that are now running could not take enough wheat down the river to amount to much and they want 12 cents a bushel for hauling, while the big boat could haul for 5 cents. There is no question but what the boat will make good money, if we all patronize it.—Sunbeam.

FAMOUS CASE IS DECIDED

Automobile Case That Came Near Causing a Civil War Is Decided

Elder Gets the Automobile and Guerin Will Have to Bring Civil Action for Storage.

After being in court for over two years, the famous Guerin-Elder case—supposed by some of the residents of Red Lake county to be the county seat case—has been decided by Judge Watts in favor of Elder.

The case grew out of a trade. Mr. Elder traded the automobile to a man from North Dakota for a team of horses. It later developed that the party from North Dakota had stolen the horses and when the sheriff of McLean county came to this state and arrested the guilty party, Elder gave up possession of the team without objection. The automobile was at Red Lake Falls and in order to gain possession of the same Mr. Elder had to commence legal proceedings. It was stowed in Mr. Guerin's livery barn and that gentleman demanded what appeared to be an unreasonable price for storage. Mr. Elder offered Mr. Guerin $40 dollars in settlement, but the latter wanted much more than this amount and the case was taken into court. It took a small army of deputy sheriffs to gain possession of the automobile and since that time it has been in this city.

By the decision, Judge Watts holds that Elder, the rightful owner, has right to the possession of the machine and that whatever claim Mr. Guerin has for storing the machine does not constitute a lien. The costs in the case amount to over $150 and will have to be paid by Guerin and he will have to commence another action to secure storage charges.

E. M. Stanton, of this city, was attorney for Elder and F. A. Grady, of Red Lake Falls for Guerin.

CANNOT TELL FOR WEEKS

Hot Weather Caused Dog's Head to Be Decomposed Before Its Arrival in Minneapolis.

Brain Substance Will Now Have to Be Injected in Rabbits for a Test.

Dr. H. B. Nowell last Friday received the following letter from O. McDaniel, bacteriologist in charge of the State Pasteur Institute, which will explain itself.

Yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock we received a telephone message from Dr. W. L. Beebe, Bacteriologist of the State Live Stock Sanitary Board at the State Experiment Station, stating that dog's head forwarded by you had just been received by express: Dr. Beebe also stated that he had recd a letter from you stating that four persons had been bitten by the dog whose head was sent for examination. We at once sent a messenger to the State Experiment Station, who brought the head to this laboratory. The head at this time was in an advanced state of putrefaction, being covered with maggots. The outside of the package was dripping with bloody fluid so that the messenger had to rewrap the box in order to bring the package on the street car. As soon as the head reached this laboratory it was packed in salt and ice until 10 o'clock this morning when the skull was opened.

The brain substance was of the consistency of porridge, cortex and other parts of the brain not being reconizable. It is impossible for us to make a microscopic examination in this case. Portions of the soupy brain have already been placed in glycerine and an attempt will be made to make a diagnosis through the use of this glycerinized material by injecting it into rabbits. Such examination will take at least three or four weeks before we would be able to give a positive diagnosis of rabies. We could not return a negative diagnosis until a much longer period had elapsed. You will see therefore it is impossible to return a diagnosis in time to be of any use in deciding whether the patients bitten by this dog need treatment or not. We do not know anything concerning the history of the dog except that he is said to have bitten four people and this fact alone would be sufficient for us to urge the necessity of these patients receiving the Pasteur preventive treatment for hydrophobia. In order for the treatment to be of value the patients should be sent here without delay so that treatment may be started at the earliest possible date.

If the dog was killed promptly after the biting of these four individuals, it should be assumed that the dog had rabies, for rabies cannot be excluded in this case.

The Pasteur preventive treatment for hydrophobia is given free by the state to its residents. The treatment lasts twenty-one days and is given daily at 2:30 p. m. except on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays when it is given at 10:30 a. m. Board and lodging is not furnished by the state but can be readily secured in the Twin Cities.

There appears to be some difference of opinion as to whether the dog shot was the one that bit the same people. L. J. Foss, the butcher, declares that the dog that bit him was not the one that was shot by Ed Ashley, while Mr. Ashely is positive that the dog he shot was the one that bit him.

County Commissioners Want Permission to Build a $15,000 Court House.

Have Asked Judge Watts to Modify His Ruling—Hearing to Be on Saturday.

The county commissioners of Red Lake county are so anxious to build a court house at Red Lake Falls that they are going to ask Judge Watts on Saturday, Sept. 4, to modify his recent ruling to the effect that they could not build a court house and give them permission to put up a $15,000 structure. Their present contention is that the tax levy of four mills which they have levied against all the property of Red Lake county is a sufficient sum to pay for the building. This tax has not been paid as yet nor will the taxpayers of the proposed new county of Pennington—which has about three-fourths of the valuation of Red Lake county—be asked to pay this tax, as proceedings will be instituted at the proper time to prevent this. As to what happens to what is left of Red Lake county, it is not material to the residents of Pennington county. After the north half is set off the south half can build all of the court houses they want to, but until that time there will be no building.

"MAKING GOOD"

IS AN EXPRESSION THAT IS TYPICALLY AMERICAN.

IT'S on the lips of all America,—"HAVE YOU MADE GOOD?" Any conversation about any man or any business seldom gets beyond a few minutes duration before someone asks, "HAS HE MADE GOOD?" It's the American Standard of success—men and the affairs of men are measured by it—success or failure is determined by it. "Making Good" is merely a question of beginning right—any undertaking whose foundation is well laid need have no fear for the superstructure. And so our "Making Good" has become merely a proof of that theory—WE BEGAN RIGHT. Founded on the policy of the Golden Rule, this store has always been operated on a basis of "fairness". In the vernacular of progressive Americanism, "WE'VE MADE GOOD."

CARE OF FLOWER BEDS.

How to Keep Them Beautiful All Through the Summer.

All flower beds should at this season of the year be kept in proper shape and condition. All seed pods and withered and yellow leaves should be carefully cleaned and picked off. Frequent stirring with the hoe is good, but not deep enough to in any way injure the roots. It is a good idea every time you mow the grass to take a sharp spade and cut the edge of all your flower beds. It keeps the grass from encroaching on the beds and also keeps the beds to their proper shape and form and makes them have a fresh and neat appearance.

By August many of the soft growing foliage bedding plants, such as coleus, alternantheras achryanthus, etc., will be growing freely and should be kept cut back and not allowed to become straggling. To be pretty, beds having plants of this kind should be uniform. The various colors should not be allowed to intermingle. Golden colored plants should not have red foliage ones sticking their shoots up through the yellow, etc. This is easily prevented by constantly pinching. The main point is to commence pinching early and take the tip out of the young growth. In this way you can scarcely see that the work is going on. If, however, you neglect them until the plants are very tall then you leave stems showing, and the beds are unsightly for awhile.

Some beds are greatly benefited by a mulching of well rotted stable manure. It is necessary to shake out all the long straw before using, and if the manure is in large pieces chop it with a spade. Rose beds, cannas, hardy herbaceous and verbena beds are all benefited by mulching. We do not believe it is necessary to thus mulch soft plants, such as the coleus and geraniums, as they grow very well without it. The work of mulching is very simple. All you want to do is to spread the manure over the bed carefully to the depth of about one inch.

How often flower beds in the open air should be watered depends to a great extent upon the character of the soil and variety of plants. If the soil is good stiff loam and you have frequent showers you do not need to water at all. If it is sandy, as near the coast, and the weather dry it is beneficial to water every day. Geraniums seldom need watering when growing in good garden soil. With much water they grow too much to foliage. Cannas and plants of this character do not require much water. For them and geraniums we prefer much hoeing.

If using a hose sprinkler to water have just force enough to water without washing the ground. Hold the sprinkler near the ground so the water goes first where you want it. Geraniums should not have the flower heads watered if you can avoid it, as it spoils them completely. The evening, after sundown, is the best time to water, as the plants have all night to take up the moisture, and artificial watering is soon evaporated under the combined effects of wind and hot summer sun.

How to Remove Dark Freckles.

An almond-lemon plaster is the best remedy for removing dark freckles. Smooth a tablespoonful of dry mustard with lemon juice and then add a teaspoonful of oil of almonds. This treatment is strenuous and should be taken in the evening just before retiring. Spread the paste evenly all over the skin, taking great care to keep it away from the eyes as much as possible. In a few minutes the paste begins to burn the skin, and then it should be washed off immediately. The burning sensation means that the skin is beginning to bleach. Be sure to get the face thoroughly cleaned with hot water and then massage a good cold cream or skin food into the skin. Only a few days of this treatment are necessary, and then the face peels as it does when sunburned. Even the most obstinate freckles may be removed with this treatment. The rosewater and borax solution must be used every few days to keep the skin free from freckles.
